COURTING DEATH.

Aviators Will Try to Cross Alps.

Attempt Regarded by Some as Foolhardy; Peaks Are Snow-clad.

Gusty Winds Prevail; Height of Seven Thousand Feet Must Be Reached.

Five Have Entered the Remarkable Contest Which Opens Today.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BRIG (Switzerland) Sept. 17.—Everything is in readiness for the great cross-Alps aëroplane flight from Brig, at the head of the Rhone Valley, over the Simplon Pass and down into Italy, crossing Lake Maggiore to Milan.

Under the rules, the contestants may start at any time beginning tomorrow, until September 26, but they must complete the air journey to Milan in a single day.

The attempt is regarded by some as foolhardy, as the aviator must rise about 7000 feet immediately on leaving the ground, and maintain that altitude for not less than half an hour to clear Simplon Pass. Descent anywhere in the first twenty miles of the rocky, precipitous gorges would mean almost certain death.

A meteorologist stationed in Simplon during the past month reports the peaks of the mountains are snow-clad, and the air currents strong and gusty. In that time there have been only two days in which the pass could be crossed in safety. Pilots have calculated that an altitude of 7000 feet would reduce the power of a motor 35 per cent.

George Chavez, the Peruvian aviator, will start in the monoplane with which he recently made a height record of 8792 feet at Issy. He regards the extreme cold of the mountain passes as the greatest difficulty with which he will have to cope.

Other starters will be Cattaneo, Baillette, Wincziers and Weymann. With the exception of Weymann, all the aviators will use monoplanes. Latham has withdrawn, explaining that his motor is incapable of reaching the necessary height.

The route follows the road built by Napoleon in 1800, over the Simplon Pass, which is 6528 feet high at the summit.

The country is broken and very difficult. There are many chasms, notably the Gorge of Yzette. A captive balloon at a height of 6500 feet will mark the aërodrome at Milan, which is about seventy-five miles as the crow flies from the starting point.

BOTH PLAYED GOLF WELL.

But Matrimonial Game of Prof. Shepard and Ruth Badgeley Proved a Bad Hazard.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW HAVEN (Ct.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] What was termed an "ideal golf marriage," five years ago, has been broken by the filing of charges of wife-beating against the husband, who is Prof. William Kent Shepard of Yale, twice golf champion of Connecticut.

The wife, who was Ruth Badgeley, winner of many woman's golf championships, today filed a suit for legal custody of her 2-year-old son, Howard Badgeley Shepard.

The bill states that defendant married petitioner in New York, April 16, 1906. From the beginning of their married life Mrs. Shepard charges she suffered greatly at the hands of her husband, because of his "ungovernable temper," which manifested itself with ever-increasing frequency, entirely without provocation.

The bill alleges that "he often bitterly regretted his marriage," and that he said it was "hell" to live with her and wished she would go back to her parents.

In September of last year, the bill states, Mrs. Shepard was forced to leave her husband because of his treatment.

WEDS WIDOW TO WIN BET.

St. Louis Youth Receives Dollar as Soon as Marriage Is Performed by Justice.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Joseph G. Frost, grandson of Brig.-Gen. Daniel M. Frost, the Confederate spy, and a nephew of three St. Louis women, who married into the English nobility, eloped to Clayton today and married Mrs. Hattie Geers, a widow two years his senior to win a $1 wager.

The loser of the wager is Roland Vanhofen, son of Dr. Samuel Van Hofen and brother of the bride.

Roland Van Hofen was the only member of the two families taken into their confidence. He paid the dollar immediately after Justice of the Peace Stoble performed the ceremony.

PROBABLY.

CAVALIERI WILL GET WHATEVER SHE GETS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Lina Cavalieri must come to an agreement with the interests now controlling her husband's estate. No matter whether Robert Winthrop Chanler, her husband, leaves her or would discard her forever. That fact became absolutely known tonight.

If the diva does not accept the Chanler offer of $10,000 cash and $5000 a year, she can never get one penny of her husband's property, even though the ante-nuptial agreement was properly drawn and executed. That is the result of a secret move made today by persons close to Robert W. Chanler.

The spiking of Cavalieri's legal guns is said to have been done against the desires of her still-infatuated husband.

Cavalieri is certain to sail for New York within the fortnight, according to information received today. Upon her arrival here she will learn from her lawyer, W. Russell Osborne, the following ultimatum from the lawyers and interests back of Chanler:

"You must settle this case out of court, on our terms, or you will get nothing.

"This ante-nuptial agreement has no legal force, and is not worth the paper on which it is written, for the reason that your husband can be proved irrational and incompetent."

VERBAL AGREEMENT.

That there was an ante-nuptial verbal agreement between Chanler and Cavalieri became known today. Its salient features are said to be:

First—That Cavalieri should pay off Chanler's debts, variously estimated at from $25,000 to $60,000.

Second—That Cavalieri should free certain parcels of realty from mortgage, among them the Red Hook farm in Dutchess county.

Third—That Cavalieri and Chanler should have a common purse, only that title to it should be vested in the wife.

Fourth—That the first $20,000 out of his income should go, as before, to his first wife, Mrs. Julia Chamberlain Chanler, and his two little girls, Julia, aged 12, and Dorothy, 6.

Chanler was assured by Cavalieri, according to memorandums of the Dutchess county family, that questions of money never would arise through them.

"Never mind the creditors," Cavalieri is reported to have said, "I am a rich woman and I will pay them all every cent; then we can start afresh."

DIFFERENT LATER.

But, after the marriage had been solemnized, Chanler found himself in companionship with an entirely different Cavalieri. Whenever he brought up the subject of his creditors in America the singer would deftly turn the conversation.

Counsel for Cavalieri said today that his client proposed to fight for her rights, and was coming to this country to see that the prenuptial agreement, whereby Chanler turned over to the diva what is said to be his entire fortune, was carried out.

W. Russell Osborne, counsel for the singer, flatly denied that Mme. Cavalieri had asked for or accepted a compromise from the Chanler family, rather than engage in litigation to defend the prenuptial agreement.

"Mme. Cavalieri," said Mr. Osborne, "stands on her rights and she is coming over here to see that she gets them."

DENIALS.

FALSE, CRIES "PURPLE MOTHER" OF BIG SUIT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] In a statement tonight Mrs. Katherine Tingley said the facts, which will contradict in every detail the statements made in the petition of George L. Patterson, who seeks to break his mother's will leaving the bulk of her estate to Mrs. Tingley, are in the hands of Senator L. A. Wright, executor of Mrs. Thurston's will.

Mrs. Tingley says the statements made in the petition are preposterous, and are so far-fetched and unwarrantable that she considers the objections will ultimately strengthen her case by proving the unfitness of the contestant to be a guardian of the grandchildren of Mrs. Thurston or of her daughter, Julia Quinn.

Mrs. Tingley says the charges of conspiracy are just as false as the allegations made by the contestant that his mother was insane.

Mrs. Tingley says it would not be possible that any sane or just mind would ever dream that she would sacrifice the large and wealthy interests of the institution that she is connected with by being a factor in a conspiracy such as is stated by the contestant.

Mrs. Tingley says it is a pathetic fact that Mrs. Thurston's three children, of whom the contestant is one, were born under most unfortunate parental conditions, that she has the largest charity for the contestant, and that she knows he will be embarrassed with the facts her attorney will present to prove that his statements are untrue.

BOOM FOR GAYNOR.

Wounded Mayor Is Receptive.

Writes That He Will Consider Proposal That He Run for Governor.

Is Grateful for Indorsement. Says He'll Think It Over "in Near Future."

Has Serious Gambling Situation in New York to Clean Up First.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SARATOGA (N. Y.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mayor Gaynor's first word since he took office as to his own attitude toward the movement now on foot to nominate him for Governor was received here today.

In a letter to Frank Gick, secretary of the Saratoga County Democratic Convention, who had informed him of the resolution adopted by the convention, indorsing him for the Democratic nomination for Governor, and pledging him the support of Saratoga county, the Mayor replied:

"I thank you exceedingly for your letter and the resolution which you inclose. I shall have to carefully consider the matter in the near future.

"I am now quite restored to my usual strength, but have not yet fully recovered my voice."

When Mayor Gaynor took office he announced that he intended to serve the full term of four years, not only because he considered that his election implied a tacit pledge to fulfill the obligations thus assumed, but because he believed the office of Mayor of New York City second only in power and responsibility to that of President of the United States.

WILL START INQUIRY INTO CITY GAMBLING.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] When Mayor Gaynor again takes up the reins of the government it is believed he will institute a broad investigation that will reach to the core of the city's gambling situation.

During the time that Mayor Gaynor has been absent from the City Hall owing to the attempt to assassinate him, John Purroy Mitchell, acting Mayor, has dug up much evidence showing that grafting in connection with gambling is going on among the police officials.

Not in years has any one spoken so frankly on the matter of public graft as has the acting Mayor, and while Mayor Gaynor himself in private conversation sometimes has made remarks about certain members of the force it is doubtful if any city officer has ever collected so much evidence and valuable information in a short time as had Mr. Mitchell.

As he is taking the place of the Mayor for only a short time, however, it is not possible for him to institute the broad investigation that would reach the heart of the city's gambling situation.

When Mayor Gaynor comes back this information will be turned over to him, but in the meantime there is little doubt that if the Legislative Committee should start an investigation of funds raised by the police at various times to help their cause at Albany it would be found that certain men now frequently seen in police circles would be seen greatly in evidence when large sums of money were being sent up to Albany.

Mayor Gaynor has fully recovered from the effects of the bullet wound he received a little more than a month ago and is spending his vacation on his estate in St. James, L. I. The Mayor is putting on flesh and thoroughly enjoying himself. He expects to return to his duties within a couple of weeks. He has assisted in harvesting the crops on his estate for the exercise involved. His Honor is a great lover of out-of-door life and spends most of every day in the open.

MR. TAFT'S VACATION IS OVER.

President Will Leave Beverly for Cincinnati—Mrs. Taft's Condition Presages White House Gaiety.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BEVERLY (Mass.) Sept. 17.—When President Taft starts for Cincinnati by way of New Haven, tomorrow midnight, his vacation will virtually be at an end. He will spend the first two weeks of October in Beverly, but these days are not likely to be filled with official business.

The President will return to Washington in the best of condition. He has lived an out-door life for nearly three months and is as brown as an Indian.

Mrs. Taft's health has also steadily improved and the White House social season promises to be an unusually active one.

IGNORANCE SAVES LIFE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—Ignorance of anatomy probably saved the life of Thomas Conchas, a stone cutter, when he lay down on a couch today determined to die and with a wooden mallet drove a scissors several inches into his chest. He failed to locate his heart and he is expected to recover.

WOUNDED MAYOR MAY RUN FOR GOVERNORSHIP.

CHICAGO.

FOURTH LARGEST OF WORLD'S CITIES NOW.

Census Shows Remarkable Growth. Has Almost Doubled Population in Two Decades—Close on Heels of Paris for the Third Place.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The population of Chicago is 2,185,283, an increase of 486,708, or 28.7 per cent., as compared with 1,698,575 in 1900.

This announcement leaves Chicago ranking in population as the second city of the United States, and the fourth in the world.

Chicago has almost doubled its population since 1890, when the figures were 1,099,850. Its greatest growth during that period was between 1890 and 1900, when there was an increase of 54.4.

Its increase in population during the last decade was not so great proportionately as that of New York, the rate of increase being 10 per cent. less than that scored by the eastern city.

New York is yet ahead by 2,581,550. Chicago, however, can claim distinction in having jumped from sixth to fourth place among the big cities on the globe. It is following close on the heels of Paris, whose population by its last census, in 1901, was 2,714,068. Chicago takes precedence over Tokio and Berlin by close margins.

According to the census taken in each of the two cities in 1908, Tokio had 2,085,160, and Berlin 2,040,148.

INTERESTING DATA FROM CENSUS FIGURES.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The second bulletin of the Census Bureau, showing the growth of cities, was issued today. Of the thirty-eight cities which, in 1900, had a population of 100,000 or more, twenty-four are given, and to these are added five which have attained the 100,000 mark during the last decade.

The aggregate population of these twenty-nine cities now is 13,596,819, as against 10,376,012 in 1900, and 7,904,140 in 1890. The absolute increase between 1890 and 1900 amounted to 2,471,872; between 1900 and 1910 to 3,220,807.

The percentages of increase for this aggregate population show very little change in the rate of growth during the two decades, being for the earlier one 31.4 per cent., and for the latter 31 per cent. The fact is noted that the high rate of increase is not confined to any one geographical section.

Of the seven cities whose rate exceeded 40 per cent., two—Newark, N. J., and Bridgeport, Conn.—are eastern; one—Atlanta—is southern, and four—Detroit, Denver, Kansas City and Columbus—are western. Of the two cities with the lowest rate, one is eastern and the other is western. Remarking upon the facts presented, the bulletin says:

"The rates of increase for Atlanta, Detroit, Denver and Kansas City must be regarded as phenomenally high, but even more extraordinary is the high percentage for New York, which exceeds the average for twenty-eight cities in the group by 11.4 per cent., and is itself exceeded by the rates of only seven cities. The New York City rate, moreover, has been maintained at its present high point for two decades, and may therefore be regarded as a normal rate for that city."

Fifty-four cities of between 25,000 and 100,000 are given, showing an aggregate population of 2,723,498, as against 1,901,766 in 1900, a gain of 43.2 per cent., a rate of growth which the census bureau pronounced "phenomenally high."

Of these fifty-four cities, thirty-one show a higher rate of increase of the last decade than for the previous one. So far no decrease is noted in any of the cities.

NEW ORLEANS DROPS TO FIFTEENTH PLACE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The population of New Orleans is 339,075, an increase of 51,971, or 18.1 per cent. as compared with 287,104 in 1900. While New Orleans's growth the last decade was only slightly below her percentage of increase during the previous decade, the Crescent City, through the more rapid growth of other cities in the 100,000 class, loses its position of twelfth in the list of the country's largest cities and now occupies fifteenth position.

Detroit, with a 63 per cent. increase; Milwaukee, with 31 per cent., and Newark, with 47.2 per cent., all have jumped ahead of New Orleans in the number of inhabitants.

The Census Bureau issued today statistics giving the population of the following cities:

Holyoke, Mass., has 57,730 people, an increase of 12,018, or 26.3 per cent., as compared with 45,712 in 1900.

Lowell, Mass., has 106,294 people, an increase of 11,325, or 11.9 per cent., as compared with 94,969 in 1900.

Pittsfield, Mass., has 32,121 people, an increase of 10,355, or 47.6 per cent., as compared with 21,766 in 1900.

BRIEF INTRODUCTION.

Col. Roosevelt and his adversa met each other with cheerful faces jested about their differences.

Lieut.-Gov. White made one of shortest speeches on record when introduced Col. Roosevelt at the f grounds.

SCARCITY OF ROYAL BRIDES.

Only Eight in All Europe Worthy of a King.

Montenegro's Ascension Puts Two on Market.

King Manuel of Portugal Is Rather Limited.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] It is pointed out that the raising of Montenegro to a kingdom provides two more marriageable royal princesses for King Manuel to choose rom. Not within living memory has here been such a scarcity of possible oyal brides as is the case in Europe t present.

Only eight, all told, can be hunted ut from the eighteen principal Euopean courts, of whom the most enobled is, of course, the German Emeror's only daughter, Princess Vicoria Louise, born just eighteen years go. It is common knowledge that the nly Hohenzollern girl is backward and hildish for her age, a circumstance hich probably accounts for the delay n her betrothal to the Arch-Duke ranz Ferdinand, Austria's heir. Such marriage, despite religious hindances, is looked upon as almost cerain at the two courts concerned.

Denmark has two princesses whose ingly degree of birth suits them to race a throne—Princess Thyra, who 20, and her 20-year-old sister, Dagar.

In England Princess Patricia of Conaught, the most sought-after of all yal maidens, and Princess Alexandra Fife are alone of sufficient age to ntemplate matrimony. The former, ho is 23, gossip couples with the name the young Marquis of Anglesey, hile the latter was prevented from aking the imperative debut at Buckgham Palace owing to King Edrd's death.

Only three more marriageable ladies main unaccounted for, but, as will be en from their not very noble lineage, rtugal's King is unlikely to look re for his Queen.

Princess Helene of Servia is not only ain but 26 years of age, while Prins Xenia and Vera of Montenegro also both getting on in years.

he Liberals are fairly well united, —the uncertain factor is Señor et, there being a deal of conjec as to the direction in which his ence will be thrown.

analejas, making an indirect rese to the arrangements of Mgr. , papal nuncio, for meetings of est against the "padlock bill," on ber 2, announced that on the ing of the Cortes he will propose simultaneous discussion of the get and of special bills dealing the political questions.

he Premier is optimistic regarding financial situation, and the better ction of taxes, and he believes the Spanish nation "desires to on the magnificent properties of monks some portion of the budget 200,000,000, of which the clergy re nearly 10,000,000 in pensions."

partial reports agree that, algh in Navarre, Aragon and Cata an army could be raised at t notice to defend the Roman holic church, the elements of a ious war do not exist in Spain y, and that the only really forble danger to peace is the Reican-Socialist coalition, a thing, alejas says, yet to be explained factorily.

Y DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OME, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Disch.] As a wealthy and distinguished ber of the Hungarian aristocracy, has successfully kept his name out rint, sat at breakfast with his wife he Hotel Britannique, Viareggio (Italian Riviera,) on Sunday, the eldest daughter, a noted society beauty, did not make her usual appearance.

Her passion for a youth who had followed her to the seaside resort was not admitted by the parents.

On the previous day the lovers, who had been forbidden to communicate, outwitted all plans to keep them apart. As she was entering her bathing machine he climbed to the roof and a few hurried words were exchanged. Next morning a closed cab, with the lovers inside, was driven at full gallop through the village.

Borrowing the automobile of the Marchioness of Torrigiani, the father made a dash in the direction taken by the lovers, but the chase was soon given up as useless.

The parents say that, according to Hungarian law, their daughter, though 22, is still a minor. Both the girl and the youth have many relatives and friends in Italy, and the elopement has caused much interest.

A warrant has been issued against the lover, charging abduction.

CHOOSE GOETHE DESIGN.

International Jury Selects Hahn Model for Lincoln Park, Chicago, Memorial.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

BERLIN, Sept. 17.—The international jury chosen by the German societies of Chicago, to select a design for the Goethe memorial to be erected in Lincoln Park in that city, decided today on the design submitted by Prof. Hermann Hahn of Munich. Nine sculptors competed, the others being A. Jaegers of New York, H. Schuler of Baltimore, Hugo Lederer of Berlin, C. A. Bermann, Hubert Netzger of Munich, George Werba of Dresden, D. Schmikowitz and A. Hanak of Vienna.

All nine designs will be executed for the principal cities of the United States in case the other municipalities express a wish so to commemorate the German poet.

The winning model is fifteen feet high and shows the lightly draped figure of a young man with one foot resting on a block of marble, holding an eagle on his knee. Just above the pedestal is a portrait in relief of Goethe.

SOCIALISTS WIN ELECTION.

Kaiser's "Divine Right" Speech Said to Be Responsible for Reichstag Sucess.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERLIN, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Socialists have won another seat in the Reichstag. The election was at Frankfortiebus in Brandenburg, just outside of the capital, and the Socialists thank the Kaiser for their victory.

This is the ninth seat the party has won this year. It brings their strength in the Reichstag up to fifty-two.

General discontent with the government had much to do with the result, but the Kaiser's recent speech in which he claimed to rule by divine right was made a direct issue in the contest and resentment at that declaration accounts for the Socialists' success.

Citizens Gather in Mass Meeting Just Before Opening of Parliament to Plead With Representatives.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HELSINGFORS (Finland) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Before the opening of the extraordinary session of Parliament yesterday a mass meeting of citizens was held, at which resolutions were passed asking their representatives to oppose the new Russian law proposals.

These give Russians in Finland electoral rights equal to those of the natives and if adopted will give the Russians complete control of the Finnish Parliament.

It is declared that at the extraordinary session of Parliament the members will do their utmost to save the remnant of Finnish home rule.

MANY ACTS OF TERRORISM.

More Than Fifty Students Arrested in Russia on Revolutionary Charges.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] More than fifty young students and workers have been arrested recently on charges of plotting acts of terrorism. Dynamite bombs have been discovered in several places and arrests have been made in connection with the attempt of two revolutionaries to return from France to Russia. Both were shot by soldiers when trying to cross the frontier. One of the men was known under the name of Vikita.

In revolutionary circles the arrests and summary shooting are attributed to agents provocateur, but public opinion in Russia is probably too inclined to charge every revolutionary attempt to government agents.

It is believed that in reality these constant arrests and the brutal treatment of political offenders are simply a part of the general oppression undertaken by the present so-called constitutional government.

This condition of affairs is without a precedent in Russian history; it was not as bad even in the reigns of Nicholas I and Alexander III.

LARGEST MID-TERM VOTE.

FEATURES OF MAINE ELECTION.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PORTLAND (Me.) Sept. 17.—Maine's total vote in the State election last Monday was the greatest ever cast in a Presidential mid-term, and was exceeded only by the Presidential years of 1880, 1884 and 1888. Complete returns show the vote to have been 141,584, of which Frederick W. Plaisted, Democrat, received 73,801, and Gov. B. M. Fernald, Republican, 65,687, making Plaisted's plurality 8114. Plaisted's vote was almost identical with that given his father, Harris M. Plaisted, the last Democratic Governor of Maine, who, in 1880, received 73,713 votes. The total in that year, 147,802, has never been exceeded in Maine. It has been suggested that many of those who voted on Monday went to the polls for the first time since Gov.-elect Plaisted's father was chosen in 1880.

The total lottery receipts were nearly $16,500,000, half of which the State paid out in expenses and winnings. The lottery business increased more than $1,500,000 over the preceding year, according to a report by Consul-General Smith at Genoa.

PROSPECTIVE.

CHINA MAY HAVE WAR FLEET ALL BUILT IN SAN FRANCISCO

Gigantic Order, Which Will Mean Expenditure of Millions of Dollars, Is Object of Trip of Charles M. Schwab to the Coast—Bethlehem Steel Company Is Hopeful.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A fleet of battleships for the Chinese navy is to be built in San Francisco. Millions will be spent here in the purchase of supplies and for the living expenses of the thousands of workmen needed to turn out the gigantic order if the efforts of some of the foremost financiers of this country are crowned with success.

This is the purpose of a visit which Charles M. Schwab, former president of the United States Steel Corporation and owner of the Union Iron Works and other large plants, is to pay to this Coast within the next twenty-four hours.

The big financier is hurrying across the continent in his private car to meet Prince Tsai Hsun, uncle of the Emperor of China, who is due to arrive on the steamer Manchuria late Monday night or early Tuesday morning. Schwab and his party, which comprises prominent steel magnates, will accompany the Chinese imperial party to Washington.

President John A. McGragor of the Union Iron Works is authority for the information that Schwab is coming across the continent for the purpose and the further fact that the Bethleheh Steel Company has submitted specifications and estimates for the Chinese craft, which have been considered very favorably.

It is known that the Chinese government has decided to build a navy which will be on a par with many of the best navies of the world.

At the outset, the fleet to be constructed will number twelve or fifteen battleships. Of this number at least six or eight will be A No. 1, and any one of them will mean the expenditure of millions.

Whether the contract for the entire number of ships can be secured by the Bethlehem Steel Company, which owns the Union Iron Works, is a matter of conjecture which can only be determined after Schwab has been in conference with Prince Tsai and the authorities at Washington.

The advantages of building the war vessels at San Francisco has been strongly urged by the eastern steel magnates. The capacity of the plant of the Union Iron Works is exceeded by few in this country.

Schwab is accompanied by H. G. Schneider, vice-president of the Bethlehem Steel Company, and another whose identity is not known. The party has secured reservations at the St. Franc's Hotel. The party is in the private car, Loretta, which passed through Omaha yesterday.

Primarily, the visit of Schwab and Schneider is to meet Prince Tsai Hsun. The Prince and the naval officers with him will accompany Schwab to Washington, D. C.

EDUCATOR SAYS GERMANY WILL FORCE IT.

Head of Northwestern University Believes United States and England Will Be Forced to Unite Against Teutonic Encroachment—Gives His Impressions of Fatherland.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] An Anglo-American alliance, with a combined navy, which will protect all the English-speaking peoples of the world against Teutonic encroachment, may grow out of the terror with which Germany's naval construction programme is now viewed in England.

This, at least, was the opinion formed by Abram W. Harris, president of Northwestern University, in the course of a two-months' tour of Europe, from which he returned today.

Conversation with British statesmen convinced him, he says, that fear of a German war of conquest has become a very real and important factor in shaping British policies, and England already is beginning to look longingly across to her American cousins for support in case of trouble.

Rumors of wars, however, were not the only things that will bear watching, which Dr. Harris found going on in Europe. His impressions are summarized as follows:

He found Germany in a fair way to gain the commercial supremacy of the world.

A government department of the United States doing as much for scientific business methods as the Department of Agriculture has for scientific farming, is the only means by which the United States can put itself on an equal footing with the Teutonic nation.

DR. LANGE ON VERGE OF NERVOUS COLLAPSE.

Chicago Physician Has Had a Bunch of Financial Troubles, But It Is Denied That He Purchased at a Great Price an Alleged Process for Transmuting Silver.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SCRANTON (Pa.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Reports that Dr. F. W. Lange was swindled into buying at a big figure an alleged process for transmuting silver, were today denied by his wife. She says that Dr. Lange is on the verge of a total nervous collapse, at his home on Madison avenue.

The disappearance of Dr. Lange's brother, L. A. Lange, a couple of weeks ago, almost caused a run on the New Schiller Building & Loan Association, of which he was secretary. He was indebted to the association more than $100,000, but made it good by beggaring himself and his father, and borrowing from friends. This added to Dr. Lange's worries.

A number of suits have recently been brought in the local courts against Dr. Lange. Two of his properties have been advertised for sale by the Sheriff, because of his inability to raise the interest on two notes, amounting to $29,500. Dr. Lange announced early this week that he had arranged to stay the sale, but since the financial entanglements of the Lange family have become public their creditors have been pounding them.

No process of transmutation was discovered in his office when the effects were seized.

DOWN ON NEGRO DISCRIMINATION IN NEW ORLEANS.

Baptists in Convention Resolve Not to Indorse That City for Exposition Unless Jim Crow Street Cars Are Abolished During the Panama Celebration.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 17.—New Orleans must abolish the Jim Crow street car system and the South must not discriminate between whites and blacks on its railroad trains, if the National Negro Baptist Association, in convention here, is to indorse New Orleans as the site for the Panama exposition in 1915. There are 10,000 delegates in attendance.

"These discriminatory regulations are very degrading," declared one prominent negro delegate, in supporting the resolution. "Our wives have been grossly humiliated by having to stand on crowded rear platforms of street cars during the convention here," asserted another.

The general trend of the sentiment in the big convention was that the blacks had fared very badly with the New Orleans Jim Crow street cars, which force negroes to sit behind screens.

Texas and the whole South is largely represented at the convention. In point of numbers it is one of the largest conventions ever held in this city. Today's resolution indorsing the exposition on these conditions also made an appeal to the several Legislatures of the Southern States, asking that the Jim Crow laws, as applied to railroad trains, at least, be suspended during the time of the exposition, so the blacks could travel on an equality with the whites.

"TRUST BUSTER" IN NEW YORK.

Kellogg Says He Hasn't Been Offered Bower's Job and Would Not Take It Anyway

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Frank B. Kellogg, the government "trust buster," who has been prominently mentioned as a possible successor to the late Solicitor-General L. C. Bowers, is in New York.

"I do not believe there is anything in it," was his comment when asked as to the rumors of his pending elevation to the position of Solicitor-General. "At least this much is certain: I have not been offered this office, and I have no expectation that I will be offered it. In any event, I could not accept it. I am not a candidate for any office whatsoever."

Mr. Kellogg is at work preparing arguments for the government in the Union and Southern Pacific merger suit, which comes up in St. Paul on October 10.

"TIPLESS BARBERY."

Pittsburgh Tonsorialists Start Movement—Want to Be Called Doctors, Too, If You Please.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 17.—A movement is on foot among barbers themselves for "tipless barbery," and the elevation of their profession to the degree of "D.T.," or "Tonsorial Doctor."

Dr. J. C. Shannessey, general organizer of the International Barbers' Union, is here promoting the movement. He declares in nineteen States some sort of State board examination is required of barbers, and many are accustomed, like medical men, to send in monthly or quarterly bills.

In an address to the local union he urges that Pennsylvania adopt a license and degree plan, and announces at the national convention of barbers at Indianapolis, September 22, the best law now in existence would be as a model indication of uniformity in requirements for the fession.

CAMP ATASCADERO.

WAR GAME IS RATHER TAME.

Spectacular Features Are Being Omitted.

Regulars Only in Maneuvers Yesterday.

New Mexico Militia to Arrive Today.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CAMP ATASCADERO, Sept. 17.—"War's alarm" again reëchoed throughout the beautiful wooded hills and dales of Atascadero today in the second field operations of the army maneuvers now going on under Brig.-Gen. Tasker H. Bliss. Heliographs flashed from height to height.

"Wig-wag" flags denoted the activity of detachments of the Signal Corps at points of observation, batteries of field guns thundered across the flats, columns of cavalry galloped along under the protection of hills with patrols on the ridges to the right and left to guard against surprises, and behind all were the ambulances with their Red Crosses, drawn by plodding mules.

This is a kaleidoscopic birdseye view of today's field operation participated in only by the regulars, the Arizona detachment having arrived too late last night to take part in the maneuvers today.

As a matter of fact, there was little excitement and less of the spectacular in the "battles" than this picture might indicate.

There are no cavalry charges, with sabers flashing in the sun, no rushing of heights at the point of bayonet, and so far the roar of artillery has been conspicuous by its absence.

Thin lines of khaki-clad infantry, inconspicuous against the brown landscape, move forward in skirmish order, now slowly taking advantage of every tree and defensive position, now on the run.

A single shot and then a scattering volley. The force may be opposed by a regiment or by no more than a score of men composing an outpost. That is for the commander to find, as best he can, or deduce from the lay of the ground and as the situation develops.

Upon the quickness and accuracy of his judgment, his resourcefulness and the tactical disposition of his troops will depend the report of the umpires and the criticism or praise bestowed upon him.

RESOURCEFULNESS TESTS.

The umpires render no decisions that one side or the other has "won." Some of the problems given a commander and his troops are impossible of "winning," the principal, if not the sole object, being to test resourcefulness, the ability to meet sudden emergencies and to note what tactical disposition is made of troops under certain conditions that are supposed to exist.

The operations today were by regiments. The Eighth United States Infantry, commanded by Col. Mason, had a spirited encounter with several troops of cavalry under Capt. Sweezy near Devil's Gate Pass, a narrow gorge in the mountains three miles west of camp.

At the same time the signal corps, under Capt. Stamford and Lieuts. Beck and Presser, were exchanging and forwarding information from the different mountain tops, while the Thirtieth Infantry and several companies from the Eighteenth, under Col. Chubb, with Maj. Kirby as adjutant, worked out another problem near the railroad toward Templeton, and batteries of artillery were operating by themselves in another direction, but in plain view from one of the heights.

The National Guard of New Mexico, a regiment of infantry, two troops of cavalry and a battery of light artillery commanded by Gen. A. S. Brooks, a former officer of the regular army, now Adjutant-General of the Territory, will arrive tomorrow morning.

With the militia from the two Territories in camp with the regulars, the maneuvers next week will assume greater importance and be on a much larger scale.

Tomorrow being Sunday, there will be no drills or field movements.

Workman Is Nominated by Third District Democrats, But He Doesn't Want to Run.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO (Cal.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Uncle Billy"—W. H. Workman has been named by the Democrats as their candidate for member of the State Board of Equalization in the Third District as opposed to Jeff McElvaine, incumbent.

Workman received 290 votes on the Democratic ticket, and, this being the highest cast, he is named.

"Uncle Billy" doesn't covet the honor and has written a letter to Secretary of State Curry saying that his name was written without his consent and he does not want the nomination. Mr. Curry has written that it will be necessary for Workman to make affidavit before some notary that he does not accept the nomination and will not make the campaign and if this is received at the office of the Secretary of State before the certificate of nomination is issued his name will not appear upon the official ballot.

THREW ACID ON ACTRESS.

Former Baseball Star and Hotel Proprietress Are Arraigned on Serious Charge.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—Dr. Walter J. Hennessy and Mrs. Metta Bluhm, who are accused of an assault with carbolic acid upon Mrs. Laura L. Jones in a hotel lobby last night, were arraigned today in the Police Court and held in $20,000 bonds each to appear on Monday next for trial.

Considerable mystery surrounds the case. Hennessy is a former professional baseball player, and until recently was a surgeon in a local railway hospital, having served also in the same capacity for a street car company of New York.

Mrs. Jones is an actress, and under the name of Laura Lyle appeared with a stock company in Los Angeles. Her friends say that Hennessy has pursued her with his attentions for some time. She met him last night in the lobby of the hotel in which she lived, and after an altercation Hennessy dashed acid into her face and fled in an automobile, together with Mrs. Bluhm, who had accompanied him to the place. Later they were placed under arrest.

Mrs. Bluhm is the proprietress of a local hotel.

Mrs. Jones is badly burned on the shoulders and neck, and is in such a serious condition that she fell in a faint on leaving the courtroom today, remaining unconscious for some time. She declares that she gave no cause for the attack she accuses Hennessey of having made, and cannot explain his action.

Hennessey was released on bail late today, and was immediately removed to a sanatorium. Mrs. Bluhm is still in custody.

Book-keeper Worsts Marysville Hotel Man Until He Cries for Help. She Says He Insulted Her.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

MARYSVILLE (Cal.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Capt. J. Rupert Foster, a well-known hotel man of this city and ex-president of the Chamber of Commerce, prominent in business and promotion work of the city and county, was worsted in an encounter with a woman book-keeper in the office of the Western Hotel yesterday. His cries for help attracted a crowd that saved him from continued rough handling.

The book-keeper is Mrs. Creese, who has been connetced with the hotel office several years.

Several guests were in the lobby of the hotel, when a commotion behind the glass shields of the office attracted notice. Mrs. Creese had hurled a portable telephone instrument at Capt. Foster and was following it with various pieces of desk furnishings, finally striking him on the head with a heavy ledger. It was then that Foster called for help.

The noise brought excited people from the business houses across the street. Mrs. Creese alleged Foster had said something to her that was improper. She has prepared to leave the city.

Foster formerly followed the sea, but his training as master of a crew of sailormen did him no good in today's encounter.

POWER SCHOONER DEPARTS WITH LAST LOAD.

Education Bureau Completes Transfer of Supplies for Alaskan Schools, Many Ports Being Out of Beaten Path of Regular Vessels and Harbors Are Dangerous.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With the sailing Monday of the power schooner J. P. Abler, the Bureau of Education will have finished its difficult task of distributing 2000 tons of supplies along the unfrequented portions of the west coast of Alaska and Aleutian Islands.

At most points where the supplies are put ashore there are neither harbors nor safe landings. At one point where the Abler put off lumber and complete equipment for a new school at Hooper Bay, no previous ship has touched. This season lumber and material for four new schoolhouses, a herd of cattle and material for caches which will be established to protect the reindeer, have been carried north, besides the regular supplies for the forty old schools in the northern district.

Credit for this successful work may be divided between W. T. Locke, superintendent of the government schools in Alaska; H. C. Sinclair, supply agent of the Alaska schools; Capt. Jamison of the schooner St. Helene, and Capt. Hoffman of the Abler, both of whom had to do some clever navigation and lightering among the Aleutian Islands.

The Abler's cargo was building material for schools at Good News Bay and Hooper Bay. Vegetarian foods are contained in large cases.

At the last moment Mr. Locke received a frantic message from Andrew H. Jacobson, the head carpenter engaged in constructing the schools. Mr. Jacobson is a rigid vegetarian. He stated that he is starving and directed Mr. Locke to lay in a winter supply of food that would conform with his scruples.

PROMINENT MERCHANT DIES.

Acute Gastritis, Superinduced by Ptomaine Poisoning, Takes Off Portland Citizen.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Simon L. Kafka, a wealthy pioneer merchant, is dead at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harry H. Holzman, No. 491 Davis street.

Friday night he ate a luncheon in a downtown restaurant, which included a chicken tamale. Four hours later he expired in agony of ptomaine poisoning.

Kafka, upon quitting the store with which he was connected, ate luncheon and took a walk and a trolley ride, arriving at his home shortly after 8.

An hour later he began to feel ill. Alarming symptoms developed. His daughter summoned a doctor, who diagnosed the trouble and made a hard fight to save his patient's life.

Death came soon after 11 o'clock. The doctor gives the cause as acute gastritis, superinduced by ptomaine poisoning.

Mr. Kafka was 56 years of age, and had been well known as a merchant in Portland for more than twenty-five years.

Marriage and Divorce Commission Meets.

Discussion of Bills Planned for Legislature.

General Campaign to Open in November.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Interdenominational Commission on Marriage and Divorce, of which Bishop W. H. Moreland is president, met here yesterday.

Francis M. Moody of Pasadena, who is field secretary of the commission, addressed the meeting to some length on the bills that will be presented to the coming Legislature relative to marriage and divorce. These bills will be under five heads:

(1.) A marriage license bill, providing that ten days' notice must be given by parties intending to be married before a license can be issued.

(2.) The Senate substitute bill providing that a divorce examiner must be appointed in every county of this State, and must appear in every divorce case to contest the same.

(3.) A bill amending both sections of the present law to punish adultery, by dropping out the words "open and notorious," from both sections.

(4.) A bill providing for the presence of the defendants to all divorce actions in court at the trial either in person or by deposition, whenever they can be found.

(5.) Seven minor bills, all of which were referred to the State Legal Committee for their consideration and action, with the recommendation that the first four be submited to the Legislature in suitable form

PREACHING CAMPAIGN.

The second Sunday in November was selected as the day of opening the general campaign.

All pastors will be furnished with literature setting forth the facts and statistics on the divorce evil and the proposed legislation, and requested to preach that day and subsequently on the subject, setting forth the scriptural grounds of marriage and the family relation, and calling attention to the alarming prevalence and growth of the divorce evil in the State.

When fully organized the membership of the commission will consist of all pastors and such laymen as may be nominated and duly elected thereto.

SMUT ERADICATOR FOUND.

Washington Farmers Are Now Sowing Spring Wheat in the Fall—Hope to Raise Quality.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA (Wash.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] That the standard of wheat grown in the north will be materially raised by the discovery made at Dayton is the opinion of the leading grain buyers and farmers familiar with the result of the first tests made.

Working always for the perfection of fall wheat, which yields more heavily, several Dayton farmers have discovered that if spring wheat is used for planting fall crops, smut will be eliminated.

So far as known Henry Watrous, a Columbia county farmer, made the first experiments and he has succeeded in eradicating smut from his grain, besides getting an increased yield an acre. The news has spread and now many farmers are planting spring grain in the fall.

Los Angeles Bank Identifies Account Found on Body of Man Stricken at Oak Park.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ten days ago a stranger dropped dead in Oak Park, a suburb of Sacramento, and his identity was not established until yesterday when Coroner Gormley received a letter from the First National Bank of Los Angeles, where the dead man had an account. A check book upon the Los Angeles bank was found in his pocket. The bank wrote to the Coroner:

"So far as our investigations go, we believe the effects you sent us—a check book and a memorandum—are the property of one Max Schoen, who opened an account with us on July 25, and who at that time gave his address as Nineteenth Ward Bank, N. W.

"This bank replied to us as follows: 'Max Schoen of No. 224 West Twenty-second street had an account with us for about one year. Further than that we have no information regarding the man.' He claimed at the time he opened his account with us in Los Angeles that he was in the show business and we believe he went North on August 21 on the steamer Hanalei."

The man was buried yesterday.

LOSE AUTO IN QUICKSAND.

PARTY REACH SHORE SAFELY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

AUSTIN (Nev.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] While attempting to cross the reservoir in an automobile Friday night, George Perkins with his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Rosenthal of Reno were compelled to desert the machine in the middle of the river and make their way to the bank.

The treacherous quickmire gradually sucked the automobile beneath the surface.

Mr. and Mrs. Perkins and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Rosenthal left Reno several days ago on a trip to the Northumberland district, where the men have mining property. Squarely in the middle of the river bed, where several inches of water were coursing merrily over the mud, the machine stopped short, caught in the grip of the quickmire, where it was held firm.

The occupants scrambled to the shore, and hailed a Nevada Central train, which took them to Austin.

NO USE FOR INHERITANCE.

Santa Cruz Prodigal Puts Money in Bank and Gets Back on Job.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA CRUZ, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] To suddenly be transformed from a wandering prodigal without a place to lay his head, to a man worth $38,500, is the experience of R. E. Ramage, a good-looking fellow of 30 years, who drifted into this city two weeks ago.

He went to Swan's restaurant for a handout and was willing to work. He did chores for a few days when a letter came from an uncle, J. A. Wortman, Cedar-Rapids, Iowa, stating that he had more money than he needed, no direct heirs, and he wanted to do something for the nephew who left his farm when 15 years old.

Ramage was asked to meet the uncle at San Luis Obispo and he lost no time in getting there. He has just returned after receiving this little fortune, still wearing his working clothes and ready to work at anything. He does not know what to do with so much money. He said he would continue to wear working clothes and pretend to be poor, so designing girls will not bother him. His money is in the bank and he expects soon to work on a farm near Merced.

CHINA FACES CRISIS.

So Says Wisconsin University Professor Who Has Just Returned from Orient—Reform Wave.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

VICTORIA (B. C.) Sept. 17.—Prof. E. A. Ross, professor of sociology at the University of Wisconsin, who has been making extended journeys through China during the past six months, studying sociological conditions, arrived by the steamer Empress of China today. He said China was on the verge of a crisis, and the next few months would show whether there would be a great uprising, perhaps with much bloodshed, or a peaceful revolution.

Prof. Ross says there is a strong movement for reform, and the younger element seeking the change is waiting to see what the Prince Regent will do. The reformers consider the attitude of Peking more or less a sham to impress the powers, and there is a disposition to look upon the Manchu officials as obstacles in the way of the eagerly sought reforms.

It is probable that Yuan Shih Kai will return to Peking, and this would be the means of preventing a rising if the reformers are satisfied that in his hands China would go forward. Reform would be a great boom, and the doing away with the growing of opium, a movement which is being energetically carried out, also will greatly aid China.

BIG MILLS RETRENCH.

Northwestern Lumber and Shingle Manufacturers Adopt Policy of Curtailment.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TACOMA, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispacth.] A policy of general curtailment in production has been adopted by 1000 lumber and shingle manufacturers in Western Washington.

The curtailment has already reached a point where not to exceed 75 per cent. of the mills of the Puget Sound district are operating. Several informal conferences have been held at which the qusetion of further curtailment has been discussed.

The prevailing sentiment of Western Washington lumbermen is that the curtailment will be carried to a point of 50 per cent. before October 1. Not more than two mills are operating nightly on Puget Sound. Advices received today state but one mill is operating nights in Portland.

Southwestern Washington manufacturers are curtailing to the extent of 25 per cent., and will not resume operations until the demand improves. Lack of business is responsible for the curtailment now in progress.

The fall demand from the Middle West yards has not reached the proportions expected due to the partial failure of crops in the Dakotas and the railroads' policy of retrenchment. The railroads, when prosperous, are among the largest consumers of forest products, including heavy timbers and piling.

WIFE AND HIRED MAN.

IT'S THE SAME OLD STORY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GREAT FALLS (Mont.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Mrs. John Wolff, wife of a Canadian immigration officer, with headquarters at Winnipeg, and Emmet Lapp, a farm hand, were arrested here yesterday on the charge of eloping. According to the story told by Wolff it was the old tale of being away from home a large portion of the time and leaving a hired man to look after his ranch near Winnipeg. Lapp and Mrs. Wolff remained hidden in one of the cheap lodging-houses of the city for several days and it was not until they appeared on the street that their arrest followed. United States Immigration Agent Andrews will take the couple across the boundary line, where they will be in charge of Wolff, who is a Canadian officer.

MUCH DAMAGE TO GRAPES.

Rains in San Joaquin County Have Made Much Fruit Unfit for Shipping.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] While the exact amount of damage caused by the recent rains will never positively be known, the experts who have been making an inspection of the vineyards of San Joaquin county are of the opinion that it will be more than first estimated.

The second crop of table grapes was just beginning to ripen and those well advanced will not be fit to ship any great distance, though most of that crop will be marketable. The earlier varieties were well cleaned up, but the remainder will not be of much use.

The San Joaquin County Table Grape Growers' Association agreed not to pick or ship grapes until next Monday. In the meantime the berries damaged will be disclosed and the grapes sorted and only the best quality sent out. The loss will in a measure strengthen the market.

The sale of a large shipment of Zinfandels in Chicago at $15.50, by W. C. Brown & Co. of Lodi has caused the growers to take heart and hope that they will receive better prices for their winegrapes, which have been selling from $7 to $9 per ton.

HOLD-UP ANTICIPATED.

BOOTBLACK IS A HERO.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

RENO (Nev.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Thomas Mutch, a bootblack employed by the Nevada gambling house at Winnemucca, probably prevented the place from being looted last night. He informed the officers that a man was acting suspicious outside the place, and a search revealed J. F. Howell with a skull cap pulled down over his eyes, his coat collar pulled up and an automatic pistol and brass knuckles in his possession. A rude mask was found near by, and he had an extra hat under his coat. A horse saddled and bridled was found close by. It is known that he disappeared from Salt Lake City. He was arrested after a chase. Only last Sunday the gambling house at Ely was held up and a large sum of money stolen.

SEEKS AFFLICTED SQUIRRELS.

NO BUBONIC PLAGUE FOUND.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 17.—After a trip through the San Joaquin Valley in search of squirrels afflicted with bubonic plague, Dr. Rupert Blue of the United States Marine Hospital Corps; Dr. Martin Regensberger of the State Board of Health, and Dr. French Simpson, all of San Francisco, arrived in Sacramento tonight. The party made the trip in an automobile, and report the country north of Sacramento and east of the San Joaquin Valley is entirely free from any evidence of plague squirrels.

BIG HUNT IS PLANNED.

MOUNTAIN LION DOOMED.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STOCKTON, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The hunters in the northern part of San Joaquin county will turn out tomorrow and make an effort to trail and kill a large mountain lion which strayed away from the higher altitudes and took up its home along the bottom lands of the Mokelumne River, northeast of Lodi. For weeks the farmers have been missing pigs, lambs and other small stock and not until a few days ago was the marauder seen, but it was impossible to get a shot at him then.

Hounds will be used to trail the lion to its lair and the sportsmen hope to kill him and stop the trouble. An invitation has been extended to every one who wishes to make the trip and it is expected that there will be a large crowd hunting the lion, which is said to be one of the largest ever seen. Dogs will not tackle him.

HOW DID JURY VOTE?

THEY DISAGREE ABOUT IT.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OROVILLE, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A judgment recorded in civil action of Pappitnow against E. T. Harriman, in the Superior Court recently, now promises to be set aside. The jury was reported to the court as standing nine to three in favor of a verdict for the plaintiff, but four members of the jury have now sworn to affidavits that they voted against such a verdict. Dist.-Atty. Bond has been asked to investigate, and is doing so. The affidavits made are by Thomas O'Malley, A. W. Smith, S. C. Plymouth and P. O. Dodge. They claim no foreman was named by the jury. More than twenty ballots were taken, and the four men claim they voted for the defendant each time. Verdicts in civil cases require a vote of nine to three, or that proportion.

Export Flour Goes Down.

SEATTLE, Sept. 17.—Millers have announced a 30-cent reduction in the price of Oriental brands of flour, and a 15-cent reduction on Central and Southern American brands. The reductions are due to the desire of millers to stimulate export trade. Since the flurry in June and July the export flour trade has been dead.

NOT FOR LONG, NOW.

WIFE TEACHES SCHOOL WHILE HUBBY LIVES LIFE OF LUXURY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA CRUZ, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Superior Judge Lucas F. Smith today rendered a decision in favor of Elizabeth A. Noel, who sued her husband, Theophilus Noel, for divorce. Noel is now living at Bering Springs, Mich.

The next move will be the effort of Mrs. Noel to collect judgment, through the Michigan courts, based on Judge Smith's decision. It is not known whether Noel will resist this move. The decision is sweeping in its effect in dealing with the sensational complaint against the millionaire medicine man of Chicago, who lived here for a number of years.

The Noel's were married in Chicago July 12, 1893, the complaint being filed as far back as May 18, 1906. In the decision it is estimated that they made a fortune of one million by selling patent medicine.

Property was purchased in Illinois, Michigan, Canada and this city. This is held by the court to be community property, and as such the plaintiff gets one-half, besides their beautiful home here on Noel Heights, which Mrs. Noel had homesteaded. She also is awarded attorneys fees $1500 and $500 per month for her support.

"The various acts of cruelty alleged in the complaint have been established by competent evidence," says Judge Smith, "and the plaintiff is without means of support and is compelled to earn her own living by teaching school while the defendant is living in ease and luxury at his palatial summer residence in the State of Michigan."

Noel has turned his business and property over to a son, which will complicate the final settlement.

LOOK ALIKE TO PRESIDENT.

No Favorites to Be Played by Administration.

Circulation of Letter Adds Emphasis.

"Regulars" and "Insurgents" on Same Plane.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Indications multiply that the letter written by Charles D. Norton, secretary to the President, to an unnamed politician, is an expression of the policy of President Taft to be followed by the various departments of the government in their attitude in matters of patron- toward all Republicans whether y be "insurgent" or regular.

Copies of the letter have been sent m Beverly to the executive heads departments in Washington. The pies were not accompanied by a let- of transmittal directing the de- rtment heads to heed the sugges- ns contained in the letter, but mere- by a note that the letter had been itten by authority of the President.

The letter itself is a direct state- nt that so far as Federal patron- is concerned, the "regular" Re- blican and the "insurgent" Repub- an will look alike to President Taft, is accepted as significant of the itude of the President and of his ention to place all Republicans, ether they be classed as "regulars" "insurgents," on the same plane, so as patronage is concerned.

The receipt of the letter created con- erable comment among department cials today, but no difference of nion regarding it was expressed.

UEENSTOWN, Sept. 17.—John E. mond, leader of the Irish Nation- ts; Joseph Devlin, M.P., secretary the United Irish League; T. P. onnor, and Daniel Boyle, M.P., North Mayo, arrived here this ning on the steamer Lusitania. y comprised a special mission of Irish party to the United States, were given an ovation on the eve their departure by large crowds hered to greet them.

. Redmond, in a brief speech, he was going to tell the Ameri- s that the cause of Irish freedom, ead of being subjected to the ility of the people of Great Brit- was tied up inseparably with the wellbeing and freedom of the democracy of Great Britain.

The struggle today, he added, was between the whole mass of democratic forces in England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland, combined against the last relic of feudalism.

The moment the power of the House of Lords disappeared the road to home rule, he declared, was absolutely clear. Irishmen foresaw plainly early victory for the cause, according to Mr. Redmond.

Former Secretary of Late Colorado Springs Millionaire Sues in Federal Court.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DENVER, Sept. 17.—Clark Mellen of Greenwich, Conn., former secretary of the late W. J. Palmer, the Colorado Springs millionaire, brought suit in the Federal Court in Denver today against Dorothy Palmer, Mrs. Marjory Watt and Mrs. Elsie Myers, daughters of Gen. Palmer, alleging that they had purposely recorded a deed of trust declaration made by Mellen to Gen. Palmer in return for loans aggregating $60,000 for the purpose of establishing claim to the property built by Mellen with the money and of taking the property away from him. Mellen claims that by the terms of Gen. Palmer's will, the indebtness was wiped out.

ARREST HANGS OVER BARONS.

TWO OTHER BEEF TRUST HIGHER-UPS ARE AIMED AT.

Development of New Evidence Now in Hands of Government Prosecutor Warrants Indictment of Chicago Packer and Eastern Capitalist by Grand Jury.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] An official of a local packing company and an eastern "beef baron" are expected to be named in indictments that will be returned within a day or two by the Federal grand jury in the investigation of the alleged "beef trust."

These men were not named in the indictments that were returned last Monday for the reason that the government's attorneys were unable to produce the witnesses that were needed at that time to complete the testimony against the packers. These witnesses are now available and when they have testified it is believed that the additional indictments will be returned soon afterward.

This phase of the inquiry has to do with the purchase of the New York Retail Butchers' Association by the National Packing Company. This deal was consummated about a year ago and, according to the testimony given thus far, gave the National Packing Company a monopoly in the sale of fresh meats in the eastern markets. It has been charged that in purchasing this association, the National Packing Company violated that clause of the Sherman anti-trust law that refers to combinations in restraint of trade. It is expected that when the remaining witnesses have testified it will be shown that methods were used by the "trusts" in purchasing the association that were in direct violation of this act.

AROUND WORLD IN YACHT.

Craft of San Franciscan Touches at Colombo, Ceylon—Her Owner in Command.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A letter from Chester A. Davis, Vice United States Consul to Colombo, Ceylon, says that an interesting arrival in that harbor August 17 was the two-masted American yacht "Seafarer."

This little vessel, which has a gross tonnage of forty-two tons, is on a trip around the world, and is skippered by her owner, L. A. Norris of San Francisco, who has on board with him his little daughter and a companion, Miss Helen Wylde of Seattle, and crew of nine.

Port Said was the last port touched at, and prior to that visits were paid to Malta, Naples, Marseilles, Gibraltar and The Azores.

The "Seafarer" left Boston on April 21, and Port Said was left on July 27. Norris will stay at Colombo only one or two days, as he is anxious to get through to Yokohama soon after touching at Singapore. He expects to reach California in two months or ten weeks, and plans to cross the Pacific without calling anywhere, taking four or five weeks to do so. He has stores and provisions sufficient to last for one year.

LA FOLLETTE IS SILENT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

MADISON (Wis.) Sept. 17.—Attempts to obtain from Senator La Follette today confirmation or denial of the report that he would go to Rochester, Minn., to consult physicians regarding his physical ailment proved futile. Senator La Follette was in his office, but his private secretary refused to allow him to be disturbed. To all outward appearances, the Senator is in excellent health.

INCUBATOR BABIES DIE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

LOUISVILLE (Ky.) Sept. 17.—The baby incubator show at the State Fair was ordered closed by the police last night. This action followed the death of two infants who were brought to this city by a Chicago physician. They came from a charities hospital in Pittsburgh. One of the infants, a boy, was eight weeks old, and the other, a girl, four weeks old. Both died of inanition. The third baby died during the morning and a short time later Col. Scott Bullitt, County Attorney, ordered an investigation into the matter. The babies, it is understood, were taken from an asylum in St. Paul, Minn., and the incubator exhibit was a part of a show company which goes from place to place for the purpose of exhibitions. Although the electric current at the fair grounds was kept up during last night it was shut off the two previous nights and the heat was cut from the incubators.

FIRE PROBABLY INCENDIARY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

OMAHA (Neb.) Sept. 17.—A fire today destroyed the plant of the Western Chemical Reduction Company in East Omaha, causing a loss estimated at $100,000, with $48,000 insurance. The fire is believed to have been incendiary, as it is said to have started in two places at the same time.

CLEVELAND MEMORIAL FUND.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17.—St. Louis will contribute $5000 toward the construction of a national memorial in perpetuation of the memory of Grover Cleveland. Half the amount has been subscribed, and Albert Edwards, president of the Commonwealth Trust Company, in direct charge of the finances, is confident the rest of the fund will be obtained next week. The largest subscription was received from David E. Francis, who gave $500. He was Secretary of the Interior in Mr. Cleveland's Cabinet. He is one of the trustees of the Cleveland Monument Association, and he represents the whole West and most of the South in the movement.

LEPER ESCAPES QUARANTINE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17.—Mon Wing, the city's only patient at quarantine, escaped from the leprosy isolation hut, west of the quarantine station, yesterday, leaving a note which read, "We going West." A search for the leper has been ordered. Mon is 5ft. 2in. tall, and can be recognized by his deformed hands. One foot is also deformed.

IMPERATIVE DEMANDS.

IDEAS ABOUT PRISON REFORM

Radical Change in Views of English Officials.

Many Notables Gather for Washington Congress.

Holland Group of Delegates Interesting.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Prison reformers from England believe that the International Prison Congress in Washington next week will lead to a new state of things in prison management throughout the civilized world, and inaugurate changes imperatively demanded.

Sir Evelyn Ruggles-Brise, head of the British delegation, and chairman of the British Prison Commission, who is now in the United States, expects to lay before the congress, as indicative of the radical change in the viewpoint of British prison management, the reform proposals brought forward recently by Winston Spencer Churchill, Home Secretary.

Mr. Churchill's scheme, which John Galsworthy said was "inspired by imagination, without which reform is deadly, and by common sense, without which it is dangerous," attacks the problems from both ends. Laying down the principle that the young shall not be punished, except for their good, he urges on the other hand that no youth shall be sent to prison for less than a month, thus doing away with the happy-go-lucky sentences for three, six or ten days, described by him as "a perfect incubator for criminal germs."

ON THE OTHER HAND.

At the other end of the scales he is urging the linking up of the prisoners in societies, the establishment of a central agency that will take direct charge and guidance of the prisoner, thus relieving the ordinary police of "an odious service," and finally a government grant in aid of the "humanizing influences" brought to bear upon the discharged convict, instead of "leaving their support to the scattering of half crowns and boots by charity."

Sir Evelyn Ruggles-Brise, as the originator of the "Borstal treatment" of first offenders, is urged to lay before the American prison authorities a full history of its working on this side of the Atlantic.

It is believed that the Americans will promptly recognize its feasibility and expediency.

NOTABLES ARRIVE.

To attend the Congress a notable group of jurists and criminologists have just arrived in this country. The group included the three official delegates from Holland to the conference, Dr. D. O. Engelen, head of the Tribunal of Zutphen; Dr. H. C. Dresselhuys, Director-General of the Central Prison Administration of Holland, and Dr. A. van der Elst of Leiden, who is regarded as one of the foremost lawyers of Holland.

Accompanying the delegates are Baron H. B. Verloren von Themaat, a criminologist; Prof. Simon van der Aa, who occupies the Chair of Law in the University of Gröningen; Mr. A. L. de Vries Feyens and Dr. J. A. van Hansel, lawyers.

The group were met at the pier by Mr. Walter Robertson, assistant business director of the Congress, who represented Mr. Frederick Hamlin Mills, the director.

REPORTS RAISINS SHORT.

Statistician of Fresno County Finds World's Output Far Below That of Last Year.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

FRESNO, Sept. 17.—That the raisin crop of the world is 100,000 tons short as compared with last year is the substance of a report made today to the Board of Supervisors by George Robertson, county statistician. The figures on foreign countries were obtained from American consuls. The world shortage is attributed to unseasonable weather.

Bright's Disease in its last stages completely cured by

Warner's Safe Cure

It is gratifying to read in her own words what Mrs. James W. Wray has to say about having been cured of Bright's Disease in its last stages. The cure was made 17 years ago and she is still a well and strong woman:

"I am very grateful for Warner's Safe Cure. I owe my life to its use. Seventeen years ago last February I had Bright's Disease in the last stages. When I say 'last stages' I know what I am talking about. I took Warner's Safe Cure for two years, and today I am a well and hearty woman.

"I have been thinking of writing you for years, and at last I have, as I see so many people suffering daily. I am never without it—it is worth $5.00 a bottle to me. Why should it not be the same to others who suffer in any way with their kidneys? I recommend it to any one who has pains in the back or any form of kidney trouble as the best remedy I have ever used. I know what it has done for me and for others."—Mrs. James W. Wray, Devon, Pa.

When the albumen, instead of nourishing the body, passes through the broken down kidneys and is found in the urine, when the blood is thin and almost colorless, when the heart is weak and unable to rightly do its work, when the appetite is gone and the stomach is feeble, when the whole frame is weak, languid and lifeless and uraemic poisoning threatens the existence of the sufferer, Warner's Safe Cure by its mysterious and magic healing power upon the kidneys and the other organs and tissues of the body, restores the afflicted patient to health and vigor.

Warner's Safe Cure is purely vegetable, and contains no harmful drugs. Men skilled in botany and chemistry compound it. Put up in 50c and $1.00 sizes and sold by druggists everywhere.

For constipation and biliousness take Warner's Safe Pills, absolutely free from injurious substances, a perfect laxative. They do not gripe or leave any bad after effects. 25c a box.

To convince every sufferer from diseases of the kidneys and liver that WARNER'S SAFE CURE will absolutely cure, a sample bottle and a sample box of Warner's Safe Pills will be sent FREE OF CHARGE, postpaid, to any one who will write WARNER'S SAFE CURE CO., Rochester, N. Y., and mention having seen this liberal offer in The Times. The genuineness of this offer is fully guaranteed.

KNOCKS DOWN OWN MOTHER.

Oakland Preacher Then Lays Out Butte Boss.

Police Arrest Assailant Who Tells Strange Story.

Says Aged Woman Shunned Sons for Interloper.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

GREAT FALLS (Mont.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Just as the crowds were leaving the afternoon trains at the Great Northern Depot, W. P. Murray, mine foreman of Butte, assaulted his mother, a woman almost 80 years of age, knocking her down and kicking her.

The Rev. J. H. Durant of Oakland, Cal., pastor of the Methodist Church in that city, dropped his grips when he saw the assault, and rushed upon Murray, striking him a terrific blow full in the face, which bowled him over on the ground and knocked him out. Policemen then arrested Murray.

Murray says his mother was trying to run away with a man. Murray told the Chief at the station that he came from Butte in search of his mother who was running away with a man named Powers. He said she had about $1000 which he and his brother had saved up and given her.

He avers that he and his brother have given their mother their pay-checks for several years and she refuses to have anything to do with her boys.

A man named Powers, Murray says, is following her endeavoring to get the old lady to consent to marriage with him. To prevent this Murray followed his mother to Great Falls. The mother refused to appear against Murray, who was fined $50, which he paid.

BROTHERS FIGHT BROTHERS.

As Result of Family Feud One Is Dead and Two Are Probably Fatally Wounded.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TEXARKANA (Tex.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] At Oak Grove, twenty-five miles west of here, at 4 o'clock this afternoon, Mart Ross, Jr., and Butler Ross, brothers, engaged in an impromptu battle with Jim and B. Orear, also brothers, the weapons used being Winchesters and shot guns.

When the smoke of the battle lifted B. Orear lay dead, while his brother was found to be fatally wounded. Butler Ross was shot through the stomach and both arms were shattered. He will probably die. Mart Ross escaped unhurt.

The Orears are brothers of the wife of Mart Ross. The shooting grew out of an old family difference and was precipitated by a trivial suit in the court today.

TRAPPER KILLS RIVAL.

IS CHARGED WITH MURDER.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Sept. 17.—Duncan MacDonald, a Salmon River rancher and trapper, and the body of a neighbor and rival trapper, Frank Savage, who was killed by MacDonald September 14, during a quarrel, were brought to Vancouver today and MacDonald was placed in jail charged with murder. The complaint on file charges that MacDonald has beaver skins illegally in his possession and Savage was sworn in as a special constable to execute a search warrant at the trapper's home. MacDonald resisted execution and Savage called another rancher to aid him. As the special officers came out of MacDonald's house after making the search, the latter shot Savage through the chest, killing him instantly.

HOLD SALOONISTS FOR FIRE.

STORY OF AN ARIZONA BLAZE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

GLOBE (Ariz.) Sept. 17.—Following a fire early today which started in a saloon here, Tom Vuletich, proprietor, and Mike Lazovich, bartender, were arrested on charges of arson. The fire destroyed the saloon and two stores, the damage being estimated at $15,000. Other arrests are expected. Four men are said to have been seen leaving the saloon shortly before a succession of explosions were heard. The place is said to have been insured recently.

KILLED BY PARTNER.

ARIZONA RANCHER SHOT.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) Sept. 17.—Reports reached here today that Charles Cummings, a well-known rancher, was shot by his partner, Van Lee, in front of the Westward Hotel in Montezuma, Sonora last night. The two men had been on bad terms for some time. Lee used a rifle, the bullet passing through Cummings's stomach and breaking the backbone. Cummings had a record in the Southwest. He killed his own brother in Texas, a man in Benson, and another in Flagstaff. He was married, and has one daughter who lives here.

INDIANS ON TRAIL.

ALLEGED MURDERERS PURSUED.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

GLOBE (Ariz.) Sept. 17.—Half a dozen posses, led by Indian trailers, are scouring the fastnesses of the White Mountain Apache reservation for James [illegible] and William Stewart, alleged murderers of Fred Kibbe and Albert [illegible] of Globe. The Indian trailers left Fort Apache to head off the murderers before they reach the Santa Fé Railroad. The suspects know the country well, but it is believed they will be captured before they reach the Colorado line.

HANGS SELF IN JAIL.

SELF-CONFESSED MURDERER.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

TRENTON (Mo.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] James Humphreys, a wealthy young farmer, who was last Saturday convicted of second-degree murder for killing James Hatcher, killed himself in jail here yesterday. The jailer's wife found him hanging in his cell. Humphreys's relatives are among the most prominent in this section of Missouri. Humphreys confessed that he shot Hatcher, with whose wife he is alleged to have admitted having been intimate, but he pleaded that Hatcher was stealing his corn when he shot him.

LAWYER SIGNS CONTRACT OLD MAN'S FRIENDS SHUN.

Kansas City Book-Seller Who Gives Lawyer Twenty Thousand for Monthly Allowance During Lifetime, Expires After Receiving Seven Hundred and Fifty.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

KANSAS CITY (Mo.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Joseph S. Rust, a lawyer, made $18,750 clear profit when Bernath Glick, the retired bookseller, died three days ago. By one of the strangest contracts ever drawn in this part of the country, the attorney immediately inherited the whole of Glick's property, which amounted to that much.

Six months ago Glick and Attorney Rust made an agreement by which Glick turned over $20,000 to the lawyer. In return for this Glick was to receive $125 a month as long as he lived. When he died the attorney agreed to pay $500 for the burial expenses.

Under the arrangements Mr. Rust had advanced the old man but $750 when Glick died. This, with the $500 burial money, deducted from the $20,000, leaves $18,750 to the lawyer.

The contract entered into by Glick and his lawyer was previously submitted to several of the dead man's business acquaintances, none of whom thought well enough of it to enter such an agreement.

CONVINCED BY RELATIVES.

They Persuade MacNair Ilgenfritz Against Having "Unashamed" Published in St. Louis.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "I would like to have it known that, owing to the strenuous objections of relatives here, my novel, 'Unashamed,' is not to be published," said MacNair Ilgenfritz, grandson of Gov. McNair, first chief executive of Missouri.

"While the book is not meant as a picture of St. Louis society, one chapter, describing the amusements of a frivolous week-end, isa narration of the incidents of a certain house party.

"I now feel that it would be breaking one of the unwritten laws of hospitality to expose these rather risque events for the benefit of a curious public, to whom the participants are known only by reputation. I intend to have a limited number of volumes printed privately to give to my intimate friends. I feel justified in doing this for the reason that while my book deals with immorality, it is nevertheless morally sound."

Ilgenfritz startled St. Louis society last year by appearing at the opera wearing a muff and a bracelet.

BOSTON PLANS EXPANSION.

Legislature Will Consider Bill for Greater City to Embrace Forty Municipalities.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A bill will be introduced at the next session of the Legislature calling for a Greater Boston, to embrace forty cities and towns, included in the metropolitan district, and to establish a metropolitan Council to consist of Mayors and chairmen of Boards of Select Men in the district.

The measures will not provide for the annexation of Boston to any of the cities or towns included in the Greater Boston district, and the metropolitan Council will have merely advisory powers in considering many legislative matters of common interest to the cities and towns in that great district.

The Metropolitan Park district, with the addition of Lexington, would give Boston at present an estimated popriation of 1,439,182, instead of 670,585, as announced in the recent national census.

OLD SWEETHEARTS WILL WED.

They Quarreled in Youth, Married and Drifted Apart—Will Unite in Old Age.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EMPORIA (Kan.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A romance of more than fifty years culminated last night in the marriage of Mrs. Susan Swarthout of Coldwater, Mich., aged 68 years, and Amos Kriser of Altoona, Kan., aged 71 years.

The pair were sweethearts in their youth, but they quarreled. Mr. Kriser settled in Western Kansas, where he married and reared a family. He encountered many hardships during the frontier days of Kansas, but persevered and became wealthy.

His old sweetheart went to Michigan where she married Swarthout and where she spent her wedded life.

Recently Mr. Kriser lost his wife and Mrs. Swarthout her husband. Their families were scattered and they were both lonely when, by chance, they met at the home of a friend. Their old love had not died in the long interval and arrangements for their marriage in Emporia at the home of Mrs. Swarthout's brother were made quickly.

MISS SUSAN HALE.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—Miss Susan Hale of this city, artist and auhtor, sister of the late Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale, died today at her summer home at Matununick, R. I. She was a native of Boston, and was 76 years of age. She studied art in London, Paris and German cities, and after returning to this country exhibited many pictures, chiefly in public galleries in this city and New York. She collaborated with Dr. Hale in writing the "Family Flight" series of travel books for young persons, and was the author of various other works.

ENTIRE ARMY ENTHUSIASTIC.

French Are Pleased Over Air Machine Tests.

Achievements of Aeroplanes in Maneuvers.

Army Strategy Will Be Revolutionized, They Say.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

GRANDVILLIERS (France) Sept. 17.—Gen. Brun, French Minister of War, and the entire army are enthusiastic over the achievements of the aëroplanes and dirigible balloons in the military maneuvers which ended today.

The military experts are unanimous in the opinion that the air machines are destined not only to play an important role in future wars, but to modify and perhaps revolutionize army strategy.

Henceforth it will be almost impossible to conceal the position and movements of troops, and so will be eliminated, practically the surprise flank operations which have decided so many critical battles.

Regarding the relative merits of the aëroplane and the dirigible, opinions differ, but the consensus of opinion appears to be that as each supplements the other, a combination of both is necessary.

The aëroplane demonstrates its superiority in the matter of speed, invulnerability and independence of wind and weather, while its portability avoids the necessity of housing, but at the same time the excessive speed of the machines is a drawback as it makes observation from them necessarily vague.

Twice during the maneuver Gen. Menier, commanding the Third Corps, was compelled to send a pilot of an aëroplane back over the scouting field to obtain more precise information.

DIRIGIBLE'S ADVANTAGES.

The dirigibles, although slower, so offering a better target for the enemy, are able to make more accurate its observations, besides having the advantage of being in constant wireless communication with headquarters.

The aëroplanists believe that their lack of precision in scout duty can be overcome by a preliminary training in air observations.

While offensive aërial operations have not been attempted here, Gen. Brun is convinced that the development of the aëroplane, especially in an automatic contrivance to regulate the speed, and the increase of carrying capacity to accommodate a crew of three or four, opens a great field for aggressive aërial operations, such as day and night raids for the purpose of dropping explosives within the enemy's lines.

He believes, also, that the great height which aëroplanes are capable of attaining constitutes an important advantage.

The problem of fighting aërial war engines also was tested, each general having at his disposition guns mounted on automobiles, the sights of which could be elevated to an angle of 70 degrees, for an attack on the dirigibles, and machine guns for use against the aëroplanes. Theoretically, all the dirigible balloons were destroyed, while most of the aëroplanes escaped.

Hubert Latham, the aviator, who ranked as a private soldier during the maneuvers, will be promoted to an officer of the Legion of Honor.

Las Cruces, N. M., Militiamen, Rejected, Damage Property and Are Arrested by Sheriff.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

EL PASO (Tex.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Because they were not among the forty selected to go to camp at Atascadero, Cal., for the maneuvers, the remaining members of the militia company at Las Cruces, N. M., bombarded the armory Friday night after Capt. Dessauer had made his selections, breaking several windows, then stormed the Pullman car set out at the station to carry the company to the encampment, breaking numerous windows and damaging the car in other ways.

Continuing their rowdyism, the disappointed militiamen broke the plate glass in the Strong undertaking establishment, wrecked the buggy of Nicholas Galles, broke windows and doors in the homes of N. C. Frenger, R. E. French and F. M. Hayner, and did other damage.

The Sheriff has five of them in custody.

PATHETIC PLIGHT OF CHICAGO GIRL IN SANATORIUM.

Physician's Daughter for Love of Whom Oskar Rothschild Ended Life Is Received in Germany by His Family—Father Denies Report of a Money Settlement Upon Her.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Unable to leave the country in which her ill-fated affianced had his home, Miss Olga Menn for love of whom Baron Oskar Rothschild killed himself fourteen months ago, is in a sanatorium near Dresden, Germany. The fact was revealed when Dr. Rudolph Menn reached Chicago today alone with his son. Mrs. Menn remains in Germany with her daughter.

Baron Oskar, who was the youngest son of Baron Albert Rothschild of Vienna, killed himself on his estate July 12, 1909, after his father had refused to consent to his marriage to Miss Menn. Baron Oskar and Miss Menn had met each other but a few months before in Chicago.

Dr. Menn said that the rumors that the Rothschilds were to make a financial settlement on Miss Menn were "preposterous."

"It was a sentimental journey we made to Germany with our daughter. It was taken solely in the hope that it would be of benefit to her health to visit the home of the Rothschilds where she might find her mourning shared by that of the unhappy young man's family.

"She was paternally received by Baron Rothschild and it seemed that her health improved. But when it came to leaving the country she could not bring herself to do it. I respected her wishes and procured apartments for her in Lehman's Sanatorium near Dresden. Mrs. Menn remained with her. I hope to have them both back with me before Christmas.

"I would wish to set forever at rest the mistaken idea that we could consent to have the Rothschilds make any settlement of money on our daughter. There is no occasion for any such thing. There is no reason why they should offer her money. Certainly, they have never done so. The idea is preposterous and repulsive.

"Our relations with the Rothschild family are at an end save that we remain friendly acquaintances. Sad memories unite us, that is all

"My daughter received no presents of any sort from the Rothschilds while we were in Germany. All the remembrances she has ever received or ever will receive are those willed to her by her betrothed."

CASTELLANES IN COURT.

New York Judge Names Sole Guardian for Children of Princess De Sagan.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Justice Bijur of the Supreme Court signed an order today appointing Walter B. Walker, attorney, guardian of the children of Anna Gould. The infants are Boniface, aged 13 years and 7 months; George, aged 12 years and 6 months; Jay, aged 8 years and 4 months, and Howard, aged 1 year and one month.

The guardianship is for the purpose of protecting the right of the children in a suit brought by Daniel S. Miller and Charles E. Appleby, as trustees under the last will of Daniel S. Miller, to sell certain real estate in this city. The interest of the infants in this property is a contingent one, depending upon the life interest of Emily M. Noyes and a contingent interest of their mother, Princess de Sagan.

Application for the appointment of the guardian was made by Guy Phillips, who says that he is an old friend of the Gould family and has transacted business for them.

ORATORY.

BANQUET MARKS FORMAL START.

Felicitous Compliments to the Promoter.

Structures to Cost Million Big Dollars.

Will Be Ready for Next Season's Crowds.

OCEAN PARK, Sept. 17.—The Ca- no, on the pier at the foot of Pier enue, was the scene this evening of e of the most elaborate banquets er given along the shores of Santa onica Bay. The affair was arranged der the direction of a special com- ttee that had been named for the casion by the Santa Monica Bay hamber of Commerce, and the pur- se of the love feast was to com- morate the commencement of work the new Fraser pier, which, with attendant amusement features, re- lving cafés, scenic railways, Ferris eels, roller coasters and what-nots, estimated to cost a round $1,000,000.

That the banquet had been timed to nicety was demonstrated early in afternoon when the low grinding heavy wheels on the hard paved eets was heard. The clatter of iron- od hoofs and the rumble of the ays marked the arrival upon the pier e of the first of the machinery re- ired in the building of the structure. e first shipment consisted of Con- ctor C. W. Corbaley's piledrivers, crete mixers, stationary engines and er equipment of his construction nt. The material was unloaded at shore end of the Marine-street r and will be in position and ready place the false work and begin the ting of the reinforced concrete piles ly in the week. The Corbaley con- ct, which covers the building of only pier, represents a stated consid- tion of $175,000. The pier will be feet long, will extend from Pier nue to Marine street and will con- n 280,000 square feet of floor space. is will be the largest pleasure pier platform in the West, there being reinforced concrete piles used in its lding.

ccupying prominent places on the r will be the revolving café—and it s around this that the banquet ned tonight. In the center of the ing hall at the Casino there had n erected a working model of this que whirling restaurant, which is invention of Alvah W. Layne. The del was connected with an electric tor and revolved throughout the quet, affording the dinner guests opportunity to admire the beauty the novelty of the conception. The del was lighted brilliantly with elec- lights of many colors, as the real will be. The original structure is be an immense circular dome of l and glass, so arranged that four es during each hour the entire din- -room will make four complete olutions around its stationary axis, ch will serve as the kitchen. This afford the guests an alternating w of sea, surf, mountain, vale and . High above the café will be the d stand, while the lower floor will ommodate concessionaires.

was in honor of A. R. Fraser, the n whose money is to build the pier, the banquet was given, and it was when the covers were drawn for 200 guests. T. H. Dudley, Mayor Santa Monica, in the southern end which city the pier and amusement tures are to be located, acted as tmaster. At his hand were the nbers of the Banquet Committee: srs. R. H. Dow, chairman; Council- D. W. Baker and F. D. Butzer, lter H. Jenkins, P. J. Dudley, R. Armstrong, H. Michaels G. E. wn, D. von Wedelstaedt, J. B. cter and J. S. Barton. Music by relotti's Hungarian Orchestra and al selections by Miss Ford and or Pia of the Casino staff of en- tainers, interspersed the toasts and ponses and added not a little to the asures of an evening whose festivi- reached well onto the starting of ther day.

he feast was not without its speech- kers. Mayor Dudley spoke of the at future which the building of great enterprise meant for the manency of this beach as an all- -year-round resort for tourists and tors. He commended the energy enterprise of the man who was ing to risk his coin in the found- of a colossal enterprise that means much for all bayside property own- as well as the business community general. He said the result of start- work would be to inspire confidence home people as well as strangers, that investments and development g liberal lines would be certain to ow until the beach was lined from to end with high-class hotels, rtment houses and magnificent and stantial homes.

he first speaker to follow the tmaster's introductory remarks H. C. Burmister, who is a mem- of the oil-copper syndicate which rapidly developing plans for the tion of a great hotel and pleasure on one side of the Fraser struc- and another pier, scenic railroad, ce hall and Tyrolean Alps on the other. Mr. Burmister spoke on "The Builders of the Beach."

Former Mayor Dana Burks was given a reminiscent subject, which he handled delicately. "The Ladies and How They Helped to Build the Pier Avenue District of Santa Monica Bay," was the subject covered by him.

"Proper Sanitation" was the call upon which Dr. von Wedelstaedt was called to his feet for a short talk along lines that were of interest to all present.

OLD STORY TOLD.

The story of consolidation was reviewed by A. F. Webster, who was at the head of the recent battle of ballots which resulted in the defeat of the proposed wedding of Ocean Park and Santa Monica. His subject was, "The Governments of the Cities About the Bay, and Why They Should Be Consolidated." He feels certain that the fight has not been lost, and that when the people are again called to vote on the question, their verdict will be in favor of the union of the two cities into one municipality of magnificant proportions.

"Yachting and Harbors" was the subject assigned to T. J. Hampton, and he spoke as an optimist of the day soon to come when the white wings of a flotilla of pleasure boats would dot the waters of the entire bay district—when there would be a substantial and safe harbor for pleasure craft as well as the ships of commerce, all safely anchored behind an enduring breakwater of concrete. He said he had visited many of the bays of the world, and had found none so charming as Santa Monica Bay.

"Santa Monica Bay as the Los Angeles Playground," was the text of the remarks made by A. R. Fraser, in whose honor the festivities were held. He said the future had never been so bright for this bay as it is tonight. Being the closest beach to Los Angeles, which is rapidly growing toward the sea, this resort will always draw the crowds of those who seek a vacation or outing by the ocean. The building of the pier is but the commencement of greater things. The permanent population will double, and there is bound to be development all along the line.

G. D. Snyder, chairman of the Santa Monica City Council's Finance Committee, was drafted to talk about "Beautiful Parks and Drives," and he spoke with enthusiasm of the many enchanting places along these shores and of the improvements, planned or projected for the day when there should be a larger population. He had seen nothing prettier in travel, and those who had been all over the world had informed him that none of the resorts combined one-half so many attractions.

R. W. Armstrong, who served as a member of the City Council during the days when the ocean front promenade was being planned, spoke on "The construction of the ocean front walk and the pier." Mr. Armstrong was familiar with the details of the construction of the board promenade and the concrete pier and gave the guests the benefit of his opinion, which was that both had been productive of good advertising for the beach.

Carl Schader grew enthusiastic in dwelling upon the beauties of the beach and responded to the toast "Santa Monica Bay from the Cañon to Del Rey." He always did think it should all be one political subdivision, and was of the same opinion still.

"The Revolving Café and Other Features," was the call to which Alvah W. Layne, responded. Being the inventor of the novel merry-go-round restaurant that it to be housed beneath a dome 110 feet from the floor of the pier, he explained the workings of the unique attraction, and told of the things it was certain to accomplish. He spoke also of the numerous other features of entertainment and amusement that are to occupy prominent positions on the great pleasure way.

"The Future of Santa Monica Bay," was the subject assigned to Edwin Brown and he painted a rosy picture of the time not far in the distance when there would be a permanent population of 50,000 to be entertained on the several piers, with four times as many to care for and entertain and amuse during the summer season and twice the number in the winter. He told of what would happen with the building of the four-track railway and the rapid transit between the city and the sea.

J. M. White was called upon to tell "How to Please Everybody," and acquitted himself facetiously. W. H. Jenkins spoke of the work and cuccesses of the Santa Monica Bay Chamber of Commerce.

SECOND LARGEST.

Just as the first material was arriving for the new pier, the ink was drying on a contract which insures the location on the new structure of the second largest Ferris wheel that was ever constructed. It is to stand 125 feet above the floor of the pier and will be erected by O. F. Davis & Son of Los Angeles. This is the same wheel that carried so many thousands at the late Alaska-Yukon Exposition in Seattle. It has twenty-four passenger baskets and each of these will accommodate fourteen people. This attraction will be erected just as soon as the pier is ready for it, and the promis is made that the entire proposition will be formally opened on June 1st of next year.

SOUTH AMERICAN TRIP.

Mr. and Mrs. George White of this city will leave shortly on an interesting trip to South America. They will visit, among other points, Bahia, Rio de Janeiro, San Tus, Montevideo, Buenos Ayres and Valparaiso, on the way down, returning by way of Panama and Colon.

The imposing granite monument erected by the State of Indiana on Antietam battlefield, was dedicated yesterday with impressive ceremonies.

[AUTHORIZED ANNOUNCEMENT.]

Rich Men's Sons and Poor Boys and Girls Commingle.

othing draws young people of en- ly different stations in life closer ther, or does more to make them ired spirits, than the thirst for wledge. A recent visit to the larg- and best equipped Commercial ool in Los Angeles, The Isaacs- odbury Business College, indelilbly ressed this fact upon the writer's d.

he commodious, excellently fur- ed and well lighted quarters of this ndid institution, located on the h Floor of the Hamburger Build- Eighth and Broadway, are well th a visit. Here the sons of Los eles' wealthiest citizens are being ned in business fundamentals in same classes with hundreds of r young men and women of or- ary means, or whose parents earn velihood by the hardest kind of y tail. These young people as- ate and fraternize on terms of per- equality. Those born to wealth position are equipping themselves, er the guidance and instructions of erienced and able educators, to nage estates and property interests will be bequeathed to them; and poorer students are acquiring wledge that will enable them to places of honor and distinction in business world. A business edu- on is a necessary qualification of age, and in The Isaacs-Woodbury ege, Southern Californians have an itution in which a thorough com- cial education can be had, in day ight classes, at a very modest cost. Isaacs-Woodbury College not only teaches young men and women Commerical Law, Single and Double Entry Book-keeping, Commercial Arithmetic, Penmanship, Spelling, Stenography and Typewriting, but it gives them actual business and office experience and practice, places them in positions, and keeps them employed.

The general demand among observing business men for the services of graduates of this school is so great that capable and energetic students have no difficulty in obtaining remunerative employment. In fact, numerous Los Angeles business men depend upon this college for their clerical help. Many of the most prominent and prosperous men in the local business world are graduates of the Isaacs-Woodbury College and owe their success to the training received in this old and well equipped institution. Merchants, bankers and all other business men realize that incompetent and inefficient help jeopardize the success of commercial undertakings, and but few of them are willing to employ men and women who have not had some technical schooling. The result of this widespread recognition of the value of trained assistants gives the graduates of The Isaacs-Woodbury College a decided advantage over young men and women who have been too lazy or neglectful to acquire a business education. Night classes also are held three times a week, and every day is enrollment day, there being no term divisions. In addition to giving students a practical, money-earning education, a School of Languages is also maintained.

A COUNTRY HOME IN THE FOOTHILLS

LIFE WORTH LIVING IN SUNNY CALIFORNIA.

We who live in the narrow confines of a city home know but little of the real joy of living in this glorious climate all through the week it's the office—a short car ride, and then the office again. When Sunday comes we are off for the beaches or the hills, perhaps to spend the day with some friend who has a country home in the foothills. We all know the keen joy of such a day and we wonder why we live in the city, why did we not long ago find a cozy little corner in the hills and build a real home.

Haven't you ever had the feeling that you wished some friend had taken you by the shoulder and made you buy a few acres at Altadena, Sierra Madre or Monrovia before prices had advanced from $300 to $3000?

Those beautiful foothill home places are gone forever beyond the reach of the man of moderate means, but there is one genuine foothill opportunity left, a chance to secure acreage in one of the old Spanish ranchos of the hills at low wholesale cost. It is in the beautiful Vale of Monte Vista, the place of which John McGroarty writes: "And I saw a vale that day as fair as any in all the Land of Heart's Desire." This little valley in the hills is only 15 miles from heart of city, rich, level, frostless, 1500 feet in elevation.

The WESTERN EMPIRE, California's Oldest Orchard and Home Magazine, is now forming one of its famous Home Securing Clubs (its ninth club) to take over 1400 acres and distribute it with all improvements to its members at low wholesale cost. This is your opportunity to secure a country home in the foothills. It's the last call for low wholesale prices on this class of land.

Do not try to imagine, call or write the office of The Western Empire, 100 Chamber of Commerce Bldg. (Ground Floor) for copy of handsomely illustrated booklet describing Monte Vista and their famous Home Securing Plan.

NOTED VETERAN HURT.

Tells Receiving Hospital Surgeon How He Escaped Being Executed as a Spy.

Howell G. Trogden, 70 years old, survivor of sixty battles of the Civil War, recipient of two Congressional medals and central figure in the painting depicting the planting of the Union colors at Vicksburg, walked into the Receiving Hospital last night to have an injury dressed which he received by falling from a street car at Third and Main streets. He would not be taken to the hospital in an ambulance because he said he would "get there or know why."

"Dortor," he said as the surgeon worked over him, "when I was captured by the rebels once they condemned me to be shot as a spy. After they put me in a guardhouse they brought in another spy who had formerly been a preacher. The preacher gave up all hope and started to pray long and loud. 'Now preacher,' I said to him, 'you pray as loud as you can and I will work.' Then while he was doing his best I worked on our ankle irons with a file I had inside a pocket knife and, as you see, they didn't shoot us. Now, doctor, you work and I will pray."

Both proved effectual and Trogden later went nome.

Around The World

By the "OFFICE BOY"

In selecting managers and heads of departments the Old Man says: "I have always placed tact, courtesy and those God-given qualities that bring out the love and loyalty of his co-workers far above commercial efficiency." The leader who can imbue an army of workers with a spirit of earnest fidelity to duty and an answering desire to do the necessary thing and do it always with animation, kindness, courtesy and good cheer, is entitled to rank with the large men of earth. As soon as a man begins to love his work, then will he also begin to make progress. Those who are lukewarm in the pursuit of any business are those who are "just getting along" some way or another or "doing fairly well." it is the enthusiastics who do the climbing and progress every day and who get to the top. Enthusiasm generates energy as naturally as the sun gives forth heat and energy and again by its reflex influence increases enthusiasm. Put energy into work—more energy and yet more energy—then believe in yourself and your calling and you will be one of the enthusiastics who are climbing to the top.

The Old Man makes it a point to impress on every clerk that careful attendance and personal treatment must be accorded every visitor in a Silverwood Store. He insists that the customer who spends 10 cents should be given just as close attention and as patient attendance as the customer who spends ten dollars.

If you are not a Silverwood customer, you have no idea what nice stores ours are. Don't put it off, but start now.

Best Medicine for the Old

Mr. A. H. Jordan, the oldest man living who was born in Cuba, N. Y. He is wearing the hat he wore when married 57 years ago.

Mr. A. H. Jordan of Cuba, N. Y., has lived a strenuous life, but he is strong, vigorous and active at 84 Years of Age.

He Praises Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, which he uses regularly, as the great medicine for keeping the old young in health and spirits and thinks there is no better medicine. He writes:

"I use Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey regularly, and think there is no better medicine for old people in their declining age. A few months ago there was published a little history of my early life as the oldest man now living in the town of Cuba, N. Y. I have lived a strenuous life, in earlier days following the river on lumber to Pittsburgh and Cincinnati and hunting all over the northern part of Pennsylvania." A. H. Jordan, Cuba, N. Y.

Ministers of the gospel, doctors of medicine, nurses and people everywhere unite in commending Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey—the only perfect tonic stimulant, the one true medicinal whiskey. It has to its credit fifty years of success, and its merit has never been questioned. This is a recommendation in itself.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

If you wish to keep young, strong and vigorous and enjoy perfect health, take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey regularly, according to directions. It tones and strengthens the heart action and purifies the entire system. It is invaluable for overworked men, delicate women and sickly children. It is a promoter of health and longevity; makes the old feel young and keeps the young strong and vigorous. Prescribed by doctors and recognized as a family remedy everywhere.

If in need of advice, write Medical Department, The Duffy Malt Whiskey Company, Rochester, New York, stating your case fully. Our doctors will send you advice free, together with a valuable illustrated medical booklet containing rare common sense rules for health which you cannot afford to be without and some of the many thousands of gratifying letters from men and women in all walks of life, both old and young, who have been cured and benefited by the use of this great medicine and who continue to enjoy good health. It is sold IN SEALED BOTTLES ONLY by druggists, grocers and dealers everywhere, or shipped direct for $1.00 per large bottle.

A Watch and You==
Do You Need a Watch?

Two short words and commonplace—"the best"—completely describe this line of watches that we carry:

The Howard
The Waltham
The Elgin

The more you know about watches, the more readily you will realize that this is so. Our immense new fall and winter stock of time-pieces has true beauty in every line, grace in every motion; in fact the fleetness of time itself; the comparative strength of an ocean liner; all the protection of absolute time-keeping accuracy that can be desired by the most exacting standards or proved by the most severe tests.

The cases in all the newest sizes and effects are reliable, with tight-fitting caps, neat points and are exceedingly fine pieces of workmanship, made not only to wear for years and please the eye, but to also protect the wonderfuly fine, delicate and expensive mechanism of the watch movement—or "works" within.

Our stock of watches for both ladies and men was never so complete as at present in plain, engine-turned, engraved or enameled designs; all sizes, all patterns, all movements—prices, quality considered, as low as anywhere in America.

TAPE WORMS

Stomach and Intestinal Worms Easily Removed at the Yglesias Institute.

We are the sole possessors of the genuine remedies of the late Dr. Manuel Yglesias, the great Helminthologist. There are over 200 different kinds of parasites that inflict suffering upon the human family, causing many and diverse diseases. If upon examination tape worm or any other parasite be found to exist in a patient, a complete cure will be effected within a few hours by means of the Yglesias treatment and the specific of Dr. Manuel Yglesias. The specific is but a vegetable compound, and in no way can injure the health of any person—either child or adult. All treatments under the direction of Dr. C. J. Schmidt.

DISGRUNTLED COMPETITORS

Attempt to Create Wrong Impression of Modern Business Success Proves Dire Failure.

Defending the art of advertising, in a general way, Elbert Hubbard begins with the remark that "the things that live are the things that are well advertised."

"The world accepts a man or an institution at the estimate it places on itself," he says, "and to let the rogues and fools expound and explain you to the multitude, and you yourself make no sign, it is to allow the falsehood to pass as current coin.

"Your competitors, the disgruntled ones, are busy. The time to correct a lie is when it is uttered. So the moral is," he says, "you must advertise, no matter how successful you are."

It was in some such position as this that Painless Parker, the dentist who has revolutionized the dental business during the past twenty years, found himself, when an eastern magazine published an article entitled "The Tooth Tinkers," and gave Painless Parker the lion's share of the criticism because he has been the greatest advertiser among the advertising dentists.

The article evidently was inspired by the ethical dentists of the old school, who do not believe in advertising, probably because they have nothing to advertise.

Painless Parker has been remarkably successful in his modern method of painless dentistry in his great dental establishments at 618-622 South Broadway, Los Angeles, and corner of Fifth and F streets, San Diego, in each of which establishments he employs a corps of trained specialists.

Two New Seals.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—Danny Long announced today that he purchased two new men for his 1911 baseball team. They are Outfielder Powell of the Roanoke team in the Virginia League and Catcher Brown of the Alameda team in the Central League. Both men come well recommended.

RING RENDS WOOD.

Curious Accident Brings Woman Near to Danger—Caused by Bursting of Auto Tire.

After traveling around the world without once being in an accident, Mrs. Flora Paris Howard of No. 1311 South Flower street, had a close escape from being killed while sitting on the front veranda of her home yesterday.

A tire on an automobile standing in front of the house burst and hurled a large iron ring which was intended to hold the tire to the rim of the wheel. The ring flew through the air several feet and against a window sill. The force of the explosion drove the metal about an inch and a half into the wood and sent a heavy splinter several inches long through the air.

Several small branches were cut from a tree by the metal ring and they were thrown into Mrs. Howard's face, but she was not injured.

The Pre-eminent Position of Baker Electrics has again been demonstrated

On August 30th. 1910, a BAKER ELECTRIC shaft driven Victoria, equipped with forty cells of A-6 Edison battery, was driven 201.6 miles at an average speed of 12¾ miles per hour through such streets and roads in and about Cleveland as would be met in the ordinary daily use of a Car.

The entire run was made under the personal observation of Chas. G. Steinhauer, automobile editor of the Cleveland Leader. The previous record of 160.8 miles was made July 29th, 1907, by a Baker Electric equipped with a standard lead plate battery. This performance has never been equaled by any other car.

The mechanical and electrical PERFECTION and the ABSENCE OF FRICTION in a BAKER ELECTRIC, combined with an EDISON BATTERY, is responsible for this phenomenal and unequaled performance, and again our claim is substantiated that with corresponding equipment, a BAKER will make MORE MILES at a GREATER speed than any other Electric car in the world.

No other car can approach this record, for no other Car can be operated with so little current consumption at a given speed and so great efficiency. This performance also demonstrates the superiority of the BEVEL GEAR SHAFT DRIVE over any other type of transmission.

We can furnish NEW EDISON BATTERY in all our bevel gear, shaft drive Baker Electric Models.

VISITS WIFE'S SISTER AND FOES WOULD DECAPITATE.

Pomona Man Insists, However, That Law and Justice Are on His Side and That no Precedent Exists That Would Justify His Removal from Office—New Preacher Engaged

POMONA, Sept. 17.—Because of the fact that City Trustee Ira R. Lee and his wife have been living temporarily at the home of Mrs. Lee's sister, during the latter's illness, a petition has been circulated among some voters in the Fourth Ward, from which Mr. Lee was elected in 1907 to represent that precinct on the City Board of Trustees, asking the Trustee to resign on the ground that a Trustee elected in a certain district should reside in that district. Trustee Lee is at present living in the Fifth Ward, but stated that his home is still in the Fourth Ward, his furniture is there, he votes there and expects soon to build there.

Those back of the circulation of the petition claim that a precedent had been established in the city, whereby a Trustee should resign from the board if he removed from the ward in which he was elected, citing the case of Lee R. Matthews, who was elected from the Third Ward and resigned several years ago upon removing to the Fifth Precinct. Trustee Lee claims no such precedent exists and that Mr. Matthews sold all of the property he owned in the Third Ward when he went to reside elsewhere. Mr. Lee states that in former years several Trustees have served on the board, who have removed from the city, sometime after their election, returning here to attend Council meetings. Friends of Mr. Lee allege that this effort to induce him to resign is a political move on the part of interested parties here to cause a "dead-lock" on the Board of City Trustees, which is purported to be divided in its affiliations.

ASSISTANT PASTOR.

Rev. Paul McReynolds, who has been engaged to do the associate pastoral work of the First Unitarian Church, of which Dr. Arthur M. Smith, is minister, has arrived here from Pasadena. He was in San José for sometime after his return from an European trip. Services will be resumed at the local church tomorrow morning, when Dr. A. M. Smith will conduct the services. A series of sermons and discourses will be announced for the fall and winter.

LAW LOCKS MACHINE WHEELS.

Ventura Trustees Provide a Law Which Will Keep a Thrasher in Storage for All Time.

VENTURA, Sept. 16.—A group of Mound farmers who own a big bean thrashing outfit are in a quandary. Last year before the streets of this city were completed, they moved their big outfit up the Ventura avenue to clean up a portion of the bean crop there. When they got through they stored their machine in the avenue district for convenience, instead of taking it back to the Mound, which is on the opposite side of the city. Among other things they possess a huge traction engine weighing eleven tons. Two of the wheels of this engine are covered with lugs or iron projections an inch long, which enabled the wheels to get a better grip of the earth. In traveling about the country the traction wheels leave an indenture in the earth and on the roads. Since the outfit was moved into the avenue the city authorities have passed an ordinance forbidding the driving of traction engines through the newly paved streets. The lugs dig into the surface of the petrolithic paving and spoil the roadways. It is imperative that the farmers get the engine through the town and into the Mound bean fields, as the beans need thrashing immediately. If the thrasher does not get there the loss will be heavy to the farmers. But the bean fields are on one side of the town and the thrashing outfit on the other. It has been suggested that the lugs be removed from the wheels, but on each wheel is 100 lugs, each secured by four rivets, and this would be impossible, say the farmers, who insist that the recommendation for the street is that it is resilient, and that the cutting by the lugs will not harm the surface permanently. But the city is firm in its determination to have the law obeyed. The farmers insist they must get through. As a last resort they have sent to Los Angeles to see if the wheels cannot be fitted with iron bands to cover the lugs. If this cannot be done then they say they will get through the town, because they must.

KNOCKED UNCONSCIOUS.

Thomas Mills, Southern Pacific roadmaster of this district, had a narrow escape from serious injury or death early Friday morning. He was riding on the front of a hand-car, near Burbank, with his feet hanging over the front of the car. Suddenly his feet struck a raise in the roadbed, and he threw himself backward to keep from being dragged off and under the front of the car. As he did this the handle of the hand-car struck him a terrific blow on the back and shoulders. He was rendered unconscious, and was painfully injured.

NOT SO VERY BAD.

Fred L. Hogue, local seedsman and bean buyer, now says the loss to the lima bean men by the late rains will not be as great as was feared. He made a trip today through most of the valley bean fields. He declares that where beans are cut and stacked in the fields they are in good condition, and that by tomorrow the beans can be picked up on forks and shifted to the dry spots in the fields alongside the rows, and that with dry weather they will quickly dry out and thrash the better for their wetting. The only loss, if dry weather continues, will be by discoloration, and in paying for hand-picking. Beans that are not yet cut will suffer the most.

MUCH HAY BURNED.

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 17.—Through the efforts of a hastily formed bucket brigade, several residences at Otay, near National City, were saved this afternoon from destruction by a fire which consumed a barn and 500 bales of hay. The loss is about $10,000. Among the residences that barely escaped was that of Rev. Mr. Mathewson, pastor of the Otay Baptist Church. It was badly scorched.

Assist Your Weak Stomach

Oftentimes the stomach needs some assistance in its great work of digestion and assimilation and an occasional dose of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will give that assistance better than anything else you might take. Its merit has been proven thousands of times in cases of Poor Appetite, Headache, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Costiveness and Malarial Disorders. Be persuaded to try a bottle today. Refuse substitutes.

DARES HIS ENEMIES.

"yet," he continued, "that I have not a word to retract."

"Amen!" shouted a man in the crowd.

"That's sound—Amen—that's good doctrine," said the colonel.

"What I have to say is to take away any excuse from those who misrepresent my words. It is not for me to explain. It is for them."

The colonel slightly modified his definition of "new nationalism" today. He called it the "efficient application to new considerations of old-time and fundamental moralities." The word "efficient" he inserted today.

He then proceeded with a defense of his attitude, an exposition of "new nationalism" and a repetition of his declaration of war on crooks and bosses.

THE COLONEL'S SPEECH.

Col. Roosevelt spoke, in part, as follows:

"The new nationalism means nothing but an application to new conditions of certain old and fundamental moralities. It means an invitation to meet the new problems of the present day in precisely the spirit in which Lincoln and the men of his day met their new problems."

To his critics he put this issue:

"Is any party willing to take the other side of the propositions of which complaint is made? If so, it would be a good thing to have the issue before the people, for in the end the people would most certainly decide in favor of the principles embodied in the new nationalism, because otherwise this country could not continue to be a true republic, a true democracy."

JUSTIFIES CRITICISMS.

The speaker followed this with a justification of his attacks on the United States Supreme Court. He chose two arguments—one, that in his criticisms he had merely echoed the minority opinions of the court itself; the other that he had illustrious precedent—the example of Abraham Lincoln, who, he said, had been far more outspoken than he himself had ever been, and the example of President Taft, from whose utterances fifteen years ago in favor of public criticism of the courts he quoted.

"Take for instance," he continued, "what I said in reference to late decisions of the Supreme Court. One decision was in the Knight sugar case, in which, according to the dissenting opinion of Justice Harlan, the court placed the public 'so far as national power is concerned (the only power which could be effective) entirely at the mercy of the combinations which arbitrarily control the prices of articles purchased to be transported from one State into another State.'

"I merely took the view which the learned justice had taken in his dissenting opinion. Those who criticise me are also criticising a justice of the Supreme Court, Mr. Harlan. So my people shall not be able to control the activities and management of these great monopolistic corporations doing an interstate business? If so, let them frankly avow their position. If not, let them cease their criticism."

QUOTES LINCOLN.

The other case mentioned was one prohibiting New York State to regulate hours of work in bake shops, and again the speaker said he had based his criticism on a dissenting opinion within the court itself.

"Fifty-three years ago," he continued, "Abraham Lincoln was assailed for his repeated criticisms of the Supreme Court in the 'Dred Scott' case. As regards his decision, he announced not once but again and again, that he held it to be not merely his right, but the duty of citizens who felt that judicial decisions were erroneous and damaging, loyally to abide by the decisions as long as they stood, but to try hard to secure their reversal; his language on one occasion being as follows:

"'We do not propose to disturb the rights of property thus settled. We propose so resisting the decision as to have it reopened if we can, and a new judicial rule established upon the subject.'

ERRS WITH LINCOLN IF AT ALL.

"He repeated this statement in slightly differing language in speech after speech. Moreover, he used very strong language about the decision—far stronger than I dream of using, or than it would be proper to use about the decisions with which I now deal. But his view as to his right and duty to call attention to an erroneous decision which vitally affected the rights of the people, was, I think, entirely sound. At any rate, if I have erred in commenting, as I have commented upon the decisions in question, I err in company with Abraham Lincoln. The criticism of me is perhaps well summed up in the following speech of an eminent public man:

"'He makes war on the decisions of the Supreme Court.'

"I wish to say to you, fellow-citizens, that I have no war to make on that decision, or any other ever rendered by the Supreme Court. I am content to take that decision as it stands delivered by the highest judicial tribunal on earth, a tribunal established by the Constitution of the United States for that purpose, and hence that decision becomes the law of the land, binding on you, on me, and on every other good citizen, whether we like it or not. Hence, I do not choose to go into an argument to prove before this audience whether or not he (the Chief Justice) understood the law better than Theodore Roosevelt.

RESPECT FOR COURT.

"Now, gentlemen, I have made one change in the above quotation. The last words were not 'Theodore Roosevelt.' The last words were 'Abraham Lincoln,' and this attack made nearly fifty-three years ago against Abraham Lincoln is precisely and exactly the kind of attack made upon me at the moment. Abraham Lincoln felt, and professed throughout his life, the same profound respect for the Supreme Court that, of course, I feel, and that I have again and again, in public speeches, and messages, as President of the United States, expressed. An upright judge is a higher and better public servant than any other man can possibly be, and it is a cause of pride to every American citizen that our Supreme Court is the most influential judicial tribunal in the entire world. I have quoted Abraham Lincoln, let me quote him again:

"'We believe in obedience and respect for the judicial department of the government. We think its decisions on constitutional questions, when fully settled, shall control.'

"I agree absolutely with this sentence of Abraham Lincoln, not the less because I also believe in what Lincoln said immediately afterward:

"'But we think this decision erroneous and we shall do what we can to have it overruled.'

"Nor do I have to go only to the statements of the past for precedents. The President of the United States, Mr. Taft, has served his country honorably and uprightly in many positions—as judge, as Governor of the Philippines, as Secretary of War and now as President—for to him and the Congress acting with him, we owe the creation of a tariff commission; the adoption of maximum and minimum tariff law treaties with foreign powers; the proper treatment of the Philippines under the tariff; the increase in the efficiency of the interstate commerce law; the bestowing of a national legislative programme providing for the exercise of the taxing power in connection with corporations doing an interstate business; a postal savings bank bill, the constitution of a commission to report a remedy for over-capitalization in connection with the issue of stock and bonds; but few of his services are more deserving of record than what he said in this matter of criticism of the judiciary.

QUOTES PRESIDENT TAFT.

"Speaking as a United States Circuit Judge, fifteen years ago, he said, 'The opportunity freely and publicly to criticise judicial action is of vastly more importance to the body politic than the immunity of courts and judges from unjust aspersions and attacks. Nothing tends more to render judges careful in their decisions and anxious to do exact justice than the consciousness that every act of theirs is to be summitted to the intelligent scrutiny and candid criticism of their fellow men. In the case of judges having a life tenure, indeed, their very independence makes the right freely to comment on their decisions of greater importance because it is the only practicable and available instrument in the hands of a free people to keep such judges alive to the reasonable demands of those they serve.'"

Dropping the personal pronoun, the colonel took up an exposition of what "we who work for the new nationalism" believe. He reiterated his belief in government by party; his recognition of the necessity of corporations in business, accompanied by the elevation of the workingman by unions; but all these agencies, he was convinced, must be under control of the whole people. The one vital and essential matter in public life was honesty.

WORK FOR GOOD CITIZENS.

All good citizens must join in waring on the crook, whether giver or taker of bribes, as a traitor to democracy.

The address closed with the only words that could be construed as having any bearing on the immediate political situation within the Republican party of this State—a dissertation on popular self-control and party leadership, a distinction between the boss and the leader.

"It is necessary and desirable," said the colonel, "that there should be leaders, but it is unnecessary and undesirable that there should be bosses. The leader leads the people; the boss drives them. The leader gets his hold by an open appeal to the reason and conscience of his followers, the boss keeps his hold by manipulation, by intrigue, by secret and furtive appeal to many forms of self-interest and sometimes to very base forms.

"Progress there must be, but it must be wise, sober and moderate if it were to be permanent.

"Prosperity must be preserved, for material well-being was a great food, but it was only a foundation for a lofty national life, raised in accordance with the doctrine that 'righteousness exalteth a nation.'"

After Col. Roosevelt had finished speaking, Mr. Hendricks stepped up to him. The colonel and the leader of the organization shook hands cordially.

"I was never in better fighting trim in my life," the colonel told him, with a smile.

The colonel will return to New York tomorrow.

MEDINA FLEES TO THE STATES.

HONDURAN FUGITIVE REACHES NEW ORLEANS.

Former Official Feels His Well-Being Demands Residence in Northern Climate for a Time—Story of How Davila Deposed Him Because of British Negro Episode.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Carlos Medina, removed from the Governorship of the Department of the Atlantic at Ceiba, Honduras, because of ill-treating a negro British subject, has reached this city, a fugitive from Honduras. He admits that he believes it safer for him to remain in the United States for the present.

The incident leading up to Medina's official downfall dates back several weeks. The negro, a British subject, was killed in a row with Honduran soldiers, and Medina championed the officers. Capt. Thesiger of the British cruiser Scylla was ordered to Ceiba. The British naval officer tried to investigate the murder of the negro by a petty official, whom the other officials were trying to protect, and blaming Medina for the ill-feeling against Englishmen, demanded his removal, punishment for the murder being the payment of heavy indemnity.

Governor Medina was ordered to Tegucigalpa, but before going met the negro servant of the British Vice-Consul on the streets of Ceiba and after reviling him ordered his arrest.

The Vice-Consul, Mr. Taylor, rescued him from a file of soldiers by wrapping the British flag around him, and notifying the soldiers to prevent his departure, Medina went to Tegucigalpa, where he was fired by President Davila.

DOES BUM COWBOY STUNT.

Charlie Van Studdiford, Pampered St. Louisan, ex-Husband of Star, Tries to Ride Into Bar.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Charles Van Studdiford, divorced husband of Grace Van Studdiford, the prima donna who recently filed a bankruptcy petition with only $10 in her possession, tonight attempted to ride a horse into the bar of the Laclede Hotel, here, but was prevented by the interference of a screen door. He was locked up by Officer Murphy on a charge of riding on the sidewalk.

Van Studdiford vainly tried to poke the nose of his horse through the screen door. Failing, he shouted to the bartender to bring him out a drink as he was thirsty.

A large crowd of fashionable people witnessed the caprice of Van Studdiford, who is a salesman for a coffee house, and is a member of a wealthy pioneer St. Louis family. He is said to have spent a fortune when his wife returned to the stage and divorced him.

ACID ROUTE TO DEATH.

EL PASO (Tex.) Sept. 17.—Driven to despair by the lack of the actual necessities of life, Joseph Espittallier, once a wealthy business man of San Francisco, committed suicide here tonight by drinking carbolic acid. He came from France ten years ago, accompanied by a woman named Blanche Masse.

LABOR.

POLICE BLAME UNION THUGS.

Bitter Opponent of Closed Shops Missing.

It's Believed He Was Driven to His Death.

Family of C. Nunemaker Greatly Alarmed.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Frank C. Nunemaker, president of the Board of Trade, popular Republican politician, who has been mentioned prominently as candidate for Governor of Kentucky on that ticket, and former member of the Manufacturers' Association, which made a bitter fight against union labor, is missing.

It is believed by his family and friends that he has been driven to his death by some of the professional killers employed by union labor, which has always been extremely bitter toward him because of his fight for open shops.

Nunemaker owns one of the largest open printing shops in Kentucky and the fight which he has made on organized labor for many years has cost him many thousands of dollars.

He disappeared from his home in the Weinsenger Gaulbert apartment house Friday morning, and nothing has been heard from him since. The police were informed today that he is missing and no clue has been obtained that will lead to a knowledge of his whereabouts.

All of the hospitals have been visited without results and the police share the opinion of the family that he has been done to death.

GREAT DAY.

RAILROAD MEN HAVE PLAY DAY.

THREE THOUSAND CAVORT AT REDONDO BEACH.

General Passenger Agent of Redondo Railway Umpires the Game and Is Execrated and "Jawed at" in True Professional Style—Prize Winners in Athletics.

REDONDO BEACH, Sept. 17.—"Huntington Holiday" was held in this city today, when over 3000 employés of the Huntington electric railways were "dead-headed" to the city, and participated in an elaborate free picnic provided for their enjoyment.

That the unusual event was appreciated by the employés was manifest by the way they enjoyed themselves. There were no restraints, interstate commerce rules, train orders or arbitrary municipal interference, to the contrary. Neither was there present the pomp and power of rank. Trainmasters and trackwalkers, superintendents and stenographers, auditors and conductors, all joined in making the occasion a fitting jollification for the completion of a big canal, or a reconciliation of the Los Angeles city government.

The programme, which was delayed for a short time, owing to a "washout" in the Casino, was one of the best ever. Each event, and there were many, was packed with contestants, and prizes of unusual value went to the winners.

The result of the events were:

Fifty-yard race for boys, 12 years of age: C. C. Seymour first, A. Yeager second, Harvel Guttenfielder third.

Fifty-yard race for girls, 12 years of age: Alberta Kendrick first, Loreta Spera second, Delia Baus third.

Fifty-yard race, for boys under 7 years of age: Roy Kegeris first, George Link second, Vance Riding third.

Fifty-yard race for young men: H. Messner first, Arthur Clinton second, H. L. Uttenbach third.

Fifty-yard free-for-all for ladies: Dora Pfennig first, Loretta Spera second, Delia Baus third.

Fifty-yard race for married men: H. C. Bass first, George Borngrebe second, Harry Hartford third.

Fifty-yard race for married women: Mrs. J. L. Milne first, Mrs. L. O. Barton second, Mrs. Frank Hume third.

The tug-of-war between the Los Angeles Railway team, composed of E. Fickett, P. Goodis, H. M. Thompson, E. Pretz, T. McDodie and W. Cohos, and the Redondo team, composed of Ed Shaw, Thomas Sullivan, V. A. McGarvin, Sam Jones, William Solars and George Gipe, was won by the latter team, after an extended contest which tested the endurance as well as the strength of the two teams.

In the 100-yard race for fat men: Vernon Hathaway first, W. E. Koppe second, Lee Lewis third.

At 11 o'clock the picnickers formed in column, and headed by the Schoneman-Blanchard Band and the two ball teams, marched to the ball park where was held an exhibition of the national game, which produced more fun and displayed less science than the average fan seldom beholds.

The opposing teams were togged out in league uniforms, representing the Vernon and Los Angeles teams of the Pacific Coast League. The line-up was:

Hooligans.		Angels.
T. Fagan	pitcher	T. O. Hawksford
G. F. Borngrebe		C. H. Ship
Squire Stanley	catcher	W. Perry
L. B. Yeager	first base	H. Hartford
L. O. Lieber	second base	E. Sayre
E. A. Laycox	third base	C. H. Ship
W. J. Fuller	shortstop	F. Walters
J. Fagan	left field	B. Grote
J. Carrier	center field	A. Clinton
W. E. Koppe	right field	L. J. Hathaway

W. T. Maddex, general passenger agent of the Los Angeles and Redondo Railway, umpired the game. His arbitrary rulings, red tape and epidemic of general orders made him the center of a storm of wrath from both the grand stand and the diamond. He was finally "short-circuited" and sent to the "material yard," from which point of view he discovered that inner-state commerce rules were not applicable to baseball, and that base-stealing cannot be successfully operated on a four-mile-an-hour schedule. Three times he was driven from the field, then permitted to return on the promise he would redeem himself.

The aquatic sports were held in the plunge, and resulted as follows:

Running race in water for men: C. E. Sneedon.

Running race in water, for ladies: Miss Elsie Barton first, Mrs. Butler second.

High diving: Wilfred Perry.

Tub race: Claire Hyde first, Clyde Kegeris second.

Fifty-yard dash, for boys under 12 years of age: Ray Kegeris first, Carl Peterson second, R. L. Yeager third.

Fifty-yard dash, for men: Fred Young first, C. Carrier second, W. Perry third.

Free-for-all swimming race, for men: Sidney Williams first, Clyde Severance second, R. Crawford third.

Free-for-all swimming race, for ladies: Myrtle Chadwick first, Irene Slater second, Colisse Slater third.

The unofficial score of the ball game was given out as 17 to 1, in favor of the "Angels." The official score will probably not be ready for publication for many weeks, being tied up in the auditing department for verification.

THE OIL INDUSTRY.

START MADE BY OIL MEN.

WESTERN OIL PRODUCERS' ASSOCIATION MEETS.

Permanent Organization Is Formed by the Election of Officers—Committee Is Named to Form a Coalition With the California Oil Men's Association of Bakersfield.

In the offices of the Amalgamated Oil Company in the Pacific Electric building yesterday afternoon there was a meeting of the directors of the Western Oil Producers' Association. There were present Capt. John Barneson and John Baker, Jr., of San Francisco; W. W. Orcutt, M. H. Whittier and Dr. Norman Bridge of Los Angeles, and Frederick H. Hall of Bakersfield.

M. H. Whittier was appointed temporary chairman and William M. Erb temporary secretary. The following officers were elected: Dr. Norman Bridge, president; William M. Erb, secretary; Los Angeles Trust and Savings Bank, treasurer; W. W. Arcutt of the Union Oil Company, Thomas A. O'Donnell of the American Petroleum Company and American Oil Fields Company, S. A. Guiberson, Jr., of Coalinga, of the Empire Oil Company, John Baker, Jr., of San Francisco, of the Los Flores Oil Company, Frederick H. Hall of Bakersfield, vice-presidents.

Five field committees were appointed as follows: John Baker, Jr., to represent Santa Maria; W. W. Orcutt to represent Fullerton and Los Angeles; S. A. Guiberson, Jr., to represent Coalinga; Capt. John Barneson and Frederick H. Hall to represent Kern county fields.

Thomas A. O'Donnell was appointed chairman of the Resolution Committee, Capt. John Barneson was appointed chairman of the Publicity Committee, John Baker, Jr., was appointed chairman of the Membership Committee, F. N. Scofield chairman of the Finance Committee.

All the directors are appointed a committee of the whole to bring about a consolidation with the California Oil Men's Association of Bakersfield, as soon as possible.

BAREFOOT BURGLAR SENTENCED.

Fresno, Luxuriating in the Sun, Reports Little Damage Done by Recent Rains.

FRESNO, Sept. 17.—Frank Coons, alias Frank Brock, was sentenced by Judge Church of the local Superior Court today to spend three years in San Quentin for burglary. Coons was convicted a few days ago of having burglarized a lodging-house in this city.

The defendant is said to be under parole for a similar offense in Los Angeles, and it is also alleged that he served a term in Folsom from Sacramento. Coons is known to the local police as the "barefoot" burglar, by reason of the fact that when caught immediately after his local burglary he was in his stocking feet.

DAMAGES NOMINAL.

Fresno is experiencing its first day of warm sunshine since the recent rain storm. Investigations made yesterday by agents of the local packers reveal the fact that the damage done to the exposed raisin crop by the rain will be reduced to a minimum by the present sunshine should it continue for two or three days.

The warm weather, however, came just in time to prevent great loss. It is said by packers and growers generally that had rainy or cloudy weather continued for two days or more the raisins still on the trays would have been good only as hog feed.

The growers today are actively engaged in turning the moistened raisins in order that they may thoroughly absorb the warm sunshine.

BANKER IS ALLEGED SHORT.

Cincinnati Man Removed from Position. Wife Says He Is Hurrying Home from Los Angeles.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CINCINNATI (O.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Edmund C. Cook, prominent in Cincinnati banking, social and church circles, is said by the board of managers of the Hyde Park Savings Bank to have a shortage of $6000.

At a secret meeting of the managers held late last night Cook was removed from his position of secretary and treasurer of the bank. He will have to tell the managers why this shortage existed.

Mrs. Cook was seen tonight at her home, No. 3521 Fairview avenue, Hyde Park, Cincinnati, and said that she had just received a telegram from her husband from Los Angeles and that he is coming home by the fastest train. She would not say that he knew anything about his alleged shortage, but she did say that he has enough property to make good the loss in case it has to be made good.

Mrs. Cook stated that her husband went away on his yearly vacation and that she did not accompany him because she remained here to take care of their eight weeks' old child.

Cook has an excellent record here and it was said tonight that no warrant will be sworn out for his arrest. In case he does not return his property will be taken by the banks.

EAST WHITTIER SCHOOL BURNS.

Fire of Mysterious Origin Destroys a Fourteen-Thousand-Dollar Building.

At 1 o'clock this morning the East Whittier public school building burned to the ground, and, in addition to the loss of $14,000 which the building cost, several hundred children will be deprived of school advantages for several months.

Advices from Whittier state that the building was fired by an incendiary and a thorough investigation will be made. New additions had just been added to the building and it was in one of these new rooms that the fire was started. This is the second fire bug of mysterious origin in Whittier within the past year and the citizens of the town are thoroughly aroused.

Mahogany Pays Big Profits

U. S. Forest Service Has Found a Species that Grows Rapidly.

Business Men Can Invest in This Mahogany Because It Requires No Attention.

Forest Service Bulletin No. 35 says: "The rearing of forests of the Eucalyptus-Mahogany tree can be accomplished more cheaply and more easily than almost any other tree, while the return is twice and three times earlier than that of most productive pine or oak forests. While quietly the forest advances, almost without expenditure and care, its wood treasures increase from year to year without taxing the patience of generations. The Eucalyptus-Mahogany is a timber that is very valuable for many purposes. It is very hard and strong—almost as hard as iron, when thoroughly dried. The great usefulness of this timber is due principally to its durability, both under ground and in water."

Bulletin No. 5, Forestry Society of California, Page 7, says: "The grower, who by proper planting and care produces 100,000 feet of timber on an acre in ten years' time, can safely expect a net return of $2500. This is not unreasonable and may be accepted as the standard of stumpage value per acre of first-class Eucalyptus of marketable size."

This species of Mahogany is confined to the citrus belt of California and young forests of 2½ to 100 acres can be obtained now, at an expense of about 30c a tree, which includes care, general experienced supervision and a clear deed and title to the land in Riverside County, California. The E. J. McCully Company—Eucalyptus Syndicate, 327 West Third street, Los Angeles, California, has compiled condensed literature containing government statistics and illustrations, and describing the quickest method by which these forests may be acquired by local investors as well as non-residents at a nominal cost or on installments which amount to less than one-tenth the value of the matured groves.

The marvelous rapidity with which this Eucalyptus Mahogany attains timber proportions, the failing hardwood supply and the superiority of the wood for all purposes have offered an investment that will give an assured permanent income for life.

Any one who is interested should write Mr. McCully for this literature which will show what other owners of Eucalyptus Timber Groves are receiving and how the trees reproduce themselves from the old stumps for generations.

MOST SUCCESSFUL CATARRH DOCTOR IN THE WORLD

Clears Up Stuffed Up Head in Five Minutes.

Is there one man or woman reader of The Times who has catarrh and doesn't care to get rid of it.

Is there any person on earth who really enjoys hawking and spitting and blowing and snuffing?

New Presidential Puzzle
Can You Put the Two Former Presidents Together

DIRECTIONS: Cut out the little pieces and paste them together on a separate sheet of paper, and you will have two of the best-known former Presidents of the United States. Write the name of each former President under his picture. Be sure and write your name and address plainly on your solution.

The Free Prizes—Their Distribution

For the neatest correct solution we will give a set of Genuine Rogers' Silver, 26 pieces in Mahogany Chest. For the second neatest correct solution we will give a Gold-Filled Fleur-de-Lis Bracelet, set with beautiful stone. For the third neatest correct solution we will give a Gentleman's Gold Chain and Fob, French Curb Design. For the fourth neatest correct solution we will give a Five Pound Box of Christopher's Assorted Candies. For each of the next fifty neatest correct solutions will be given a Credit Check for $150.00, good on any new piano or player-piano in our store, and all others will be given Credit Checks ranging from $125 to $75, according to merit. These Credit Checks are good on the purchase of any new Piano or Player-piano in our warerooms, at the regular lowest established prices.

No Charge of Any Kind to Enter

Win a Substantial Part of Your Piano Purchase Money

We want to reach only people who want a piano, and instead of spending the large sum in expensive magazine advertising, etc., we are going to distribute this large appropriation among piano buyers (for whose benefit this contest is run) by giving away a large number of valuable Credit Checks and other prizes. To any home without a piano this is of vital importance, since it affords a lifetime opportunity to win a large part of your piano purchase money.

Disinterested Judges will be chosen, who will select the winners, and the decision of the Judges will be final. No winners of first prizes in any of our former contests will be permitted to enter the present one. Remember, only one answer will be allowed from any one family.

This Contest Positively Closes at 6 p.m. Monday, September 26, 1910.

All contestants sending in correct solutions to this puzzle will receive a substantial Credit Check, good on any new piano or player-piano in our building, and a piece of sheet music free.

Winners Will Be Notified by Mail

ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

KENTON (O.) Sept. 17.—The Re- blican State campaign opened here day with Warren G. Harding of arion, candidate for Governor, and ames Wilson, Secretary of Agricul- re, as the principal speakers.

Secretary Wilson declared that past periences justified apprehension as to at would be done if the Democratic rty should obtain control of the gov- ment.

This observation followed a glowing view of the new tariff law.

"We have good times now," Secre- ry Wilson said, "and have had such ce McKinley became the 'advance nt of prosperity.' The revision of tariff has lost no man his job; panic has followed. PETTY GRAFTERS ESCAPE.

LLINOIS LAW IS ONE-SIDED.

ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Charges of pet- ty frauds that were expected to mate- rialize in large numbers before the ard of Election Commissioners as a sult of repeating and vote buying the recent primary, did not show at the commission's office yester- day. The ardor of some of the inves- tigators was dampened by the dis- covery that the primary laws provide punishment for the voter who sells his vote or accepts a bribe, but at the same time provides immunity for the candidate or politician who does the bribing or buys the vote. "There is nothing we can do in these cases, so far as the bribers are concerned," said C. Cannon, chief clerk of the commission. "It seems rather strange, but the law appears to be perfectly plain on its expression. It would be impossible to find out who the offenders were."

Office of The Times, No. 26 S. Raymond Ave.

PASADENA, Sept. 18.—The Boosters' Committee of the Merchants' Association has planned an innovation along the lines of boosting home trade. Sometime next month when all of the merchants of every kind and description, from dry goods men to peanut venders, get in their winter stocks of goods and the tourist trade begins to ripen a little, a monster pink tea affair is to be given. Each place of business will be prettily decorated. Different color schemes will be used. Profusions of roses, carnations, sweet peas and geraniums with potted plants will be utilized.

Each clerk will wear his or her best bib and tucker and it is hoped society will be out in force. No attempt will be made to sell goods although if the lookers care to make purchases they will not be turned away empty handed. It is planned to have tea and lemonade served in all the important places and samples of peanuts and candy will likely be given away. Some of the larger stores will have bands of music to help out in entertaining the great droves of visitors.

In fact, the day is to be made memorable because it is hoped that Pasadena commercially will be exhibited to the world and that home people and visitors alike will be convinced that the Crown City has something else to be proud of excepting climate, the water question, moving picture shows, chicken ordinances, and muzzled dogs.

THROOP TERM TO BEGIN.

Throop, Greater Throop, will open its doors this week to the boys and girls of the land who desire an education, especially along technical lines. For the first time in the history of that institution, which was founded in 1891, the ideas of the founders will be fully realized, because Throop is to be maintained in three departments, elementary, academic and collegiate. The enrollment has begun and President Scherer and the various boards of trustees are wearing broad smiles because of the great increase in the enrollment over former years. Beginning the middle of the week the class rooms of "Pasadena Hall," the new building on Throop campus, the first of those planned for the institute will be occupied.

The first faculty meeting was held yesterday, when President Scherer made a wonderfully inspiring address to the teachers, saying that coöperation in the various lines of work is absolutely necessary to accomplish the best ends. Regarding discipline, he said: "Students must not be asked to incriminate themselves, nor any student asked to incriminate others. Considerate but not harsh methods must be used in dealing with student offenses."

DARING CAPTURE.

Sam Hall, the cigar merchant, exhibited his bravery early yesterday morning in capturing a real live burglar and delivering him to the City Jail without a scratch or even a ruffled temper. Inasmuch as he has made the best catch of the year, thereby outclassing the entire Police Department in his dexterity and natural detective instinct, it is rumored the Police Commissioners will, at their meeting tomorrow afternoon, award Hall a medal for bravery and make him brevet captain of detectives. It all happened in this manner: Hall was going home early in the morning. At No. 171 North Fair Oaks avenue there is a little "hot weeny" stand built on the piano-box style of architecture. While devouring a sandwich he heard a little squeaking noise. He listened, then pricked up his ears and listened again. He heard something. Then he recognized footsteps. He rushed to the back door of "Jimmy" Brown's suit cleaning establishment, a few feet away, and there saw a burglar crawling out of the window with a bundle under his arm. Sam stopped the robber and marched him off to the Police Station in regular "back from the Elbe" washion. There it was ascertained the burglar was none other than Harry Sperry, who lives with his parents on Davenport street in North Pasadena. Sperry had gained entrance to the store by cutting the window screen. He took off his old clothes and changed for those of some of Brown's customers. He put on a black pair of pants and over them he wore a pair of white pantaloons belonging to Dr. Bullard. Under his arm Sperry carried two coats and an overcoat.

A large number of petty burglary jobs have been pulled off in Pasadena during the past few months. The police have been unable to get any trace of the guilty party or parties. Inasmuch as the job done by Sperry resembles very much many of the others, it is believed that much of the work can be traced to him. If this can be done Hall's heroism stock will advance in leaps and bounds, and it is not beyond the pale of bare possibilities that he will be urged by his friends to become Chief of Police should that position become vacant.

FLOUR MILL PLAN.

J. G. Engelberg, who was formerly in the flour milling business in Minnesota and Dakota, and who now lives in Pasadena, has just closed a deal for a tract of land 150x120 feet on South Broadway street, near Green street, on which he states he will shortly build a large flouring and feed mill. He will leave for Minneapolis this evening, where he is having plans drawn for the mill and while in the East will buy the necessary machinery. He stated yesterday that the mill will cost about $25,000 and will be completed and ready for business some time in December.

TO INCREASE MEMBERSHIP.

The Executive Committee of the Tournament of Roses Association will hold a meeting next Tuesday for the purpose of devising ways and means for carrying on the proposed campaign to secure 1000 members to the association. The purpose of such a membership is to secure a guarantee for funds with which to carry out present plans for the 1911 tournament of roses. Until there is an assurance that the necessary funds will be forthcoming the directors do not feel that they should go ahead with plans for Tournament Day.

DELEGATES NAMED.

At a meeting of the directors of the Pasadena Humane Society held yesterday afternoon, the plans for the entertainment of the Fourth Annual State Convention of the Humane Societies of California which will open in Pasadena tomorrow morning were perfected. Everything is now in readiness for the big meeting. The programme of entertainment includes many side trips, banquets and a great amount of interesting business. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Macy and Dr. Leslie E. Learned were appointed delegates to the First Annual Meeting of the American Humane Congress, which will be held in Washington, D. C., October 10 to 15.

FINALS PLAYED.

The finals in the boys' tennis tournament at Carmelita Gardens were played yesterday afternoon, with the following results: Boys' singles, 9 to 12 years old, Kenneth Hawks won from Harlow Bailey, 6-4, 7-5; boys from 13 to 16, Howard Herlihy won from John Woolridge, 6-1, 6-3; boys' doubles from 9 to 16 years of age, Kenneth and William Hawks won from Harlow Bailey and Fred Miller, 8-6, 6-1, 6-3; boys' doubles from 13 to 16 years of age, Forrest Cornett and Wister Woolridge won from Paul Hinds and Bissell Morrison, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3.

MAY APPEAL.

It was announced late yesterday afternoon that the Citizens' League, who backed the plaintiff in the famous water case of Arizona Garrison vs. the North Pasadena Land and Water Company, will appeal the case to the Appellate Court, where the plaintiffs believe they will get a reversal of the decision of Judge Hervey, who found for the defendants. However, as a move is on foot to bring about better water conditions in the city to the end that the residents of the "dry tract" will be able to get plenty of water on the same basis as every other consumer in the city, there is a possibility that the case may be dropped. It is now generally thought that relief will come about quicker by not invoking the assistance of the law at the present time, but allow the water company officials to proceed with their plans. The "dry tract" people state that they are every last one of them from Missouri, at least to the extent that "they want to be shown."

SHORT NEWS STORIES.

The Rev. Kittredge Wheeler, formerly a prominent divine in Chicago and who has been filling the pulpit at the First Baptist Church during the vacation of Dr. Albert Hatcher Smith, this summer, will preach a sermon tonight on the subject, "The New Nationalism of Theodore Roosevelt." It is said that he has very decided views along the lines of broader socialism, monopoly, trusts and public corporations.

The Rev. Dr. Matt S. Hughes, pastor of the First Methodist Church, who returned from a three-months' vacation trip abroad a few days ago will occupy his pulpit this morning and evening. The membership of the church and his friends will be glad to welcome him home. He has not announced the subject for his sermons today but he probably will have something to say regarding his trip.

Dr. Daniel F. Fox, pastor of the First Congregational Church, will preach at the morning service this morning. His subject will be "The Importance of Right Thinking."

A large number of the members of the Lake Avenue Methodist Church held an interesting meeting with the District Superintendent, the Rev. J. D. Mather last night, and voted unanimously for the return of their pastor, the Rev. F G. H. Stevens for another year.

A pretty affair of yesterday afternoon was a handkerchief shower given by Miss Ora Stokes at her home on Garfield avenue in honor of Miss Genevieve Stroud of Alhambra, who is soon to be married to William Crawford of Pathuco, Mex.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph I. Hollister of No. 1017 Las Lunas street, celebrated the forty-ninth anniversary of their wedding yesterday afternoon with a family dinner and general reunion with old friends.

Word was received in Pasadena yesterday to the effect that Mrs. Norah O'Connor of No. 2315 Wilson avenue, Chicago, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Norah Helen O'Connor to Earl Thompson Healey, who formerly lived at No. 482 Herkimer street, Pasadena.

HEAD NOT DEPOSED.

Misconception About Action of City Trustees of Alhambra as to Signing of Contract.

ALHAMBRA, Sept. 17.—Some misconception has gone abroad as to the manner in which the lighting contract between the City of Alhambra and the Pacific Light & Power Company, was signed. The reports generally have stated that R. M. Wallace, as president of the Board of City Trustees, was temporarily deposed from office. This is not true. City Attorney Haas, advised that any member of the board, who might be designated by other members to sign, could sign instead of the president. In accordance with that action first there was a motion to reconsider the vote by which the contract was ordered adopted, and the president of the board ordered to sign. This motion prevailed. The original question having been reconsidered, the question was upon the adoption of the report which was modified so as to instruct R. R. Behlow, as chairman of the Committee on Finance, to sign, instead of the president. This was carried by a vote of three to one and in accordance with that Mr. Behlow, in the capacity of chairman of this committee, did sign. No one was deposed from office. There was no reinstatement to office, and Mr. Behlow, in the capacity named, executed the contract on behalf of the board.

FUNERAL OF MAJ. ROUTHE.

The funeral of Maj. Eugene A. Routhe took place this afternoon at his late residence, No. 322 South Second street. The remains were taken to Pasadena, where, in compliance with his oft repeated wish, they were cremated.

GLENDORA.

GLENDORA, Sept. 17.—Citizens here are enthusiastic over the verdict in the Glendora road district in favor of the tax to build the Glendora mountain road, and will vigorously rush the proceedings preliminary to letting the contract.

The Glendora Woman's Club held an open-air fete on the vacant lots just north of the Pacific Electric Railway depot, Friday evening. The grounds were brilliantly illuminated. A feature was the music by the Azusa band, generously provided by H. C. Schiffman.

INDISCREET.

BATHERS FLIRT WITH DEATH.

Big Tides Make Salt Dip Dangerous.

Long Beach Has Its Band Tribulations.

Withdrawal of Support a Serious Blow.

LONG BEACH, Sept. 17.—There were two near-drownings here today, due to the disregard of bathers to the warnings of the life guards, who, during the prevalence of the high tides, have endeavored to keep bathers close to shore. But there are some, mostly tourists who pay no attention to the warnings, but rather court the certain danger. About 2 o'clock a party of three were caught in a strong lateral current and one of them, J. E. Washburn of Mitchell, S. D., was in a bad way when Life Guard Barton reached him. It was a hard struggle for Barton to reach shore, but he finally made it safely and Washburn, who had taken considerable water, was revived after hard work.

An hour later, W. S. Carston, a fruit man of Fresno, was in bathing with Mrs. D. W. Carrigan of this city and both were caught in a tide-rip. Carston bravely held to his companion and started seaward. Two young boys near by went to their assistance and helped them shoreward until the life boat arrived, when both victims, who were unconscious, were hurried to the Emergency Hospital. Late this evening both were conscious and rapidly recovering.

NEW YORKER'S PICNIC.

One hundred residents and former residents of Chautauqua county, N. Y., held their semi-annual picnic here today. Luncheon was enjoyed at the noon hour, under the auditorium, and the programme which followed was in charge of President R. F. Kimball of the association. The picnic was one of the most successful ever held by the association.

BAND MUDDLE.

With the refusal of the Pacific Electric to further continue their contributions for the support of the municipal band, and the bath-house following suit, it is likely that tomorrow's concerts will be the final ones as the money in the city fund is about exhausted and there is no means of providing the $12,000 still needed. The Council last night, by a vote of 4 to 3, refused a motion to discontinue the band, but as there is no money to pay them, the action was of little moment, except to place, according to the majority, the responsibility with the Mayor, who denied them the privilege of paring the budget to provide for the organization. Afterwards the Mayor said he thought the band would be provided for and that the Pacific Electric and bath-house would contribute as of yore. In this he proves to be mistaken. It is likely that the city can provide about $17,000, but the general idea seems to be that it would be best to save this money for use during the busy summer season. The band boys, however, are confident that some way out of the difficulty will be found and the organization continued through the winter.

PROVIDENCE HELPED.

Providence and plenty of hard work has been the means during the past few days of saving thousands of dollars of property along the west beach. The force of the breakers has greatly diminished and the tide, though still heavy and higher each night, is now little feared. All day today workmen have been busy filling sand bags and building temporary bulkheads in from the most exposed portions of the beach and there will probably be no more damage as the tides will reach their height tomorrow night and then begin to recede. Over 2000 sacks of sand have been dumped in one block and all along are temporary barriers of palm leaves, tree limbs and other greenery all packed with sand and forming a mattress bulkhead.

BRIEF NEWS.

The Colonial Apartments on Cedar avenue, owned by A. J. Vance, are to be enlarged by the addition of sixteen suites. The cost of the improvement will be about $15,000.

Considerable complaint has been made to the police of late regarding the operation of a milk thief in the western part of the city, who follows the early morning delivery and empties the bottles before the household gets up.

The Board of Public Works is searching for the owner of a lot on Railway street near Falcon which has been assessed for paving. There is no record of ownership on the city books and taxes have not been paid for three years. An effort will be made of the County Tax Collector to see if he has any record of ownership.

H. L. Carver today sold his half interest in the Western Boat Works to Dr. F. L. Rogers, who buys as a speculation. Capt. Dodge, who owns a half interest, will continue as general manager.

The First Methodist Church congregation has asked that Rev. Will A. Betts be returned to the pulpit here for another year, making his seventh year in charge. Several members of the church contemplate an auto trip to Fresno next week where the general conference is to be held.

In a midnight fight at a small house on East Fourth street G. Garcher was badly injured by a blow on the head with an ax handle wielded by José Charder. The two were in a company of Mexicans celebrating their independence day and a good deal of cheap wine was consumed. Both men were arrested and fined today.

MENACE LUMBER.

Flames in Hay Barn in Santa Monica Threaten Destruction in Near-by Yards.

SANTA MONICA, Sept. 17.—A hot fire shortly after 6 o'clock this evening gave the Bay Cities Lumber Company's yard and the Santa Monica Planing Mill Company's plant a narrow miss from destruction. Suddenly flames were seen to burst from the little hay barn that stood among the great piles of lumber between the planing mill and the lumber sheds and office buildings. The barn was filled with hay and harness and was consumed. The fire company was prompt in response to the alarm and prevented the spread of what must have proven a disastrous blaze but for the timely discovery. Many thousands of dollars' worth of lumber were within a stone's throw of the burned barn and the sparks and brands fell in places that had to be watched carefully.

WILL SPREAD DOCTRINE.

The Executive Committee of the Political Equality League has decided upon an active campaign for the dissemination of information relative to the equal suffrage propaganda. With this object in view, weekly parlor meetings will be held at the residences of the membership of the league. The first of these gatherings will be next week at one of the Palisades homes. Mrs. Alice Parks of Palo Alto, chairman of the State Committee on Literature, has been giving instructions and assisting in getting the work started. Mrs. Roy Jones has been appointed chairman of the Committee on Finance and Mrs. F. H. Taft will preside over the deliberations of the Press Committee.

FOR SICK POOR.

The Good Samaritan Free Bed Association, which was recently organized for the purpose of equipping and maintaining a free bed at the Santa Monica Bay Hospital, has named next Wednesday as flower day. A local florist has donated a liberal percentage of all sales made on that date and the women will take entire charge of his establishment. The carnations will be donated outright, and everybody will be asked to buy and wear this flower on that day. The bed has already been provided at the hospital and all worthy cases will receive attention and medical or surgical aid there.

LOOK FOR BIG RECORD.

For two days' enrollment for the High School, which is to open for the year Monday morning, has been in progress and the indications are that the registration will be a record-breaking one. The grammar grades will also open Monday. The teachers were called together today in conference and were addressed informally by City Superintendent Rebok. Principal Morris adso addressed the half-hundred teachers, taking for his subject "Progressive and Aggressive Teachers." Miss Clara Macomber, one of the regular teachers, is ill at her home in Ontario and will be unable to be present at th eopening of the term. Her place will be filled temporarily by Miss Helen Manz.

STEAMER OVERDUE.

Roma, Scheduled to Arrive in San Pedro Friday Night, Is Missing. Much Concern Felt.

SAN PEDRO, Sept. 17.—Considerable anxiety is felt here for the safety of the big oil tank steamer Roma, owned by the Union Oil Company. The Roma left San Francisco on Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock and was scheduled to arrive here last night before midnight. C. P. Ingmire, local agent for the Union Oil Company at Terminal, states that the San Francisco office has no trace of the big tanker. She is equipped with wireless, but all efforts to communicate with her have failed. Vessels arriving here have not sighted the Roma, and those departing have been requested to keep a sharp lookout for her.

NO ANXIETY FELT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—The steamer Roma left here September 14. She was commanded by Capt. Lawson. Nothing has been heard of her here, but no great anxiety is felt, as the boat is not considered overdue. She carries no wireless apparatus.

CATARRH OF BLADDER AND KIDNEYS A FREQUENT AND DREADED DISEASE

Pres. Newhof Promptly Relieved by Pe-ru-na.

..C. B. Newhof, 10 Delaware street, Albany, N. Y., President Montefiore Club, writes:

"Since my advanced age I find that I have been frequently troubled with urinary ailments.

"The bladder seemed irritated, and my physician said that it was catarrh caused by a protracted cold which would be difficult to overcome on account of my advanced years.

"I took Peruna, hardly daring to believe that I would be helped, but I found to my relief that I soon began to mend.

"The irritation gradually subsided and the urinary difficulties passed away.

"I have enjoyed excellent health now for the past seven months.

"I enjoy my meals, sleep soundly and am as well as I was twenty years ago. I give all praise to Peruna."

Liver and Kidney Trouble.

Mr. George Forrester, 2747 Mascher street, Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "We have great faith in Peruna.

"My wife's condition was such that she thought she would die, as the doctors could not help her dyspepsia and catarrh of the stomach. Now she can eat anything. We keep Peruna in the house all the time, but it is only once in a while that she needs to use it.

"I was subject to liver and kidney trouble, which resulted in rheumatic pains, but I have not had a pain since I took Peruna, and very little liver trouble, as Peruna keeps the digestive organs in good working order, and that is the main thing."

Pe-ru-na Contains No Narcotics.

One reason why Peruna has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotics of any kind. Peruna is perfectly harmless. It can be used any length of time without acquiring a drug habit. Peruna is permanent in its effect, and is a household friend in more than a million homes.

SAN DIEGO SHOW PLANS.

Landscape Gardeners Engaged to Lay Out Grounds—Architect to Submit Plans for Buildings.

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 17.—Wilbur D. Cook, Jr., a landscape engineer of Los Angeles, and J. G. Langdon, an architect of Boston, are here figuring on plans for buildings and grounds for the Panama exposition. Several conferences have been held with George W. Marston, chairman of the committee in charge of the early construction. Mr. Marston said the purpose of the conferences at the present time is of no special significance, except that the architects, after going over the ground, may submit plans for laying out the exposition grounds. Chairman Marston states that he is in receipt of almost a bushel basketful of applications from architects and landscape gardeners from all parts of the world who are anxious to make plans for San Diego's exposition. The committee is in no hurry to encourage any one who may aspire to be the architect of the group of buildings that are to constitute shelter for the exhibits.

PATTERSON TO REMAIN HERE.

George L. Patterson, the Pennsylvania banker who has brought suit to break his mother's will, in which she left the bulk of her fortune to Katherine Tingley, states he will bring his family here and remain until the case is finally settled. The date of the hearing is October 24.

WOMAN NOT INSANE.

The insanity charge against Mrs. Nina Faubion was dismissed in Superior Court this morning. Since last Tuesday night Mrs. Faubion and her little daughter had been in charge of the jail matron. The woman's actions at a high-class hotel indicated that her mind bordered on insanity. However, the restraint she was subjected to while detained by the authorities gave her strength and her faculties returned to normal. Mrs. Faubion's husband, in answer to a summons from the Superior Court, arrived this morning from Sacramento. He stated that his wife suffered from nervousness and that it was for the purpose of affording her relief by a change in her surroundings that he brought her to Southern California and left her.

VICTIM OF DRUG HABIT.

E. J. Donnelly, a former brilliant young attorney of Texas, was today sentenced to one year at San Quentin. Donnelly was convicted of horse stealing. It was shown at the trial that while under the influence of narcotics Donnelly hired a horse and buggy of a local liveryman, drove to Santa Ana and there sold the rig. Later he was arrested in Los Angeles. On account of the prospects that Donnelly will be cured of the drug habit and that he will reform the District Attorney made a plea for a light sentence.

TALK FOR PARK.

Interest in That and Other Projects Aroused in Upland—Scheme for Euclid Avenue.

UPLAND, Sept. 17.—A good deal of interest has developed here lately regarding a project to secure a site for a public park, City Hall and perhaps other city utilities. In line with the proposed improvement, President Atwood of the Upland Chamber of Commerce, has appointed a Parks and Public Improvements Committee, consisting of J. P. Wedel, Col. James L. Paul, C. P. Fuller and George B. Hayden.

Coincident with the proposed improvements is a project for further beautifying Euclid avenue. One gentleman, living on the northern part of this splendid drive, has gone on record as offering to contribute $100 per year, for ten years, toward a fund to be used in improvement and parking of the thoroughfare along the street car line. It is hoped now that this spirit can be developed in others, and it also seems probable that Ontario will join the movement.

With a corps of seventeen teachers, the Upland grammar schools are to open Monday. The enrollment is expected to pass the 500 mark, which is the largest in the history of the schools. A department of manual training is this year added to the schools, and quarters in the large basement of the grammar school, have been fitted up for this purpose.

E. S. McMullin has closed the city office of the Camp Baldy Company, in this city, for this season. There are still a number of people at the camp, but the season is waning. It is said to be the present plan of the company to increase the capacity of the camp, 25 to 50 per cent. yearly henceforth, as demand warrants. This season it has been a case of "capacity business," almost throughout, and with a demand for a much increased service.

The low stage of the water in the creeks of San Antonio Cañon is causing some concern to the officials of the San Antonio Water Company, as well as of the Ontario Power Company, an auxiliary company. The "booster" at the sub station in this city, is kept in operation now, most of the time, to augment the work of the upper power houses, and it is a possibility that Upland and Ontario may be called upon, before long, to do away with street lights, for a short time, at least.

O. E. Chamberlain of Upland, has purchased of M. Morse of Chino, a twenty-acre field of alfalfa, in that section. The price stated is $9000. Two residence properties in Upland, valued at $8000, went in on the deal.

W. B. Dewey, who has conducted Camp Angelus on the summit of "Old Baldy," during the past summer, is now preparing to house his furnishings, in a substantial stone building on the summit, for the winter. At about this time of year, or a little later, there begins on the summit of this lofty old peak, "back-East" winter weather, except that the Baldy gales here are much more furious, and Mr. Dewey will need something strong, to insure the safety of his camp fixtures.

PERRIS.

PERRIS, Sept. 17.—Harry P. Maxfield and Miss Ethel Preston were married Thursday morning at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Preston, Rev. J. B. Long of the Congregational Church, officiating. A wedding breakfast was served, after which the bride and groom left for Los Angeles. The bride has resided here most of her life.

The groom has been Santa Fé agent here the last year. After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Maxfield will return and make their home with the bride's parents on San Jacinto avenue.

HAVING FUN AT SANTA BARBARA.

DISCUSS FAIR AND ADOPT A FEW RESOLUTIONS.

At Banquet the Editorial Crowd Put Aside Formality and Proceeded to Engage in a Session of Hilarious Good Fellowship—Will Be Given an Auto Ride.

SANTA BARBARA (Cal.) Sept. 17.—Representatives of sixty Southern California newspapers, for the most part members of the Southern California Editorial Association, gathered at the Potter Hotel today for a discussion of the proposed $5,000,000 State exposition tax. A delegation of a dozen business men from San Francisco and representatives of the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego were in attendance and the entire situation was considered for three hours. Some opposition was apparent at the outset, but this was removed and the editors after promising the earnest support of their papers to the Constitutional amendment, adopted by unanimous vote the following resolution:

"Whereas, by virtue of an act of the Legislature of California in extraordinary session assembled, the people of California will be enabled at the general election in November, next, to vote upon the proposition of levying a special tax on the assessed property valuation of the State to the amount of $5,000,000, in and for the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, to be held in San Francisco in the year 1915, and whereas, we, the representatives of the press of Southern California, in conference assembled, having deliberated together and having heard statements and arguments from representatives of the cities of San Francisco and San Diego, and having received satisfactory assurance that the safest, highest and best financial industrial and moral conditions will control the conduct of the expositions, therefore, be it resolved:

"Resolved that we, the representatives of the press of Southern California unqualifiedly indorse the proposition and will give it our heartiest support, and be it further

"Resolved, that we request our brethren of the press throughout all California, the Pacific Coast and the United States to coöperate with us in giving this matter the widest publicity."

Among the more notable addresses of the meeting were those of James McNab and Frank L. Brown of San Francisco and D. C. Collier of San Diego. Tonight the editors will be guests at a banquet and tomorrow they will be entertained by the business men of Santa Barbara.

At 7:30 o'clock the delegates attended the banquet and here the frivolity of the editors, probably long confined, broke out. When the delegates arrived at the Potter this morning they were stripped of all their money and valuables and even their hats. These will be returned to them when they board the train tomorrow night.

At the end of the business session, bonnets, of all hues and makes, were handed out and the once terrors of the office boys, caverted around the lobby with these weird headgears on, blowing little whistles, which were also distributed.

Tomorrow the delegates will be taken for an automobile ride and will be tendered a reception at the Potter Country Club.

DISCUSS WATER PLANT.

Propositions for Making the Supply from New Wells Available in Ontario.

ONTARIO, Sept. 17.—The City Trustees and the members of the advisory board on the Water Committee, representing the center and four ends of the city, met last night to discuss the advisability of testing the pumping capacity of the new well the city has just brought in on East Fourth street. Present at the meeting were F. J. Kimball, representing the Twentieth Century Air Lift Pumping Company, and J. B. Pridham of the Byer-Jackson Company.

Mr. Kimball made a proposition to put in a plant and pump 100 inches of water from the well to the reservoir a mile north for $20,000. Mr. Pridham made a lower offer, to put in for $15,000, a pumping plant that would deliver 100 inches of water at the reservoir, or one for $12,000 that would deliver fifty inches.

It was the opinion of both engineers that a test of the well would be necessary and that a permanent plant should be at once put in, for they showed that the drillers have gone through 350 feet of water-bearing gravel in digging the well. This, they estimated would, if desired, furnish a continuous flow of 200 inches of water. Another meeting of the City Trustees and advisory board will take place Monday night, at which definite action is expected.

BURNED BY GASOLINE.

Everett Hardy, an employé of the W. W. Smith grocery firm, was severely burned this morning, while using gasoline in the work of cleaning up paint from the floor of the new Smith building, at No. 207 North Euclid avenue. The gasoline Hardy was using caught fire, seemingly from spontaneous combustion. His right arm was covered with the burning oil and his trousers and shoes took fire. Workmen on the building rushed to his assistance and smothered the flames, but not until burns deep enough to require the attention of a doctor had been inflicted. Hardy will be disabled for a week. As the Smith building is entirely of concrete construction no damage was done to the structure.

Rev. Dr. F. D. Mather of Pasadena, district superintendent of the Methodist conference, will preach tomorrow at the Methodist Church in this city. Mr. Mather was for several years pastor of the church here.

President W. A. Freemire of the Chamber of Commerce and Alderman R. F. Spencer are looking into the matter of attracting to Ontario this winter some of the tourist traffic. The first step to be taken by the local chamber will be to communicate with Secretary Wiggins of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. It has been announced that he has a plan of operation worked out into which most of the outlying cities of Southern California will enter.

Harry Kelly, manager of the Ontario Realty Company, reports the trade of ten acres of improved land on South Euclid avenue, two miles out, known as the B. F. Vancil place, to Fred Petrie, for a house and lot belonging to the latter, at No. 311 West B street. The deal involves a consideration of $7000.

STREET FAIR FOR ORANGE.

ORANGE, Sept. 17.—The last of the preliminary arrangements for the County Street Fair, which will be held here next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, are being hurried to completion, and the city is rapidly taking on a gala appearance. The plaza in the center of the town, and the arrangement of the business section, gives an admirable setting for the carnival, and hundreds of dollars are being expended in decorations. Display booths have been erected in front of every business house, and thousands of colored electric lights will be used for the evening illuminations, which will be the most extensive ever attempted in the county.

This is the first carnival ever attempted by Orange, and no effort has been spared to give the visitors who will doubtless attend from all over Southern California something for their money. There will be exhibits of products grown in this vicinity, fancy poultry and fruits. A contract has been closed with a carnival company which will bring a number of attractions, and the Long Beach Band will assist the local band in entertaining the crowds with several concerts each afternoon and evening.

In order to accommodate the people from other parts of the county who will wish to attend, the Santa Fé will run a special night train to Anaheim, Fullerton and Santa Ana.

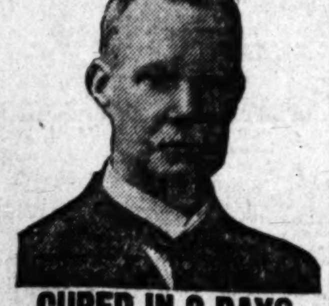
I WAS A Heavy Drinker

Consumed quart of whiskey every 24 hours.



CURED IN 3 DAYS

If you know anyone who drinks alcohol in any form, regularly or periodically, let me send my FREE book, "Confessions of an Alcohol Slave."

I drank beer at first, then gradually developed into a drinker of strong liquors. When drinking heavily I wouldn't hesitate to pawn my coat or break a saloon window to get spirits. For long periods I would drink over a quart of whiskey, rum or gin daily. And some mixed drinks and beer additionally!

I damaged business, health and social opportunities, made family miserable, lost real friends and became an unworthy, unwelcome burden upon all except the saloonkeepers, who cheerfully took my money for the poison they gave me.

For 16 years I kept it up, and I was regarded as a hopeless case. Various "cures" did me no good. But now I have a joyful message for drinkers and

Mothers, Wives, Sisters

While drifting from bad to worse, as all slaves of King Alcohol do, I unexpectedly found a true cure. It was (and is) genuine. It saved my life. My health was quickly restored. I became and am a respectable man, enjoying every benefit of freedom from the accursed alcohol. I speedily and naturally lost all desire for drink. I took less and less. I began to prefer tea, coffee and other non-alcoholic liquids; the craving for liquor ceased, I could sleep perfectly, my stomach became well and I recovered from other ailments which I now know were due to my indulgence in strong drink.

WONDERFUL

My cure lasted 3 days: if I had relied upon will power or faith I would still be a drunkard, because an alcohol slave has no will power while drinking. I rejoiced so greatly at having found a true cure that I decided to devote my life to removing the curse from others. My success has been marvelous. During eight years I have personally attended to over 6000 men and women who were addicted to drink; the list includes very many persons notable in all walks of life, including those of brains and those of physical energy. If I were permitted to mention names of those who have been saved through this quick, permanent cure the public would be astonished. They include senators, congressmen, public officials, great lawyers, bankers, clergymen, noted merchants, skilled mechanics, trusted managers and clerks, farmers and others in all vocations.

I tell about the secret in my book, which I send FREE to every person (or relative or friend) who takes alcohol in any form to excess. My one purpose in life is to cure the drunkard. I rejoice in every cure, each victim has my sympathy. What I promise is absolutely guaranteed. My remedy is for either steady or periodical drinkers. Think of it—a complete and permanent home cure between Friday night and Monday night—or any other 72 hours!

Men or Women, Any Age, Quickly Cured.

To relatives, friends or employers I say—If you want to cure a drinker in the quickest time and permanently, with or without his knowledge and with absolute safety, send my book—changes despair to joy.

ABSOLUTELY FREE

I will send you my book, in plain wrapper, promptly, postpaid. It tells of my own career and the wonderful discovery and gives valuable advice. No other book like it. CANCER In Woman's Breast

ALWAYS BEGINS A SMALL LUMP and if neglected it always poisons deep in the armpit and proves fatal quickly.

I Will Give $1000 If I Fail to Cure any CANCER or TUMOR I treat before it poisons deep or attaches to bone, without knife or pain. Not a dollar need be paid until cured. We give a written legal guarantee. Any small tumor, lump or sore on the lip, face or body six months is nearly always cancer. We have the best 120-page book on cancers and tumors, cured without knife or pain, ever printeod, which we send free. We use no X-ray or other swindle. A vegetable plaster makes the cures. My latest discovery is the most wonderful of all. The book is full of testimonials of people you can see and talk with. 5000 cures sworn to—judges, lawyers, doctors, ministers and millionaires. We have cured hundreds after others failed, but we have honestly refused hundreds who had waited too long to be saved. Cancer never pains until the last stage, but they poison deeper every day. We cure large cancers in ten days—we kill them in three days and they drop out in seven days, without a drop of blood or pain, and hundreds of people take theirs home in alcohol. The place heals very quickly at home. You could not keep it from healing.

BREVITIES.

Telephone Today.—Ring The Times and insert your Sunday "Want ad." It has been difficult to regulate the telephoning of classified advertisements for the Sunday Times. Efforts have been made to relieve the Saturday congestion, on account of their being so numerous, but it has been impossible to judge the particular period of the day selected by patrons to call up the office. Hence the urgent necessity of advertisers telephoning their announcements early in order to insure accuracy in transcribing and afford a superior service in consequence. They can be telephoned any day in the week, with orders to run on Sunday. The office will be glad to receive them, and will take pains to see that all directions are carefully complied with.

Talks on Teeth
—BY—
Rex Dental Co.
Incorporated

What Are New Teeth Worth?

Many an unfortunate wearing a partial plate or a bridge has said, "I'd give $1000 for my old teeth."
We can restore lost teeth for a great deal less money.
All we ask is that you have two or more teeth in either jaw.
The rest is easy for us with the Alveolar method.
Not only put them back, but restore them so you will never miss those nature gave you and which have been lost by poor dentistry or disease.
Hard to believe, isn't it?
Our offices are at 203 Severance Bldg., corner Sixth and Main streets, Los Angeles, and all we ask is a visit from you and the privilege of making a careful examination absolutely free.
If we decide that we can do the work successfully, we will tell you so. It is painless. What is such work worth?
Patients of ours to whom we have referred have said that it would be difficult to put a value in dollars and cents on the work if they were to measure it by the satisfaction and enjoyment it had brought. PRICELESS.
Send for our free book if you cannot come and see us now and read it. That will be a good start toward emancipation from the partial plate nuisance. The book will bring you to see us.

CHARLES LEVY & SON

TWO points about Levy Clothes that mean much to YOU—their style and their quality. Our garments are not turned out under the ordinary "Shop" methods. They are the work of individual Journeymen Tailors in our own Workrooms. This means that we are able to give our individual attention to every garment, and it means that every one is the work of a master tailor. We build Suits at $35 and up—and our range of fabrics includes every high class type. Next time you are passing, notice our windows. You will see Fall ideas displayed that will bring you inside.

GIRLS SPEEDY IN THE SWIM.

Bathing Maids Pass as New Lights Shine.

Well-Rounded Muscles Show "Hard as Tacks."

Misses Who Take to the Sea Make Proud Record.

Well, it appears that Annette Kellerman started something. Anyway, there never was a better place to start it. With our beaches and our crowd of girls, we have a showing to be proud of.

Ocean Park is in the swim; for there are three girls there who can. They are Inez Fanjoy, Gertrude Johnson and Dorothy Newkirk. They are all young girls, and very mermaids for the water. Miss Newkirk, who is 17 years old, has done some great stunts lately, one of which was to swim to the Venice pier from Ocean Park. She lives at Santa Monica, but does all of her swimming for Ocean Park. On a warm afternoon she cannot find enough water at one beach so she takes a little swim over to another. It is not anything new to find her at the Venice plunge when you leave there, and as soon as you reach Ocean Park you see her doing fancy curves there.

Gertrude Johnson is not so changeable. You will always find her splashing around at Ocean Park in the afternoon. She takes a little plunge every morning to keep in practice and in the afternoon "goes swimming." She trains severely, and it tells upon her, for she is as hard as a rock. She is lithe and quick, which is not always the case in one so short. Gertrude is 17 and looks not a day over 15. She wears a boy's suit in the water part of the time, and many observers can scarcely believe that she is a girl, for her straight firm lines certainly do not look very girlish. She is a good swimmer. You will never find her lying around the beach, in a pretty bathing suit, but she runs down to the pier from her little home, drops her cloak, and dives. When she has been in the water long enough, she comes out and goes straight home. She has the advantage of having a mother who does not think her daughter should stay around the beach a great while in a state of undress. Her bathing is as regular an occurrence as her eating. She has won several prizes for swimming. The last was the first place medal for the fifty-yard dash at Bimini, August 26.

OUT FOR A RECORD.

Another winner of medals is Inez Fanjoy. She is the daughter of a photographer at Ocean Park, and spends the greater part of her spare time out in the deep. She wears five medals, all for "dashes" at Bimini. The first place in the fifty and 100-yard dashes, is always hers. Inez has not as much time lately to keep in training as she had last summer, for she has had to help her father. Nevertheless, she does as much as she can. An early plunge in the morning, a good swim in the afternoon, and maybe a little time in the plunge at night, two or three times a week, and that keeps her in practice.

This is her first year at winning prizes, and she intends to keep it up. Although only 14, Inez says she intends to capture Miss Newkirk's record. Miss Newkirk has two sisters, who are not only renowned swimmers, but they win prizes in beauty shows and the like. That their development has been due to their prowess in the water is not doubted.

Ocean Park has two strong rivals in Nita and Lyba Sheffield of Venice. Not long ago they lived in Los Angeles. The girls were neither one at all strong, and their mother was in poor health, so they decided to go to the beach for a few months. From the first, Mrs. Sheffield improved, and the girls started in school. They are both in Santa Monica High. As soon as vacation time came they wanted to learn to swim. So their mother had a friend dump them into the plunge. They HAD to swim, so they did it. They have not yet known how a year, and the improvement in their physique is wonderful. Each has her own particular style of swimming. The long overhand stroke is Nita's winning point, and her unusually long arms are strong and sure. At the tournament of Southern California at Redondo Beach last week, Nita won first place in the fifty-yard dash, the 100-yard dash, and the 440-yard dash. The same day her little sister, Lyba, took the second prize in the fifty and 100-yard dashes, and first for diving. Little Lyba, 16 years old, is now the Southern California champion diver among amateurs. She dives under her trainer, or her sister, with perfect ease. Mrs. Sheffield was telling of the good the swimming has done for both of her daughters.

"Why, two years ago the girls were both weak, and look at them now" (and indeed there are not two handsomer or sturdier girls on the beach.) "They spend the most of their time in the water," she said, "and I encourage them. Swimming is something that will always do them good. Although we live at the beach, I have tried to keep my girls from getting bold and forward. And every one says there are no girls more ladylike," and statements of other people bear out that fact.

Every one likes the Sheffield girls, and every other little swimmer when telling of her prizes asked, "Have you seen the Sheffield sisters?" One thing, Mrs. Sheffield is very particular is to keep her girls sweet and young as long as possible. For that purpose she encourages them to take every exercise, and emphasizes one fact, to keep them away from the dance hall.

"They know the good from the bad now, and they do not care much for the dancing," she said. "Their swimming takes all the time they have for recreation.

"Lyba dives continually, adding to her depth as fast as she can. A championship at 16 is something to be proud of. The little miss is very charming, as is her sister also. It would be hard to find two more congenial companions. One will not go into the plunge unless her sister is ready, and it was a curious fact that in the first race they ever tried, Nita was seized with a cramp, and Lyba spurred on so that she might help her, and won the race. This year the same thing happened at Redondo Beach. In the 100-yard dash, Lyba was taken suddenly with a pain, and her sister hurried up and finished first. Now they are even. Each declares that she has given a race to

PIG HIDES IN PLACE OF SHOE.

BLIND PORKER CONCEALED AS FOOTWEAR, IT'S CHARGED.

Proprietor of Repairing Shop Is Accused of Having Dispensed Liquor in Pasteboard Boxes Such as Are Commonly Used to Hold Leather Coverings.

D. Cohen, proprietor of a shoe repairing and tailoring shop at No. 1152 Central avenue, is alleged to have introduced a novelty into the art of keeping a "blind pig" without the knowledge of the officers, but he fell into the clutches of the United States officials yesterday, charged with having failed to pay the required revenue.

The story which is told about him, he says, is an absolute falsehood. His wife declares that he is under arrest because of spite work on the part of a man who tried to borrow some money.

If Cohen has been selling liquor, he has been clever enough to fool the police, for they are said to have not suspected that "booze" was dispensed in the rear of the shop.

To keep the wool over the eyes of the officers, the tailor and shoeman is alleged to have adopted the practice of selling his liquor in shoe boxes. None of his customers, according to report, have ever called it by its right name. If a man desired to buy a bottle of whisky, this is what he is alleged to have said to Cohen, or his good-looking wife:

"Give me a pair of No. 8 tan shoes, E last."

According to the stories which have been told the officers, Cohen could fit his patrons without taking their measure. He seemed to know just how tight they wished to have their wearing apparel.

Persons who have informed the government officials declare that the persons who have carried shoe boxes away from the small establishment have been numerous recently.

An information was filed yesterday morning against Cohen. The warrant was given to Deputy United States Marshal Sittel to serve. The officer visited Cohen's place of business, but found that the proprietor was absent. Mrs. Cohen asked to be given the message, intimating that she had as much to say about the affairs of the Cohen family as any one.

Cohen came riding up on the top of some large boxes of shoes, which were being conveyed in an old negro's express wagon from a wholesale establishment.

"I have a warrant for you," the officer told him, drawing him aside.

"Well, that's all right," responded the shoe dealer, appearing as though he had been expecting some such thing.

Mrs. Cohen declared as soon as she saw the warrant that she knew what had prompted the prosecution.

"It's that picnic," she declared. She explained that several families went to Hollywood Cañon about five weeks ago and took chicken and many other good things to eat. Cohen furnished the beer, but took up a collection of 80 cents from each masculine member of the party.

She said that a man who had partaken of their repast later came to the store and tried to borrow $75, after which, unsuccessful, he went away threatening that he would get revenge. She accuses him of having sent many persons to their residence in the rear of the store late at night to buy whisky, under the pretense that members of their families were ill.

Cohen gathered up half a dozen bondsmen and accompanied the officer to Commissioner Williams's office to arrange for his bail.

DOUBLE WATER SUPPLY.

The Frye pumping plant at Sunset and Western avenues, which has been closed for several weeks to install improvements, has begun operations again, and is pumping direct into the mains of the Union Hollywood Water Company. This plant formerly supplied the Hollywood Water Company, but since the two companies consolidated, extensive additions have been made to the equipment, and the mains of the two systems connected. The entire system now gets the benefit of the double supply.

BUSTED BY BOARDING-HOUSE.

James C. Anderson, a real estate dealer, yesterday filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States Circuit Court. He gives his liabilities as $2611.43. According to his sworn statement, much of his indebtedness was caused by a "flyer" in a rooming-house. He also owes the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker and others. He has $1.16 in the bank with which to liquidate. He also has property valued at $45, which he asserts is exempt.

LEAVES WITH PRISONERS.

Bert Franklin, deputy United States marshal, left for the East yesterday with two prisoners. He is taking Thomas J. Heaney to Dallas, Tex., to answer to a charge of having impersonated an army officer. Heaney has just completed an eight months' term here for a similar offense. The other prisoner is Adam McLarren, who is going to Leavenworth, Kan., to serve two years in the Federal prison for counterfeiting.

PURE FOOD IN FINE STYLE.

BROADWAY DEPARTMENT STORE TO BE HOST.

Promoters Assert That the Affair Will Be the Most Comprehensive and Attractive Ever Seen in the West — Twenty-four Different Viands Will Constitute Menu.

The most varied and comprehensive pure food show ever held in Los Angeles will be opened to the public Monday morning on the fourth floor of the Broadway Department Store building. The men in charge say their show will have a scope and interest seldom seen in an exhibition of foods. In addition to the display arranged by the Broadway Department Store there will be various artistic booths in which the manufacturers of foods will demonstrate their products.

Everything will be free and the public will not only be admitted but will be cordially welcomed. Twenty-four different kinds of edibles will be served in the most appetizing forms, and the processes of manufacture will be explained, as the purpose of the exhibit is to establish confidence in the goods which will be shown.

In preparation for the event the grocery department of the big store has been arranged after the fashion of an exposition room at a great fair. Booths will be brilliantly lighted with uniquely-planned electric effects, and courteous attendants will serve patrons with as much deference as are the honor guests of the most pretentious social affair.

ROBERTS IS ARRAIGNED.

R. M. Roberts of the Wand apartments, Long Beach, was arraigned before Justice Pierce yesterday, charged with assaulting Leander C. Crossman of No. 2969 Francis avenue with a deadly weapon. He will be examined on the 26th inst. He is at liberty under $3000 bonds pending the hearing. Crossman is in the California Hospital, suffering from a gunshot wound. His condition is not dangerous. Justice Pierce called on him at the hospital in order to take his oath to the complaint.

HARD LUCK TALE.

HUBBY SWIPES WIFEY'S DUDS.

Divorce Action Plaintiff, Alleges Cruelty.

Fears She Will Be Placed in Insane Asylum.

Therefore Beauty Doctor Asks Divorce.

Fannie Briggs Carr King, beauty doctor, yesterday began action for divorce against Morris Adrian King.

Mrs. King says she is afraid her husband will have her declared insane and placed in an asylum, will divulge the secrets of the Carr company, and will dispose of certain real property to which she lays claim, and will divert the money received to his own uses.

Also, Mrs. King charges that her spouse has been entirely too familiar with a young damsel employed in the Carr Company's beauty parlors.

Also, she alleges that on one occasion King "swiped" most of her clothes and forced her to make the trip from Glendale into this city in a state of dishabille which proved most painful to her modesty.

On the whole, Mrs. King, or Mrs. Carr, as she is "professionally" known, believes that she is entitled to a decree on the ground of extreme cruelty.

Mrs. King was the widow of Capt. Carr of the Postoffice Department when she married King, in 1902. Carr was the man who organized the postoffice service in this city. Later he went to China, and supplied the "Son of Heaven" with a modern letter-delivery system for the "Flowery Kingdom."

For some years Mrs. King has engaged in the occupation of doctoring faulty complexions. Her concern is known as the Carr Company. She married King at San Diego.

SAYS SHE WAS INSULTED.

It is alleged in the complaint that as soon as King had attached himself to the household, he made it a part of his business to insult his wife before her customers when they called to have their complexions doctored up. Not only that, but it is stated that King organized a corporation and conveyed to it all of the business of the Fanny Carr Company, issuing to himself 394 shares of the corporation, making the plaintiff believe that she was a stockholder. Later on she claims she was informed that she had not been given a share. She says her husband restricted her to a small salary and made her do the most of the work about the place.

The plaintiff says she permitted the defendant to purchase sixteen acres of land in the city of Glendale. She claims he took the title to the property in the name of the Carr Company, telling her that as a stockholder her interests would be protected. Then she allowed him to buy three lots in Venice, and the title to this also was placed in the name of the Carr Company. Then followed the purchase of a lot in Huntington Beach. These purchases, she avers, used up about all of her money.

To make matters worse, the wife says that in June last King represented to her friends and customers that she was crazy, and on June 12 last, at their Glendale home, attacked her and dragged her about by the hair.

Last night, she alleges, she was driven out of the house by King and compelled to take refuge in the storeroom of Anderson & Chanslor, where she remained during the night. It is charged that following this, King took her clothing and compelled her to come to the city with insufficient raiment to consult her attorney, Charles S. McKelvey.

WOMAN IN THE CASE.

It is also alleged that during the past four years King has shown a great preference for a certain feminine employé of the Carr Company, and while he was absent from the city it is asserted that he wrote to the fair one in question long and endearing letters, all of which was known to the other employés of the corporation, and humiliated the wife greatly. It is also charged that King would take the girl out to restaurants in this city, where the clients of the plaintiff were accustomed to eat, and this caused her grievous mental suffering.

The wife fears, she says, that the defendant will take steps to have her declared insane and placed in seclusion.

It is alleged that the business and formulas of the Carr Company are worth $40,000, and the plaintiff fears that he will dispose of the business and convey away all of the real estate referred to.

The real estate involved consists of six and one-half acres of the Rancho San Rafael at Glendale, ten acres in another part of the same city, three lots in Venice and a lot at Huntington Beach.

The plaintiff asks that the court make an allowance of $200 a month temporary alimony, an allowance of $500 for costs and expenses of the action, and $1000 as attorney fees. She also asks that she be decreed the owner of all the property in question, real and personal.

UNIQUE FRESCO WORK.

Berra Art Company Makes Ceiling in Sections and Ships to San Bernardino Restaurateur.

A large and very unusual order of fresco work was shipped to San Bernardino yesterday by the Romeo T. Berra Art Company of this city. It consists of sixteen pieces, 6x9 feet, made to fit the ceiling of a restaurant, and the scenic effects are suited to the purpose. They are the design and handiwork of Prof. Berra, who has been following his calling as a fresco artist in this city for the past twenty-five years. This work just sent to San Bernardino, is a new departure, the scenes having been painted upon canvas stretchers, which will fit into their places on the ceiling.

Prof. Berra has decorated hundreds of residences in Los Angeles and a number of semi-public buildings and halls. He is an adept at the work, doing it entirely free-hand, without the aid of a pencil sketch, and in this respect his work is somewhat remarkable.

NEXT WEEK.

THE UNITED FASHION SHOW.

Los Angeles Merchants Join in a Novel and Unique Display of Fall Garments, Fabrics and Accessories. Week of September Twenty-sixth to Be a Feast of Beauty in the Stores.

BY OLIVE GRAY.

THE merchants of Los Angeles have entered into a novel and original plan for the fall display of new goods and fashions.

Instead of the scattering fall openings, which have been habitual with the stores, all have united upon the 26th, 27th and 28th of September as a season for the initial display of the season's importations.

At that time there will be cheap railroad rates into the city, for the benefit of the National Mining Congress which will be in session here, and undoubtedly great crowds from all accessible points will avail themselves of the privilege of visiting Los Angeles. In fact women of fashion in all localities have already attested their interest by making inquiries and signifying their intention of attending the great display. Hotel quarters are already being engaged and a grand gala week is assured.

There have been "food shows" and "made in Los Angeles shows" and shows of many kinds under one roof, but this is a departure in that the whole of Broadway will be in trim for the event, and all stores, even the smaller ones, will put their best feet forward, both as to window displays and the exhibits within their various departments.

Not only will the dry goods stores show their latest and most gorgeous importations, but the jewelry establishments, of which Los Angeles has an unusual number, will place on exhibition the best in their line, and the haberdashers and men's clothiers will put forward the latest in goods and styles.

The heads of many of the large establishments have spent the summer in the European fashion centers, and the most up-to-date in all lines will be shown in Los Angeles at the moment when New York is "seeing things" for the first time.

Buyers are hustling goods from New York each day, as their importations arrive, and it seems as though never in the history of business has such lavish display been possible as now.

A PEEP INTO FOREIGN BOXES.

Most striking and novel of importations are those in the way of evening gowns.

It really seems as though all countries had been ransacked for the most unique and lavish of embroideries, fabrics and hand work of every variety.

Daring and undreamed of as are some of the combinations of color which come from Paris in the high novelties, yet so deftly are the tones administered that after the first catch of the breath as one beholds, one is forced to admire.

Even the "hobble" is made tolerable by the beauty of its fabric and the elaborateness of its embroidery and beadwork. For there is no denying that the "hobble" is here. Not, to be sure, in the baldly exaggerated form which one sees in the crude attempts of the cheap street costume; but so concealed, so deftly manipulated as to be almost unsuspected in the handsome models. In many instances it takes the form of the wide band at the foot of a tunic, where the barbaric splendor of the hand work of intermingled embroidery and beads of heretofore unheard of varieties, distracts the attention from the fact that the band is really a "hobble." In other cases the hobble is composed of a wide ribbon of gold galloon, passed underneath the shimmering fall of chiffon, lace, net and other diaphanous materials which go to form the "body" of the gown. In other instances the fabric of the hobble breaks forth at the back of the skirt, in such an adorable bow that one forgets to censure.

Almost without exception, the high-class evening gowns consist of at least three gowns, if one were to count the "layers" of fabrics. There is first the foundation slip of soft and clinging crepe meteor or satin majestique; then comes a chiffon slip of another color, and the final or outer "sheaf" which is a triumph of ingenuity in the way of garniture.

No wonder that these creations run into the hundreds of dollars; for each is indeed a masterpiece.

That our city warrants the importations of such gowns, by discriminating merchants, attests the fact that we have "arrived" as a metropolitan center.

In addition to the made-up costumes from Paris, there are others which come, each in its box, already to be put together and accompanied with a "chart" and full directions for "compounding." These are quite as handsome in their way as are the entire creations; and skillful work-women, in the big sewing rooms of the large stores, find no difficulty in putting together these robes, to fit the purchaser.

SOME ESPECIAL BEAUIIES.

So beautiful and so individual are some of the Paris gowns, that they seem to take on a sort of personality, and one is impelled to confer upon them distinctive names, as the orientals are wont to do by particularly splendid gems. For instance, there is one chef d'oeuvre, which at once appeals to the beholder as "The Fields and the Woods." The visible fabric of this is of finest net, shading from faint lavender, as of a far sky line through tints of blue, and on down to the greens of nature's low growing things. The bodice and upper part of the skirt are embroidered although the term seems scarcely expressive enough for so intricate a combination of silk threads and cut crystal beads, put together with silver and gold bullion—in shades of wood browns and dark greens which give the effect of overhanging branches and cool forest depths. At the foot of the skirt and extending up to about the knee grow grasses and exquisite flowers done in the same sort of intricate embroidery, and presenting an appearance as though the wearer were standing in a field of growing grasses and blossoms of the field.

Another which names itself "The Rainbow," is so composed as to present, in softened tones, the impression of a rainbow, looked at through a mist. Rosy pinks and lavenders trail off into a deep royal blue, and the embroidered colors become at the foot of the tunic a combined iridescence caught into a yard deep fringe of shimmering beads.

Another, in Atlantic blue, which is the season's new shade, culminates in great flowers of art nouveau style done in beads so curious as to suggest that the sea had blossomed forth with some of its queer hidden treasures.

A black chiffon, over cloth of gold, is banded by bead embroidery in effect so fine as to seem like a woven fabric, brought out in the beautiful wisteria shades; while the plastron, upon the bodice, which is a feature of all these gowns, is touched here and there with bright green and also with the inevitable gold and silver bullion.

Atlantic blue embroidery forms a part of another gown of net, which shows, below the hobble band of blue embroidery, a broad band of gray Russian squirrel fur.

An adorable white frock, giving the impression of an embodiment of eternal youth, is composed of white chiffon over satin, and trimmed with a radiance of white bugles and dangling ornaments, which give the idea of daisies of solid pearl drooping upon bended stems.

A gray crepe de chine is aglimmer with bugles of steel and has a very odd shaped tunic and bold couching silk embroidery, all in the same tones. This poetic creation, lends the feeling of a charming morning of mist when all the landscape blends into a soft sameness.

Upon one rich dress, flowers of seemingly solid gold flare forth, as though defying possibility of money purchase in such beauty.

And speaking of purchase, while many of these gowns are comparatively modest in price, considering what they are, some run into many hundreds of dollars apiece. Such things will, of course, be worn by the woman who has gowns galore, who wears one only a few times, and cares not how many mere dollars are locked within the possibility of a whim.

But their value exceeds their price, for they will gladden the eyes of many a beholder at the coming great fashion feast, and many of us will be quite as happy in looking as though we were to carry these wonderful creations to our own particular dressing rooms, "to have and to hold."

SEPARATE TUNICS.

Features of the season's importations are the separate tunics which come ready to wear, all save the sewing of one seam at the back.

They are in as elaborate a combination of heavy silken embroideries and beads of all kinds, as are the evening gowns, and run the entire gamut of color and tone.

A novel netted material made from "ribbosene," a narrow, crinkled silk ribbon, netted into shape, forms some of these garments, the ribbosene developing into a yard deep fringe which finishes the lower edge of the tunic. Odd shapes are brought out in these garments, if one may call them garments, so airy and merely pretentious are they. Thin as they are, however, they are the main part of an afternoon gown, and with a clinging slip of satin in a color to bring out the trimming upon the outer encrustation, they become at once affairs of full dress.

ART ACCESSORIES.

Still further accessories to dress are the new boleros of beading and embroidery, many finished in heavy tassels of silk or beads; and the "panel harness," which is just what it sounds like—an affair to pass over the shoulders and which extends down upon the shirt at the front and back, being joined below the hips with bands similar in effect to the harness of horses.

Less pretentious of these harnesses extend only to the waist-line, but all are lavish in decorative appearance.

The same note of luxury appears in the handbags of bead work and embroidery. Other new examples in these "portable pockets" are of velvet, in generous size, with elaborate frames of carved silver, gilt or other metal; while the bag of French tapestry is a high novelty.

The scarf is by no means moribund, but on the contrary has burst forth with renewed magnificence in the mantilla-like "Aviation Scarf," embroidered, beaded, fringed, shaped either at the ends or at the back and front, and making at least a pretense of lending warmth to the fair shoulders.

AND AS TO HATS.

Speaking of "Aviation," the "Aviation Bow" is the latest cry in millinery. It is a great flaring and upright bow made from widest ribbon in all sorts of fabrics, and it is placed at the back of the hat which is often a poke going backward. Just why it is called "Aviation" is not quite explainable, unless because it has the appearance of braving the blowing wind, for it invariably flares backward. In fact many of the hats have the appearance of being worn facing a high wind which has set all the trimming "together way around."

A decided novelty is the Opera Cap. You could not guess what it is, and yet it is logical and decidedly chic. It is a mob cap, made from gold or silver net, edged with gold or silver lace. You don this and then place over it your large hat with its drooping brim, from under which the metallic lace peeps coquetishly. When the hour arrives for "hats off" at the theater or opera, the cap remains upon the head, a dainty and becoming semblance of headgear.

"Anything so its furry!" might be given as a millinery maxim, for the season. Fur cloth, formed into the towering crowns and folded around the huge brims; fur heads, fur tails, fur bands, fur facings, fur put to every possible use, and imitated in all kinds of felt and fabric—this is the word in the winter hattery.

As to styles, it were more easy to say what is not, than what is allowable. The woman who wears the unbecoming, has only herself to blame.

In the United Fashion Show, she may see and compare all extremes of style, in a feast of shape and fabric seldom equalled, and comparing, she may select what suits her best.

AND IN THE UNMADE.

In fabrics, unmade, the variety includes a range as wide as in the colors of nature and the beauty is so great that all tastes will find satisfaction.

Silks, satins and velvets, have it practically their own way, for gowns of afternoon and street wear, but for evening, the fine French Marquisettes, chiffons and nets, many having flowered side bands, or stripes of designs upon the goods, and many toned diaphanous fabrics, are temptingly beautiful.

For the tailor made, heavy silks and satins with backs of wool to give warmth and substance are among the strictly high class novelties.

CONFERENCE POSTPONED.

The committees of the Los Angeles Inter-Urban and Southern Pacific Railway companies which were to have met tomorrow for the purpose of discussing the advisibility of having the castle bridges at San Pedro removed and draw bridges substituted, have postponed their meeting until October 3.

TELEPHONE TODAY. Ring The Times and insert your Sunday "Want Ad." It has been found difficult to regulate the telephoning of classified advertisements for the Sunday Times. Efforts have been made to relieve the Saturday congestion, on account of their becoming so numerous, but it has been impossible to judge the particular period of the day selected by patrons to call up the office. Hence the urgent necessity of advertisers telephoning their announcements early in order to insure accuracy in transcribing and afford a superior service in consequence. They can be telephoned any day in the week, with orders to run on Sunday. The office will be glad to receive them, and will take pains to see that ad directions are carefully complied with.

¶ From the Great, great things are expected. The greater a man becomes—the greater his accomplishments, the greater are his responsibilities—the more he is expected to accomplish. This is a law of human nature and applies to every walk in life—religion, politics and business. Baker's great organization, because of unprecedented past performances in the matter of inimitable style presentations and incomparable values, has taught the people of Southern California to expect great things of it. How magnificently we have responded to their expectations can be realized only by an inspection of our amazing array of combined unrivaled Fall styles and matchless values now on exhibition. This strain runs through our entire stock for men, women and children. Everybody is invited to call.

Just From Paris

We have just unpacked another lot of

Paris Pattern Hats

and will place them on display Monday

In Our French Rooms

These models represent the most advanced Parisian ideas for Fall, and are creations by the following famous artists:

Leontine, Virot, Yvonne, Pouyanne

Such a display will elicit the approval of all fashionable women who enjoy individuality in headwear, as this feature is strongly manifested in these French models.

It is seldom the fashionable women of Los Angeles have an opportunity to view models direct from Paris. These are our own importation, and not New York hats copied from French models.

VILLE DE PARIS

317-325 SO. BROADWAY
312-322 SO. HILL STREET

Los Angeles' United Fashion Show

September 26, 27, 28

THIS unique event will be the simultaneous, Grand Fall opening of all the leading retail stores in the city. The "Ville de Paris" will participate in this interesting and important fashion show. This store will be exceedingly beautiful with its alluring displays of the latest creations of Dame Fashion. Your presence is desired.

Dress Trimmings

And Real Laces

Never before have we shown such a beautiful and extensive assortment of fine dress trimmings and garnitures. A feature of great interest to exacting dressers is our display of the ultra-fashionable

Tunics

They are shown in silver, gold, crystal and jet beaded effects on fish net, or in silk lacet effects in black or colors. Each tunic is finished with a deep fringe of the same material as the body of tunic.

Prices Range From $17.50 up

They are surpassingly beautiful and exclusive ideas, imported by the "Ville."

Hand Run Laces

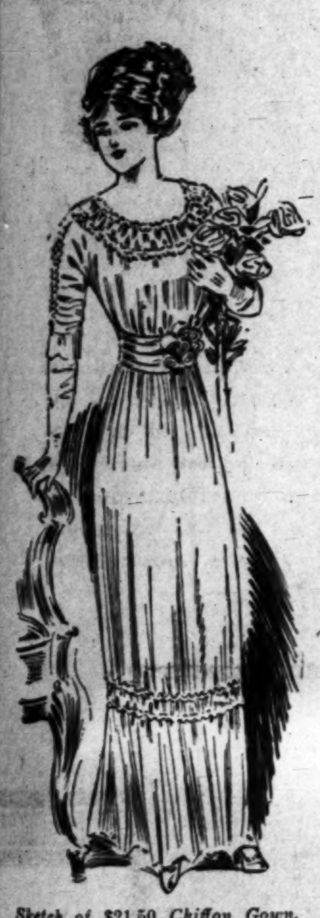
In galloons, flouncings and bands to match. These beautiful laces come in white, cream or black net, with hand run designs in colors. Something new and very desirable for trimming handsome gowns.

Real Laces

We also show a large assortment of real laces in real point, real Duchess, real Cluny, real Princess, real Carrickmacross, real Irish crochet and real Mirecourt.

Chiffon Evening Costumes and Dancing Frocks

$21.50 to $62.50



Sketch of $21.50 Chiffon Gown.

If you are in quest of a beautiful gown for evening wear or a charming dancing frock you will enjoy inspecting our large and comprehensive line of chiffon costumes. Our assortment consists of a great diversity of models and are made in styles that embrace the latest features of fashion. Some of the gowns are made of hand-painted chiffon in floral designs; others of white or colored chiffon over colored habutai silk which produces a pretty two-toned effect. Some have veiled Persian silk, or beaded garnitures for trimmings. The color assortment includes: Pink, ciel, lavender, maize, rose and white. Even the least expensive of these dresses are exceeding attractive.

The various social functions planned for the coming Fall and Winter season will call for a distinct gown for each occasion. It will be easy to select them from our superb collection of gowns, for it embraces not only chiffon, but elegant costumes developed in all the fashionable materials.

Rich Silks

If you are seeking new ideas in silks you will be attracted to our extensive showing, and particularly to the following styles:

44-Inch Satin Moire At $3.75 yard

Moire will be welcomed again, as it is always a general Favorite. This material will be especially desirable this season for making the ultra-fashionable silk tailored suit—which is the latest Parisian mode. Being double width it requires but a small amount to make a suit or dress. We show it in a fine line of street shades

Two Toned Satin Merveilleux 36-In. Wide, $2.25 yard

The vogue for soft satin finished silks is increasing. This silk will quickly win the admiration of smart dressers. Being soft and clinging, it is especially adapted to making the latest styles of dress. The color combinations are unusually rich looking, and include black and blue, black and red, green and blue, rose and green, chantecler and Alice.

Imported Tailor Suitings

Widths from 46 to 54 inches. $2 to $4.50 yard

Nearly every day adds new pieces to our already large assortment of smart suitings. Our stock is very comprehensive and includes all the fashionable weaves and colorings, among which are some entirely new effects. Rough materials are very desirable this season and are shown in a variety of styles. Hard finished worsteds, melange diagonals and colored striped suitings are all very popular. A special feature of the late weaves just landed from Europe is our showing of:

French Novelties

In Black and White Suitings. 47 inches Wide
$2.25 and $2.50 yard

These are our own importation and entirely new effects that will be found only at the "Ville."

INSURANCE WORLD.

The Treasury Department is having prepared regulations relating to foreign and especially Canadian banking and bonding companies that will enable them to bond government employés. The Canadian companies are not regarded with disfavor by the authorities and the new regulations will provide for them in so far as it is believed the act of Congress now on the books permits. The bonding companies have been in the habit of insuring their risks with other concerns, and a considerable part of this business has been placed with foreign concerns. The government is, of course, a party to this reinsurance contract and it has been determined to assent to any such reinsurance agreement as may be made with foreign companies, provided such concerns have received permission from the State government to operate within its territory. This will, it is supposed, give to the foreign companies a chance at about one-[illegible] of the business, as about one-half of the risks are said to be thus reinsured.

The situation in plate glass underwriting continues to grow worse, and with the constantly-increasing price of glass the losses this year will be unusually large. The competition is as sharp as ever, so that premiums practically remain as they were, while the cost of making replacements is about 80 per cent. greater. The committee of three prominent underwriters appointed some months ago by the association to deal with the outside competition continues in existence, but nothing has been heard from it since it was appointed.

William B. Joyce, president of the National Surety Company, has returned from a trip to Europe, undertaken for the specific purpose of establishing branch offices of the National in various European centers. "I find," said Mr. Joyce, "that prejudice is so strong against American insurance companies that I have abandoned the idea for the present. No American insurance company or American surety company can expect to make any degree of success in any European country, owing to the strong feeling that exists there against American companies. In Europe, bankers and financiers whom I met are constantly apprehensive that something is going to happen that will further depress the values of American securities. They are constantly expressing wonderment at the sudden drops in market values of our stocks and some bonds. There isn't a nation on earth that could stand what we have gone through recently. If this country were not the most prosperous and most resourceful on earth, it would now be in a chaotic condition through political interferences."

There has been so much rainy weather in England and on the continent this season that a large proportion of the customary outdoor events of the summer have been given up. The underwriters at Lloyds, with characteristic enterprise, have begun to offer insurance against wet holidays. The Londoner who plans a week-end at Brighton or Bornemouth is offered a guarantee of fair weather for a few shillings. If, despite this guarantee, the rain comes down, spoiling his new flannels, ruining his wife's hat and complexion and burying the holiday in gloom, he collects £2 damages. The higher the premium, the higher the damages. It is a pleasant device for mitigating the horrors of a juicy, joyless day, and, besides, it makes a strong appeal to the eternal gambling spirit of the Briton. A man who has just won the price of a suit of clothes cannot be wholly unhappy.

Lloyds's exchange room is the greatest gambling house in the world. There one may make prudent bets against twins, sporting bets against a war with Germany, patriotic bets upon the King's life. It is said that a great many policies of insurance against twins are issued each year, in amounts ranging from $1000 to $200,000. The young father carries all he can afford, for it is certainly worth a good deal to face that most appalling of shocks. In case the insured does not survive it, in case it drives him insane or kills him out of hand, the money goes to the twins. But with a fat check in his hands he usually manages to survive.

The Royal Insurance Company of Liverpool will organize a casualty insurance company in New York to enter the various States. It will have $500,000 capital and $500,000 paid in surplus. Liability, personal accident, health, plate glass, burglary, boiler and all classes of business permitted by the statute will be included in the chartered privileges of the new institution.

—George H. Swearington of Kansas City, Mo., claims a record by writing a policy for $1,500,000 on the life of George E. Nicholson, head of eight cement companies in Western and Eastern States, with headquarters in Kansas City. The policy is carried by forty-six companies, $250,000, the largest amount assigned to one concern, being underwritten in New York. Mr. Nicholson was examined 108 times, by two physicians on each occasion, and seventy-one physicians were employed to make the physical tests. The premium is a matter of a little more than $60,000. Mr. Swearington said that because Mr. Nicholson practically holds the future cement business in his hands, the directors of the eight companies, of which he is head, found it advisable and necessary to insure his life for $1,500,000. Mr. Nicholson is 49 years of age and is in perfect health.

CARRYING THE WAR INTO AFRICA.

As San Francisco has, rightly or wrongly, the name of being the American city most completely under the heels of the unscrupulous labor trust, the movement to disunionize San Francisco means carrying the war into Africa with a vengeance. The struggle will not only be watched with interest here, but Los Angeles will consider it its duty to give its support in every way possible to the employers so earnestly engaged in following the example set before them by this city.

Trades-unionists, both here and in San Francisco, knowing how strongly entrenched their associations were at one time in the north, will probably shout that the employers are trying to run a bluff on them. They will quickly learn that this is no idle threat. As our San Francisco correspondent shows (in Part VI of this issue,) some of the union-labor leaders have heard the rumblings of the storm which threatens to topple over the edifice they have so laboriously constructed, but whose foundations are of sand. They are even now scurrying to get under cover.

It is recognized by those who are ready to fight for the industrial independence of San Francisco that the battle will be a hard one, but it need not necessarily be long. If the employers of the northern metropolis are true to themselves and their best interests they can, by acting unitedly, compel the change almost at once. An influential contractor, a large employer of labor in and around San Francisco, is quoted as saying he is confident that by the first of January, the disunionized shop will be in operation in all the bay cities; in other words, the New Year will see the unions practically wiped out of existence north of the Tehachepi, as well as south of it.

The good work has already started outside of San Francisco. Disunionized shops are now in successful operation in San Mateo county and in a portion of Santa Clara county. This adds to the general belief among employers that the time is ripe to rescue San Francisco from the clutches of the most tyrannous trust that oppresses the country.

Another factor which gives strength to the employers of the Golden Gate is the collapse of the most recent attempt to unionize Los Angeles. No more determined an attack was ever made on a free city than the one which Los Angeles has withstood. The failure of the labor bosses has amazed them and also showed the people up north what a city determined to be free can do. The employers' associations of San Francisco are known to have taken especial note of the way in which the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association here repulsed the enemy. It is generally conceded that no body of a similar character in the United States has done so much as the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association to keep a city free from the bonds of the labor trust. It has supported The Times through thick and thin and is entitled to unrestrained praise.

In order to show how vastly more favorable labor conditions are in a free city than in one shackled like San Francisco, we have only to compare conditions here and there. Our correspondent remarks on the fact that San Francisco is today filled with mechanics seeking work. In Los Angeles the opposite condition prevails; employers are hunting for men. We showed that in Thursday's Times employers advertised in the columns of "Male Help Wanted" for 116 skilled workmen, 128 unskilled workmen and 51 "soft jobs," making in all 295. Almost as many more were advertised for in the other papers in the city. In today's Times will be found a large number of advertisements of a similar nature. There are more calls for men to work, in our columns today, than in all the San Francisco papers put together.

While enslaved, San Francisco has lost ground to Los Angeles. The people there have been loath to admit the, to them, unpleasant fact, but can no longer close their eyes to the truth. Assessment figures and school census returns have proved it beyond the shadow of a doubt. One of several reasons for this is that non-union men have come here and brought their families because they are aware they will receive fair treatment from employers and be protected from violence. Another cause is that eastern people, looking for trade and other openings in which to invest their savings, have, after surveying the ground in both cities, decided to locate here, knowing that Los Angeles is comparatively free from labor troubles—superlatively free as compared with San Francisco.

It will be a grand thing when the north joins the south and we have an industrially free California. The fact will be blazoned far and wide and will give courage to men fighting the good fight in other cities. When San Francisco comes to its senses Fresno and Bakersfield will undoubtedly get in line. Stockton and Sacramento will follow suit. The agitation will extend across the border into Oregon, and will be hailed with satisfaction in Portland, which is giving signs of becoming a second Los Angeles. Then we may hope to have it carried to Seattle and Tacoma, until the whole of the Pacific Coast is disunionized. This will be a glorious climax to the movement begun in this city.

THE SQUEAKING OF BARNES.

The New York combination of cant, cussedness and complacency, which calls itself the "Republican old guard," and which speaks through one William Barnes, Jr., even as Balaam of old spoke through the mouth of the unillustrious animal which carried him, has issued a proclamation which for injudiciousness, not to say downright folly, excels even the platform adopted by the recent California Republican State Convention.

Mr. Barnes, in this proclamation, designates Col. Roosevelt as a "radical candidate," as a "political maneuverer" who "relies on inciting the mob" and who "cannot stem the tide he has created."

Col. Roosevelt honors Mr. Barnes with a rejoinder. He declares that he is "blessed in having Barnes for an enemy" and is "genuinely grateful to him for having unconsciously made clear the issue between what he is pleased to call Rooseveltism on the one side and on the other side the alliance of the boss with that element of big business which seeks to control politics in connection with business."

The statesman who is misrepresented, maligned and antagonized by the rotten political bosses of Tammany-ridden New York City, by little Tim Woodruff and by Barnes, is far above them, not only in patriotism, in knowledge and in ability, but in political wisdom and sagacious leadership.

Roosevelt is not only a broad-minded statesman of international as well as national renown, but he is a shrewd partisan leader. He is a student of men as well as of history, ancient and modern. He is guided by events and pays but little heed to mere maxims, or the makers of maxims. He is an accurate and conscious analyst and a fearless yet conservative progressionist. The Republican party, either locally or nationally, has never been defeated under his leadership. His integrity and truthfulness are not exotics which wither beneath the blasts of temptation. They are inherent, and no man ever truthfully charged him with a broken promise or a deed of disloyalty.

The action of the so-called regular Republican committee in New York, in making unjust, unprovoked and unnecessary war upon Roosevelt, was not only an outrageous exercise of the power which was accidentally in their possession, but it was, from a mere partisan standpoint, an act of consummate folly.

Col. Roosevelt, while occupying the Presidential office, inaugurated certain measures of reform which have been broadly designated as the Roosevelt policies. They did not include the doctrines of the initiative, the referendum and the recall, and no one is able to say from Roosevelt's public utterances, that he favors these populistic fads. The Roosevelt policies embraced a wise and not a Pinchotic conservation of national resources; they included active and relentless hostility against all forms of graft; they advocated control of interstate railroads and strict supervision of corporations. They did not include war upon capital, but they did oppose any infraction of the law, whether by predatory wealth, or by predatory poverty.

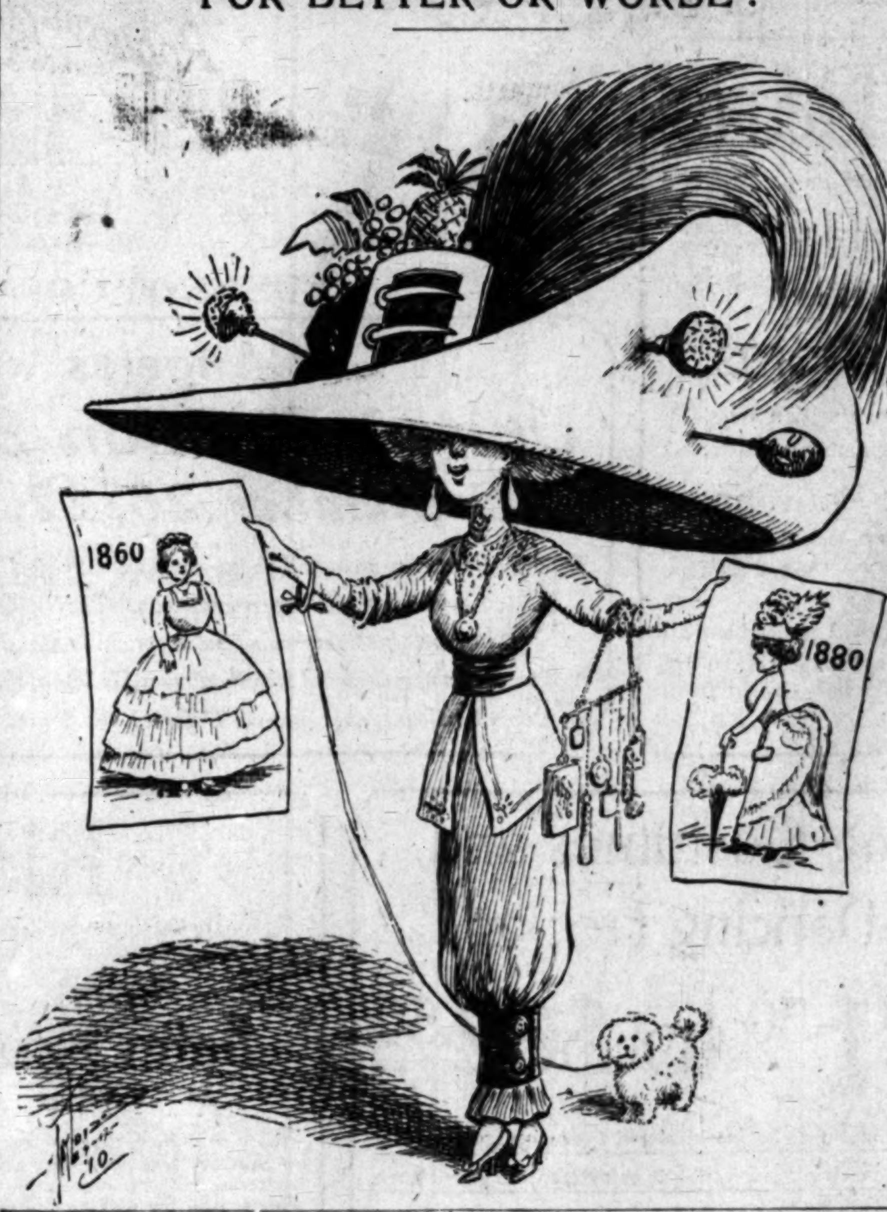
Col. Roosevelt, on his return from Europe, was accorded a welcome such as no monarch ever received abroad—a welcome such as no idolized party leader ever received in America. He speedily gave evidence of his intention not to retire upon his honor, as ex-Presidents heretofore have done, but to actively participate, as is his right and duty, in the deliberations of the Republican party which had made him Governor, Vice-President, and President, and with which he has been identified since early manhood. He proposed to attend the New York State Republican Convention as a delegate, and, if agreeable to the convention, to act as its temporary chairman, in which capacity he would address it upon the principles of the Republican party and the duty of the Republicans.

Then followed the unwarranted, the foolish, the inconceivably asinine action of the Republican State Central Committee, led by little strutting Tim Woodruff, and voiced by the hitherto unknown Barnes, declaring that Col. Roosevelt should not be temporary chairman of the convention, and should not be suffered to express his views before it.

What a pity that Tom Platt has journeyed on! He did not love Roosevelt a little bit, but he would have turned the fool-killer loose among the members of the Republican State Central Committee, and not one of them would have been left politically alive.

In these days when "times change and men change with them" is is dangerous to prophesy, "onless you know," as Josh Billings said, but it will astound the country if the delegates to the coming Republican convention from New York, north of the Harlem River, do not rally en masse to the support of the true and tried Republican leader, Theodore Roosevelt, one blast upon whose bugle horn is worth a thousand little tin trumpet bugle horn is worth a thousand little tin trumpet squeaks of Barnes.

FOR BETTER OR WORSE?



THE FASHION SHOW.

When the men wore ruffles and the women ruffs, fashion shows were held out of doors. At Vauxhall and Versailles the fops and the foppesses gathered, the former in the hope that some one would say, "Gad, sir, a fine-turned leg," the latter to flutter in silken sheen and see if the woman from the next square had her crimson stomacher on straight. Clothes are only of man's life a part and it is untrue to say they're woman's whole existence. At the same time women still continue to have more than what is akin to platonic love for frills and furbelows, while man is willing to force an interest in wonderful, mysterious and sweet-scented garments, if, by so doing, he can retain the favor of his lady.

The charming weakness of womankind in the fondness for clothes is, of course, an advantage to the expert and up-to-date storekeepers. Their policy is to aim to please the women; by so doing they know they can find the way to the pocketbooks of the men. Managers of large stores have been known to spend sleepless nights scheming how to attract the fair sex to their establishments. Their advertisements in the principal newspapers and the displays within the windows of the stores abutting on the leading streets, have borne mute yet eloquent testimony to the fact that paying ideas came to them while they suffered from insomnia.

We have had in Los Angeles some telling examples of the way to lure women to stores, but it is not too much to expect that the United Fashion Show, which has been decided upon for the 26th inst., and two following days, will prove more irresistible than anything designed to appeal to women shoppers which has preceded it. Broadway will be one vision of delight on the three days mentioned, while Spring street will have certain sections that will glitter with a rich and rare display of gems.

The very nobbiest, the most astounding creations of these artists in cloth, feathers and artificial flowers, will be shown in Los Angeles during the United Fashion Show. And why is it called united? Because all the principal storekeepers, like the sensible men they are, have decided to hold their fall opening "all in a lump," as you might say. Hitherto it has been the fashion for one firm to have its opening one day, another store might or might not show its very latest and newest the next day, while a third emporium would come along at the end of the week, trying to outshine all the rest. Thus the fall openings, important commercial events, were conducted in an "anyhow" way.

This year, happy to say, we are to have a united fall opening, a real fashion show. By this means there will be no waiting one on the other to see what the other fellow's got and there will be a marvelous general display along the principal business streets devoted to the large stores. The idea is a most commendable one; and as letters from Times' correspondents showed yesterday, it has caught on not only in the city, but all over the Southland.

STILL ON TOP.

Cannon is renominated. Without a doubt this is the greatest victory the hard-fighting, witty Speaker has achieved. There was a dead-set against him. He was berated all over the country. The people of the Eighteenth District of Illinois were appealed to to defeat that "awful man Cannon." They showed their good sense by refusing to listen to the tumult and the clamor. They gave their votes to a man they have known as a true Republican throughout the thirty-eight years that have passed since he first entered Congress.

There will be, in fact, there is already, gnashing of teeth in the insurgent Republican ranks because the Speaker has not been defeated. His opponents sought very carefully to get a candidate who they imagined could beat "the old man" and they chose one from his own city of Danville. But Mr. Cannon was too big to be displaced in favor of one whose sole claim to distinction is that he knows how to insurge. The Speaker was given a majority of close to 6000, which is enough to satisfy even an inordinately ambitious politician.

DEMOCRACY AU NATUREL.

There is a loud call among the Democrats hereabouts for Mary J. Brunson of Mississippi. Mary is a little lamb with lace bodice as white as snow and skirts as short as short can be. She is an oratress who outstrips them all. The ardent Mississippians saw a good deal of her during the late campaign. Would-be Congressman Tally made a strictly moral campaign for the Democratic Congressional nomination from the Sixth Mississippi District. He was accompanied on his stumping tour by three Methodist preachers, five Sunday-school superintendents, and a moving-picture show, illustrating the progress of the Prodigal Son from raw hogs to roast veal, with a songster, accompanied by a bass violinist, singing "Johnny Comes Marching Home." The meetings were opened with prayer.

But all in vain, his opponent, "Pat" Harrison, secured the services of Mary J. Brunson, and Mary, with open-work hosiery extending from her ankles upward to—well above her knees, and a shirt waist —worn below the forty-fifth degree of north latitude, paraded her Democratic elegy, and spoke her piece to the unterrified Democrats of Mississippi, and Mary's candidate won, hands down, by a majority of 1239.

Thereupon, one of the wise candidates in the adjoining Seventh Congressional District, Mr. W. A. Dickson—a gentleman with a plethoric bank account and a tumultuous ambition to save his country in the House of Representatives, engaged Mary for a fee of $5000 to make a six days' canvass for him against Thomas Shelton. The primary will be held September 21, and it is confidently expected that Thomas will be left at the post. Mary, it may be remarked, does not wear hobble skirts.

Will not the Democratic Central Committee in California exhibit their enterprise and sagacity by engaging the services of Mary for the coming campaign here? Let them circulate a subscription paper to provide Mary with a generous honorarium, and let us have the dreariness of Democratic meetings here enlivened by terpsichorean divertisements, with Mary in bathing costume dancing the dance that Dana danced before the Lord, and Marshall Stimson appearing for this occasion only and by particular request, in the character of the Lord.

As there is no building in Los Angeles large enough to hold the crowd that would attend, we suggest Sycamore Park or Ocean Park beach as a suitable place for the meeting.

As chairman of the meeting we suggest Tommy Woolwine, scantily, yet picturesquely attired in a Mother Hubbard tunic, with Ella Wheeler Wilcox engaged to give, as a number in the programme, a detailed account of her experiences in a previous state of existence at the Court of Louis the Fourteenth.

Let the Democrats of Los Angeles emulate the example set by their brethren in Mississippi. Let them demand of their committee to supply them with the latest feature of true Democratic assemblages. In their name, we loudly call for Mary.

DOOMED TO FAIL AGAIN.

Not satisfied with previous setbacks, breeders from San Francisco have again app the street car men of this city with a view up the local trolley system. They use the argument that they want to improve the under which the men labor, but the street know this to be a false plea and are perfect that the union men from the north desire catspaws of them.

The history of recent years has shown the car strikes in the United States are almost ably accompanied by bloodshed and lawbre a grievous character. Not infrequently th has been called out and much expense borne city where the trouble occurred.

Happily, there is no danger of anything kind here in Los Angeles, for there will be Time and time again union bosses have tried the shackles on the street railway workers city, but on each occasion they were rebuked street car men of this city are better off they belonged to a union. They do not have tribute to an organization whose officers a percentage of the wages of their less compatriots, the men in other cities who a the thumb of the labor grafters.

Moreover, there is no earthly reason for union or a strike here. The men are better than in any city where a union exists and paid as good, if not better wages, than employed men in any union city in the land skulkers from San Francisco will quickly that they will have no greater success th who failed before them.

t as a charmer I can't see her all. Being in the business of meet- people, I can count on the fingers two hands all the women of real rm I have met.

very one realizes by this time that this bunk about the raving beauty the American girl is a little idea t originated with the American It's a tribute to her ingenuity shrewdness.

I were in a foreign country, and e asked to describe the American I should say she is very smart rather plain.

have only to refer you to any beach where you see the "girl" n her beauty unassisted. I sat on beach at Redondo Beach one day week and counted twenty-five dsome young men; but there n't but one even passably good- ing girl.

haven't a doubt in the world, how- , that the one girl could outgen- and outmanage and outmaneuver twenty-five god-like young male gs in any kind of game of war or e.

The opinions of people with ing better to do than to criti- girls' bathing suits don't matter.

It depends very largely upon the girl. Little Miss Eleanor Sears, the Boston heiress, used to go in swimming at Coronado in a man's bathing suit, but nothing could have been more innocent or charming than the boyish abandon with which she did as she pleased. Miss Sears was a lot less suggestive in her polo riding breeches than most women are in skirts.

The Great Mr. Hearst.

I am anxiously waiting to hear that Mr. Hearst shot the bull at the Mexican picnic. I am only surprised that he has withheld the tidings so long; the modesty of that man must be a dreadful handicap to him.

I knew, of course, from the Examiner, that Mr. Hearst was the real builder of the Panama Canal; that he started the insurgent movement; convicted the Beef Trust, and stopped the San Francisco earthquake; but I confess to being a little staggered at reading an editorial the other morning announcing that the Los Angeles Examiner had brought about the Democratic victory in Maine!

What a busy man Mr. Hearst must be!

The Statistical Person.

From the male person with statistics good Lord deliver us!

Never do I start a heart-rending story about the dying out of the Indians that some man with a fat neck does not bob up with a government report showing that there are 19,000 more Indians than when Columbus discovered America.

My best stories about the emigrant poor are always knocked breathless in the middle by somebody with a consular report.

Whenever I see a man with a red neck talking at a café table to a group who look like chickens in a rainstorm, I know that he has just spoiled everything by leveling statistics at their heads.

I don't know why men with statistics always have fat necks; but the fact is they do.

"Him."

Oh, what a blessing is matrimony! I see women spending the afternoon getting ready for "him" to come home for dinner. They put in all their rats and squint sidewise into the mirror to see the powder hit the right spot; they study menu like a chef and broil over cookstoves and weep with disappointment when "his" dinner fails.

They tell with a voice of finality that "he" says so and so, and that he likes so and so, and he intends to do thus and so. She gets you so excited that you wait with trembling eagerness to meet this god. At last "he" comes home, and you see that the great "Him" is a wretched little, obscure, unnecessary, inefficient person who works at the other end of your own counter, but whom you had forgotten.

Oh, kind Heaven, keep our wives from finding us out!

"Let Not Man Put Asunder."

in the stately service of the r book, reads, and from the lips e hearts of the man and woman e altar speaks one of the solemn- nd most binding vows with which an lives can bind themselves. God All-Seeing is called to be a wit- to the truth, given "in the face of company" of human eyewitnesses. mnly, earnestly, openly, the man woman promise to live together God's holy ordinance, in the holy of matrimony, "so long as they shall live." No oath in the courts en can be so binding. For there witness is sworn to tell the truth e case now before him. After t adjourns he is at liberty to go nd lie as fast as he talks, if he minded. A soldier's oath of al- nce is for three or five years, "or g the war," it used to run. After rm of enlistment has expired, he to become "a Roosian, a French- r a Prussian, or an Eye-tal-i-an," please him.

t the vow at the matrimonial al- pledges man and woman "to have o hold" each other, "forsaking all s," mutually to love, comfort and "till death us do part."

the proportion of divorces to mar- s in the United States is some- fearful. In Los Angeles county s reached one divorce case to ev- our marriages, and about one di- in every five marriages. More one-half the divorces in Cali- are granted on the ground of tion or failure to provide. Nearly fourths of the cases are brought e wife. In about 90 per cent. of cases there is no appearance in by the defendant. If either wife usband wants a divorce, it is easy a decree, affirming that "what hath joined together," any old di- court can put asunder without rying.

at is the good of an oath, then? is a contract worth, anyhow? much respect has a man for his e, or a woman for her plighted a man will deliberately perjure "in the sight of God, and in of these witnesses," how can t men to esteem his word any highly than he holds it himself? John Howard Payne said of the which he found to be the only y in the consulate at Algiers, might be said of the records of divorce courts, they are greasy soul-perjuries. And there seems no human law which can send a to the penitentiary for the crime rswearing his own honor. If, as ness in court he should swear y in a moonshine whisky case, matter of a beer saloon license, mething like that, something of importance, affecting the peace dignity of the sovereign State of rnia, he may be severely pun- for his perjury.

when he lies to his own soul; he calls the Almighty to witness oath, he may trample on his vow, fling his broken word into the of Infinite Truth with a laugh of nce. Nobody can punish him but and he isn't afraid of Him. Not n the sanctity of the marriage lies wholly in the faithful hearts "this man" and "this woman." t's what makes the troth-plight a twister, holier, more sacred than other human pledge. For there is punishment held in reserve for violation of a vow that binds a inate even to a religious order. But is no penal clause attached to the iage vow. Nothing so human or eak as a threat of punishment in of its violation. It is a vow of oul. The plight-troth of the He who violates it, lays the upon himself, or, if he be too se that, or too coarse to feel unscathed in his perjury, happy as the beast that has escaped the goad.

But it is a cheerful truth that the majority of men and women in the United States are truthful and honorable. In every four marriages in our own county, three hold faithful and true. In a county or State election a majority of three to one would send every triumphant flag to the masthead, and the shouts of the victors to the skies. And it should be a cause of congratulation that three-fourths of our marriages bind together in the silken bonds of love and the steel hoops of fidelity the true hearts of faithful men and loyal women. We will keep on hoping for the good time coming when all men and women will hold the marriage vow as binding in honor as a promissory note for $17.23.

The majority—the large majority of matrimonial unions are "happy marriages." The appalling proportions of the divorce evil are not underestimated, but it must always be remembered they are in the minority, and like all minorities, make more noise than the greater multitude.

A man living in a happy home, with the wife of his choice beside him; the children playing about them; the home a daily refuge from weariness and care, does not ascend to the house top evening by evening and chant his happiness to the neighborhood. He just lives it, and everybody on the block knows they are a happy family.

But the man whose home is a bedlam, takes not only the neighborhood but the community into his confidence. He rushes into the scandal and publicity of a divorce court. His picture and the portrait of his wife appear in the papers. When they fight over the possession of the children, the pictures of the unhappy innocents also illustrate the story of the day. If the case is one of peculiarly salacious interest, the courtroom is crowded with the degenerates whose pastime, and principal occupation, it is to attend divorce trials. It sounds as though everybody in California was getting a divorce. And when the list of co-respondents on both sides is printed, it seems that the "apparent" might to be the real fact. But in truth it is only one marriage that is being dissolved. And when it appears a little later that both parties have been engaged to waiting fiances, we know that it is a union that should never have been solemnized. The solemn injunction of the officiating clergyman for the confession of any impediment to the marriage had been unheeded. Men and women do not go wrong so suddenly as all that.

One remedy for the divorce evil is the more thoughtful, conscientious marriage. Legislation can make it more difficult for dissatisfied parties to obtain divorces. But it can't make the man faithful nor the woman loyal. All true "reforms" are individual. The simultaneous conversion of one hundred people at a revival is questioned by the thoughtful. And that of three thousand would provoke emphatic incredulity. Pentecost happened once, really and truly. It will never happen again, unless God exhausts His originality and has no new thing left for humanity. And He has never repeated Himself yet. So legislation that regulates the outward conduct of a whole State, may not touch the life of the individual at all. "Marriage is commended by St. Paul to be honorable among all men." And if the contracting parties would only pay more thoughtful and reverent attention to the next clause in the service, "and therefore is not by any to be entered into unadvisedly or lightly; but reverently, discreetly, advisedly and in the fear of God," the divorce scandal would largely be remedied without the aid of legislation.

But with certain types of justices of the peace and ministers haunting the Courthouse, lying in ambush for the applicants who come for marriage licenses, employing "runners" to drum up their trade, making marriage something like a trip on a "pay-as-you-enter" car, marrying divorcees, minors, runaways, as though the issuing of a license by the County Clerk was mandatory upon the nearest preacher or justice to marry the parties just licensed—which it is not at all—small wonder that in every four or five marriages the mismated strangers, husband and wife grow a-weary of each other, as they become acquainted, and seek relief from the rankling shackles of matrimony at the hands of the divorce court.

There are six grounds for divorce in California. There is said to be but one scriptural cause for divorce. Strictly speaking there is none. For the scriptural cause is given as adultery. Under the Mosaic law the punishment for adultery was death. And the death of the adulterer set the innocent wife or husband free.

No Water in Its Stock Nor Gamble in Its Shares

SIX BILLION BARRELS of petroleum in proven oil areas in California are yet awaiting extraction, according to estimates of the U. S. Government that assigns a life of 120 years to the field. But 3 barrels out of every 60 available, or 5 per cent., has been produced, leaving 95 per cent. yet in the ground.

This 5 per cent., or 300,000,000 barrels produced in 39 years brought $220,000,000 at the wells, of which amount 27.5 per cent., or in round numbers, $50,00,000 has been paid in dividends. At present prices at the well SIX BILLION barrels of oil is worth THREE BILLION dollars, and with the past as a measure this means seven hundred and twenty-five million dollars available in the 120 years of oil field life, as dividends for investors.

THE ATLANTA OIL COMPANY has its share of this, its ground being proven oil land. It has an honest directorate and management that paid cash for their stock. Every share of the capitalization not sold for cash is in the treasury. We consider it a safe investment that will early yield large returns. IN THE PUBLIC SERVICE.

SUMMARY OF THE DAY.

The Mayor will go slow with his consolidation plans until a perfect organization has been formed.

Judge Rives yesterday approved the employment of five attorneys to represent Beatrice Anita Turnbull, known as Beatrice Anita Baldwin, in her litigation to establish her rights as a daughter of "Lucky" Baldwin. Compensation will be fixed by the courts.

Fanny Briggs Carr King yesterday brought a sensational action for divorce against Morris A. King, alleging extreme cruelty.

A criminal trial jury was drawn in Judge Davis's court yesterday, for service beginning April 3.

H. Smith, the union laborite convicted of picketing by a jury in Police Judge Chambers's court Friday, was given a straight jail sentence of thirty days yesterday.

Vorrath and Nau, the young men charged with the robbery of the Scaapiro store on North Main street, were brought into the Police Court yesterday for their preliminary examination. After a half-day of testimony, the hearing was continued to Monday.

S. R. Stone, charged with stealing a half-dozen picture post cards, was sent to jail for sixty days yesterday; it was shown that he is a chronic petty thief.

AT THE CITY HALL.

CLEAR WAY FOR CITY MERGER.

MAYOR WILL GO SLOW WITH CONSOLIDATION PLANS.

Has Assurance of Support by Colleagues in Officialdom and Many Offers of Assistance from Surrounding Municipalities, But Wants to Avoid Dangers.

Careful preliminary work will be done before the Mayor issues his call for a conference to further consolidation of city and county government. He said yesterday that his advisers have reached the conclusion that the desired end cannot be reached without a thorough organization of the progressive elements. This is because of the opposition of numerous office holders who fear that consolidation will mean the elimination of many political hopes.

For this reason the Mayor will move cautiously in his initiative and it may be several weeks before his plan of organization is developed. This is regarded as wise by many, particularly the members of the city administration, who fear that any precipitate action might reduce consolidation to a campaign activity that would retard rather than advance the effort.

It is regarded as purely a question of civic economy and without any relation to the present campaign issues and therefore should not be mixed with them.

The Mayor is already receiving many assurances from officials and large taxpayers in out-of-town municipalities commending him for his initiative movement. Among them was a letter from A. R. Fraser of Ocean Park, one of the heaviest taxpayers of the beach city, offering his services, "as far as they may be needed," to bring about a successful organization.

"Mr. Fraser is just the kind of a man I want to help," said the Mayor. "He is public-spirited and believes in the future of a broader and greater Los Angeles."

Seven members of the City Council have assured the Mayor of their hearty support of the consolidation plan and the Pasadena Civic Association, which is said to represent 3000 voters of the Crown City, has also offered coöperation. Pasadena has a water problem and the Civic Association believes it may be best solved by consolidation and sharing the Owens River supply.

But independent of the great advantages to be gained by the water, power and harbor projects of the larger city, the surrounding municipalities will gain a single tax rate and a single set of administrative officers. In other populous counties where there is partial or whole consolidation taxpayers find the arrangements cheap and convenient. In some cities that County Treasurer, Auditor and Assessor are, ex-officio, the same officers for the city and school department. Taxpayers appreciate such an arrangement especially when they can go to one office once a year and settle all their bills for all public purposes.

There is no definite plan proposed. None active in preparing for the consolidation campaign will be committed to any one plan, but each is certain that the principle of "home rule" as preserved under the borough system must be included. Each municipality will have control of its domestic affairs just as it has now, but, in the affairs that affect all municipalities and rural districts alike, the general government will have control. How to make such a new system definite and efficient is to be the work of the conferees and a result is not expected for months. It is hoped to complete the plans in time for ratification by the Assembly next year. As there are nearly six months in which to thrash out the details the Mayor believes a prudential delay of a few weeks in arranging preliminaries will be a real benefit.

PIEDMONT PARK.

MEETING TO DISCUSS IT.

To promote the scheme for acquiring Piedmont Park under the district assessment plan a meeting will be held by the Highland Park Protective League and the Garvanza Improvement Association at Woods Hall on Pasadena avenue, near Avenue 57, tomorrow night. Rev. Dana W. Bartlett and Guy W. Eddie will be the speakers and all property owners are invited to attend.

The improvement is the first started under the park district assessment law and the announcement of the two associations calling the meeting states:

"The proposed park is to extend on either side of the Santa Fé Railroad from Avenue 58 to Avenue 61, then take in the county property, block "J," and all the land on the south side of Piedmont avenue from Avenue 61 to Pasadena avenue; all the land back of the Hotel Villa, for a sunken garden; and the large curve along the Salt Lake track for a beautiful plaza. Such a park, with walkways, playground, terraces, fountains, shrubbery, trees and flowers—together with the other big improvements planned for this part of the city—the Arroyo bridge, Pasadena avenue boulevard, good roads, will advance the interest of Highland Park and Garvanza over ten years, and make it one of the most delightful and beautiful residential districts in the city.

"The estimated cost for acquiring this land for park purposes, at the highest possible prices, will range from $25 to $40, for a fifty-foot lot adjacent to the park; to $5, for a fifty-foot lot at the extreme limit of the assessed district, and will add thousands of dollars to the valuation of property in all the territory.

"This is the first effort under the new State law to condemn city property for park purposes, and improvement to every part of Garvanza and Highland Park is so great that no effort should be spared in working for its success; besides, the elimination of the unsightly surroundings along the Santa Fé, which so unfavorably impresses the tourist and visitor to the Angel City."

BILLBOARD BOOST.

COUNTRY WIDE PUBLICITY.

A chance to boost Los Angeles by a campaign of publicity on billboards was offered Mayor Alexander yesterday by Thomas H. B. Varney. Considering the attitude of the present administration toward billboards the offer was received rather dubiously.

Varney proposes that 5000 stands, ten feet by twenty, be spread throughout the United States at an expense of about $25,000 and he advises the Mayor that "we are so thoroughly prepared" that the contract for the whole scheme can be executed right here in Los Angeles.

Varney calls attention to the similar contracts of the well-known advertisers, many of them on a larger and more expensive scale and says that it pays.

When the six-foot high billboard ordinance was passed by the present Good Government Council it was made inoperative until October 1, 1911, in order that the rest of the world would be able to cut its bill stands down to the Los Angeles basis. It is felt that if the city made a contract for ten-foot stands it would be nullifying its work in "reform."

The Mayor has not answered the communication.

Bridge Street Lost?

A portion of Bridge street, south and west of Brooklyn avenue has become unattached, officially, to any particular street by reason of the construction of the Macy-street bridge over the Arroyo de la Esposas and the changing of Brooklyn avenue. Property owners near by have asked the Council to attach the lost part of old Bridge street to Aliso street, of which it forms a continuation, and call it Aliso street.

Want Electric Signs.

A petition signed by A. F. Rosenheim and thirty leading architects of the city has been filed with the Council asking the amendment of the building ordinance so that "open work" electric signs, thirty feet in height may be put on buildings, with at least six feet clearance under them for the convenience of firemen. It is declared that such an arrangement will eliminate any fire menace.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

LAWYERS SEEK BALDWIN COIN.

TO HANDLE CLAIMANT'S CASE ON CONTINGENT FEE.

Contract Provides Attorneys Shall Get Half of All Money Received, But Court Declines to Sanction Such Arrangement—Costs Will Be Provided for by Counselors

A quinette of attorneys agreed in open court yesterday to finance the claim of Beatrice Anita Baldwin, better known as Beatrice Anita Turnbull, late of Boston, in her fight to secure recognition as a daughter of the late E. J. ("Lucky") Baldwin.

The attorneys are Walter B. Grant of Boston, Walter L. McCorkle of New York, Hutton & Williams and Isidore B. Dockweiler of this city. Under the proposed arrangement these attorneys are to pay all of the costs arising out of the litigation, but neither Leo J. Maguire, guardian of Miss Turnbull, nor the young claimant herself are to be vested with authority to incur any costs.

The agreement, signed by the attorneys named, Miss Turnbull, and her mother, Lillian Ashton Turnbull, was presented to Judge Rives yesterday, and the court was asked to approve the employment of these gentlemen in all litigation in probtae or equity. This was done, but one of the important features of the contract was not approved. The contract provided that these attorneys were to have one-half of all money received from the Baldwin estate, either as the result of litigation or compromise. This was changed by the judge so that the matter of the compensation will be left to the future action of the court.

The petition recited the appointment of Leo J. Maguire as guardian of Miss Turnbull, together with the allegation that the latter is the lawful daughter of Elias Jackson Baldwin, and as such entiled to her share in his estate. It is further declared that the claim of the petitioner has been rejected by the executor of the Baldwin estate, and it is necessary to resort to the law to secure what she considers her rights.

It is understood that the claims of Miss Turnbull will soon be officially presented to the court. So far, nothing has been done beyond the appointment of Leo J. Maguire as guardian.

The allegation of Miss Turnbull is not seriously considered by either H. A. Unruh, executor of the Baldwin estate, or Bradner W. Lee, attorney for the executor. Unruh says the question of the relationship of Baldwin and Miss Turnbull was determined long since.

WILL PROBATED.

FRIENDS ARE REMEMBERED.

The will of Ida E. Warfield, disposing of property valued at $10,000, was filed in the Probate Court yesterday. Miss E. A. Warner and Mrs. Hite Wickizer of Santa Monica are remembered with bequests of $100 each. Katie Jones, Clifton Springs, N. Y.; Mrs. Addie Pessell, Los Angeles; Miss Frances A. Fisk, Newark, N. J.; Mrs. Ella V. Augur and Edward Augur, Los Angeles, and Eugene E. Warfield, Shortsville, N. Y., are given 1000 shares each of the Ria Antigua Mining Company.

The interest of the testator in property located in Merced county is willed to Eugene E. Warfield, who is also given the Third-street property in Santa Monica. To Edward Augur is willed the Navy-street property in Ocean Park.

Rev. James H. Lash of Pasadena is bequeathed $4300 to be devoted to benevolent objects. The balance of the estate goes to Mrs. Ella V. Augur.

CRIMINAL COURT JURY

VENIRE FOR TERM IS DRAWN.

The following trial jury for the term was drawn in Judge Davis's court yesterday, the venire being returnable, Monday, October 3.

Eberle, John Bartlett, Downey; Warren Story, Glendale; Cornelius Jansen, Highland Park; William Sexley, Perry; James A. Teal, Long Beach; G. H. Prince, Lankershim; A. A. White, Rivera.

Miss Beatrice Anita Turnbull, or Beatrice Anita Baldwin, alleged daughter of "Lucky" Baldwin, and claimant for her share of his millions.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

WORKED IN THE MINE. An action was brought in the Superior Court yesterday by G. B. Ingles against Charles Ashton and Sam Clark, to recover $5281.65, alleged to be due for work performed in the Alameda Mine, near Ajo, Ariz., between October, 1908, and August, 1909.

INCORPORATIONS. Articles of incorporation were filed yesterday by the Condley-Crane Building Company, captail stock, $60,000, incorporators, Darrell Condley, Harvey Crane, J. P. Fleming, J. L. Fleming and M. J. Spencer, subscribed, $20,300; The Inglewood Club, incorporators, W. H. Kelso, Charles H. Eager, H. A. Putman, Albert O. Wright, H. H. Zillgilt, John Aerick and T. H. Bloodgood; The Sidney Heald Oil Company, capital stock, $3,000,000, incorporators, Thomas E. Gibbon, H. Edwin Moore, G. G. Gillette and Frank P. Peard.

PLEADS GUILTY. In Judge Davis's court, Ramon Wiley, charged with burglary, pleaded guilty to the information. He will be before the court for sentence Friday morning.

DAMAGE ACTION AGAINST THE CITY. The City of Los Angeles was made defendant in a suit begun by Harry C. Banbury and Hazel Dell Banbury, yesterday, in which the plaintiffs ask for a judgment of $500. It is alleged that the Banburys are owners of a lot at the corner of Mezler Drive and Downey avenue, and that the city has wrongfully entered upon the intersection of the two thoroughfares, rendering the Metzler Drive useless, and preventing the plaintiffs from entering and leaving their property. A bill for $500 for the alleged damage was presented to the City Council, but in September, 1909, the bill was rejected by that body.

THE INFERIOR COURTS.

PICKET GOES BEHIND BARS.

STRAIGHT JAIL SENTENCE IS SMITH'S PORTION.

Union Laborite Forced to Admit He Wilfully Violated the Law. Notice of Appeal Is Considered a Bluff—Vorrath and Nau Up for Preliminary Examination.

Thirty days in jail, straight, was the sentence meted out by Police Judge Chambers yesterday to H. Smith, convicted of picketing, by a jury in the Police Court Friday. Snyder, the San Francisco lawyer, who came to Los Angeles to show how to defend the laborite cases, filed notice of appeal, but Smith did not benefit much from this formality and soon began serving his time.

The defense had been made a farce by Deputy City Prosecutor Reeve and Attorney L. W. Jutten, associate counsel for the prosecution, who compelled Smith, on cross-examination, to tell the jury that he had gone to the works for the express purpose of picketing and that he had done this on his own responsibility.

The notice of appeal in Smith's case may be considered a bluff. Similar notices have been filed in other cases in which convictions were secured, but the appeals were abandoned with a simple sending up of the records in each case, and the sentences of Police Judge Williams, $50 or fifty days, remained unchanged.

ROBBERY IS REHEARSED.

CLERK TELLS OF GAGGING.

Peter Vorrath and Harry J. Nau, the young men charged with robbing the store of A. I. Schapiro, at No. 404 North Main street, August 3, were brought before Police Judge Chambers for their preliminary examination yesterday morning. So long drawn out was the testimony, and there were so many articles to be identified, that it was impossible to conclude the proceedings by noon and the hearing was continued to Monday morning.

K. I. Perelson, the aged clerk, who was bound and gagged in the store as a preliminary to the robbery, was the only witness heard—during the day. He positively identified both Nau and Vorrath and told how they had entered the store with the pretense that Vorrath wished to purchase a suit of clothes for Nau.

When they got behind a goods case, he said, they both caught him by the neck from behind and dragged him to the extreme rear of the store, where Nau beat him into unconsciousness, when he fought against the insertion of a gag in his mouth. The gag, a short piece of three-cornered moulding, with two cords tied to it, was introduced as evidence and identified by the witness.

Perelson also identified the watch and chain stolen from him and said he was also robbed of $65. The rest of the forenoon was taken up with the identification of a cash box and other property found in the river bed, and a suit case and quantity of jewelry carried by Nau when he was arrested in Chicago. Perelson said that when he recovered consciousness, he found he had been covered over with an oilcloth taken from the stock.

Vorrath and Nau studiously avoided looking at each other in court, the former only answering his attorney, George Pearson, in mono-syllables. The officers say, however, that, with all this studied ignorance of each other, the prisoners have made several attempts to exchange notes in the jail, or to talk with each other. The goods they are charged with having carried out of the Schapiro place were valued at $2500.

Vorrath is given a bad name by the police, who say that he served a term in an Illinois reformatory for horse stealing, following a conviction at Kankakee.

The "California's" New Home OPENS MONDAY·

¶ The California Furniture Company announces its removal to its new home at 644-646 Broadway, which is directly across the street from its past familiar location.

¶ The new store represents much thought, care and experience in the planning of every detail, and all that is best in modern architecture.

¶ It was built exclusively for the California Furniture Company and in the comforts and conveniences it affords patrons, and in its perfect adaptability to the requirements of a high class home furnishing institution—it stands second to none in this country.

¶ That all the public may become acquainted with our new store—

We Will Hold "Open House" All This Week

¶ We invite every home lover in Los Angeles to come. While those who desire to make purchases may do so—there will be absolutely no insistence to buy—and as is always the custom at the "California," visitors will receive every courtesy and attention—even though they have no intention or idea of buying.

¶ Every department of the entire establishment will be replete with the newest and most unusual home furnishing merchandise gatherable in America.

¶ Our buyers have all recently visited the most important Eastern markets—and have selected only such distinctive home furnishing needs as will meet the approval and requirements of a most discriminating public.

¶ Again we invite the whole city to come.

yesterday that all he had ne was to shake hands with some-dy. Detective McCann, however, the court that the somebody was tty Andres Romero of No. 1213 Fe avenue, 16 years old; that Villalpondro had "shaken hands" by ghly grabbing the girl by the shoul-, and that his greeting had been rude declaration that he was about marry her, willy nilly. "Ah, no, senor, nothing like that," Villalpondro through the in-terpreter. According to him, he had the girl's permission to come in because he did not like to be out the street, and his manner in the had been the essence of polite-. But when the detective said had found Villalpondro, an hour so after this visit, lurking about of the East Seventh-street apparently waiting for the ap- of the girl, so he could kidnap her, the court continued the trial to Monday afternoon, so that the girl's side of the story might be heard.

MUST STAY GOOD.

SEE ESCAPES PUNISHMENT.

William See, the former jockey, who was arrested Friday night for beating his wife, after making a vain attempt to cut his throat because she objected to his drinking a bottle of beer when he was already drunk, was given a ninety days' suspended sentence by Police Judge Williams yesterday morning.

See offered the lame explanation that he was drunk at the time and did not know what he was doing. He was very penitent, but was warned that the first ill-treatment of his wife would call for the execution of the sentence.

Can't Help It.

S. R. Stone, who stole a half-dozen picture postcards from a downtown drug store, was sent to jail for sixty days by Police Judge Williams yesterday forenoon. The sentence is at the rate of ten days for each card, but while the punishment appears severe, it was brought out that Stone is a chronic thief, who has been arrested for petty thievery on numerous occasions. He seems to be unable, the police say, to resist the temptation to steal, no matter how small or useless the object desired may be.

Unique Celebration.

B. Chavez, F. Savalah and Joseph Chacona, Mexican patriots, sallied forth Friday to celebrate the centenary of the independence of their native land. But as they went out they made the mistake of slipping revolvers into their pockets, which was aggravated by their becoming drunk, causing the weapons to be discovered at the Police Station. The trio was sent down for twenty days each, when brought into Police Court on charges of carrying concealed weapons.

Under Heavy Bail.

James McClain, arrested yesterday morning by Detective Beaumont, was arraigned a few hours later before Police Judge Williams and placed under $2000 bail to plead Monday afternoon. McClain is charged with stealing clothing from a room at No. 228 East Second street, and also with burglarizing several rooms at the Vendome lodging-house, No. 364 East First street.

GOOD NERVE AND BAD CHECKS.

Escondido Men Suffer at the Hands of a Suave Young Man Who Gets Away.

ESCONDIDO, Sept. 17.—Carl Coover, a well-dressed, fine appearing young man, who has been attracting considerable attention in Escondido the past few weeks, has suddenly departed, leaving a number of dishonored bank checks in the hands of local business men who had obliged him by letting him have goods and the balances between the amounts of the purchases and the amounts for which the checks were drawn, in cash. Coover employed the manager of a garage to take him to San Diego, by automobile, the trade being that he should return with him on the following day, but when the manager called at the Brewster Hotel in San Diego the next morning for his passenger he was told that Coover had left for the north on the Owl train. At a local jewelry store Coover had deposited a check for $18 for the purchase of a lady's ring, but had not taken it, having said that he guessed he would have a $40 ring, to which purchase the $18 might be applied. The condition of the young man's bank account was discovered by the clerk of a clothing store who, becoming suspicious after accepting a check for $30 for clothes, phoned the president of the bank, who said that Coover's deposits aggregated 75 cents.

GRAPE DAY.

With all bills paid for the best Grape Day festival of the series which have bene held, the Executive Committee, in session Friday evening, found that it was $60 to the good on the amount contributed by citizens, and this showing in spite of the attempts to injure the celebration and the repudiation on the part of several of the contributors of the amounts subscribed.

OLD SETTLERS MEET.

Pioneers of the Valley About Glendale Gather at Picnic Held at Verdugo Park.

GLENDALT, Sept. 17.—The annual valley picnic under the auspices of the Old Settlers' Association of this valley was held at Verdugo Park today. In previous years this event has been held at Ecno Park, Los Angeles, but as Verdugo Park can be reached by electric line, the change was thought advisable. The picnic was more largely attended than any previous affair of its kind under the auspices of this association and was purely social in nature. A basket luncheon was served under the trees. In the afternoon an informal programme consisting of speeches, music, etc., was enjoyed. A large percentage of those present were old settlers of the valley.

FOUNTAIN DEDICATED.

Both of the public drinking fountains which for the last several days have been in course of construction, have been completed and are now in operation. The dedication of the iron fountain on the corner of Fourth street and Glendale avenue, which was put up by the W.C.T.U. of the valley, took place this afternoon, Mrs. Hattie Gaylord, president of the society, delivering the address which gave the fountain to the city. The fountain at the corner of Fourth street and Brand boulevard, which is a large one of cobblestones, will be dedicated in the near future. This was erected by the Glendale Valley Improvement Association, at a cost of nearly $200.

A petition has been presented to the Glendale City Trustees by Mrs. Hattie Gaylord, president of the W.C.T.U. of the valley, asking them to pass an ordinance prohibiting the smoking of cigars, cigarettes or pipes on street cars within the Glendale city limits. The petition was referred to the committee of the whole, but it is known that the Trustees are favorable toward passing the ordinance, which will probably be done soon.

CALL TO ARMS.

NO PLAY FOR GUARDSMEN.

Citizen Soldiers Prepare for Maneuvers.

Stiff Work in Sight for the State Troops.

Camp at Atascadero Opens on the First.

October 1 is the date announced for the opening of Uncle Sam's outdoor school for the mobile troops of the National Guard of California.

Far from being the old militia encampment with its vacation features and parades, the maneuver camp is dominated by a desire for efficiency and a spirit of economy.

That the training of the State troops is of vast importance has been keenly realized by the General Staff of the army, and in this year's instructions actual field conditions will be observed as far as possible.

The instruction begins with the departure of the organizations from their home stations. Their officers will direct the loading of the equipment and supplies in to the trains that are to carry them to Atascadero. All of this will be done in the manner prescribed by the field regulations of the United States army, and the troops will be transported and fed as the regulations direct. Upon arrival at Atascadero, they will detrain and unload and proceed to their allotted camp ground as though they were a part of an active field army operating against an army of invasion.

Upon arrival, Brig.-Gen. Robert Wankowski, commanding the First Brigade, National Guard of California, will report to Brig.-Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, commanding the Department of California.

The first day in camp will be devoted to the details of establishing the camp, the hospital and supply depots. In all these details, the guardsmen will be assisted and instructed by officers and men of the regular army, chosen for their especial qualifications in these departments.

From Los Angeles goes the First Brigade staff, among whom are officers who have made the California National Guard known throughout the country for the efficiency of its staff or business departments, and to these officers will fall the work of providing food, clothing, equipment and forage for the troops and their live stock. Like the officers commanding troops, they will have to perform their duties under the varied conditions arising during the fifteen-day tour of duty.

For the enlisted man the maneuvers offer a splendid opportunity for regulated exercise and instruction in the open. The soldier is taught how to care for himself and his comrades under varied circumstances, what not to eat and drink, how to march without the discomfort of sore feet, how to bivouac in comfort, and many other lessons of a personal character. His military instruction embraces scouting, patrol leading, elementary signaling, estimating of distances, the choice and use of cover under fire, how to estimate the numbers of a hostile force and determine the branch of the service to which it belongs, and to properly perform the duties of outpost and sentry.

These lessons are more than interesting to the citizen soldier, because of their remoteness from his everyday life. To the mounted soldier there is the added fascination of performing his duties wtih the aid of his horse. For the cavalry man, the zest of mounted service with its dash and difficult work makes the maneuvers a long-looked-forward-to event. For some months D Troop of Los Angeles, commanded by Capt. Gunn, has been preparing to maintain its reputation for efficiency.

NO AERO DETACHMENT.

The Signal Corps will have the benefit of all the practical instruction that selected officers of that branch of the army can give it during the maneuvers. Some disappointment is manifested at the refusal of the War Department to send an aëro detachment to Atascadero, but the general interest in the maneuvers overbalances

The plan of instruction for the Hospital Corps, or sanitary troops, is one of the most interesting of all the courses. In this branch, the men are instructed in battle conditions by designated soldiers dropping out of the ranks, tagged with tickets describing the nature and location of the supposed wounds or injuries. The Hospital Corps men then give the necessary first aid treatment and transport the victim by stretcher to the nearest dressing station.

For the supply departments, there is the instruction in rationing and equipping troops, managing the wagon trains, and keeping, marching and maneuvering organizations supplied with ammunition. The precision and business-like methods of the quartermaster's and commissary departments would be a revelation to a business man who fancies all things military are rather more ornamental than practical.

In Brig.-Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, the camp commander, the guardsmen are assured of a sincere and earnest friend and instructor under whom their work will be made as interesting and instructive as possible. In the choice of his field staff, Gen. Bliss has demonstrated the qualities that have made him one of the most distinguished and best liked officers of the army. All of the officers are chosen for their practical knowledge and ability to instruct as well as their interest in the training of National Guard troops.

In establishing the various maneuver camps in the country, the government is actuated by a desire to increase and perfect the military training of that large body of men in the National Guard to whom the country must look in time of war for its principal means of defense, and while Congress has not seen fit to appropriate sufficient money for the annual mobilization of troops, the War Department is doing the best it can to establish biennial camps, with the means at hand.

In other States, as well as in California, the idea has been well thought of and the attendance all that could be desired. In California, particular attention will probably be paid to the training of the National Guard because of the isolated position of the State and its tempting resources for an invading force. The National Guard of California would share to a large extent the responsibility of defense in coöperation with such regular troops as might be stationed in the State in event of active hostilities. That Uncle Sam has greatly benefited by his outdoor schools for his reserve troops, is shown by the increased efficiency and interest in the National Guard throughout the country.

That the National Guard is not alone in its interest in maneuvers, is shown by the fact that in a number of maneuver camps the commanding officer has found it necessary to enforce regulations for the government and protection of the hundreds of automobile parties following the war game.

POLITICAL DRIFT.

Missouri Democrats are looking for honors in the political overturn in progress at the present time. Former Gov. Folk has been indorsed for the Democratic Presidential nomination and Congressman Champ Clark is expected to be the next Speaker of the House of Representatives. As a minority leader he is considered to have made a good record.

Gov. Patterson of Tennessee has challenged his Republican opponent for the Governorship to a joint debate. He is rated as a strong campaigner, and Mr. Hooper also is an effective stump orator. The people of the State like the old styles of doing things, and take their politics straight and red hot. Some years ago the two Taylors—Bob and Alf—toured the commonwealth together as candidates for Governor, and later, Gov. Patterson and Mr. Carl Mack did the same thing. In a measure, therefore, the voters have been educated by their leaders discussing questions face to face.

An attempt is being made in Ohio to do Senator Charles Dick out of the primary endorsement he received last May, by declaring it to have been not only unconstitutional but also binding on nobody. Nevertheless Senator Dick is complacently preparing for his campaign, and has announced his intention of speaking in every Congressional district, if not in every county, and that he will defend the tariff and the Taft administration.

Gov. Harmon of Ohio has not made himself loved by the labor unionists, for after refusing the demand that he issue some sort of a manifesto that would make E. K. Stewart, manager of the street railway company, arbitrate the strike, he issued a call to State Attorney Denman to punish all rioters and proceed just the same as he had in the case of the Newark mobs. Meantime the Republican nominee for Governor, Warren G. Harding, has been perfecting plans for the delivery of a speech in every county of the State.

It seems to be the opinion in Des Moines that Senator J. P. Dolliver of Iowa will become a member of the Senate Finance Committee in the next Congress. He has had an ambition to be a member of the Finance Committee ever since the death of Senator Allison, and according to the report, persons on the "inside" in Washington admit that the administration forces have heard the voice of the great West, and, in obedience, have seen fit to arrange a place on the biggest committee in the Senate for Iowa's fighting senior Senator.

Charles S. Hamlin of Boston, the well-known lawyer, who was assistant Secretady of the Treasury during one of the Cleveland administrations, will accept the Democratic nomination for Governor of Massachusetts, if it should be offered to him at the coming State convention on October 6 next.

With Mr. Hamlin as a candidate in the field, there are now four men who are more or less industriously seeking the nomination. The others are former State Senator James H. Vahey of Watertown, who was the party's standard-bearer in 1908 and 1909; Congressman Eugene N. Foss and Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston.

The Democrats of Wisconsin are in a peculiar fix under the new "20 per cent." election law, as they did not poll such a per cent. of the 1908 general election vote for the candidates below the Governor. If there is to be a complete Democratic State ticket in the field for the November election it will be necessary for the courts to declare the law unconstitutional. In a majority of the Assembly districts of the State the candidates did not receive the requisite 20 per cent., and to run as independent candidates is equivalent to defeat without contest.

Hon. Simeon E. Baldwin of New Haven, ex-Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Connecticut, would have been given the Democratic nomination for Governor, if it had not been for Mayor Willard C. Fisher of Middletown. Fisher to be sure that he was not counted out, notified the chairman of the convention that his vote must be put down against Judge Baldwin. There were a few hisses when Fisher to the last stood alone among more than 600-delegates opposing Baldwin.

Dean Rogers of the Yale Law School in nominating Judge Baldwin declared that he would not name him for Governor if he did not use all his power and influence of his office to compel the New Haven road and all the public service corporations to pay their just share of the taxes of the State.

Francis J. Heney of San Francisco fame has entered the campaign in the First Congressional District of Minnesota in an endeavor to defeat James A. Tawney, chairman of the Finance Committee of the House, because of the manner in which Tawney two years ago held up a bill of Heney's against the government for $13,000, developed during the work on the timber fraud cases.

Miss Maude H. Cook of Denver has announced that she will be a candidate for the Legislature on the Democratic ticket. Conservation of the State school lands will be the appeal which she will make to the voters, and if elected she will introduce a bill to prevent the sale of these lands and retain them as a perpetual asset of the schools.

James E. Martine, known through New Jersey as the "farmer orator" and a follower of the political fortunes of William J. Bryan, has formally declared himself a Democratic candidate for the United States Senate, to succeed John Kean. He expects his name to go on the ballot in the State primary this month.

"If I am elected Speaker of the next House of Representatives, I will drive a team of Missouri mules down Pennsylvania avenue."

The foregoing is the promise Congressman Champ Clark made to a crowd of visitors at the homecoming celebration at Moberly, Mo., in the course of his address. The promise pleased the crowd, and for several minutes the speaker was unable to proceed with his speech on account of the cheering and yelling.

J. O. Terrell of San Antonio, whom the Republicans of Texas have named for Governor, belongs to an old pioneer family of that State. In his time he has played the roles of plowboy and cowboy, editor and lawyer. He is now president of two of the strongest financial institutions in the Lone Star State.

THE INDIAN.

He stands upon a lofty crest
  As silent as a bronze relief
Against the sunset of the West
  A tragedy of pride and grief.
The ev'ning wind his bonnet's plume
  Beflutters as it passes by.
With eagle eyes he views the gloom
  That creeps across the eastern sky.

I see his dark and troubled face
  Beset with sorrow as he stands
The haughty chieftan of a race
  Berobbed of justice, hope, and lands.
With heaving breast and tears that steal
  Across the shadows of his cheek,
His eyes are raised in mute appeal
  To Manitou, I hear him speak.

"Oh, God in Heaven! Manitou!
  Who ruleth o'er the hills and sea,
Great Spirit that my fathers knew,
  But grant this humble prayer to me,
Since 'tis denied that we retain
  The lands wherein our fathers lie;
Since we no longer can remain
  As freedom's sons, so let us die.
Let not Thy children of the hills
  Bend down their heads as servile slaves,
To shame a shattered race that fills
  The hollows of her countless graves."
His haughty head upon his breast
  He stands before the sinking sun;
A portrait of the vanished West,
  The finis of a race that's run.

Around the circus are great opportunities. From the ranks of the humblest have come some of the greatest. There is a fascination about the circus that attracts and holds the attention. Many of the most prominent performers in the circus today were once property boys, baggage boys, messengers, canvas lacers, or something similar.

Until identified with the circus, those boys had no ambition. Once around a big circus, however, ambition was fired. Between shows these boys found time for practice. In time they became athletes, clowns, acrobats or something else that put their names on the programme. Constant application and honest effort brought them to the fore. Today some of those who started with the Barnum and Bailey circus are old and gray. Their children and their grandchildren now are with the show. They are established as circus folk, and to posterity they shall leave the name.

Many of them maintain winter quarters of their own. Some of the riders have "ring" barns. During the cold months when the world is not thinking of showdom, the show people are working incessantly on some new act. Therefore the circus-going element well can be surprised by the marvels witnessed. These feats are the finished product of many months of toil and practice that makes perfect.

Once a circus man, always a circus man. This is a proverb around a circus. In the generations to come shall be found the lineage of the acknowledged peers with the Barnum and Bailey shows of today.

Two performances daily will be given next Tuesday and Wednesday by the Barnum and Bailey circus, on the new circus lot, Washington street between Burlington and Vermont avenues.

Miss Isabelle Lengel, 17 years old, of Scranton, Pa., weighs only 117 pounds, but has a record of lifting 675 pounds without harness. Her father, who is also something of an amateur athlete, has offered to wager that she can outlift any girl of her age and weight in the world, the proceeds to go to any charitable institution agreed upon between the contestants. While a student in the high school Miss Lengel was a familiar figure in the gymnasium, and easily outdid the others in her class. Miss Lengel exercises every morning with dumb-bells weighing 25 pounds each.

Feet Tired--
So Tired?

TIZ Makes Sick Feet Well No Matter What Ails Them.

TIZ acts at once and makes tired, aching, swollen feet remarkably fresh and sore proof.

It's the sure remedy, you know, for everything that gets the matter with your feet. It's for sore feet and for sweaty, bad-smelling feet, and for corns, callouses and bunions, too.

"For years I have been troubled with sore and tender feet; suffered intense pains. Have had the assistance of physicians without relief. I bought a box of TIZ, which worked a perfect cure, as it has with a great many of my friends. I would not be without it. All it requires is to be known to be universally used." A. F. Dreutzer, Chicago.

TIZ is not a powder. Powders and other foot remedies clog up the pores. TIZ draws out all poisonous exudations which bring on soreness of feet and is the only remedy that does. TIZ cleans out every pore and glorifies the feet—your feet.

You'll never limp again or draw up your face in pain, and you'll forget about your corns, bunions and callouses. You'll feel like a new person.

TIZ is for sale at all druggists, 25 cts. per box, or it will be sent you direct, if you wish, from Walter Luther Dodge & Co., Chicago, Ill. Recommended and sold by The Owl Drug Co.'s Stores.

COUNTY POOR FARM REALLY IS REASONABLY RICH FARM.

Agricultural Pursuits at Institution for Relief of Paupers Nets Good Financial Returns to People—Intelligent Charity Is Serious Problem Facing Communities Today—Organized Relief Is Required.

BY ROSE L. ELLERBE.

"DOWN to the County Poor Farm" is all a mistake—it should be "Down to the County Rich Farm," which comprises nearly 400 acres of fine, level land, under a high state of cultivation, in one of the best agricultural districts in the country. The returns from the orange crop last year were more than $15,000. Ten thousand dollars worth of produce was supplied the County Hospital, besides the vegetables and fruit used by the inmates of the County Farm. A herd of fine cattle supplies the dairy.

The approach to the county institution from the railway station is along a path shaded by stately evergreens and palms, while the main structure is sheltered by magnificent trees and surrounded by well-kept grounds. At first glance the place might be thought a comfortable, old-fashioned country mansion. But once within the doors any semblance of homelikeness vanishes. It is an institution—the very essence of institutionalism is at once manifest.

Four brick buildings surround a court. Porches and shaded yards are about the buildings. Cleanliness and bareness are alike impressive. The dining-room, kitchen and dairy are all clean and orderly, although the buildings are not new and are not equipped with the latest improvements. Across the roadway another two-story brick building accommodates the women. Here the feminine touch has replaced to some extent the blankness of the ward walls. Some of the women who have come here to pass their remaining days have set up their little treasures over their tiny dressers, have added pictures and bits of carpets and hangings, and made a pitiful attempt to keep a show of individuality in their surroundings. Instinctively the human being, however much of a failure it may be, shrinks from becoming a mere ward or case, and clings to its own identity. And the institution which deprives its inmates of individuality can never be counted successful, no matter how perfectly it may be equipped or how lavishly provided. The glaring chromo on the wall, or the old cob pipe on the stand, may mean more than the warmest blanket or the most spotless and sanitary cleanliness.

THE INSANE WARD.

The newest of the buildings is the insane ward, a one-story structure. Here accommodations are provided for about twenty-five harmless insane. This building is a model one, each patient having a tiny room—not to be called a cell, although windows are barred and doors locked at night. The combined dining and sitting-rooms are bright and cheerful and wide porches and an inclosed yard give space and air. Senile-aged and mildly insane patients can certainly be much more comfortable here than at Patton.

Indeed, the location of the County Farm is ideal. It is near enough to the beach to have the benefit of the ocean breezes and far enough away to escape heavy fogs, and is surrounded by beautiful groves, orchards and alfalfa fields. Yet, so far as any connection with the farm goes, the institution might apparently be anywhere else. The orange grove is surrounded by an impregnable network of wire, the orchards are inclosed with high fences, the grounds open to inmates are not large. Residents who are able are expected to work on the farm, but the superintendent states that a very small part of the labor on the place is done by indigents. Naturally, able-bodied men do not remain long in the institution and the majority of the inmates are too old or too infirm to be capable of much hard work. There are now about 200 inmates.

The cost of maintenance of the County Farm last year was $64,168, with returns from the farm of about $24,000. The per capita cost of this institution is high compared with similar institutions in the East. According to the reports of Massachusetts almshouses for 1908-9, the average cost per capita was about $150, while New York institutions of the same character report cost for the same year as ranging from $125 to $155.

HOME FOR AGED.

It must be confessed that with the plant provided and the annual outlay it would seem that larger results should be obtained. While constant vigilance is necessary to prevent the admission of those not deserving the benefits supplied, there are without doubt a good many old and feeble persons who need and are entitled to a home there, but who will undergo almost any deprivation rather than go to the County Farm. Under present conditions the institution is a home for aged and infirm people who have no other means of support rather than the old-time "poorhouse" or "almshouse." It might be well to follow the lead of New York City, which has abolished the name of "almshouse" and calls the institution "The Home for Aged and Infirm," and then give as far as possible the atmosphere of a home rather than the chill of the institution.

The tendency among students of sociological conditions is toward the lessening or the abolishment of institutional life, so far as may be. In some European countries a cottage system is being substituted for the lod methods of caring for dependents. Cottages with gardens are furnished old couples, dependent families or small groups, and other necessities are supplied. Of course any such arrangement must be under competent supervision.

HELPS OUTSIDERS.

Besides caring for indigents at the County Farm, the county last year expended $73,740 for the care of indigents through the office of the County Charities in the Courthouse. This money was largely paid for provisions, burying the poor, rent and transportation. Through this office pours a constant stream of applicants for assistance. Every grade of society, every nationality, is represented and every form of imposture and mendicancy is presented. All cases are investigated, so it is stated, before help is rendered.

A number of pensioners are on the lists from year to year. Many of these are native Californians, residents of the county from birth. These persons cling tenaciously to their own ways and tongue and shrink with horror from life at the County Farm or in any institution. They can keep the breath of life alive—and be content—upon such a pittance that it is cheaper for the county to make them an allowance than to send them to the farm. Another large class are the consumptives who have been lured here in the hope of new life from the climate. Many of these become destitute and must be supported, or furnishd with transportation to their old homes.

WISDOM IS QUESTIONED.

While this large distribution of money by the county of course relieves many cases of suffering, the wisdom of it is questioned. The last report of the State Board of Charities and Corrections says: "It has been said that the relief of the poor in their homes has been abused in many places and that a system is in operation which is making paupers rather than relieving the actual needy." Certainly the greatest care and good judgment is needed to prevent abuse when it is known that the county applies large sums each year to charitable purposes.

The whole question of the public assistance, or support, of paupers and dependents is a very grave one. When it is remembered that Los Angeles county last year paid out, according to the printed report of the Board of Supervisors, $145,000 for the maintenance of the County Hospital, aside from improvements and buildings; $64,168 for the County Farm; $73,740 for 'indigents'; $31,531 for support of inmates of Whittier and Preston reform schools; and $23,058 for the Juvenile Detention Home, all of which may be classed as caring for dependents, it will be seen that the advisability of the expenditure of such sums, and the matter of the wisest and most efficient administration of them become subjects for the most serious consideration. When to these amounts is added the $20,000 handled by the Associated Charities and the large sums expended by the State and by churches and private individuals in the support of orphanages, homes for children and for the aged, and the many other institutions for benevolent purposes, and the sums given for charitable purposes through the many church and other organizations, the sum total expended in this community, for the relief of poverty and dependency will certainly not fall far short of $1,000,000 annually. Is this large expenditure tending to eradicate the conditions which it alleviates? This, after all, is the final test of all relief.

CHARITY OFTEN HARMFUL.

Charity which creates or perpetuates pauperism and dependency is a distinct evil and, unquestionably, indiscriminate and unorganized charitable efforts are often harmful rather than beneficial. Before genuine help can be given, each case requiring public or private assistance needs to be carefully investigated, not only with reference to the pressing needs of the moment, but to the ultimate good of the individual or the family, or of the community. The investigator must be a person of experience, of good judgment and of authority, if each case is wisely disposed of.

California and Californians are proverbially generous in our giving, but we are not always as discriminating as justice requires. Although our various agencies for the distribution of relief have made some attempt at coöperation and systematic work, the effort is as yet far from complete, and our generosity is often misdirected or imposed upon.

As an instance, it was recently found that an old man and his wife who had been regularly drawing a stipend of $12 a month from the county were the owners of a ranch of two and a half acres, two cows, a horse, and in the neighborhood of 100 chickens and turkeys. Fraudulent demands are constant, and often so masked that even the most experienced are deceived. In some cases they are almost unbelievable. In one recent case an old man was admited to the County Farm, stating that he had no relatives or means of support. Later he inadvertently admitted that he had a daughter. When questioned, he refused to give any information, and was greatly distressed, saying that he had sworn not to reveal the identity of the daughter. In time, it was discovered that she was the wife of a wealthy man, living in a beautiful home in an exclusive residence section. In another instance an applicant for admission to the farm was found to be worth some $25,000. Cases where children refuse to support parents are very common, and often most elaborate schemes are resorted to to cover up relationship.

VIGILANCE NECESSARY.

Eternal vigilance is necessary to guard against professional paupers and swindlers; yet on the other hand are worthy persons in real need whose supersensitive pride makes them ashamed to ask for help. To guard against the undeserving and at the same time let the worthy feel that they are not disgraced by receiving public aid in an emergency, or when the last struggle has failed—this is not a problem to be lightly solved. The best efforts of public officials, of students of sociology, and of expert administrators of charity have not yet found the satisfactory solution, although they have been struggling with it for generations.

In New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphai, and many other cities, all outdoor relief from public funds is discountenanced; the money of the taxpayer is devoted entirely to institutional relief. Help in the homes is left to the organized charities and private channels. In Boston and some other places it is maintained that the best results are obtained by giving help in the homes, as well as providing institutions. The source of the money expended is not so important, however, as the manner of its expenditure.

The administration of relief is becoming each year a more thoroughly ordered system. In New York and many other places the various organizations are united into one association known as the Charity Organizations Society, which has general supervision over all relief work. The cities are districted and a paid supervisor is employed in each district. Under the direction of this general society all charity organizations, church workers and individual workers carry on their efforts. Usually volunteer friendly visitors are found in each district to work under the supervisor. These investigators and visitors are not only interested in relieving distress, but aim to prevent the conditions that produce the need for outside help. They look to sanitary conditions, see that children are sent to hospitals or institutions when special care is needed, advise as to changes, secure employment, and in every way strive to help people help themselves.

STATE CHARITY BOARDS.

Many States now have Boards of Charity whose duty it is to examine into the workings of all institutions receiving public money. California has recently created a State Board of Charities and Corrections, which has general supervision over all State institutions and is supposed to supervise also county institutions, although it has no executive control over the latter.

In our own city the Associated Charities has made an effort to secure a better organization and coöperation of the various benevolent societies, but has not as yet succeeded in uniting them in any common plan of work. It is still quite possible for the clever schemer to make the rounds of the various sources of charity and live very comfortably with no greater effort than a free exercise of the imagination and the tongue.

Systematized relief measures are the only solution of the great problems presented by poverty and helplessness. As Dr. Devine, secretary of the Charity Organizations Society of New York has said:

"It is an indication of an awakened public conscience, of a developed spirit of charity, when those who desire to help others give effect to that desire in such a way as to eliminate every curable case of dependency, providing liberally for those who need permanent relief and providing efficiently, and, if it is possible, once for all, for those who can be driven, or encouraged, or lifted out of the slough of dependency." This spirit is far removed from the careless liberality that eases conscience, pays political scores or curries favor with heaven, by bestowing a dollar here and there as it is importuned.

CLAIMS MURPHY KNEW.

Mrs. Clara Stewart, Arrested in San Francisco, Makes Statement of Former Husbands.

Word was received at the detective bureau last night that Mrs. Clara Stewart, wanted in Los Angeles on a charge of bigamy preferred by Frank Murphy, who says he is the woman's third husband, was arrested in San Francisco when she stepped ashore from the steamer President.

Detective Home left last night for San Fraicisco to take the woman into custody and bring her to Los Angeles to stand trial.

Questioned shortly after her arrest, Mrs. Stewart declared that Murphy knew of her previous marriages when he married her and that he also knew she had not secured a divorce from either of her husbands. She charges Murphy with cruelty, and said her relatives in San Francisco sent her money to pay her transportation home.

Though only 21 years old, Mrs. Stewart has had a varied matrimonial career, according to the statements made by Murphy to the police at the time the warrant for her arrest was issued.

She was Miss Clara Kimball of San Francisco. When 17 years of age she is said to have married Jack Stewart of San Francisco; in 1909 J. H. McCoy, chief petty officer on the United States cruiser Pennsylvania, was her choice, and in July of this year Frank Murphy came next.

Murphy told the police he first learned of his wife's previous alliances when he discovered letters she had received from McCoy.

GAIN TROLLEY WAY.

San Dimas Committee Pleased Over the Result of Proceedings for Condemnation

SAN DIMAS, Sept. 17.—There is much rejoicing in town over the speedy termination of the condemnation proceedings against E. A. Hamm of Whittier, who owns an orange grove in this district, part of which is required for the right-of-way for the Pacific Electric extension from Covina to Claremont.

The right-of-way through this district is being paid for by the citizens of San Dimas, who are presenting it to the railway company. The committee offered Mr. Hamm $1700 for a corner of his ranch, taking off less than one acre, which the committee averred was the least desirable part of his property. Hamm demanded $6500, and the jury in Judge Moss's court, after coming to San Dimas and viewing the ground, awarded Hamm $1200.

The next trial for condemnation proceedings is to be on October 7, in the same court, when the jury will have to decide on the damage sustained by Mrs. Schurlam, who owns some vacant land, through which runs an arroyo, along which arroyo the right-of-way of the Pacific Electric runs. She claims $2500 damages. The committee has offered her $500.

> BY FRANCES MARSHALL.

Raphael, most popular of all painters of religious subjects, and most famous of all the bearers of the angel names, heads a list which includes such names as that of Gabriel Fallopio, one of the founders of modern anatomy; Angela Burdett-Coutts, the richest woman of her day in the whole world; Gabriel Morabeau, strongest orator of the French Revolution; Gabriel Fahrenheit, the man who established the present method of registering heat, and Gabriel D'Annunzio, one of the greatest of modern playwrights. It includes, too, a saint or two, several minor painters, writers, philanthropists, educators, scientists—in fact, a representative of note in almost every field of endeavor, and taken all in all, a group of men and women worthy to bear even the names of the angels.

Raphael Santo was born at Urbino, in Italy, in 1483. His father was a painter of some worth, and the boy began to draw and paint almost as soon as he began to talk. At Rome, where he went when he was about 25, he was already looked upon as an artist of ability, and Pope Julius II commissioned him to redecorate several of the rooms of the Vatican.

The artist's task was difficult, but it was accomplished, not only to the satisfaction of the Pope and the people of Rome, but to the admiration of later generations. After Leo X had succeeded, Julius Raphael was made chief architect of St. Peter's, and was put in charge of all the excavations of Roman antiquities.

Raphael died of a fever caught in the excavations. He was only 37 at the time of his death, on Good Friday, April 6, 1520, but he had already won not only a place of first rank among the world's painters, but a place of so much love and respect among the people of his own time that all Rome mourned his loss.

The Sistine Madonna, Raphael's last and greatest Madonna, was painted for the little Church of San Sisto, at Piacenza, and the artist finished it just before his death.

Cornelius Gabriel Max, called by his middle name, born in Germany in 1840, historical painter; Archangelo Paladini, born in Italy in 1599, whose singing and needlework rivaled her excellent portrait painting, and Angelica Kauffmann, born in Switzerland in 1741, who spent much of her life in England, and who because, of the worth of her historical paintings and portraits, was elected a member of the Royal Academy, are three bearers of the angel-names who have followed in Raphael's footsteps.

In letters, the names of the angels have had no champion so well known as Raphael, but nevertheless several of them have been writers of ability.

Gabriel Harvey, the eldest of a ropemaker's six children, was born in England in 1545. His father managed to let him go to Cambridge and there Harvey met the poet, Edmund Spenser, with whom he formed a life-long friendship. It is said that Harvey nearly spoiled Spenser's poems. For Harvey wrote in a stilted and formal way little suited to the poet, over whom he had a strong influence.

Harvey was a sarcastic and arrogant man, and his hot temper and quick tongue were continually getting him into quarrels with other literary men of the day. In 1599 he had such a severe quarrel with Thomas Nash, the poet and dramatist, that the authorities ordered that "all Nashe's bookes and Dr. Harvey's books be taken wheresoever they may be found and that none of the same bookes be ever printed hereafter." So Harvey, with his books under a ban, was forced to retire from active literary work, and seek solace in the study of physics and astronomy.

Gabriel Honore Mirabeau, more noted for his oratory, was yet a writer of note. He was born in 1747 in France, the second son of the Marquis de Mirabeau. He studied under tutors until he became too unruly to manage at home; then he was sent to a military school, and eventually entered the army. But his conduct and his love affairs landed him in prison several times, and until the revolution he was constantly in trouble.

But the man who could not keep the peace became a great man in time of war. Some one has said that Napoleon and Mirabeau were the two greatest men of the French Revolution. However, that may be, Mirabeau's speeches were listened to and his pamphlets were read when the French mob was too excited to listen to anything else, and the work he did in behalf of reasonableness and restraint helped to lessen the horrors of the revolution. His writings are in the shape of histories, essays, pamphlets and translations.

Evangelinus Apostolides Sophocles was a mystery all his life. He came to America in 1829, and said that he had spent his youth with the Greek monks on Mt. Sinai;—whether his name was assumed or real, no one could tell, and he kept his age a secret. His only confidants, in his forty years of life in this country, were his chickens.

Evangelinus Sophocles always retained a simplicity and a severity of manner which spoke of the quiet days spent in the rigid mountain monastery. But he was well liked by the students at Amherst and Harvard who came under his influence. His kindness of heart was as profound as his learning, and his charitableness as persistent as his taciturnity. He died in 1883, after writing several books.

Gabriele Rossetti, born in Italy in 1783, father of the poet and painter Dante Gabriele Rosetti, and Gabriele D'Annunzio, the playwright, novelist and poet, born in Italy in 1864, are two Italian writers of note.

The two most important scientists of the name lived in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Gabriel Fallopio, the first of them, who died in 1562, was a botanist and anatomist, and is called one of the founders of modern anatomy; Gabriel Fahrenheit, the other, was born at Danzic, Prussia, in 1686. Although he was intended for a life of commerce, he early showed a great interest in thermometers and barometers, and in 1720 he hit upon the substitution of mercury for the spirits of wine or alcohol then used in thermometers. The zero point which is still registered on Fahrenheit thermometers was a point of extreme cold which the inventor had observed in Iceland, and which he thought was the lowest point the earth's temperature could reach.

In the religious world some bearers of the angel names have gained fame. One of them was Saint Angela Merici, who was born in Lombardy in 1474. She was left an orphan at ten, and when she was twenty the uncle with whom she lived died. So she returned to her old home, and turned it into a school for girls. In 1524, when on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, she became suddenly blind in the island of Crete. The blindness later left her, but it caused her to found an order, called the Ursulines. Gabriel Possenti the Blessed, who died in 1862, and whose life both Pope Leo XIII, and Pope Pius G. so admired that they said he should be regarded as the chief patron of the youth of today, is another bearer of these names who has lived worthily.

The Baroness Burdett-Coutts, born in 1814 Angelina Georgiana, who added her maternal grandfather's name to her own so that she might inherit his millions, and so become the richest woman in the world, and who so spent them that she was one of the greatest philanthropists of her day; a philanthropist of another day, Gabrielle de Bourbon, who in the sixteenth century spent her time in good works and kindness to the poor; Gabrielle d'Estrees, born in 1571, whom Henry IV, King of France, loved, but who died before he could marry her, much lamented because she did not meddle in a court where meddling was the order of the day! Angelica Calvani, an Italian born in 1784, who when she was seven was prohibited from singing in a convent because the crowds that gathered to hear her were too large for the authorities to manage, and who at her first public concert earned an enormous sum for those days—more than $15,000; Angelica Van Buren, born in 1820, who as the wife of President Van Buren's nephew was for some years the brilliant and captivating young mistress of the White House, and Angelica Grimke, a woman of beauty and charm of manner, born in South Carolina in 1805, who with her sister Sarah became a Quaker in 1826, and thereafter spent her time lecturing and working in the cause of abolition—these men and women make up a partial list of the famous bearers of the angel names.

It was the last of the minor prophets, Malachi, who gave to the world the most popular of these angel names. For when a Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures was made, Malachi was rendered by Angelos, the messenger of God, and Angelos, with the variations Archangelo and Angelus, and the feminines Angela, Angelot, Angelina, Evangelina, and Angelica, became far more popular than its Hebrew equivalent, Malachi.

All these names excepting Angelos and its variations are of Hebrew origin. Gabriel, with the feminines Gabrielle, Gabriella, means the hero of God; Raphael means the medicine of God. It was Raphael who led Tobias, and brought health and strength to his father; Gabriel was the angel who encouraged Daniel, and who brought the promise to Zacharias and to the Virgin Mary.

The End in Sigh

137 Pianos Mu
Go in 14 Day

Can it be done? It must be, and the Eiler Company will do it. Every single one of the ing 137 pianos and player pianos of the Angelus stock must and shall be sold by of the month.

Don't Put Off Coming

Never in the history of Los Angeles piano-selling the equal of these values been offered before. Make terms. We must close up the affairs of the Angelus pany by October 1st. The greatest bankrupt sale of Los Angeles has ever known must come to an end. day. It will be surely worth while to investigate.

Many Are Finding Hom

Hundreds of your friends and neighbors have purch here, and they have secured bargains of a lifetime. To quick business men, professional men and musicians the advantage of picking up bargains at this bankrupt we call your attention to the following order from the in Pasadena:

Nazarene University, Pasadena, Sept. 12,
Mr. E. S. Johnston, Eilers Music Co., Los Angeles, Cal.
Dear Sir—After devoting some time to the inve of the merits of the various pianos for our University, decided to purchase from you six Eilers Pianos, style mahogany, and hereby entrust you to select these ments for us, and ask you to deliver them at the possible moment. Our committee have also decided you the order for the Chapel Organ. Please include with your first delivery.

You Can Get the Same Barga

For we realize that only the most drastic measures and most merciless price-cutting will accomplish the task here now. It's a pity to offer these beautiful and dainty baby grands and parlor grands, these exquisite uprights in special art cases and these player pianos at such ridiculously low prices, but sentiment cannot enter in now. Everything must go, and in double quick time. The quicker the better. No one will ever live long enough to see again such tremendously low prices. Our business until a short time ago has been confined to selling dealers. Our prices on pianos now enable you to get the same advantage that formerly went to the dealer. Nothing be said.

The Pianos Are Waiting Your

People who have eventually buying grade piano will they can purchase grade instrument heretofore asked ary kind. It is pianos for the Don't delay any first thing Monday rather give them loss than to pay the freight to the factories.

These Prices Talk

We show conclusively how pianos for which regularly $450 is asked can now be purchased of us the plainer styles for $237, and how regular $275 pianos, brand new and warranted, may be secured $186, and even less.

We will sell tomorrow morning an elegant little Steinway upright for $235, $25 cash and it. We will sell 22 pianos that sell in other stores for $650. They go for $368. We will sell 15 in other stores for $550. They go for $218. We will sell 12 pianos that sell in other stores for for $117.

Don't stay away on account of ready money. Easy payments—a little down and a little secure any of these bargains, and you save a third if you come in time. Don't wait. Be in time else may pick up just the bargain you have been looking for.

could be made for $12 or $15 that would wear and hold shape, we would start our suits at $12 or $15. But we know that no tailor can possibly build a suit that is right for less than $20.

And so our suits run in price from $20 to $50, and no man has ever said that he found better values elsewhere. For we have fabrics that wear, and into our garments we put a know-how that gives style and satisfaction.

Mr. Brauer, who is now in New York, has just sent out a new line of West of Scotland Cheviots, and it will pay you to ask to see them at your first opportunity. It's a small purchase, but a particularly choice one.

KILLS MEXICAN; ESCAPES MOB.

Quarrel Over Burro Causes Homicide.

Officers Spirit Arizonan Away in Auto.

Becomes Violently Insane in Temporary Jail.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Sept. 14.—C. D. Thomas, a prospector, has been placed in the County Jail to await trial for the killing of Mauro Murietta, a well-known Buckeye Mexican. The deed was done at the Ambrose mine, in the White Tank Mountains, north of Buckeye, and about thirty miles west of Phoenix. According to a version of the killing Thomas and the Mexican had quarreled over the ownership of a burro which the latter was driving. When Thomas secured a rifle the Mexican ran, but was stopped by a bullet that struck him in the heel.

As Thomas approached the Mexican tried to seize the rifle, when the weapon was discharged, the bullet passing through the lower part of his body, inflicting a wound that soon proved mortal.

Thomas was taken to Buckeye for preliminary examination, but had to be spirited away by automobile, for fear of lynching at the hands of a mob of excited Mexicans.

In a second room of the temporary jail was placed Murietta's body. When Thomas was advised that his victim's body lay within the same building he seemed to become violently insane, tearing up bedclothes and setting fire to the furniture. Thomas is a late arrival from Bisbee.

MINERS INVESTIGATE CRIME.

Representatives of the Western Federation of Miners are investigating the circumstances of the death of Thaddeus McLean, who lately committed suicide at Gila Bend, after mortally wounding a Southern Pacific watchman. McLean had been a shift boss at the North Star mine at Polaris, leaving that place the day before his death, with $250 in cash. It is said that he was trying to steal a ride on the train from which he was ejected by the watchman. This story is not believed by the men who had worked with him, and they want to know what became of the money. They consider his suicide as natural under the circumstances. In the duel with the officer he had been shot in the thigh and thus could not escape, so he chose to use his last shot upon himself rather than stand a chance of the gallows.

OTHER ARIZONA NEWS NOTES.

Tomorrow morning four companies of the National Guard of Arizona will leave Phoenix for Atascadero, joined at Yuma by two companies more, and passing through Los Angeles late on Thursday night. The command will leave the camp about the last of the month.

Examiner Gerry of the Interstate Commerce Commission will be in Phoenix October 3 for the hearing of a case against the Wells-Fargo company on rates charged for the carriage of race horses for the Arizona fair. The charges to Phoenix from El Paso are said to be in excess of those from El Paso to Los Angeles. During the stay of the examiner he will hear a number of other cases, concerning passenger and freight rates in Arizona. The commission has announced that the reduction of rates into Arizona ordered June 6, effective October 1, will be delayed until December 1, as the railroads have claimed they could not readjust their schedules before the latter date.

Mayor Lloyd Christy has been given a leave of absence to attend the Bankers' Association meeting in Los Angeles, representing the Valley Bank, of which he is cashier.

Chairman Foster H. Rockwell of the Arizona Horticultural Commission has started for California, accepting an invitation to attend a meeting of the California Horticultural Commission.

JAILED ON MURDER CHARGE.

DEAD MAN FOUND IN CLOSET.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GLOBE (Ariz.) Sept. 14.—Crammed head-foremost into the bottom of a small closet in a tent-house on Blake street, Sunday evening, was found the body of J. N. Tomlinson, an employé of the Old Dominion Mining Company.

F. W. Turner, a smelter hand, is in jail, charged with murder, while Tim Bennitt is under surgical care with a bullet wound in his neck and another in the side of his face. Turner has a contusion on the head, believed to have been made by Bennitt with a clubbed pistol.

Turner claims to have been assaulted by Bennitt without cause and to know nothing of the killing of Tomlinson. It is believed that the murder was committed during the afternoon, a single shot having been heard by neighbors at 2:30 o'clock p.m. Evidently the victim was asleep on his bunk at the time, as blood-stained bed clothing has been found. The bullet split into several pieces, fragments of it having been found in the skull opposite the place where the bullet entered. Bennitt, who had been rooming with Tomlinson, arrived at the tent about dusk and found Turner within. When he entered the tent, Turner fired at him and there was a struggle, in which Bennitt secured possession of the weapon. Turner tried to escape as neighbors ran to the entrance, but finally surrendered without further resistance.

Only quick action saved Dayton Ennis from death last week, as he jumped for a revolver which William Whitlow was pulling from the concealment of a paper, as the two men met on the street. As Ennis grasped the pistol barrel, the weapon was discharged, but the bullet went wild. Whitlow was promptly jailed. His action was due to insane jealousy.

CONDEMNS SHIP OFFICERS.

Inspector Says Those of Wrecked Car Ferry on Lake Michigan Delayed Departure Too Long.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

DETROIT (Mich.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "The officers and crew of the Pere Marquette ferry-boat, which foundered in Lake Michigan, were brave—too brave.

"They underestimated the seriousness of the situation and did not believe the boat would go down so soon. They made every precaution to quit the sinking car ferry, but waited too long before doing so."

ful, and is going to beat anything they have here, but I don't want her to know it, or she might get the big head and stop trying."

Miss Jersey is attached to the office force of Hotel Redondo, and is in the "tank" every spare moment. She says that she never enjoyed anything as she does swimming, and she gives all the girls a challenge to look out for their medals as soon as she gets a little more practice. They may look to their laurels, for if the exhibition she gave the other day is any sample Lady Peggy is going to be "our" swimmer in a very short time.

She is not sure that she can take any prizes, but McAvoy is. Unlike the Sheffield girls, she is in it merely for pleasure. The sisters intend to make their living later by teaching swimming and physical culture. Of course, "We want to know something about it first ourselves," they laughed. But Lady Peggy is the coming swimmer. Look out for her. She is 20, slender, and pretty as a picture. She makes one in her suit, and diving off the high rocks she is as graceful as can be.

The beaches have many other swimmers, and some that started when all became enthusiastic about the pretty Miss Kellerman, but none of them have done any wonderful things as yet. Next year the beach will be alive with swimmers. W. T. O'Malley, the youngster who has held the amateur championship for four years, has made lots of reckless promises to teach girls how to swim, and he is going to have his hands full.

Meanwhile the bathing girl is rapidly disappearing from the Pacific Coast, and the swimming girl has come. It is hoped that she has come to stay. This Coast is a good place for championships, and the girls who win them are of the clean, wholesome class that is typical of the ideal American girl.

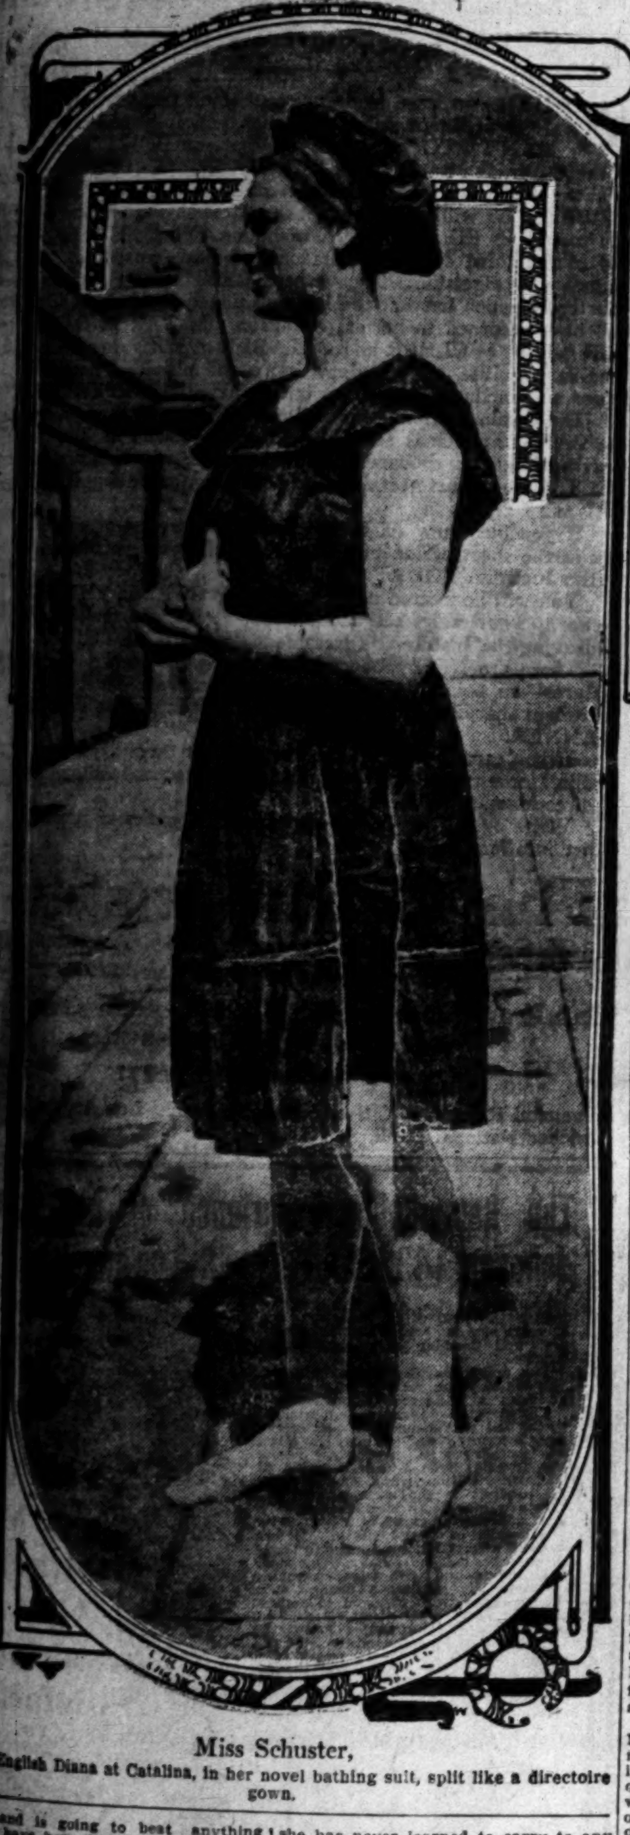
her sister, and that they can start now on a fair field.

Miss Helen Perkins of Long Beach is another fine swimmer. She holds the Pacific Coast championship for the general swimming. So you see that California has more girls than those told about in the usual beach story, sitting on the sand, with a silk suit and a parasol. Still another, and this one has not been at the "business" nearly as long as the Venice and Ocean Park girls, and this one is Miss Arvilla Jersey, commonly known as Peggy. She lives at Redondo Beach, and has just taken up swimming. In a few weeks her trainer, John McAvoy, has done wonders with her swimming, and he says that now she can go out farther than any other woman, and she can do some high diving. When she was having her snapshots taken, McAvoy said: "Now don't you puff her up so much. She is certainly wonderful, and is going to beat anything they have here, but I don't want her to know it, or she might get the big head and stop trying."



Miss Schuster,

the English Diana at Catalina, in her novel bathing suit, split like a directoire gown.

AVALON ELECTRIFIED BY THE ENGLISH SUIT.

The English bath suit has electrified Santa Catalina—the English bath suit and the splendid Diana-like English girl who wears it.

All was quiet about the bathing pool a few days ago, only the splash of the Kelpie girl, Ester Adargo, as she dived from the spring board, and an occasional feminine shriek punctured the mañana atmosphere. The pier was covered with bathing men sprawled at full length in the warm sunshine of Indian summer, saturated with calm contentment, when—enter the moon goddess, the English girl with the German name, Miss Schuster, and the English bath suit.

An electric shock woke up the pier gazers, the divers and the bathers. Here was a thrill at the very end of the season, when princess suits of scanty cut had palled, when every style but the hobble gown had had its brief day in the bay of Avalon, here was the English bath suit away out here on the Pacific Coast—sans stockings and sans every other superfluity of civilization which might interfere with freedom of movement in the water.

The girl herself was sans any kind of self-consciousness, simple and free from affectation, with a total disregard of her splendid body, which, however, she has never learned to carry to any advantage.

"Why, she hasn't any stockings on," exclaimed a by-stander breathlessly.

"See the tight little knickerbockers," said another, for the skirt of the suit was split up the side like the directoire gown of several seasons ago, showing the short little trousers in place of the clumsy bloomers, which impede the movements of the American girl when breasting the waves. Just one button fastened the suit on the shoulder, like the drapery of the divine huntress herself.

Absolutely fearless, absolutely unaffected by the gaze of the populace, she walked out to the spring board, clear to the very end.

"Wait, she is going to dive, watch her now!" The pause was breathless. She did not dive, she simply walked off the high plank into the briny deep. She will certainly need no practice to walk the plank of any pirate ship, she simply puts her feet together and drops.

"I wish I could have a suit like that," said a Los Angeles girl, with envy in her heart. "I might be able to swim to Pebble Beach, who knows?"

Miss Schuster is the daughter of the English scientist who was chairman of the Executive Committee at the recent astronomers' convention on Mt. Wilson. The family has been been at Catalina for several days. How far science has aided common sense in dictating the fashion of a bathing suit is a matter of conjecture. Miss Schuster and her sister certainly have their own peculiar manner of dressing. No stiff-boned garments have ever trammeled their muscular development.

Perhaps the distinguished scientist sees more than stars when he sweeps the blue firmament of heaven with his telescope. He may be able to see things which are veiled from that stupid dictator, Dame Fashion.

SINGLE TAX CLUB PICNIC

A basket picnic at Sycamore Grove will be held today by the Los Angeles Single Tax Club, the members of which will meet at the tables a little before 1 p.m. All invited to come, bring their lunch and talk.

PUTS AN END TO STOMACH MISERY

Indigestion, Gas, Heartburn and Dyspepsia go, and You Will Feel Fine in Five Minutes.

Thousands of men and women here and about Los Angeles will be surprised at the prompt relief after taking a little Diapepsin. Get some now and have your stomach trouble over forever.

Every family here ought to keep some Diapepsin in the house, as any one of you may have an attack of Indigestion or Stomach trouble at any time, day or night.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a distressed, out-of-order stomach five minutes afterwards.

If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you, or lays like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of Indigestion.

Ask your Pharmacist for a 50-cent case of Pape'sDiapepsin, and take a little just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it prevents fermentation and takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery at any drug store, waiting for you.

These large 50c cases contain more than sufficient to cure almost any chronic case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other Stomach trouble.

Eyeglasses Not Necessary

Eyesight Can Be Strengthened, and Most Forms of Diseased Eyes Successfully Treated Without Cutting or Drugging.

That the eyes can be strengthened so that eyeglasses can be dispensed with in many cases has been proven beyond a doubt by the testimony of hundreds of people who publicly claim that their eyesight has been restored by that wonderful little instrument called "Actina."

"Actina" also relieves sore and Granulated Lids, Iritis, etc., and removes Cataracts without cutting or drugging. Over seventy - five thousand "Actinas" have been sold; therefore the Actina treatment is not an experiment, but is reliable. The following letters are but samples of hundreds we receive:

J. J. Pope, P. O. Box No. 43, Mineral Wells, Tex., writes: "I have spent thousands of dollars on my eyes, consulted the best doctors in the United States, dropped medicine in my eyes for years, and "Actina" is the only thing that has ever done me any good. Before using 'Actina' I gave up all hope of ever being able to read again. Had not read a newspaper for seven years. Now I can read all day with little or no inconvenience."

Kathryn Bird, 112 Lincoln St., Milwaukee, Wis., writes: "I was troubled with astigmatism and had worn glasses from ten years of age. I could not read or write without them. In a surprisingly short time, after using 'Actina,' I laid aside my glasses and I will never use them again."

E. R. Holbrook, Deputy County Clerk, Fairfax, Va., writes: "'Actina' has cured my eyes so that I can do without glasses. I very seldom have headaches now, and can study up to 11 o'clock after a hard day's work at the office."

"Actina" can be used by old and young with perfect safety. Every member of the family can use the one "Actina" for any form of disease of the Eye, Ear, Throat or Head. One will last for years and is always ready for use. "Actina" will be sent on trial, prepaid.

If you will send your name and address to the Actina Appliance Co., Dept. 89N, 811 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo., you will receive, absolutely FREE, a valuable book—Professor Wilson's Treatise on Disease.

THEODORE BELL'S ITINERARY.

Starts Second Lap of Gubernatorial Race Tomorrow, Reaching Los Angeles Saturday.

Theodore Bell, the Democratic candidate for Governor, starts tomorrow on the second lap of the race. He leaves San Francisco in an automobile for San Mateo, where he will speak at 10 o'clock; thence he proceeds to Redwood City, where he is scheduled for a speech at 12:15 o'clock; Palo Alto at 3 and San José at 8:30 p.m.

After this preliminary warming-up, Mr. Bell jumps to Los Gatos for a meeting at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning and continues to Boulder Creek over the Bear Creek road, where he will meet his constituents at noon and on to Santa Cruz for an address at 8:30 o'clock.

Wednesday he takes in Watsonville at noon and Salinas at 8:30 p.m. He drops his automobile at the latter place and goes by train Thursday to San Luis Obispo, which he reaches at 2:55 p.m., speaking in the evening. The next stop is Santa Barbara Friday morning for a meeting at night. Saturday he is due at Ventura and speaks at 9:30 p.m. The run from Ventura to Oxnard is made by auto for a speech at 10:30 a.m. Saturday. Relegating the auto for a train, he reaches Los Angeles at 2:30 p.m., speaking at 8:30 o'clock Saturday night.

Mr. Bell will leave this city late Sunday night as he has an 8:30 o'clock engagement in San Diego Monday morning. He jumps back to Santa Ana, arriving at 11:44 a.m., and speaking at 8:40 p.m. From Santa Ana he automobiles to Corona for a noon meeting and arrives in Riverside for a speech at 8:30 p.m.

TENNIS MEET.

NORDHOFF, Sept. 17.—The Ojai Tennis Club is making preparations for opening day on the courts at Ojai Inn. This will be held on October 1. There will be special games between the best players of the valley and those of the Thacher school and some players from outside are also looked for to participate. Afternoon tea will be served at the clubhouse. This meeting is one of the preliminary gatherings which sets the ball rolling for the great annual tennis meet held every spring at Nordhoff and at which cracks from all over the country get together.

GUSHER ALLOWED TO GUSH.

The Consolidated Midway gusher was allowed to gush again for a few hours yesterday. Managing Director Wiltsee received a telephone message from the superintendent at Maricopa last evening saying that it flowed between 8000 and 10,000 barrels in three hours and then the gate was closed again. The company is delivering 6000 barrels of oil a day to the Standard Oil Company.

You Are Losing Money

by delaying your entry into the ranks of Mutual Home Building Corporation's prospering stockholders. Yesterday the stock advanced to $1.20 a share, and you might just as well have had all its profits on an investment of $10 per 100 shares less by simply making a small payment on a nice fat lot of it yesterday instead of later. But there are tomorrows as well as yesterdays, and if time is lost in grieving over the opportunity that is lost, the opportunity ahead will also pass unavailed of, and a greater loss will be incurred. Many are chalking up yesterday's losses to experience, beating the next time limit to the cashier's desk, and getting a comfortable slice of that lively, soaring stock tucked safely away. NOW is the time to do it, for the date of the next raise is coming a-flying.

You know what Los Angeles real estate and home building have done for others. Mutual Home Building Corporation will do the same for you. The values of Los Angeles real estate never stop growing. As population increases and the city develops, its values are growing ever more rapidly, and the wise man is taking time by the forelock and getting into the rushing current of prosperity before the game is beyond his means.

You don't want to sweat and toil for others all your life. You aspire to a home of your own, an income not dependent on the whims of an employer, and comfort in old age. You know that when you live right up to your income it is as though you were placing your entire earnings in a bottomless pocket, for all the permanent results you can show for the money. Those precious dollars are going out at one end as fast as they are coming in at the other—perhaps faster; and whither are you drifting the while? Is it a cheering prospect that confronts you? If you don't look out for yourself and loved ones, and prepare for the future, who will? Make a little sacrifice now, and later you won't need to make any.

Real Estate made Astor's millions. We can put you on the same road, without undue risk, and you don't need much to start or keep a-going with. Investigate and see what only five dollars can do for you.

Is it all going out as fast as it is coming in? It's a losing game. Stop it. Raise your salary now by putting a small part of it to work earning money, compounding interest.

Wouldn't you be willing to cut your allowance a couple of dollars a week if you knew you could put it in a safe fund that would maintain you in peace and comfort later? You can, with that small weekly saving, share in the enormous profits this city's land is earning, as well as in those incident to its building activities by simply collecting your profits from stock whose income is based on such property, avoiding the expenses attendant upon owning property until you can better afford them. Such a proposition this company offers. Every officer and member of it is on the same footing. All are common stockholders. No preferred stock, bonds, or other things to precede you in the profit sharing. Nobody gets any dividends before you get yours. And if you need your money you can get it, with interest, by resale of the shares. That's the beauty of this plan of investment. You place your money and get profits from it, without spending it. You still have your investment.

GREAT WORK FOR WOMEN.

Y.W.C.A. Is Hive of Activity in Strong Hands.

Opening Reception to Be Held Thursday Night.

Magnificent Plant Is Home for Lone Girls.

The educational rally and reception rith which the Young Women's Chrisian Association will open its fall work vill be held Thursday evening, September 22. The evening will be opened rith a platform meeting, at which J. I. Francis, superintendent of the city chools, will make the principal adress, on the subject, "Young Women f Today." This will be followed by n informal reception, at which the ntire association faculty, twenty-five number, will receive.

The reception will occupy the enre mezzanine floor, and with every alcony, corner and office thrown open nd decorated, an artistic as well as cordial reception is anticipated.

The public is invited to this general eception, at which everyone will have n opportunity not only to see what ork is carried on in the educational lasses, but to meet the instructors nd make inquiry with regard to the etails of the courses.

A HIVE OF ACTIVITY.

When the fall class work opens, on eptember 28, every hour from 9 clock in the morning until 9 o'clock the evening will be takengin lesson eriods, in which a larger variety of bjects will be taught than ever beore. Every room in the large assoation building that is available for ass work will be used, and a corps twenty-five instructors will be emoyed to direct the work of the difrent departments.

In addition to the regular classes in ymnasium work, which have been nducted during the past two years ith such marked success, having an rollment of over 900 in 1909-1910, the partment of physical education ofrs this year courses in swimming d outdoor athletics. Individual inruction will be given in these sports, t special arrangements will be made hereby pupils of the regular gymsium classes can enjoy them witht additional expense. Both day and ening classes will be held in this partment, among them two special y courses—one a normal course, anned for those who are interested the physical training field, which ll deal with the theoretical as well the practical side of gymnastic rk, and the other a children's course be given on Saturday mornings. is was a popular course last year, d called forth the loudest applause the time of the public demonstran when the youngsters, ranging om 4 to 14 years, appeared upon the or and performed their feats with the natural grace and childish deht that belongs to childhood.

The size and number of the classes s demanded the services of a new acher, Miss Hazel Gross of Kans City, who will act as assistant the department.

It will be necessary for those who an to take the courses in cooking arrange for them early, as many plicants were disappointed last year finding the classes already full. The nited number admitted to any one riod assures the most satisfactory aching, and the seven different urses offered are planned to suit ery need of both beginning and adnced pupils.

SECURE GOOD POSITIONS.

During the past school year 87 per nt. of the pupils in the commercial partment who wished positions as enographers and bookkeepers secured em and filled them satisfactorily. e length of time in which studious rls have completed this course has many instances been remarkably ort. Without interruptions or disactions, every moment of the school ssion is given to study or recitation, hich are most carefully regulated and atched over by the director of the hool, Mrs. C. E. Bean. Additional commodations are being provided for e pupils of this department this fall.

When the high school branches were ered at the association for the first ne a year ago, some persons thought was a foolish experiment, but one ar's trial has proved not only the visability, but the necessity for ofring grammar grade and high school rk at the association. Nearly fifty rls, who wished to make up work secure advanced standing in the blic schools, were enrolled in the mmer school, and since September 1 ere has been constant inquiry for e work of the Preparatory School, girls who are not physically strong ough to enter the public schools, and o have missed so much time in hool that they do not wish to enter elementary class, or who wish inidual instruction. Many also feelg satisfied in having graduated from e eighth grade, have taken the oprtunity of carrying a partial course ile they are preparing themselves earn their living in some other way.

The day and evening classes in a ge variety of English branches, inding correct English, rhetoric, comsition, literature, history, arithmetic, nmanship, expression and parlimenry law, offer opportunity to every man to continue her education or make up deficiencies in early edution. It is the chief aim of this edutional work to study the needs of e individual student and to make r work as practical as possible. To is end, small classes are the rule.

Special attention will be given this ll to the department of vocal music. l of this work will be under one inructor, so that the pupils can adnce from one class to another and ter the Choral Club as rapidly as ssible. The classes in sight-singing ll be preparatory to private work d to the Choral Club, in which memrship is free to members of the asciation. Piano, violin, mandolin and itar will be taught, and exceptionalfine work is expected of the orestra, which has had consecutive ars of work together. Classes in ench, Spanish and German will be ught, and also a class in training tendants for the sick.

With twenty-five competent instrucrs, adequate class room facilities and rary privileges, a most successful ucational year is anticipated.

A SPLENDID FACULTY.

The following are the instructors ith the branches they will teach: iss Camilla McConnell, director of eparatory School and instructor in nglish branches; Miss Bessie Pope, B. instructor in Preparatory School d English branches; Mrs. Dwight ttenhouse Brown, Ph. D., instructor English branches; Mrs. C. E. Bean, rector of Commercial School; Miss a M. Baldwin, instructor in penmanip; Miss Elizabeth Yoder, instructor expression; Mrs. J. A. Osgood, instructor in parliamentary law; Miss Kathryn Kent, instructor in Spanish; Miss Irene Corea, instructor in French and German; Mrs. Charles E. Pearce, director of School of Cookery; Miss Isabel Ansley, instructor in dressmaking and tailoring; Miss Laura Moore, instructor in sewing; Mrs. Charlotte Bush, instructor in millinery; Miss Helen Coan, director of School of Art; Miss Charlotte Mytton, instructor in book-binding; Miss Emily Rutherford, instructor in woodcarving; Miss Emma Waldvogel, instructor in embroidery and leather-tooling; Mrs. Caroline Tew, instructor in vocal music; Miss Carrie Conger, instructor in piano; Miss Ruth Grant, instructor in violin; Miss Helen Bacon, instructor in mandolin and guitar; William H. Mead, director of orchestra; Miss Ella Stevers, director of physical education; Miss Hazel Gross, assistant physical director; Dr. Mary P. Putman, instructor in training attendants for the sick.

A lecture course in current history will be given by Mrs. Lou V. Chapin. This course will be open to both men and women, and offers an unusual opportunity to busy people to keep up with the times.

The music lecture course will deal with standard compositions, which will be rendered in concert programmes during the year. Those who expect to attend the symphony and other concerts, will find in these illustrated lectures valuable preparation.

One of the new branches of work that has been taken up by the Educational Department is educational clubs. These are announced for the first time this year, and will include the following: Home Culture Club, New Books Club, German Club and Conversational Club. Miss Mary Keyes and Miss Emma Cayley will be the leaders of the last-named club, and are planning an interesting term's programme. All of these clubs are membership privileges, which will contribute much to the social as well as the educational life of those who join them.

Hundreds of splendid young women, who make their own way in the business houses of the city, find at the magnificent building of the association, a place for recreation, education and the influences of the home.

LOOKING FOR TROLLEY.

Preliminary Surveys in Progress for Road Into Anaheim—Street Numbers Disjointed.

ANAHEIM, Sept. 17.—Preliminary surveys are under way for an electric line to Anaheim by the Pacific Electric road. While the officials of the road refuse to make any positive statement of their intentions, there is reason to believe that Anaheim is to have an electric line at an early date. The engineer's office reports that the surveys will have been completed by the latter part of November or the first of December and that they will then take up the final and permanent survey. It is understood that the plan is next year to run the road on through to Placentia and up the Santa Ana River to Riverside. The development of thes ugar industry in this section, of which the Salt Lake route wants a share, is said to be one of the features which is urging the Pacific Electric to this move.

Anaheim people are protesting over the new time card in effect on the Santa Fé which necessitates a change or stopover in Fullerton going either to Los Angeles or Riverside or intermediate points. Instead of seven through trains to Los Angeles there are now but three, the others stopping at Fullerton. The Chamber of Commerce and Merchants' Association took the matter up at its last meeting and will ask of that road a better service. The chamber will also ask for two more trains on the Southern Pacific, which are needed to accommodate the residents of the western part of town. The Orange Chamber of Commerce has signified its willingness to participate in a strong joint letter to ask for the desired changes.

STREET NUMBERS DISJOINTED.

The Board of City Trustees is trying to devise an adequate numbering of the houses of Anaheim in accordance with the demands of the Postoffice department, preparatory to the establishment of free delivery service. Last week Inspector Knox was here to establish the service but found many of the houses not numbered or else numbered wrong. He stated that he could not make a favorable recommendation to the authorities at Washington until this condition is corrected. At least on:e-third of the houses are not numbered at all and many of these numbered wrong and it will be quite a job to get the matter straightened out as an entirely new system will have to be adopted. Many of the side streets intersect the main street only on one side and as the blocks have been numbered consecutively on each side without regard to the numbering on the opposite side, it has caused a confusion. It has the peculiar effect of running the numbers on one side of the street a couple of hundred higher than the other. Work is now in progress renumbering the streets and it is hoped to have them in condition within two weeks to be accepted by the department.

BANNING NOTES.

BANNING, Sept. 16.—F. J. Wiefels started for the Dale mining district yesterday, where he will exhume the body of the late owner of the Virginia Dale mine, whose death occurred in the desert last June.

While hunting for deer in the mountains near Banning, Richard Pierce, a transfer man of Glendale, shot a big lynx.

The bonds of Banning school district have been sold to San Francisco parties and work on an addition to the main building will be commenced very soon.

Take Off the Fat Where It Shows

Most women suffer much humiliation because of great quantities of fat, so located that, no matter how they dress, everybody sees that they are abnormal. This is the day of the slender figure, and fat women are simply not tolerated either in business or social affairs. Women may not know it, but men when they see a fat woman pass them on the street or in public places make all manner of sympathetic remarks about her. They do not mean to be unkind or to seem unmanly, but it is natural for a man to dislike fat on a woman. Where fat shows the most there is where it must be removed, and as quickly as possible. This season's dresses seem to be made for the fat woman's misery and the slender woman's delight. They expose all the charms of woman and her ugliness as well. Exercise and diet will not remove fat. This has been proved. The famous Marmola prescription which has met with such phenomenal success and has so many of our society women as its sponsors, is now being sold in tablet form to meet the demand of the public for this style of treatment. These little tablets go into your system just like food. They stop the stomach and digestive apparatus from producing fat and reduce the fat upon the body at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces a day. They are harmless and can be carried in your purse and taken even after you have indulged in a hearty meal away from home. They are sold at all drug stores at 75 cents a case, or if you prefer you may write the Marmola Company, 235 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

Puritas Distilled Water is the Pure Drinking Water.

It has the Wholesome Taste That Pure Water Should have—Free from Minerals.

Perhaps you have noticed how "brackish" the city water taste. To those accustomed to pure, soft drinking water it is not at all pleasant. As a matter of fact, it is not healthful, either—just because it contains considerable mineral deposits.

What is true of our city water is likewise true of most natural waters in Southern California. They flow through a highly mineralized soil and absorb the alkaline salts contained in the soil.

These salts cannot be assimilated by the human system. They become deposited in the arteries—a fertile cause of rheumatic and kidney troubles.

You should drink pure, soft water, that is the healthful and the "natural" drinking water.

The only way to get it hereabouts is to purchase Puritas Distilled Water and have a supply always on hand for general family use.

Puritas is twice distilled and aerated with pure ozone. We turn the water into steam twice, re-condensing the steam (the pure part of the water). The ozone is secured by passing a current of electricity through filtered air.

Puritas comes to you pure and sparkling. It is bottled in clean glass demijohns so carefully that it reaches you with all its wholesome purity intact.

Five gallons cost but 40c, delivered within the old city boundary lines. At outside points the cost is a trifle more. Puritas can be had through dealers at practically all the principal outside towns in Southern California.

For city delivery, phone us. Home 10053, Sunset Main 8191. Ask us about our Coupon Books, which enable you to buy Puritas at a discount. Los Angeles Ice & Cold Storage Co.

Good Clothes for Men and Young Men

Gentlemen—We are ready for you with a beautiful showing of new Fall Clothes. As usual, we've had the pick of many of the best makes produced in America.

Among them are two names worthy of special mention—Stein-Bloch Clothes—and Adler-Rochester Clothes.

For style, character and fitting qualities these splendid garments are in a class by themselves. Superior fabrics only are employed. And both these makers have the knack of getting individuality into their garments—certainly the new styles are superb!

We are showing these Suits from especially designed cases. The garments are all pressed and ready for immediate wear. This method also gives you a much better idea of just how any Suit will look on you—for it is pressed and finished, just as you would wear it.

We have these good Clothes at from $20 to $40 the Suit, and others, equally good value, at $15 up.

The Remarkable Experience of Mrs. An Johnson, 1432 San Pedro St., Los Angeles, Ca

The case of Mrs. Anna Johnson has baffled the skill of physicians. For 30 years she has been a victim of kidney and bladder and rheumatism troubles.

The doctors said: "Mrs. Johnson, you are 60 years old and must undergo such a dangerous operation."

The devoted daughter and friends, seeing the poor chances of her recovery, interfered and refused to allow the mother to go. As a last resort the friends insisted that a bottle of McBurney's Kidney and Bladder Cure be brought to the suffering patient. Haste was made to McBurney's office, and a bottle procured and hurried to the bedside of Mrs. Johnson. Doctors looked wise, friends and family anxiously awaited the results. One dose was given, and with eager watching to note the results; a change soon came; tears were changed to smiles; another dose was administered, the patient was improving. From the weak and emaciated condition, the patient realized her improvement, and soon McBurney's Kidney and Bladder Cure raised Mrs. Johnson from the deathbed of sickness, and today, dear reader, she is able to appear on the streets of Los Angeles, a different woman—due to what? Not to the doctors, but to that grand, never-failing remedy.

NAMES FOR CALIFORNIA'S STATELY HALL OF FAME.

I.

JUNIPERO SERRA.

By Rockwell D. Hunt, Ph.D.

THROUGH all time Junipero Serra deserves to be remembered as California's Knight of the Cross. He was chief among those pioneer Christian missionaries from Spain whose high courage and sublime faith were first among indispensable factors in the occupation and settlement of Upper California by the Caucasian race. His place is fixed beyond recall in our history.

The name given to the child Serra at baptism was Miguel José. Becoming at the age of sixteen a professed Franciscan, he assumed on that occasion, in memory of Juniperus, a friend and companion of St. Francis, the founder of his order, the name by which he was always best known—Junipero.

Growing friendship was with Junipero a master passion. The affectionate attachment which as a youth he formed for Palou, Verger and Crespi in the Majorca convent was never allowed to wane in later life. His loving devotion to the rude neophytes in the California missions was as constant as the north star, as fervent as the southern sun.

Junipero Serra was fifty-six years of age before his great life opportunity fully came. This is an eloquent tribute to the depth and persistence of his spiritual enthusiasm. He had [illegible] been toiling in New Spain for nineteen years with unfailing zeal. But not until after the suppression by Spain of the Jesuit Society in the New World in 1767 did the great opportunity of Serra and the Franciscans come. We can understand somewhat the sacred joy that filled his soul on receiving the appointment of Father-President and the commission, at the head of a band of sixteen missionary padres, which placed him in control of the religious forces in Alta California. The military occupation was entrusted to Capt. Gaspar de Portola.

Concerning Alta California little indeed was then known. True it had been discovered far back in the autumn of 1542 when, a brief half-century after the great Columbian expedition, Juan Rodrigues Cabrillo, a Portuguese captain sailing under the flag of Spain, entered the beautiful harbor of San Diego. But for specific information about the coast line—woefully meager at best—the Spanish government was chiefly indebted to the expedition of Sebastian Viscaiño, conducted in 1602-03. This intrepid captain had fortunately made careful record of the San Diego Bay, the country about Monterey and Cape Mendocino. From 1602 it was the long period of a century and two-thirds before the first actual settlement was planted north of peninsular or Baja California; but fortunately this record had been preserved and on it chief reliance was now placed.

The first day of July, 1769, was the day on which the "original pioneers by land and sea" joined forces at San Diego, after perils and vicissitudes unknown in our favored generation. It was the day on which Father Junipero Serra, missionary representative of the Catholic Church, and Gov. Portola, representative of the Spanish secular power, came together, thus completing an expedition ever memorable in our annals.

A fortnight later, the sixteenth day of July, the Father-President, in humble gratitude but with exaltation of spirit, with appropriate ceremony raised the cross of Santa Fé, and after preaching earnestly to the simple-hearted natives formally dedicated Mission San Diego de Acala. As our minds dwell upon the wonderful mission system that followed, we can readily imagine the devout Serra saying, "All my life has been lived for this glorious day."

The later work of Father Junipero in founding missions is easily told but not soon to be forgotten. After the first overland expedition under Portola had failed of its purpose—but had resulted accidentally to the discovery of San Francisco Bay—Serra sailed for Monterey, and on the third day of June, 1770, founded Mission San Carlos de Monterey. When the ceremonies closed with a ringing Te Deum under the great oak that five generations before had sheltered valiant Viscaiño, the religious occupation of Upper California was a reality, proudly published throughout the Spanish possessions.

Then followed for the Father-President years of unremitting toil, incessant struggle, incredible sacrifice, all suffered with surpassing fortitude and crowned with heroic achievement. "There seemed no limit to his endurance, no bound to his desires, nothing daunted his courage or chilled his faith."

The other missions founded by Serra in Alta California were: San Antonio de Padua, July 14, 1771; San Gabriel, September 8, 1771; San Luis Obispo, September 1, 1772; San Francisco (Dolores,) October 9, 1776; San Juan Capistrano, November 1, 1776; Santa Clara, January 18, 1777, and San Buenaventura, March 31, 1782.

The soul of Junipero ran ever serene, apparently above the physical suffering that was ever with him; to baptize the simple natives was his consuming passion; to save a soul from death "filled him with unspeakable joy." At three score years and ten, lame, weary, scarcely belonging to this world, but with tireless devotion and spirit transcendent, for the last time he made the loving pilgrimage on foot along El Camino Real from San Diego to Monterey, not failing to turn aside into the many rancherias to bestow comfort upon the Indian disciples. It was past New Year's when he reached San Carlos. It was his last long journey before departing for "The undiscovered country from whose bourne

No traveler returns."

San Carlos del Carmelo was the official residence as well as spiritual retreat of the venerable Father-President. Devotedly did he love the mission church, set in the midst of the smiling valley by the side of the gentle flowing river.

On New Year's Day of 1782 Junipero's friend Crespi had said his last farewell but his faithful comrade Palou stood with him in the hour of death. For forty years he had been Serra's nearest friend, and his biography of the great preceptor is the chief source of our knowledge of this character, so austere and yet so gentle, so asceptic and yet so enthusiastic.

Father Junipero's prayer that he might die at his favorite mission and rest beside his faithful friend Crespi was granted. The mission church fitly became his tomb. If this habitually serious man entered not into the worldly amusements and remained a stranger to the arts and sciences of the modern age, what matters it? If at times he was intolerant of the dissolute soldiery, was there not cause? To him religion was everything; his traits were humble sincerity, godly zeal and utter consecration. These traits conspired to make Junipero Serra chief among heroic characters in the history of our Franciscan missions—California's Knight of the Cross.

DISPUTE OVER A HORSE RACE.

OWNERS, JUDGES AND EXPERTS FAIL TO AGREE.

Now the Case Has Gone Into the Courts to Determine Who Is Entitled to Stakes—Yuma Citizens Celebrate Completion of the New Courthouse With Grand Ball.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

YUMA (Ariz.) Sept. 16.—Yuma sportsmen are divided into factions over a dispute arising from a horse race which terminated unsatisfactorily last Sunday, between Felix Mayhew's horse "Wherewithal" and the horse "Arizona," imported by the Hodges brothers from Los Angeles to run against him.

The owners put up a substantial purse, and much money was wagered on the side. The race attracted the attendance of most of Yuma's population. After a start had been secured one of the starters fired a shot for the jockeys to return, and Wherewithal's rider pulled in.

The Mayhew jockey continued to the finish, contending that as the word "go" had passed the race was on.

Several days of disputation followed, the Hodges endeavoring to secure another race for the stake. Mayhew claimed he had won the race and the money. Two racing officers of the Territorial Fair Association at Phoenix were appealed to by the Hodges, and they decided "no race."

The three judges selected at the track then rendered a final decision, two of them, T. A. Behrenfeld and James Meadows, that Mayhew should put his stake money down and the race should be run for the Hodges' stake money; if the latter refused, they should forfeit the money.

The third judge, John Wadin, decided that Mayhew's horse "was the only one to cross the finish line."

The Hodges brothers refused to comply with this award, and today James Hodges brought suit against Paul Moretti, the stakeholder, to recover the money put up to back "Arizona."

Yuma county citizens celebrated by a grand ball the completion of the new County Courthouse, which has been formally turned over to the county by the constructing contractors, John Wadin and Charles Olcester, and accepted by the Board of Supervisors. The building is an imposing and artistic structure comprising two stories of office suites for the county officials, surmounted by an observatory tower and dome, with a strong County jail adjoining. It is constructed of pressed brick manufactured in Los Angeles.

The City Council plans to cut Second street through to the building in the near future. The cost of the building is $47,500.

E. F. Sanguinetti has made arrangements to open a branch store at the [illegible] mine in California, twenty miles from Yuma. This property will start up a fifty-stamp mill in a few days, as soon as a pipe line to the Colorado is completed.

A daily mail service has been established between Yuma and the town of Bard on the opened lands of the Yuma reservation.

John R. Young and family, who have been visiting relatives here on their return from an extended visit to Canada, left this week for Los Angeles, where they will locate.

Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Cull have returned from a two months' trip in the East.

A force of workmen has begun the construction of a long-distance telephone line from Yuma to Tucson.

Miss Merrill O. Durham, a daughter of J. Wesley Durham, of Philaphia, and a niece of the late Isreal Durham, Republican political leader of Philadelphia, and her guest, Miss T. Wood, also of the Quaker City, recently rescued A. G. Sheehan and A. G. Wordman, of New York, when the latter overturned in their canoe at Lake Placid, New York.

The two young women and their escort, Eugene O'Conner, of New York, were in a motor boat when they came upon the upset canoe, which had been capsized by a sudden gust.

Both of the canoemen were clinging to their overturned craft, but the water was so cold and the distance so great that it would have been well-nigh impossible for them to swim to shore.

RETALIATION.

Italy, in Revenge for Accidental Premier of Puccini and Mascagni Works, Would Produce Opera.

A singular event of the last week has afforded an additional illustration of the growing musical significance of this country. As readers are aware, says the Boston correspondent of Musical America, there has been some indignation expressed of late in Italy because two operas by Mascagni and Puccini are to have first performances in America. Probably no one on this side, however, has realized the depth of this feeling. It is rather a pity, in some instances, that Americans do not display a little more of the same spirit. It seems that in one city of Italy the Italians have decided to retaliate and have bent their efforts toward securing the rights for the first production of F. S. Converse's "Sacrifice."

Carlo Venzaghi, a manufacturer of Milan, and a force, it is said, in the management of the famous La Scala, recently arrived in Boston for the purpose of arranging the matter. Mr. Converse being absent at the time of Venzaghi's arrival, the meeting did not take place, for Mr. Venzaghi was obliged to depart before Mr. Converse returned. But Mr. Venzaghi will soon be back in Boston, and although knowing that it is intended to produce "The Sacrifice" first at the Boston Operahouse, he states that he will leave no stone unturned to secure Mr. Converse's consent to his project.

During the new season of the Monnaie in Brussels, which reopened last Thursday, at least six novelties are to be staged. These are Jean Nougues's "Quo Vadis?" Richard Strauss's "Feuersnoth," Puccini's "Manon Lescaut," Gabriel Dupont's "La Glu," which was first heard last spring in Nice; Charles Radoux's "Oudelette" and the new "Ivan the Terrible," Raoul Gunsbourg's attempt to make a more effective opera than his Russian predecessor achieved with the subject. In the meantime, the operagoers of Brussels are eagerly looking forward to another "sound of revelry by night" on the 24th of this month, that Belgium's capital may gather then "her beauty and her chivalry, while bright the lights shine on fair women and brave men" at the Monnaie, when Frances Alda, Caruso and Pasquale Amato appear in "La Boheme."

UNPARALLELED.

THE THEATER'S BIGGEST YEAR.

GREAT STRUGGLE BETWEEN SYNDICATE AND INDEPENDENTS.

Hamburger's Majestic Theater, With an Unprecedented Line of Brilliant Attractions, Faces Mason, With Its Fine Bookings—Patronage Will Forecast Future.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

If the people of Los Angeles want good shows and plenty of them, they must testify to that effect this winter.

The Shuberts and the Syndicate, entered in the local arena for the producer's heavyweight championship, have laid down the articles of a stupenduous battle. Hamburger's Majestic Theater and the Mason Operahouse face each other with unparalleled lines of attractions.

"Seven Days" concluded at the Mason Operahouse last night, and at the Majestic, Wilton Lackaye will ring down finally this evening.

Thus ends the first round, if we are to contribute our ring metaphor, for both the Hamburger theater and Mason have several weeks of dark time—two for the first-named and three for the latter—and then will commence, with practically no interruptions, the weekly succession of winter shows.

The season for travelling attractions has started badly.

The Majestic, true enough, got off wrong with the sissy "Lottery Man," which was as punk an advertisement for a new line of productions as was ever foisted on a guileless and well-meaning manager. But there followed Wilton Lackaye, in "The Battle," a play which was striking in its strength and truth, although perhaps not technically perfect. Business was bad, far beneath what a man of this standing and a play of this worth deserved.

The Mason was no whit behind in its false jump at the post. After "The Spendthrift" had been almost perfectly presented at the Belasco, came along the emasculated version with a collection of mediocrity, and the public arose and spewed it out of its mouth. Immediately succeeding "The Spendthrift," we saw that Petit Trianon of comedy architecture, "Anti-Matrimony," "The Easiest Way," than which no more powerful nor factful play has even been written in America, and lastly that bubbling, ice-cream-soda of farce, "Seven Days," Business, rotten.

Whether "The Lottery Man" and "The Spendthrift" killed their successors, or whether, through people being still from town—or simply disinclined to the theater—the audiences lackadaisically stayed away, all of these shows deserved far more attention than they received.

Bad patronage at a good show hurts the town more than the show, for it means that the management, "sore" at the treatment accorded their expensive company, will next year either obliterate the town from the map entirely, or send a cheap, clap-trap company—at the same top prices.

There is a double line of great shows headed westward. Los Angeles is now one of the three Syndicate "stands" in the West, the other two being Salt Lake and San Francisco. John Cort, the new Napoleon of the playhouse, has already campaigned from a theatric Lodi to a thespianic Jena, and has ruthlessly reduced the strongholds of those who patronizingly refused to consider him a great man. The Syndicate has been narrowed, but it will concentrate on the three places named.

Through Cort, the route of the Shubert shows is continuously assured, and the whole list of attractions, which has been piling and piling upon them in the past two years since their rise in power, will be hurled into the West.

If these things, both syndicate, and anti-syndicate, are accorded a just measure of patronage this year, Los Angeles will be fixed upon the map as one of the six or eight really "big" stands of the country. If not—well, it wouldn't be "never again," but it would take a succession of seasons for the town to recover from the body-blow administered it in the booking offices.

This column is neither pro nor anti. It has no faith whatever in the charity, philanthropy or the self-sacrificing spirit of Mr. Shubert or Mr. Erlanger. It believes that both gentlemen care little what towns or what shows are on the map, as long as they can extract profits. But in order to do this, competition—the eternal life-spark of progress—is going to force them, from time to time, to make really fine productions. They will have to deliver the goods, and if Los Angeles exhibits a preference for all-wool over shoddy, she will get all-wool.

I heartily hope that the inferior productions will be made to sneak out of town profitless this year—and I sincerely trust that the good things will receive a welcome which will make the producers send more good things.

Hamburger's Majestic Theater will reopen October 3, with Margaret Illington in her new play, "For All Eternity," a story of mother-love.

Then comes Walker Whiteside's in Israel Zangwill's powerful drama of racial amalgamation, "The Melting Pot."

"The Prince of Pilsen," with the old cast, headed by Jess Dandy.

John Mason, probably in "A Son of the People."

Fields and Lewis, brand-new musical comedy stars.

Viola Allen, in the Hall Caine play, "The White Sister."

Clyde Fitch's last play, the most sensational piece in a decade, "The City."

William Faversham, in a new production.

Alla Nazimova, in repertoire.

DeWolf Hopper, in a new musical play.

Jefferson DeAngelis, in another.

John Cort's musical show, "The Kissing Girl."

Bisson's great emotional drama, "Madame X," a Savage production.

James T. Powers, in "Havana."

Maxine Elliott, in repertoire.

Frank Daniels, in a new musical piece.

The most brilliant (musically) light opera production of the past ten years, "The Chocolate Soldier."

"The Merry Widow."

Marie Dressler, in "Tillie's Nightmare," pronounced the funniest thing in New York this summer.

Lew Fields's big production of "The Midnight Sons."

Blanche Ring, in "The Yankee Girl."

Grace Travers,

Oliver Morosco's most recent acquisition for his Burbank company. Miss Travers has made a striking success in "Salvation Nell" as the half-world woman, Myrtle Odell, as whom she is pictured here.

The big Sothern-Marlowe productions will go to the Auditorium.

The Mason Operahouse, the Syndicate theater, wil reopen October 10, with Rose Stahl in "The Chorus Lady."

Other attractions—not consecutively—are Otis Skinner, in "Sire."

Billie Burke, in a new comedy by the authors of "Love Watches."

Henry Miller, in a fascinating light comedy—an unusual departure for Miller.

Francis Wilson, in his own play, "The Bachelor's Baby."

"The Fortune Hunter," the greatest comedy success of last season.

"The Arcadians," a big musical spectacle, with Frank Moulan.

Blanche Walsh, in repertoire.

"The Girl in the Taxi"—said to be slush for the prurient.

William H. Crane, in a new play.

Ethel Barrymore Colt, in Pinero's grim and gloomy "Mid-Channel."

"Is Matrimony a Failure?" David Belasco's farcical triumph.

"The Lily," powerful play of modern French life, with Nance O'Neill.

Sir Charles Wyndham and Mary Moore, in repertoire.

The big English musical comedy, "The Dollar Princess."

Montgomery and Stone in "The Old Town."

Raymond Hitchcock, in "The Man Who Owns Broadway."

"Little Nemo."

Joseph Weber, in a new production.

John Drew, in his new success, "Smith," with Mary Boland.

Maude Adams, in "Chantecler," and something else.

William Gillette, his farewell tour in a large repertoire.

Robert Hilliard, in "A Fool There Was."

Marie Tempest, exquisite English comedienne whom all theater-goers should see.

Anna Held, in a new production.

David Warfield, in the new play David Belasco is now finishing for him.

Mrs. Fiske, in repertoire.

"Arsene Lupin," William Courtenay, star.

Sarah Bernhardt, her hundred and somethingth farewell to America.

The Bankers.

"The Maid of Manalay," Harry Girard's new musical comedy, will be presented at the Auditorium for one week, beginning September 26. Agnes Cain-Brown wil sing the title role, Miss Vida Ramon alternating with her. Henry Balfour and Fred C. MacPherson will alternate as Lieutenant Ney Val Flagg; J. B. Sherry Reeves and Ray Padrick, as Admiral Att. Miss Hazel Runge will sing the role of the Widow Tarbox and Edward Philbrook, that of Prince Mehoku. Other parts are "Reddy" Wiggins, in which Carroll Johnson and W. R. Ream, Jr., will appear, and Hua, a native wine seller, a dainty bit for Miss Edith Salyer and Miss Alma Murphy. The comedian honors have been handed over to T. J. Flinn and C. F. Seidel. "This" and "That" are the pair of odd little sailors, commissioned to find the thing that sets the clock ahead. Miss Alma Murphy and Miss Jesselyn Van Trump will alternate as "This," and Miss Sherry Reeves and Miss Aline Randolph as "That." A double octette of nurses and ensigns complete the principal persons in the cast. They are the Misses Dolly Schmidt, Ione Gale, Violet Hughes, Eleanore X. Navarre, Anne McBane, Virginia Kellam, Stanley Beatrice Dobbin and Madge Sheppard, with Bank Clerks F. A. Sansome, R. T. VanCleave, John Caldwell, Earl J. Mitchell, S. W. Kerr, F. H. M'Cormick, Frank Forgey and A. M. Sparks. The chorus will contain eighty local girls and bank boys

Composer Honored by King.

The Official Gazette of Rome announces that the King of Italy, acting on the suggestion of the Minister of the Interior, and the president of the Council of the Civic Order of Savoy, has made Arrigo Boito a Councillor of the Savoy order. Although Arrigo Boito considers himself primarily a composer, he is far more widely known as the librettiest of Verdi's "Otello" and "Falstaff" than as the composer of "Mefistofele." The Muse seems to have coquetted with him shamelessly in his attempt to make a monumental operatic figure of Nero, as he but recently completed the task which he began thirty years or more ago. No announcement has been made as yet of a prospective premiere of "Nero."

THE WEEK.

"STRONGHEART" AT BURBANK.

MOROSCO COMPANY WILL REVIVE COLLEGE PLAY.

"Such a Little Queen" Will Continue at the Belasco, With Eve Kelly in Her Delightful Role—Minnie Dupree at the Orpheum—Los Angeles Programme.

"Strongheart," the drama of the Indian who was accepted as a brother, but not as a brother-in-law, by his white college chums, will be the attraction at the Burbank for the week beginning with the matinée today. This is one of the best college plays written, as it contains not alone the breezy, light-hearted spirit of the university, but has a background of serious drama which makes it more than of passing interest. Soangataha, the son of an Indian chief, has gone through college with all sorts of honors, and is one of the most popular men of his class. He is a leader in athletics, the lion of social functions and friend and adviser of all. But he falls in love with the sister of his best friend, and discovers that he is barred from matrimony of all his relations with the white race. It is not the girl, but her brother who objects. At this juncture a messenger arrives from Soangataha's tribe with the news that the old chief is dead and Strongheart is now chief. In his place, the tribe demands his return—alone. They, too, decline to approve any mixed marriage for their leader. While this serious drama is being worked out to its logical conclusion, the lighter motive, tragic in its youthful seriousness, of a conspiracy to ruin a football team and lose the big game of the year, runs along gravely, interspersed with laughter and thrills. A. Byron Beasley, who made a hit in the name part last year, will play it again, and the entire Burbank company will be seen in his support, which will be complete right down to Siegfried.

The Belasco audiences have showed such a pronounced liking for "Such a Little Queen" that this comedy romance by Channing Pollock will be continued for a second week, commencing tomorrow night.

While essentially a comedy, "Such a Little Queen" holds all the elements of the successful play; there are moments when the play touches a melodramatic level; the story of the young queen and her faithful old Minister of State and their deplorable financial circumstances in New York contains much pathetic and sentimental interest. The love story that runs throughout the four acts of the play is one of the most charming romances any stage writer has provided during recent years, while Mr. Pollock's comedy is always high class and the laughs that come so frequently during the progress of the play are the result of clean, genuine humor of the sort that leaves a pleasant memory.

Miss Eve Kelly's portrayal of the young queen is a constantly-delightful performance; she brings to the role a fascinating personality, she is a beautiful young woman and she acts with intelligence, discretion and ability. In her comedy scenes, Miss Kelly is particularly effective, and the Belasco audiences have taken to her with an astonishing avidity. Mr. Stone as the young king, Stephen IV, is seen in a role in which he is at his very best, while Richard Vivian's Robert Trainor, a young New York business man, is one of the best things of the production.

After "Such a Little Queen" the Belasco company will give the first stock company performance of Clyde Fitch's comedy success, "Girls."

Minnie Dupree, who has stepped out of the legitimate, where she made a success in "The Road to Yesterday," head-lines the coming Orpheum bill beginning with the Monday matinée, presenting Frank Ferguson's dramatic playlet, "The Minister's Wife." Miss Durpee needs no introduction as an actress. This is her first season in vaudeville, however. The sketch she presents deals with a minister who weds an actress; the complications ensuing in his congregation and family at the unconventional ways of his wife, and the final outcome, which, as may be easily guessed, is most happy. There is a sweet, wholesomeness about the sketch which makes it unusual even in vaudeville offerings.

Al Jolson, black-face comedian, who was the mainstay of the Dockstader minstrels on their last tour, has taken a brief flyer in vaudeville, playing exclusively the Orpheum houses, and he will enliven the coming bill with a series of his comicalities.

When cycling experts are mentioned one inevitably thinks of the Kaufmann family. This original and much-imitated bunch of experts will be here the coming week, the full sextette being included, with Frank Kaufmann featured. All that is possible and much that is seemingly impossible in the way of cycling feats is done by them, and they have, above all others, made the wheel a still popular implement of vaudeville skill. Besides their ability, they have abundance of good looks, especially the girls.

Renee, the "goddess of music," is an Orpheum importation, this being her début tour of the country. She is a beautiful woman, who has mastered a number of different instruments. She is particularly skilled in that odd instrument, the ocarina.

Holding over for another week are "The Operatic Festival; J. C. Nugent & Co., in "The Squarer;" Flanagan & Edwards, with their surprise, and the Harvey-DeVora trio, with little John Dough, while the new pictures will complete a bill that is varied, interesting and full of merit.

Individually and collectively the new bill which will open at the Los Angeles with the usual matinée on Monday appears to be a most attractive and inviting vaudeville programme.

Two unusual acts head the new bill, the first in importance being Albini, perhaps the most popular magician now appearing before the American public, and without a doubt one of the cleverest and most thoroughly mystifying illusionists that has ever visited the Pacific Coast. On this tour Albini brings a number of new and spectacular illusions and an entirely new series of sleight-of-hand tricks. Besides his regular exhibition, which lasts for thirty minutes, he will at all performances on Frday give his exposé of Anna Eva Fay, Mrs. Piper of Brooklyn, Palladini, Davenport Bros. and other so-called spiritualistic mediums and mind readers. He recently gave this exposé to San Francisco where it has caused no end of comment, and he agrees to donate $500 to any charitable institution in Los Angeles if he fails to expose any of the tricks of the above-named mediums.

Another fine act will be found in the rn of Beatrice McKenzie, Walter annon and their company, present- James Horan's musical sketch, ore Ways Than One." This is their st visit to the Pacific Coast and ey come here after having scored a cided triumph in all of the large stern vaudeville theaters. "More ays Than One" is just twenty min- es of the liveliest sort of entertain- ent. Miss McKenzie is a comedienne charm and ability and her songs and nces are really classics. Mr. Shan- n is one of the best vocalists in udeville. From a musical stand- int "More Ways Than One" is of a gh degree of excellence.

Another enjoyable number will be und in Harry Leeds and Trixie Le- ar, two Australian musical comedy ars who come with a number of ugh-provoking frolics which are en- rely new to American audiences, es- cially their ludicrous boxing exhibi- on. Another important number will George Devoy and the Dayton Sis- rs, a trio of bright and clever enter- iners. Others on the new bill will the Romano Brothers, two Austra- n athletes in a muscular posing act, and Bessie Allen, singing and dancing soubrette. Exclusive of these six acts will be the new comedy motion pictures.

DRAMAGRAPHS.

Type-Miniatures of Famous Playwrights, Actors, Authors Musicians and Managers.

Edgar Selwyn refused to take a curtain call when the public wanted to see the author of "The Country Boy," and it is said he was at a vaudeville house nevt door enjoying a moving picture.

An actor had to come out and apologize for the absence of James Forbes on the opening night of "The Commuters," and said Mr. Forbes could not be found, but he was standing in the wings where everybody could see him.

Beerbohm Tree has just produced "Henry VIII" at His Majesty's Theater in London, where it is said to be the most wonderful spectacle of modern times. The scenic effects are so elaborate that it requires over four hours to produce the play. A musical programme is one of the chief features.

George Broadhurst shook the sands of Asbury Park on Friday and hastened to Chicago to see the new cast in "The Dollar Mark" and observe how the "Girl and the Drummer" looks in its musical dress. He will soon confer with Nat Goodwin over the new play "The Captain," and then buckle down to work on a script for W. A. Brady.

Arnold Daly promises to pay his debts. He said so himself on his return from London on August 31. He has not set the date when he will dole out the money, but there are creditors a block long who are anxious to know when Mr. Daly will make a disbursement. The actor will start his season on October 15. He intends to revive "Ghosts," "You Never Can Tell" and "Arms and the Man," and will also appear in "Know Thyself."

Jane Noria is proud of the fact that she was one of the first, if not the first, to become a devotee of the hobble skirt in this country. Although she did not have on one of these particular creations on her return from Europe recently, her apparel was well calculated to make many of the female passengers on board the steamer green with envy.

It has remained for Algiers to hold the first Saint-Saëns opera festival. The directors of the Grand Theater in the African city have arranged to give over a week to "Samson et Delilah," "Henri VIII," "L'Ancetre," "Phrynne" and the ballet "Javotte," and the composer, who is more tolerant of Mediterranean vagaries than of Atlantic caprices, has promised to be present to enjoy in person the homage paid him.

Word came to New York September 5 of the safe arrival at its destination of the Segurança, the vessel which carried a number of Metropolitan Opera singers bound from New York to the City of Mexico. A severe storm in the Gulf of Mexico and the fact that the steamer was delayed thirty-six hours occasioned misgivings on the part of G. P. Centanini, director of the enterprise, but a message from his partner, Max Rabinoff, who is traveling with the singers, quieted his fears. Among the singers on the tour are Jane Noria, Riccardo Martin and Dinh Gilly.

Gertrude Quinlan, in "Miss Patsy," will be the way Henry W. Savage's announcements for his presentation of Sewell Collins' farce at Nazimova's Thirty-ninth street theater will read hereafter. Miss Quinlan, in other words, is now a star as officially as she made herself one unofficially by the excellence of her portrayal of the Patsy Boliver heroine on the opening night. Mr. Savage determined upon this move when he found that the majority of the critics had coincided with his own view of the performance that Miss Quinlan had demonstrated anew her fitness for stellar distinction.

"ORDER OF PALMS" IS VERY QUAINT INSIGNIA.

Manager Gets French Decoration Awarded Him Many Months Ago. Ellen Beach Yaw Concert for Benefit of Jewish Orphans' Home This Week—Incidental Mention.

BY JULIAN JOHNSON.

In a little casket of satin and leather, reposing for the most of the time in a private drawer of L. E. Behymer's desk, lies the insignia of "The Order of Palms," French decoration which was officially awarded the manager many months ago, and a mention of which was published in these columns at that time.

This decoration is awarded by the Minister of Public Instruction, for services of international importance to French art.

It is a tiny blue ribbon, from which is suspended a silver laurel studded with rubies and diamonds. Accompanying the decoration is an important, diploma-looking thing, done in oratorical French, under the hand and seal of the Minister just named.

Sara Bernhardt, Raoul Pugno and others were instrumental in securing for Mr. Behymer this honor.

There is but one other similar decoration in this country. It is worn by Oscar Hammerstein.

On Thursday evening, at the Auditorium, will occur the long-planned benefit concert for the Jewish Orphans' Home. An unusual programme will be presented, society has taken an unwonted interest in the event, the sale has been of large proportions, and as a charity it will likely set a record in local affairs of its kind.

Epecially energetic work had been done by the committee promoting this testimonial, and especially by Mrs. Berthold Baruch.

The principal artist of the evening will be Miss Ellen Beach Yaw, who has vouchsafed to the management of the affair the most elaborate and novel programme she has ever offered in Los Angeles.

Her numbers will include two excerpts from Delibes' "Lakme." These are the "Hindoo Prayer" and the "Bell Song." The latter is better known than the first, which is of great novelty and mystical beauty.

She will also sing Wider's "Il Primo Amore," the Brahms "Vergebliches Staendchen," by many requests the mad scene from "Hamlet" and the Masse, "Le Rossignol."

Of especial interest is the announcement that she will offer three of her own compositions, "Cradle Song," "Rose Child" and "Love's Lament." She is responsible not only for the delicate airs, but as well for the quaint verse.

Jay Plowe, one of the foremost flute virtuosi in the United States at the present time, will play the Chaminade Concertino, the Kohler Serenade and the Ardo "Rustic Dance."

Mrs. Mary Newman, pianist, will be heard in the Kuhlau Larghetto, with flute obligato by Mr. Plowe.

J. J. Falls, organist, will be heard upon the great Auditorium organ.

The one hundred and seventy-seventh recital of the Von Stein Academy was given in Gamut Auditorium Friday evening. A programme of exceptional diversity and musical character was presented by a large body of students. The large audience and the interest manifested demonstrated the attention being given to this institution's energetic and artistic accomplishments.

The opening faculty recital of the College of Musicians, Blanchard building, was given in Symphony Hall yesterday evening. Participants in the programme were Axel Simonsen, 'cellist; Ralph Wylie, violinist; Homer Grunn, pianist; Zoe Ballard Fuller, soprano, and Edwin House, basso.

Fred J. Ellis, baritone, late of Omaha, where he was director of the choir of the First Congregational Church, is a newcomer to Los Angeles, and has established himself in Blanchard Hall. Mr. Ellis is an energetic young musician, and will doubtless be a welcome addition to the local melody fraternity.

For the third week in September the Levy Café Chantant will present a bill of unusual merit, containing singing and dancing numbers that are well suited to a half-hour devoted to vaudeville entertainment. The coming of the Royal Hungarian Grozien troupe of dancers is sure to be welcomed, for of all the enjoyable acts presented at Levy's, probably the Russian dancers of a number of weeks ago were the most enjoyable. Operatic singers possessing the usual clear, penetrating voices of the Hungarians, they present Russian choruses, solos, duets and quartet numbers, finishing with the national Russian dance in costume.

The Countess Olga Rossi, also a Russian, has promised several numbers from the Russian folklore songs to complete the idea of a Russian half-hour. This little singer is each week making new friends and admirers through her charming personality, which seems excellently suited to the Muscovite songs, particularly of the light opera numbers in which she gained her first successes in Warsaw. This will be her last week.

The other dancing novelty will be as different from that of the Russians as it is possible to make in national methods of dancing. The Dobes-Borel duo are Americans, and have included in their skit all the new eccentric steps that seem to be possible only to the clog dancer of this country. Their singing of the popular songs has proven well worth while, especially as they have included in their repertoire a number not yet heard on the Coast.

The last artist on the programme is one well known to the patrons already, but one that seems to grow in favor from week to week, Grace Belmont.

Kammermeyer promises a new orchestral programme.

The Orpheus Club held its first rehearsal for the season of 1910-11 Monday evening, with a full attendance. The club has reëngaged for the coming season the same competent, energetic director, Joseph P. Dupuy, under whose able leadership it has achieved marked success in the past; and has also secured for accompanist Will Garroway, whose work with the club last year proved him to be one of the best artists in the city.

The club took up its work after the summer vacation with a dash and enthusiasm that promises even better results for the first concert, to be given the latter part of November, than the artistic programmes heretorfore rendered by that talented body of young singers.

Grand opera rendered by a foreign artist of note will be a feature this afternoon and evening at Bristol Pier Café. Arthur Stranger, who has a reputation across the water, already has aroused the enthusiasm of music lovers who have heard him in private recital. He will render eight numbers at the pier during the day and evening.

Genevieve Bach-Cuny, violin virtuoso, is a new artist scheduled for special performances. "Cavatina," by Raff, Ganne's "Gypsy Dance," and the Hungarian Rhapsodie will be among the offerings of this performer.

The favorite, Carmen Phillips, will appear again. She will sing late numbers and again her costumes will doubtless command attention.

Roderic Wanee, whose command of the pianoforte and whose baritone voice have earned him the admiration of the patronage, will play and sing. The new bill will be on each evening of the week from 6 o'clock until midnight.

The coming of Pavlowa and Mordkin and the imperial Russian ballet, announced by L. E. Behymer for next November, will bring to the Auditorium November 28 the greatest novelty of local amusement history.

The ballet is accorded a recognition in Russia unknown anywhere else in the world. It is supported by the government, which maintains schools devoted to that art, with a twelve years' course of instruction before public performances are permitted. Upon reaching the age of 32, members of the imperial ballet are pensioned for life and forbidden to dance in public on the theory that they have reached the zenith of their professional possibilities and that their retirement is necessary to main high standard of performance

There is a distinct literature to this art. Stories—call them operas or what you will—are for interpretation by the ball these are conveyed to the through the medium of facial sion and physical motion, spoken word.

The management of the tour terms its attraction "scen era," or "opera in action," and rying three complete scenic tions. The tour will be inter two engagements of three with the Metropolitan Opera pany of New York, with Pavlowa and Michael their first American appear March, when they were sensation of the opera season ing in the forthcoming tour.

Miss Violet Hughes, who will take an important part in the bankers' show.

EVENTS IN SOCIETY.

PARTIES, teas and dancing are temporarily forgotten by a score or more of the society girls who will take part in the bankers' show, which will be presented at the Auditorium the week of September 26. Among the fifty or more Los Angeles girls who are to assist in the success that is sure to attend the big event are many who have been studying music as one of the accomplishments to fit them for their social life. Each young woman in the show is primarily a singer, and most of them have the added attraction of beauty and grace. Some of the society buds who will don the costumes of Hawaiian natives or sailor girls for the event are: Misses Violet Hughes, Lillian Hamilton, Josselyn Van Trump, Alma Murphy, the Misses Edith and Alethea Salyer, Misses Mayme Sailer, Etta Couch, Gladys Willett, Aline Randolph, Dolly Schmidt, daughter of Mrs. John Schmidt and member of one of the oldest German families in Los Angeles; the Misses Angela and Florence Caspary, of a musical Irish family; Miss Madge Sheppard, former amateur tennis champion, who forsook tennis when she met with an accident and has been devoting herself to music since; Miss Ione Gale, a well-known singer, and Miss Hazel Hanocke.

Approaching Wedding.

Miss Charlotte Kendall, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Kendall of No. 1239 West Jefferson street, and her betrothed, Horace M. Russell, have chosen the evening of September 23 for their wedding, which will be solemnized at the family home. About 100 guests have been bidden to the interesting event. Miss Kendall, who will be given away by her father, will be attired in an imported gown of chiffon cloth with trimmings of pearls and lace. She will wear a veil fastened wtih orange blossoms. For travelling, she has decided upon a tailored suit of blue cloth. With this she will wear a large picture hat, trimmed with white swansdown and plumes. The only attendant will be little Margaret Bay, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Hiram Bay of Illinois, who are here for the wedding. She will be attired in a childish frock of pink, with large pink bows, and will carry a floral basket of rose petals. The decorations will be carried out in a green and white color scheme, roses, lilies and asparagus plumosus being used. Following the service supper will be served; later Mr. and Mrs. Russell will leave for Riverside, where they will make their home. Miss Kendall has resided in this city since childhood. She is popular, and her many friends have entertained with many prenuptial affairs in her honor, among them being a linen shower given by Mrs. Read Kendall and daughter, who entertained at their beautiful new bungalow home, No. 1234 West Forty-second street. An elaborate luncheon was served, after which a fishing match was enjoyed, and, in this novel way, Miss Kendall received her gifts. Large masses of carnations were used. A musical programme by Miss Lenore Hall was enjoyed. Next week Mrs. G. Lyman Proctor of Normandie avenue will entertain for Miss Kendall, which will conclude the series.

A pretty wedding of Wednesday last was that of Miss Flora Getchell, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Getchell, and John S. Jones, which took place at the home of her parents, No. 450 West Thirty-third street, Rev. J. A. Geissinger presiding. The bride was attired in a gown of cream lansdowne, hand-embroidered, and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses. For traveling she wore a gown of dark blue serge with hat to match. Miss Pearl Getchell, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a pretty creation of pale yellow silk mull. Her bouquet was of golden glow. The home was beautifully ornamented with white carnations, ferns, trailing vines and satin ribbon. Miss Helen Browne of Venice sang "I Love You Truly," as the bridal party approached and stood beneath a canopy of flowers and greenery suspended from which was a white dove. Refreshments were served in the garden, which was lighted with Japanese lanterns. A wedding trip will be taken by the young people, who will reside in their new home at No. 549 West Forty-fifth street.

List-McKee Nuptials.

Miss C. Augusta List, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. List of No. 155 Pasadena avenue, South Pasadena, became the bride at 3:30 o'clock Friday afternoon of Samuel Clarke McKee of Highland Park, the marriage taking place on a knoll overlooking the large lawn, at the bride's home, Rosen Kranz. Rev. William P. Swartz, P.H. D., of Poughkeepsie, cousin of the bride, officiated, assisted by Rev. William Beal Gantz, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Highland Park. Miss Sadie Douglass played the wedding march from "Lohengrin." During the ceremony Williel Thomson, Jr., played a violon obligato, and as soon as the wedding ceremony was over, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pickett Clapp and Mr. and Mrs. Greyson Merrill, a mixed quartette, sang a wedding hymn composed by the bride's uncle, Rev. Joel Swartz, D.D., of St. Louis, who, thirty years ago today, performed the ceremony in Harrisburg which united the bride's father and mother.

The bride, who was gowned in a draped white crepe de chine, trimmed in duchess lace and seed pearls, with a tulle wedding veil, tied with lilies of the valley, and carrying a shower bouquet of the same flower, was at-

Los Angeles' United Fashion Show, September 26th, 27th and 28th, 1910

The Dry Goods Merchants of Los Angeles have chosen the above dates to make a grand and united display of Autumn styles. An exhibit of every worthy fashion-favored creation associated with women's apparel. Never before, perhaps, in any city, has so interesting, so instructive or so unique an idea been hit upon. will be a Fashion Show worthy the name, and worthy Los Angeles. All the great Southwest will be in attendance. ¶ For this occasion the Blackstone establishme has been preparing for months. Every fashion center has been drawn upon. The best, the newest, the most exclusive in all our various lines have been secured this characteristic Los Angeles event. ¶ You are cordially invited to view the Blackstone exhibit. ¶ Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, 26th, 27th and 28th September. ¶ See poster announcement, page 13, part III, this paper.

Authentic Styles in Man-Tailored Suits

Look the town over—look the country over, and you'll not encounter suits of a higher class than at Blackstone's. Whether inclined toward the radical or the conservative in style we are equipped to please, to satisfy. And satisfy not only in cut, but in material, color and price.

New Suits at $35.00

Of particular interest is this line of suits at $35.00. Examine them critically: the materials, the styles, the tailoring and the finish.

Broadcloths, serges, diagonals, sackings and dozens of handsome rough finished mannish mixtures in the season's most popular colorings. You may think we are enthusiastic over this particular suit, but we have reasons for so being.

Charming New Dresses $15.00 to $250.00

We pride ourselves on our showing of evening and afternoon gowns. We've always made a specialty of this finery, but never before have we shown such an array, such assortments, such varieties, as we now lay before our patrons.

Silk and Chiffon Dresses $25.00

This new lot of gowns have every appearance of being custom made; not a suggestion of the "ready-made" about them. They possess all the style, the goodness of material and the painstaking work that your own modiste would bestow upon them.

Made of chiffon over a Persian figured silk with a deep band of satin around the bottom; gold lace trimming and the new cut-in-one-with-the-waist sleeve. Colors: Copenhagen, brown, navy and black. These we've marked specially for Monday $25.00

Interesting Waist Styles

The fashion centers of Europe as well as New York have contributed toward this waist exhibit. You should not miss the display; it's as instructive as it is pleasing.

Waists of Marquisette, of Crepe, of Chiffon, Lace and Net, Plain and Persian Silk, Hand Embroidered Linens, Wools, etc. All colors, all styles, all prices.

OUT-OF-TOWN SOCIETY

asadena.

OWING to the warm weather the call of the mountains and the ocean has been answered by many f the society folk of Pasadena, as a nsequence few social entertainments ave been given during the past week, ut those which have taken place have een elaborate and enjoyable. Among e smartest was an afternoon tea at hich Mrs. W. H. Smith, of Columbia treet was the hostess, in honor of Mrs. dward Doheny, of Chester Place, Los ngeles, and Mrs. Doheny's guests and riends from Mexico. Mrs. Smith was ssisted by her daughters, Mrs. Anson isk and Miss Lucy Smith. Refreshents were served in the garden at mall tables.

A pretty affair was the reception
Tuesday evening by Mr. and Mrs.
Allen, 180 East Walnut street, in or of the fiftieth anniversary of ir wedding. The decorations were yellow, the dainty menu carrying the color scheme. Refreshments served by Miss Hazel Allen, a daughter, Miss Mabel Lincoln and Clara Shaw. The guests included atives in Pasadena and the surrounding towns numbering about eighty-five. Mr. and Mrs. Allen have resided in Pasadena twenty-eight years.

Dr. F. C. E. Mattison and his daughter, Miss Bessie Mattison, of No. 295 West California street, entertained on Monday evening in honor of Mrs. S. J. Mattison, the charming mother of Dr. Mattison, who celebrated the anniversary of her birth. Refreshments were served during the evening. The guests were old friends of Mrs. Mattison.

Dr. and Mrs. Herman Reamer, of No. 524 South El Molino avenue, entertained on Tuesday evening, with a handsomely appointed dinner in honor of Dr. and Mrs. Bruce Lemmon, whose wedding of last week was one of the brilliant social affairs of the season. Cecile Bruner roses and ferns formed the centerpiece for the table, the place cards being handpainted pink roses, the accessories harmonizing with the flowers. Beside the guests of honor, those present were, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Herrell and their house guests, Mrs. Howard, Mrs. Bird and Miss Clara Mueller.

Mrs. Lena Croft was the guest of honor at a delightful surprise party on Tuesday afternoon, at which Mrs. W. D. Gibson and a number of her friends were hostesses, at the home of Mrs. Gibson, of No. 1890 North Raymond avenue. Mrs. Croft left on Thursday for Tucson, Arizona, where she will spend the winter. Those present were, Mesdames C. H. Dillman, Joseph Braun, G. W. Tuttle, J. A. Barnes-Short, C. W. Harkness, Lewis Williams, E. O. Nye, Robert Leslie, E. L. Daugherty, Samuel Marbel Joseph Rhodes, Schlintz, Homer Blick and H. H. Hayward.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Cattell of No. 762 South Los Robles avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Laura, to Earl Flanders The marriage will take place on Thursday, October the sixth, at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. Cattell is Assemblyman and prominent in the financial and political world of Pasadena.

Mrs. A. H. Fawcett of No. 200 South Marengo avenue entertained at a prettily appointed dinner at her home on Tuesday evening, in honor of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Spencer, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Spencer of Phoenix, Ariz. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Fawcett.

Miss Marian Lusby, whose marriage to Robert Brown of Versalia, takes place on the nineteenth of September, was the guest of honor at a shower given by Miss Isabel Smith of No. 632 Franklin street, on Tuesday evening. Refreshements were served during the evening, preceded by games and music. Manan Chochet roses and ferns were used in the decorations throughout the rooms.

Those present were, Mesdames F. G. H. Stevens, D. W. Wilhite, C. W. Anderson, Charles Mapel, Ball; Misses Florence and Birdie Lusby, Fannie Crawford Sena Muller, Katherine Haag, Mildred Wheeler, Gertrude Alcasser, Alice Shoemaker, Ethel Doty, Mary Noisi and Maud Mapes.

Mrs. S. Hazard Halsted of No. 90 North Grand avenue was hostess on Wednesday afternoon at a small and perfectly appointed luncheon in honor of a few Los Angeles friends. Covers were laid for six.

Among the pretty affairs of Wednesday afternoon was the shower at which Mrs. Edward Ogier of Mountain street was the hostess in honor of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Joseph Ogier, a bride of a few months. The decorations were in the Japanese fashion, the cloth for the table and the place cards being of exquisite Japanese work. Those present, besides the guest of honor, were: Mrs. Roy Kellogg, Mrs. Ralph R. Hansan, Mrs. W. W. Ogier, Miss Ernestine Topliff, Miss Bess Putnam, Miss Ruby Lee, Miss Bess Wells, Miss Caroline Nichols, Miss Viola Nichols and Miss Imogene Furlong of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Arthur Chase of Clebourne, Tex., a guest and sister of Mrs. Carl Enos Nash of Galena avenue, entertained the members of the Fortnightly Five Hundred Club Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Nash. Luncheon preceded the game. Guests of the afternoon were: Miss Hubbard of Clebourne, a guest of Mrs. Chase; Mrs. Neal K. Traylor, Miss Maisie Lynch and Miss Mabel Gould. The members include: Mmes. Jay Cook, Robert Lacey, Jay Harrington, Roland Laws, Julian Adams, William Landis, Misses Augusta Gould, Cora Hill, Beulah Haskell and Florence Doolittle.

Miss Florence Thomson of South Orange Grove avenue entertained with a box party at the Belasco on Thursday afternoon. Tea was enjoyed at the Alexandria after the play. The guests included: Mrs. Thomson, Misses Elizabeth McMechen, Katherine Wadsworth and Frances Drake.

Formal announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Florence Morton of No. 151 North Marengo avenue to William Henry Archdeacon of Pasadena. The wedding will take place some time during the autumn.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Elmer Wilcox of South Orange Grove avenue left for the East on Tuesday morning. They will be absent about two months.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gray of Oak Knoll left Wednesday morning for the East, where they will make a visit of several weeks.

Clarence B. Hall of South Grand avenue left on Wednesday morning for a month's stay in Chicago.

Benjamin Folsom of South Orange Grove avenue left Wednesday for the East, where he will join Mrs. Folsom for a visit of several weeks. They will return to Pasadena about the first of October.

Prof. and Mrs. George Ellery Hale and family of Buena Vista street have gone abroad for an indefinite stay. It is hoped by friends the stay will benefit Prof. Hale's health.

Dr. and Mrs. Norman Bridge, formerly of Pasadena, have taken a handsome house in Chester Place, Los Angeles, where they will make their future home.

Dr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Condit of Palmetto Drive left for an extended trip in the East on Tuesday.

Maj. and Mrs. John Bell Mhoon and daughter, Miss Marjorie Mhoon, formerly of No. 60 South Euclid avenue, have taken apartments for an indefinite stay at Hotel Maryland.

Mrs. Harlow W. Bailey, accompanied by her daughters, Misses Florence and Dorothy Bailey, left on Thursday morning for New York, where the Misses Bailey will enter Briarcliff School.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Macy and children of North Grand avenue have returned home, after spending the summer at Venice.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur J. Austin of South Orange Grove avenue returned on Thursday, after a for months' trip in the East. They were accompanied by their nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Lois Robers, of Richmond, Ind., who will spend the winter here, as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Austin.

South Pasadena.

ONE of the largest and most delightful affairs of the week was the "500" party given by Mrs. Louis Luckel Thursday afternoon at her home, No. 1824 Laurel street, complimentary to her two sisters, Mrs. Otto Duane Lefler and Miss Birk of Indianapolis, Ind. Vari-colored dahlias and yellow acacias were used to ornamnet the living-room, while roses were used in the balance of the home, where the card tables were arranged and the dainty refreshments served. Prizes were captured by Mrs. J. L. Atkinson, Miss Emma Kaiser, Miss Bess Nelson, Mrs. Robert Hardy, Miss Engelhard and Mrs. Carl McStay. Present besides were: Mmes. Ernest Adams, Emil Kirchner, L. Staines, J. Lincoln, Charles Winter, Charles Williams, George Mc-

"CASTLE OAKS," the delightful country home of Mr. and Mrs. Will Griffiths, situated southwest of this town, in the hollow of the Puente Hills, and shadowed by gigantic millennial live oaks, is often visited by prominent members of Los Angeles society, who motor over and enjoy many a dainty feast around the hospitable board. Thursday evening Mrs. Griffiths was the hostess at an elaborate twelve-course dinner, given at 8 p.m. to celebrate her husband's birthday. The floral decorations were strikingly beautiful. Long-stemmed American Beauty roses graced the parlor, in cut glass and Bohemian vases. The dining-room was in a scheme of delicate pink, La France roses forming the centerpiece, and broad pink ribbon bows being used with effect. The same tint appeared in some of the courses and accessories.

made with beauty of tone as a first and chief consideration

NOT but what there are no other pianos which possess beautiful, rich, inspiring tone. But it is doubtful if an instrument has ever been produced in which more attention was given to tone quality, or with better results. Each part of the piano, every stick, every bolt, has been fashioned of material that would add to the resonance and mellowness of the Krakauer's tone, the tone that is a criterion in musical circles.

Every piano marked in plain figures with the only price for which we sell it.

BEAUTIFUL HANDS AND ARMS

A Famous Beauty Gives Her Secret to the World.

A Free Prescription You Can Prepare at Your Own Home.

Many women take perfect care of their face and clothes, yet neglect their hands. Rough, red hands are almost as unattractive as ill-kept teeth.

It is a simple, easy matter to keep your hands smooth and beautiful. The following prescription, which you can compound at your own home, is famous for the marvelous, instantaneous result it gives:

Get from your druggist one ounce of Kulux Compound. Put it in a two-ounce bottle, and quarter of an ounce of witch hazel, fill with water and shake well.

You will be surprised at the result when applied to your hands, arms or neck. Blemishes of every kind disappear as if by magic. Freckles, tan, rough skin, coarse pores yield instantly to this application. This is the private prescription of a famous Parisian Beauty.

$3.50 Recipe Cures Weak Kidneys Free

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining, Swelling, etc.

Stops Pain in the Bladder, Kidneys and Back.

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say good-by forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too-frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K553 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever

DR. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S ORIENTAL CREAM OR MAGICAL BEAUTIFIER

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth Patches, Rash, and Skin Diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of 60 years, and is so harmless we taste it to be sure it is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. Dr. L. A. Sayre said to a lady of the haut-ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the skin preparations." For sale by all druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers in the United States, Canada and Europe.

Announcing the Arrival of

New Fall Suits and Dresses

For "Juniors," Misses and Women

TOMORROW'S Showing of New Fall Ideas will be the most complete of the season to date. Express shipments have been coming in daily, bringing us models in Suits and Dresses that possess real style distinction.

The new Dresses include simple, man-tailored models in Serges and Broadcloths designed especially for street wear. There are also many high class garments for evening wear—Dresses in Velvets, Silks, Chiffon, Satins and Soisette.

Among the new colorings are Bruin, King's Blue, Sardonyx, Wistaria and Gold. There are many effects in quieter tones as well. We have simple Dresses for as little at $16.50, from which figure prices range up to $85.

While many fancy trimmed models are shown among the new Suits, the plain, simple, mannish effects are more in evidence. Our showing of these is especially strong—beautifully tailored models in smooth surface and rough weaves, Worsteds, Cheviots, Tweeds and beautiful Serges. Extra good values are shown at $25—and others equally strong at $27.50, $32.50, $35 and up to $65.

We would especially emphasize the perfect tailoring and thorough workmanship in all our garments. Fabrics are superior, Linings are of the highest type. We invite critical examination. Our time and knowledge are very much at your service.

An exclusive Harris & Frank model, sketched from life in our Women's Department. This is only one of many High Class Dresses that we will show for the first time tomorrow.

Lungs Declared Sound—Life Insurance Granted.

If you knew a remedy that really had cured Tuberculosis; that had saved from death quite a number of people, would you try to get Consumptives interested in it and induce them to take it; or, would you say nothing about it, for fear of giving offense?

We know the medicine. We know the people cured—some of them. We have the stories of cure of many—and affidavits from some. We advertise Eckman's Alterative to tell those who have lung disease what has been done by its use. Investigate the following:

1418 W. Dauphin St., Phila., Pa.

Gentlemen: "On the evening of May 13, 1907, I had five hemorrhages from the right lung. My hemorrhages kept up for one week—I had twenty-eight in all. Septic pneumonia developed. My doctor told me I had better go to another climate, as my left lung had also become affected.

About that time I met Howard Klotz, 1619 Susquehanna ave., this city, who had hemorrhages several years ago and who was cured by Eckman's Alterative. I started to take Eckman's about the latter part of August, 1907. My appetite improved at once and in about two weeks I started to gain weight. I improved steadily. Later, a very bad lameness developed in my right leg and I commenced to get a lump on my right hip. My doctor told me I was getting a tubercular abscess and that it was affecting the sciatic nerve. The lameness and lump gradually disappeared. Have not had any trouble of that nature since.

Since my recovery about a year ago, I was accepted for life insurance, after two examinations by a company that had previously rejected me.

I have advised several people to take Eckman's and those who took it faithfully had the same results as myself."

(Signed affidavit) CHAS. MORGAN.

Eckman's Alterative cures Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Affections. For sale by the Owl Drug Co. and other leading druggists. Ask for booklet of cured cases and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

FACE AND HEAD AN AWFUL SIGHT

Eruption Broke Out when 2 Weeks Old—Itched So He Could Not Sleep—Hair All Fell Out —Cuticura Cured Him.

"I wish to have you accept this testimonial, as Cuticura did so much for my baby. At the age of two weeks his head began to break out with great sores and by the time he was two months his face and head were an awful sight. I consulted a doctor, who said it was nothing but a light skin disease which the baby would soon get over. But he seemed to get worse so I called another doctor. His opinion seemed to be the same. They both prescribed medicine that did not do a bit of good. A friend advised me to take him to the hospital, which I did. Two doctors there gave me medicine in a liquid form. It did him no good.

"Nearly every day I would read a testimonial in regard to Cuticura, and my wife thought she would try it to see if it would help the baby. I got a box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap and after using these he was entirely cured. Before Cuticura cured him he could not seem to sleep, as his face and head would itch so. What hair he had all fell out but soon he had a nice head of hair and his face was perfectly clear. It is now nearly five years since he was cured and there has been no sign of the eruption returning. Chas. H. Evans, 81 Flint St., Somerville, Mass., April 19, 1910."

A single set of Cuticura Soap and Ointment is often sufficient to cure, rendering it the most economical treatment for affections of the skin and scalp. Sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston, Mass. Mailed free, latest Book on Care of Skin and Scalp.

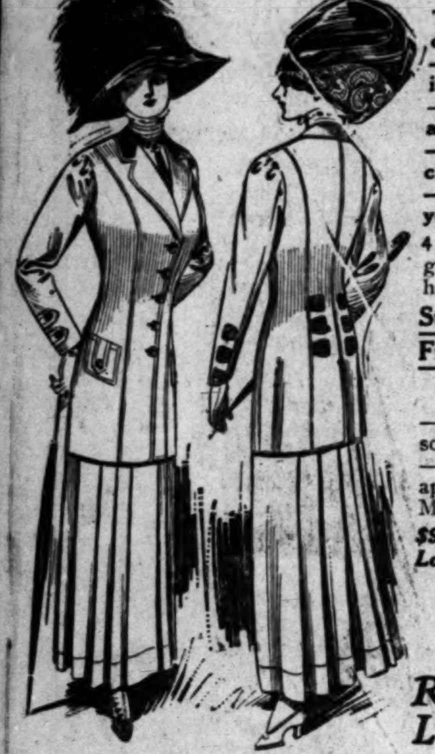
Perhaps the Most Remarkable Suit Sale of the Yea

Is Announced in This More Than Wonderful Purchase of 170 Sample Fall Suits Worth Conservatively $14.50 to $25 at $12.75



The crisis has passed—the strike is over—and now comes this entering wedge in the series of Fall Merchandise that is headed for the Broadway—

—Our representative is to be congratulated upon the master stroke of landing such a prize offering in the face of the present market.

—170 suits altogether are involved. They're from the hands of a maker, skilled in the art of making high grade garments.

—My what beauties! Really with the present scarcity of merchandise they would walk right out at full value.

—However, as we buy, so do we sell—we captured a prize and you may share in the saving.

4 STYLES, Illustrated—but no pictures could do justice to the garments. You must see these suits. Women are going to flock here Monday, bright and early, to buy.

"You Won't Be Making Skirts Order in Three Months Beca the Public Likes to Be Fooled"

—This remark was made to the writer immediately after our skirt announcement appeared last Sunday.

We don't believe it. We know that honest principles applied to business will win out, and this skirt proposition has opened the eyes of hundreds of Los Angeles women—and the good news is going to spread like wildfire.

SKIRTS MADE FREE may attract many, but it is going to act like a boomerang to the firm that makes the announcement and then fools its clientele by asking for a yard or two more than is necessary to make the garment.

WE CHARGE $2.00 AND $2.50 for the making, but we tell you the exact number of yards necessary. It is not a one-day proposition, but it holds good every day in the week.

THE WORK IS DONE by a man tailor who was with a big manufacturer of skirts exclusively. Four different styles are here to select from. We guarantee satisfaction.

When 50-inch material is used we require but 3 or 3½ yards. Broadcloth requires one yard more. You may pay 50c, 75c, $1, $1.50 or more a yard for your material. We make the skirt for $2.00 or $2.50, according to the style.

STYLE 1—OF $1.00 MATERIAL—50 inches wide. TAKES 3 YARDS FOR COMPLETE SKIRT.... $5.00

STYLE 2 FOR $5.50.

Art and Artists.

BY ANTONY E. ANDERSON.

From "The Hermitage."

Through the sharp gap of the gorge below,
From my mountain's feet the gaze may go
Over a stretch of fields, broad-sunned,
Then glance beyond
Across the beautiful bay,
To that dim ridge, a score of miles away,
Lifting its clear-cut outline high,
Azure with distance on the azure sky,
Whose flocks of white clouds brooding on its crests
Have winged from ocean to their piney nests.

Polished Pebbles.

Few people living in Los Angeles realize the artistic beauty of the uncut gems piled in such prodigal profusion along our Pacific shores. The tourist, to be sure, sallies forth to Redondo in search of "moonstones," and has his finds polished by our local lapidaries—only to let the gems languish unseen in a day or two. The "sea-born treasures" they brought home with them ceased to please, because they were unintelligently selected.

But at least one man in Los Angeles hunts his pebbles with nice discrimination. This is James D. S. Chalmers, who has a wonderful collection of over 200 polished gems of the Pacific, some of them of extraordinary beauty, a few of them very rare, and not one without interest. Mr. Chalmers has cut and polished a great many of these gems himself, others have been beautified under his direction and supervision. The result is a collection that could not be duplicated anywhere—one of the most complete in the world. Some day these stones will probably go to our local museums.

I spent a very pleasant hour lingering over them with their owner, recently, drinking in their shining, glittering beauty, tracing their graceful markings, dazzled by their colors, delicate and brilliant—and incidentally learning many things about them from Mr. Chalmers, who has all the gentle enthusiasm of the true collector.

Almost any of the pebbles found on the beaches near-by are susceptible of being polished, Mr. Chalmers told me. Their very existence is proof of their hardness. The softer stones, which have gravitated to the always moving water, have worn and worn, and ground down until their atoms now form the sands of the beach. It is the survival of the fittest; generally speaking, only the hard and tough ones remain, those capable of receiving a good polish and of retaining it. The point is to choose those of desirable color, well marked, close-grained, of equal hardness, non-porous and without cavities, fissures or other evident blemish.

It is safe to accept the conclusion that the stones will show about the same color when lying wet upon the beach as they will when cut and polished. Most of the opaque stones worth the while gathering are forms of jasper; in fact, jasper includes generally, nearly all varieties of impure, opaque, colored cryptocrystalline quartz, and so the name of jasper may be properly applied to very many of the pebbles, found on almost any sea or lake shore, or in the beds of streams. The most common found on our own beaches are the various shades of reds, browns, yellows and mixtures of them.

The bloodstone is a green variety with red spots; it is sometimes called the heliotrope. Basanite, or touchstone, is chiefly used for trying the purity of metals. It is very hard, black and tough, rather tougher even, and of finer grain than the ordinary jasper. It takes a beautiful polish, and when cut with flat sides and angles appears very much like jet.

The so-called flower-stones are varicolored jaspers that sometimes bear on them very striking resemblances to different flowers. In these some sections of the crypto (hidden) crystals are brought out so as to show in contrast with the body color of the stone. One which Mr. Chalmers found at Redondo Beach showed perfect miniature poinsettias. Another appeared to be decorated with peach blossoms.

Very many other interesting varieties of jasper are to be found. Sardonyx is a misnomer for the stone locally so-called. The real sardonyx is a variety of sard in which sard and onyx appear in regular planes of uniform thickness, the brown or red sard and the white onyx alternating. The stone known here by that name is an irregular mixture of jasper and chalcedony.

The real moonstone is of the feldspar group, and the best is found on the Island of Ceylon. What we call moonstone here is chalcedony. It is probably a little harder, and so would wear better in jewelry than the Ceylonese moonstone, but there is seldom any of the "cat's-eye" effect, which is notable in the latter and which really gives to it its beauty. In fact, the local moonstone is a rather characterless object, just a milk-and-water carbochon cut and polished pebble.

Many of those in the market are imported ready cut from Germany, and are to be bought at wholesale for much less than they could be cut in this country. You will note, in watching those searching on the beaches for "moonstones," how most of them will pick up a stone, hold it to the light and, unless it shows clear white, will throw it away as worthless. That is where they are wrong, for the colored chalcedonys, and those with seeming flaws and faults, are the only susceptible of being made into really beautiful stones. They should be cut in shapes so as to show to best advantage the markings of the individual stones, and not all cut carbochon, as is customary, unless especially suited to that shape. So, instead of the lacti-aqua characterless stones, it is best to get them with at least a bit of color, or with peculiar markings.

The marking or the colorings are either from the inclusion of some extraneous matter imbedded in the chalcedony, or by mineral infusion. One unusually good specimen in Mr. Chalmer's collection, cut in the form of a pendant, shows on the back of the stone pyritic crystals. The coloring matter from these crystals, permeating or infusing the stone, gives to it a rich yellow tint, like clouded amber.

However, the inclusion of pyrites does not always color yellow, for in other stones it may glisten in a dark, muddy-gray chalcedony, and the particles are as small as those in the so-called goldstone of commerce. (The latter is really a combination of glass and brass filings, made in Germany.)

A peculiarity of these stones with pyritic inclusures is that while being ground they give out an odor distressingly like that of California sulphur matches. They are locally known as mineral agates. Mr. Chalmers showed me two with inclusions, both cut in flat oval form, very thin so as to show beautifully their inclusions when held to the light. The chalcedony in each is transparent. One of these shows multi-colored stella chrystalizations suggestive of sagenite, and may be a form of this vutilated quartz. In the other a tangled mass of red moss seems imbedded. This is known as moss jasper. It is hard to get perfect specimens of these stones, because of the frequency of cavities in them.

Mr. Chalmers informed me that the precious serpentine, a green stone with clear veining, found under the bluffs near Fisherman's Camp, down below Redondo, should also be cut in thin slabs so as to properly show its markings.

There is an opaque stone found at Redondo which is of varied sepia tints, often with bright red or yellow markings. It is hard, compact and very close-grained, and no stone found on the beach takes better polish. It is possibly an animal petrifaction, for in being cut it gives out an odor like antiquated fish oil. Mr. Chalmers suggests that a good name for it would be ichtholite.

The stones I have mentioned are not generally found in the market—a fact that should give a stroll on Redondo Beach a new interest and fascination to the searcher for "moonstones."

Back from Paris.

Jack Oakey, the young Los Angeles painter who went to Paris eight months ago for further study, has just come back, bringing with him much elthusiasm for art and many sketches and studies. Mr. Oakey was a pupil of J. Bond Francisco, and later of the Art Students' League in this city.

The many studies from life and from outdoor nature which he brought with him show that he has worked hard in the past eight months, and that he has gained much in the technical handling of paint, more especially in the direction of color. The "atmosphere" of Paris, he admits, stimulated him to high endeavor. There was a general feeling of "work" in the air. Nobody in the Latin Quarter was idle—all were ambitious to great things, and the most of them did not spare themselves in the effort to realize that ambition.

Stanton McDonald Wright, brother of the literary editor of The Times, started for Paris with Mr. Oakey, and the two friends worked together at the Julian Academy, under Jean Paul Laurens and Carré, and under the American teacher, Miller. Occasionally they took short sketching trips to Holland and Belgium. Mr. Wright is still in Paris.

Mr. Oakey was struck with the many American students in Paris. They outnumber the students from any other country, who collectively far outnumber the French students.

Mr. Oakey will open a studio in Los Angeles, but later expects to return to Paris.

ART NOTES.

Frederick Melville DuMond has come to Los Angeles for the winter. His home will be Monrovia. He has been appointed one of the instructors of the School of Art and Design, where in October he will hold an exhibition of recent paints from the Grand Cañon. About two years ago Mr. DuMond showed here six or eight very large and striking canvases.

Warren E. Rollins has come back from the desert, and is now domiciled at his new home and studio on East Avenue 60, "Lo-Lo-Mi Lodge," which is Indian for the Lodge of Good Friends. Mr. Rollins will exhibit at the studio and down town this winter.

The Ebell Club is already planning an exhibition of arts and crafts, to be held at the clubhouse some time in November.

The Polytechnic High School has been enlarged and enriched with a brand new three-story building for art purposes, school rooms, galleries, etc.

An exhibition of paintings by Jules Pages, in conjunction with a group of colored etchings from the needle of Luigin, is now on at the Steckel gallery.

Seymour Thomas, the portrait painter, is visiting at the home of Lewis W. Andrews, of Andrews boulevard.

HARDY HORSES.

WILD PONIES OF VIRGINIA.

HERDS OF THE LITTLE ANIMALS ROAM AN ISLAND.

Their Origin Unknown, But Believed to Be Descendants of Horses Transported There by Settlers Some Two Hundred and Fifty Years Ago.

[Bit and Spur:] Chincoteague Island, off the coast of Virginia, is the home of wild ponies as small as those of the Shetland Isles. It is a queer little place, and its people reck not of this world. Landlocked by Assateague Island, a long sandy beach which extends northward beyond the Maryland boundary, Chincoteague is as thoroughly cut off from the turbulent sea as it is from the rush and turmoil of modern civilization.

The island is about eight miles long and has a population of several hundred souls. Portions of its narrow extent are wooded, but the island is largely made up of marshy glades in which the herds of ponies graze, seeking shelter from the bleak winds of winter among the dunes and brakes of the island.

The number of these hardy little animals is annually decreasing, for pony pennings are held every year during the early part of August, when the herds are driven together by the islanders and the foals branded by their owners. Young, sound stock is then selected for sale, while the older animals and weaklings, there being surprisingly few of the latter, are liberated to find a precarious living in the salt marshes and thickets of the island for another year.

IRREGULAR IN SIZE.

The ponies are very irregular in size, for they are often found as tall as the broncho and the mustang of the West, and again as small as the Shetland pony. They are as a rule weedy and inclined to be leggy, with rough, uneven, sunburned coats. Light bays and sorrels predominate. A fair number of brown bays will be found, while black, white and dun-colored ponies are exceedingly rare.

Nature has equipped them with heavy manes and tails as a protection against the swarms of mosquitoes and swamp flies which infest the coast islands. It is interesting to see a herd of ponies lined up in a marsh or thicket, standing with heads and tails alternating and each pony switches flies from his two neighbors. At almost regular intervals the end ponies will be seen to leave their exposed positions and wedge into the line.

The smaller ponies are very popular with the children of the eastern shore, and the larger ones make excellent work animals on the trucking farms of the Virginia Peninsula. They are extremely tough and strong, require very little grain and comparatively little water. One seldom finds a Chincoteague pony with spavin, curbs, splints or similar defects so common among ordinary horses, and they have been known to draw an ordinary country buggy eighty miles in a day over the sandy roads of Accomac without shoes on their feet.

ORIGIN UNCERTAIN.

Much uncertainty exists as to their origin. In 1649 there were but three hundred horses in the colony of Virginia, but by 1669 so many had been imported and the natural increase had been so great that they had become a burden by reason of their depredations, in consequence of which further importation was prohibited. In 1662 a tax had been laid upon horses and the owners were required by law to confine their stock between July 20 and October 20.

The writer is inclined to think that some of the planters of the peninsula, in order to escape the expenses of fencing off the ranges on the mainland, transported their herds to Chincoteague and Assateague islands about this time, and that this was the origin of the wild horses of Chincoteague and the present day ponies.

The coarse feed of the salt meadows and continual exposure to the elements would readily have caused the stunted growth of the early stock, which feature was so marked among the horses elsewhere in the colony that in 1686 carefully devised laws were enacted to improve the breed.

So numerous had the wild horses grown to be at the close of the century the tone of the principal sports of the young men of the colony was to hunt them, not infrequently with the assistance of dogs.

Sometimes planters would unite in the confinement of their horses to a neck of land, where they were permitted to roam at liberty, only they were periodically driven into a pen and the special mark of each owner branded upon the foals born to his mares in the interval. In order to prevent any secret encroachments upon the rights of each other it was generally required that a notice of an intention to drive the herd should be given by the person interested at the parish church two weeks previous to its actual undertaking.

When William Collier comes to New York he will be located at the Comedy Theater, which will be known as Collier's Comedy Theater. The comedian has signed a contract to appear under Lew Fields's management. He will use a new play which he expected to try in Denver, but did not. He will appear in "I'll Be Hanged if I Will," written by the author of "The Country Boy."

Among the Public Schools

THREE new and complete high schools, added to the equipment for higher education in Los Angeles, is something of which to boast, even for a city which grows as rapidly as does ours.

Probably in no one particular is the growth of the Angel City more strikingly shown than in the fact that the magnificent school system recently perfected, has at once sprung into full and complete use.

Every one knew that Polytechnic and L. A. High were over-crowded, and in fact, that there were many who each year tried in vain to gain access to these institutions, but still it seemed to manw that were over-building, and there was more or less complaint; but when again at the opening of this term, on Monday last, lines of applicants were seen waiting as heretofore, it began to dawn upon the minds of even the least progressive that we, as a city, were really outgrowing all bounds.

Upon this opening day what a boon it was to the older schools to be able to say to those who could not be accommodated there, that at the New Manual Arts High and at Hollywood High School they would find an equal equipment and every needed facility.

If any one doubts the area covered by our high schools, let him make the trip taking in all these schools from San Pedro and Wilmington to Hollywood, stopping en route to visit the Manual Arts and the Polytechnic and L. A. High, and he will find that one day will not begin to suffice for even a casual glimpse of these institutions.

The additional facilities and the additional breathing room insure not only a better and more thorough education for the children of this community, but better health, through more sanitary conditions, and this means even more to a city than does the higher education.

It has taken money to bring all this about; and it will take money to maintain it. But can money be put to better use? To surround the growing children with the best conditions, physical as well as mental, guarantees improved citizenship and better things for the future of the community.

The increase in the salaries of teachers, which was instituted, to take effect this year, is already showing results in the addition of some strong men and women from educational centers in the East, and more will be willing to come as the bettered conditions become known. All this means a higher standard of education for Los Angeles, and as we know, many families are beginning to come here for educational purposes.

So, even though for a while, until matters adjust themselves and the increase in population is in proportion to the weight of expenditure, the added expense may be felt somewhat, there should be no complaint from loyal citizens, who have at heart the welfare of the great community.

At "Old L. A. High," everything was running as smoothly by Wednesday, as though the same students were going on in the same classes as last year, and the same teachers at the same posts.

On Tuesday Los Angeles High School had received its full quota of pupils and began sending applicants away to the Manual Arts and to Hollywood, respectively, according to the residence.

"The day after school opened," said Prof. Housh, "it became evident that the capacity of our institution was going to be overtaxed, and upon advice from Superintendent Francis, we began sending applicants to Hollywood and to the new Manual Arts High School."

L. A. High is better than ever equipped for the classics and for science and there are a number of new teachers in some departments and the best of the "stand-bys" are at their posts.

Mrs. Dorsey is already becoming endeared to the new girls who have entered the school; and Mr. Kinney always finds his way at once into the affections of the new boys. Mr. Kinney has spent most of his vacation at work with the county board, of which he is now president.

It is the intention to lay particular stress upon military training for the tenth-year boys, as it is the plan to exact for each at least one year of military discipline, more for the physical training and for the habits of obedience and instant action thus instilled than for the warlike side of it. Mr. Oliver, who has charge of the military discipline, is very able in this line.

Dr. Lillian Ray, a graduate of Stanford and also of Cooper Medical, has taken charge of the corrective physical work for girls, in connection with the enlarged gymnasium work at L.A. Miss Maguire of Illinois, who comes with highest recommendations, will also add force to the department.

Among others from away who have been added to the teaching force at this institution are Lysie Smith of Ann Arbor, chemistry; Miss Clara Smith, a graduate of L. A. and of the University of California, as well as from Bryn Mawr, who will teach in the Latin and Greek classes; Miss Jane Butt of Cumnock, who comes from the University of Wisconsin and is a pupil of Otis Skinner, will teach expression, which department will also have the valuable services of Miss Cooper from Santa Ana; Mr. Jacobs, formerly principal of Gardena High School, will teach physical geography, while Dr. Beach will, as heretofore, have the general direction of all the physical training of L. A. as well as throughout the city.

Dr. Beach greatly distinguished himself during the summer by the strength and popularity of his lectures at Berkeley. He has been added to the faculty of that institution for next summer. Dr. Beach is able and progressive and deserves the distinction to which he has attained.

Miss Frances Harrow has been given charge of the senior class, summer 11. Miss Harrow is a general favorite and an enthusiast in senior work. She knows just the best way of instilling into the minds of those about to go forth into life, all that they should know, and is past mistress in the art of preparing the class for all the finishing graces incident to the last year.

Miss Frances Gearnart of the history department is such a fine artist in water color that the school and her friends are always trying to force her into that work, and her exhibit of work done during vacation would seem to attest that they may be able to do this. There is quite a demand for instruction in her particular style of work.

Mr. and Miss McPherron have not yet returned from their European trip, but are expected soon.

Miss Anna Stewart, head of the history department, is away on sick leave.

At Polytechnic there was an enrollment, on Tuesday, of 2015, and several hundred applicants were advised to go elsewhere.

Mr. Dunn, the new principal, was at the helm and although there was much to be done in the way of adjusting new programmes and placing students and teachers, it began to look as he said, toward the last of the week as though they would all be fitted into the new grooves, in short order.

The additional room and facilities at Polytechnic, do not really so much add to the capacity of the institution as it allows breathing room for the numbers who have always crowded the school. Formerly, there was a decided lack of accommodation for the number who attended there, and now the same or a slightly increased number are comfortably taken care of.

The evening High School will, as heretofore, be housed at Polytechnic and will receive all the advantages of the equipment.

The new art building removes the pressure upon the old quarters and additions to the Science Hall, give needed facilities there.

Miss Ross, vice-principal, is already planning great and interesting features for the girls' work. Miss Ross has met with a sad loss in the death of her mother, this summer. The wisdom of having a woman vice-principal is attested by the love and genuine affection with which Miss Ross is regarded by the Poly girls. Miss Mary Brown, who graduated last spring, has offered to assist Miss Ross, in a purely friendly way, in getting things into running order, and intends later in the year to return for post-graduate work.

Mr. Richer is the new vice-principal at Polytechnic.

Mrs. Parsons and Miss Dickson of the music department have not yet returned from their trip to Europe, but are expected soon.

Additions to the faculty are: Mr. Keller, science; Mr. Miller, history; Mr. Williams, foundry; Mr. Kronkite, a graduate of Polytechnic, shop-work; Mr. Wright, commercial; Miss Julia Murray, a graduate of the school, drawing; Miss Johnston, English; Miss Ohman, in Miss Gilbert's place during the latter's leave of absence, and Miss Munson, who takes the place of Miss Fagge as librarian during the latter's continued visit to relatives in England. There are several Berkeley graduates in the commercial department of Polytechnic, this season, taking the post-graduate course in that department.

Dr. Bennett, who instituted an interesting and instructive course in physiology and hygiene, last season, for the girls of Polytechnic, now has headquarters in the new building and will give more of her time to that institution.

So popular has the department of civil engineering become that the enrollment is nearly double that of last year; and although the quarters were not in readiness, Mr. Evans proceeded to instruct his boys, holding the classes on the stairway in the new art building.

At the new Manual Arts High School Dr. Wilson is in charge as principal and a number of the teachers from Olive High are teaching; but there are several from Polytechnic and one or two from Los Angeles, as well as from out of town.

Miss Grant is at the head of the history department, and as this is her especial line of work, she is happy and full of enthusiasm.

Miss Colver is in charge of the English, and Mr. Fulton has Mathematics.

Mr. Detrick of Polytechnic has mechanical drawing; Mr. Armstrong is at the head of the commercial department and is assisted by Irvin Hague from Harvard Military School.

Miss Mary Putnam and Mr. Daniel, vice-principals, are the former from Polytechnic and the latter from Los Angeles.

Of the enrollment of about 800, many are from Olive High, and some from other high schools throughout the city.

It has changed the face of that part of the city to have such a host of young people turned in a tide upon the locality. It seems as though the center of population had suddenly shifted southward, as the cars are boarded by the happy, chattering crowds, and the bright gowns and merry laughter lend attractiveness to the streets.

Although scarcely settled in the new quarters, the Manual Arts High gave a charming programme in celebration of Mexican independence on Friday morning. Miss Faddis came down from Los Angeles High and recited. Miss Grant delivered an address upon the historic event, and the school participated in the programme, holding a "standing assembly," as the seats for the great new assembly room have not arrived.

The new Manual Arts High School is well housed in light, airy and perfectly fireproof buildings, which are planned to meet every possible want as to arrangement and convenience. The course of study is comprehensive and includes everything taught in any high school, excepting Greek.

The athletic field, when completed, will be one of the finest to be found anywhere, and the corps of teachers efficient. Great popularity is predicted for this institution when its advantages become known.

At Gardena Agricultural High School Mr. Lillard is in charge; and all who know Mr. Lillard have confidence that he will popularize agriculture and imbue with his enthusiastic optimism all who come within his radius.

"We have already gained about 12 per cent. over last year's enrollment," said Prof. Lillard, "and all of this number are from the city.' That is what has been hoped for this school—that it would draw from the city, and would instill a love of agriculture into the boys who may be educated to draw a livelihood from the soil, and to do so in the most scientific and beneficial way.

At the new Wilmington High School a much-needed institution at that particular point, a thoroughly practical course will be instituted; a course which will meet the immediate wants and needs of the pupils of that locality, rather than to teach them some far-off possible advantage.

Manual training, commercial education and domestic science will receive particular attention there.

JAPS AFTER THE SOUTH POLE.

A Business-like Calendar of Movements That Sounds Like an Excursion Trip.

On August 1 the Japanese expedition for the South Pole, under the command of Lieut. Shirase, sailed from Tokio Bay. In the slender numbers of the adventurers, the modesty of their preparations, the size of their little schooner and the limited cost in money for their entire outfit, rather a strong contrast is found with the expeditions of Peary and Scott, and Shackleton. The ship is a schooner of 200 tons; a naval officer, Captain Nomura, is to navigate her; the personnel consists of ten men, mostly scientists, and a crew of fifteen sailors. They take ten Siberian ponies, found so useful by Lieutenant Shackleton.

The Tokio paper announces that they expect to reach Australia on September 30, and to arrive at their landing on MacMurdo Bay, on the western coast of Ross Sea, on October 13. Lieutenant Shirase has arranged to start with four men and five horses on his dash for the South Pole on November 20. The rest of the party are to follow him and establish depots for him on the return journey. The leader has set January 23, 1911, for the arrival at the pole, February 1 to begin his return, and he says he expects to reach Tokio by July, 1911. The audacity of the dates set, and the seeming certainty of return from the desperate journey in such short order, rather take away the breath of the readers of journals of older expeditions, and especially of the thrilling narrative of Shackleton, along the same route, apparently, which Shirase intends to follow. But his sublime confidence appears in his parting article in a Tokio magazine. He gives three reasons for his high hopes:

First—That Japan is much nearer to the South Pole than European or North American nations;

Second—That Western explorers have complicated needs and luxurious modes of living, but the Japanese, being accustomed to simple life, can arrive at comparatively small cost, and

Last but not least—The Japanese possess greater fortitude than the Westerners, and can endure the severities of polar climate "without relying on complicated mechanical devices which prove ineffective in many instances."

So the challenge is issued. In this field it seems to be well proven that it is on the human qualities of the bold and trained explorer far more than on the care and forethought with which means have been adapted to ends that success has rested.—[Portland Oregonian.

INTERIOR OF SOUTH AMERICA.

Places Where the Vegetation Becomes a Nuisance—Argentina and Peru Compared.

There are scenes in South America which are worth sacrificing something to see. The world-famous Bay of Rio Janeiro is hardly less wonderful than the hills back of it, where streamlets of blue water tumble over banks which seem to be a solid mass of every gorgeous-colored flower known to botany, with every gorgeous-plumaged bird on earth flying about among them. In the towns of the Amazon district the vegetation is regarded as a first-class nuisance; no house or square yard of ground can be neglected for a short time without becoming smothered with flowers and creepers of every description. In the forests quite close to Para, Manaos, Santerem, S. Paolo, Iquitos, and other large towns and villages are such ferneries, orchid groups, and birds as would take a month of a collector's life to catalogue. And perhaps there is no other part of the world where one can plunge sooner into the curious gloom and silence of tropical forest life, where it is difficult sometimes to see one's way even in midday, where no breath of wind ever stirs the vast boughs of century-old trees, and only the occasional shriek of some animal, as a boa constrictor hanging from one of these boughs drops on it and winds it in its folds, breaks the unearthly stillness. Beyond Iquitos, where one takes to the native canoe, with its large not uncomfortable cabin and dozen or so of native rowers, the heat becomes damp and sometimes almost intolerable; but it is worth going up as far as Nauta, a point at which, miles away in the west, like a line of rain clouds in the hot tropical sky, the chain of the Andes appears on the horizon.

Though Argentina would probably claim to be the most businesslike portion of South America, most people would, I fancy, say that Peru is the most civilized, as it is incomparably the most agreeable country in the continent. Here the courtly Spanish American is found at his best, the old Inca civilization seeming still to dominate English, Spanish and even Yankee society, much as royalist tradition still dominates the Faubourg Saint Germain in Paris. Some of the Peruvian railways are engineering feats of the finest, one of them, which goes up into the Andes, being, I believe, the highest in the world. I am told on good authority that on this line are one or two villages which would make ideal consumptive sanatoria; they are at a height of about ten thousand feet, with a marvellous mixture of clear mountain and sea air, and at no great distance from the civilization and amusements of Lima. So much English money is being poured into Peru just now that we may expect to hear soon of the more accessible of these places being turned to such a purpose, though as a prominent Peruvian personage remarked grimly the other day, "the stopping-places on this railway cannot exactly be described as health resorts at present." Peru will, of course, be one of the first countries to benefit by the opening of the Panama Canal, and it seems almost a pity that English financiers, engineers and others do not unite more cordially and vigorously to make the country ready for a "boom."—[Saturday Review.

A Substitute Glass Cutter.

Occasionally the man of the house or his wife may have need to cut a sheet of window glass and be without a glass cutter of any kind that will work. An excellent substitute for the work is a pair of heavy scissors or shears that are of no particular value. Submerge the glass in water to a depth of three or four inches and cut the edges as you would a piece of pasteboard. A plate of glass may not be divided in half with this apparatus, as it is supposed the narrow clippings will break away; but unless biting too deep in the main sheet that is to be preserved the weight of the water acts to prevent shattering as otherwise would be effected.—[Chicago Tribune.

SCIENCE AND TASTE.

ENCE OF POETRY. By Hudson Funk & Wagnalls Company, New (Price $2.20.)

THOUT wishing to detract from he reputation of Parson Jasper, who emerged from colored ob- y by that famous homiletic, "The Move," I wish to say that Hud- axim has written a book on which is probably the most pro- y absurd and stupendously pre- us dialectic which has yet been .

MEREDITH'S LAST.

est chance be popular, and it is dubious if even Meredith's stanchest admirers will find a great deal of pleasure in this unfinished novel. It is not that the book is inferior, but because it is somewhat different from his earlier novels. Meredith's ability as a story teller was never pronounced, and what liking people had for his work was in spite of this defect. As a psychologist, he used as little of the stage property of the ordinary novelist as he could possibly get along with; and it was this thing which led Mark Pattison, years ago, to observe that Meredith's name was a label warning novel readers not to touch. I do not believe that this lack in Meredith was deliberate. His intention at story telling seemed always to be reliable, but he was so full of ideas concerning life and so philosophically exuberant that he would unconsciously leave his plot and set sail on a broad sea of comment and rumination. One who reads Meredith for the story finds only annoyance at his methods, or, rather, lack of method.

In "Celt and Saxon" this trait is over-emphasized. Unfinished as it is, it gives far less appearance of being a preconceived story than if it had been finished; and those who will find pleasure in the reading of it are those who are content to read Meredith solely for his comment and his psychology. A study of Celt and Saxon character, temperament and tendencies, this book reveals the Meredithian passion for intimacies—the penchant for inartistic amalgamation of novelist and philosopher, of story-teller and psychologist. But, when we close the book, it is with the feeling that, while we have not read a novel in any sense great, we have nevertheless encountered one of the most remarkable and intimate interpretations of Irish character we have ever read. Herein is Meredith great.

THE GREAT WET WAY.

THE LONELY LOVERS. By Horace W. C. Newte. Mitchell Kennerly, New York. (Price $1.50.)

MR. NEWTE'S book may be described as romantic lachrymosity. His object at all times is to make the reader weep, and he struggles sedulously to remove the tear bungs. Not even in the last chapter will he come through. Not he. All of the devices known to fictioneers, from Dickens to William Winter, for spilling the secretions of the lachrymal glands, Mr. Newte makes use of. The American loves to weep, and if there is the least possible excuse for a saline overflow, you will find him inundated. Our magazines pay well for pathetic stories; and Dickens is ever in vogue. Maudlin plays draw capacity houses. Dave Warfield's spurious devices to make people weep accounted for the popularity of his recent play. "Madam Butterfly" would seen to indicate that even the shop girl and her plumber friend had a taste for grand opera. But Puccini's popularity among the illiterate is due wholly to his sentimental capacity to produce the limpid globule. I am not standing out against tragedy, however. Clean and wholesome was the tragedy of the Greeks under the Dionysian rule. In fact, tragedy is the great moulding power in all existence. But the taste for tragedy and the taste for a temporary emotive disturbance of a pathetic nature are not synonymous.

The pathos of "The Lonely Lovers" is wholly bogus and cooked-up pathos. A sentimental young lady falls in love with a married man, and the tragedy is on. Of course, I admit the situation is a grievous one, but when we learn that the gentleman's marriage is entirely a legal affair and that the young lady is perfectly willing to pass it up, we begin to wonder what all the wet handkerchiefs are about, anyway. There is a great deal of soul struggling and other self-inflicted discomfiture which the young people go through, but the fundamentals of tragedy are not in evidence. The author has merely decided that it would not be proper or sufficinetly sad for the young people to see each other and so sets diligently to the work in hand—that of making them miserable. Unable to succeed from an ethical and spiritual standpoint alone, he inflicts the young lady with a long, lingering disease of which she eventually dies.

The litany of pathos which follows never affected me very deeply. Nor do my emotions overcome me when an author bids me attend the dying bedside of one of his nice young characters. The counterfeit sentiment and the artificial pathos tend rather to bore me. It is so in Mr. Newte's story. My brutish perceptions make impossible any sympathy for the loneliness of two young people who could have had each other but who chose sundered ways on moral grounds. Personally I prefer Farquhar, Congreve, Rabelais and the other immortal vulgarians, to the modern hothouse noveltists who are distinguished by the anatomical peculiarity of being without bowels. And by expressing this choice, I realize I shall be written down as a man of questionable, if not positively dangerous, tastes.

CABIN TO OPULENCE.

THE POWER AND THE GLORY. By Grace MacGowan Cooke. Doubleday, Page & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

LET us consider for a moment "The Power and the Glory," by Grace MacGowan Cooke. Many are the ingredients of this literary haggis, and it is not without difficulty that an inspection of its contents can be made. The book starts out in a leisurely and unpretentious way which quite unprepares one for the absurd and flabby melodrama which stultifies the closing chapters.

Briefly, the story tells of the early life of Johnnie Consadine, a mountain girl of low origin, who, overcome by intangible aspirations, hies blithely to a cotton-mill town, where she intends, like Ann Veronica, to conquer the world. From now on, the tale takes advantage of every ludicrous possibility which offers itself. Up to this point there has been plenty of humor, characterization and insight into the mountain life. I feel, somehow, that the author knows her material. But when the melodrama starts in, when the long arm of coincidence is brought into use, when men fall and hit their heads so they may lie in a stupor for six months simply to increase the possibilities of plot complication in the meantime, when huge fortunes drop unexpectedly out of the clear sky, when millionaire socialists fall passionately in love with sweat-shop ladies, when patents are stolen and old men walk around loose with bags of bullion—I can only weep at the splendid promise unfulfilled.

SHAKESPEARE'S DAY.

THE ELIZABETHAN PEOPLE. By Henry Thew Stephenson. Henry Holt & Co., New York. (Price $2.)

OUR knowledge of the Golden Age of Elizabeth is for the most part a literary one. We have hardly inquired into that life during the days when Shakespeare patronized the pothouses, when Thomas Campion was loving Laura, when Sir Henry Otton sang strophes to bohemian young ladies, and Ben Johnson and Thomas Carew bewailed the inconstancy of their mistresses. What days they were! They were the days of John and Phineas Fletcher, Thomas Haywood, Giles Fletcher, the wooer; George Falero Lero Loo Wither, William Brown of Tavistock, who knew the songs the sirens sung; Robert Herrick, the poetic Bishop of Chichester, the mighty Milton, Richard Crashaw, who paid his respects to that not impossible She; Andrew Marvell, who dreamed in a garden, and all those other immortal songsters of Elizabeth's reign. Surely the intimate life and environment of such an age should interest us.

Prof. Stephenson has tried to lay before the modern reader a wide view of the whole of the Elizabethan people in a manner not too much hampered by encyclopediac detail. The Elizabethan character, life in the country and city, rural sports and amusements in general, are all touched upon, sifted thoroughly, and presented to us informally and interestingly. From the Elizabethan poets one would not surmise that the nation in Shakespeare's age was free, stout, haughty and prodigal of life and blood. At that time the severity of the English laws was almost at its extremity, as was also the cruelty of the punishment inflicted. One of the impressive methods they had of demonstrating the undesirability of breaking the statutes was in vogue in the year 1587, when those who offended against the state were drawn from prison to the place of execution upon a hurdle, where they were hanged until half dead. Then the prisoner was from his body and thrown into a fire near by in sight of the prisoner. Embezzling of goods over 40 shillings, housebreaking, picking pockets, or communing with witches, were all punished by hanging. If you happened to be a pirate you were hanged by the water's edge at low tide and left there until three tides had washed over you.

However, for persons who were content to behave themselves, and did not do violence to the ethical dictates, there was much jollification—the gayety of feasts, music and theaters, and an inordinate amount of indoor and outdoor amusements which were indulged in by every one who had escaped the prison and the noose.

A word should be said concerning the Elizabethan ideas of the model housewife, if only for the sake of comparing them with those of our modern ballet-chaser. Gervase Markham wrote that the English housewife, next to her sanctity and holiness, should be a woman of great modesty and temperance, and should shun all violence of rage, passion and humor in the presence of her husband, coveting less to direct than to be directed, appearing ever unto him pleasant, aimable and delightful; and if she had any contrary thoughts to his, she should virtuously suppress them.

And be it known that in those good old days there were such domestic angels.

In an attempt to describe the social conditions of the Elizabethans, the author has been constantly confronted with the difficulty of selection. But Prof. Stephenson has succeeded remarkably well. His volume serves adequately to give, on broad lines, the habits of life that characterized the people of that golden generation.

SHALLOW CONFESSIONS.

A SUCCESSFUL WIFE. By G. Dorset. Harper Bros., New York. (Price $1.50.)

IN "A Successful Wife" we have only a superficial inspection of the feminine methods used in managing recalcitrant husbands. There is no small amount of insipidity in these confessions, and while on the whole the book would seem to reveal the intimate workings of the feminine mind, it really gives only the results of that instinctive knowledge which all women have to a greater or lesser degree.

Esther Carey is a working girl with ideas of her own. Her main trials in life are side-stepping the amorous advances of males and extricating herself when her footwork has not been swift enough to avoid the collisions. Left at 15 without financial assistance, and necessitated to support a family of five, she tackles stenography. In her first position as digital correspondent she is made love to by her employer, and compelled to leave for fear of disastrous consequences. Her next attempt at stenographic labor is with a Fifth-avenue society woman, to whose home she has to go. But Mrs. Falsworth's husband immediately falls in love with our young heroine, and when he endeavors to pursuade Esther to elope with him, there is a moment when we fear that the jaws of Gehenna will gobble her up. At the time, however, she is the head of a typewriting establishment, and one day in the course of her routine a politician sends a letter through her to his wayward son in Paris, demanding that he return to New York.

There you have it! The son turns out to be a handsome young devil who immediately falls in love with his father's stenographer. But he is the victim of a classical thirst. He is a wine bibber of distinction, a lusher of parts, a cultured wassailer. Esther immediately sets to work to reform him, and, after having disposed of Falsworth, she accepts the young tank for a husband.

Then begins the struggle. Kirkland is not a model husband. He is eccentric; he insists upon writing unsalable dramas in blank verse; he cannot forego the high-ball; and he does some scandalous flirting at a summer resort. Esther knows what every woman knows, and for a long time says nothing. Then one day Kirkland indulges in a spree of four dimensions, and the wife decides to throw up the blue ribbon. But can she leave her husband? No, gentle reader, she cannot. And, to repay her for staying, Kirkland signs the pledge.

A tame tale, with practically none of the revelations of the feminine temperatment promised by the publishers.

THE BOOK WORLD.

"My Mark Twain" is the title which William Dean Howells has chosen for his book of literary and personal reminiscences of his life-long friend. "My Mark Twain" is published this week by Harper & Bros.

At a committee meeting of the English Parliament on International Copyright, just concluded, the fact was brought out that what long since came to be a standard work in this country has had a greater sale in England than any other book by an American author since "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The book is by Dr. William M. Thompson, and the title is "The Land and the Book." First published in 1850, its aim was to impart reality to the Bible story by means of pictures and descriptions of actual places. Its two volumes contained 244 wood cuts, made from drawings by the author—an unprecedented number of illustrations for the day. "The Land and the Book" has been reissued with photogravures in place of the original engravings. The author of "The Land and the Book" was the father of Dr. William Hanna Thompson, the writer.

At the last dinner of the American Booksellers' Association one of the souvenirs was a paper weight which contained this rubricated text: "To write a book is an easy task; it requires only pen and ink and some patient paper. To print a book is slightly more difficult, because genius often expresses itself in illegible manuscript. To read a book is still more difficult, as one must struggle against sleep. But the most difficult task that any one may atempt is to sell a book." The Harpers presented the paperweights, but the sentiment belongs to one of the most prolific modern writers, Felix Dahn, a man who, moreover, never sold a book in his life. He is a German novelist, historian, jurist and playwright and has written half a hundred works of all sorts.

A book of poems—"The Town Down the River," by Edwin Arlington Robinson—will come out this month. poems, now first collected, by the author of that remarkable volume, "The Children of the Night," published a few years ago. It shows a distinct advance in poetic insight and in that unusual ironic view, based on a deep philosophy, which has not appeared in modern verse since Browning. Some of these poems have been published in periodicals, and "Miniver Cheevy" gained a very wide popularity. Among the younger poets, Mr. Robinson stands conspicuous for originality of thought and terseness of expression. Many of his lines are epigrams.

Mrs. Humphrey Ward offers an interesting example of her methods of work in the introduction to "Fenwick's Career," which she has written for the new and complete edition of her works. "Fenwick's Career," she says, "was in the first instance suggested by some incidents in the life of the painter, George Romney. Romney, as is well known, married a Kendal girl in his early youth, and left her behind him in the North, while he went to seek training and fortune in London. There he fell under the fascinations of Lady Hamilton, and it was not until years later that he returned to Westmoreland and his deserted wife to die. In Eugenie de Pastourelles, who is Phoebe's unconscious rival, I tried to embody not the sensuous, intoxicating power of an Emma Hamilton, but those of more exquisite and spiritual influences which many women have exercised over some of the strongest and most virile of men. On looking through my notes, I find that this was not my first idea. The distracting intervening woman was to have been of a commoner type, intellectual, indeed, rather than sensuous, but yet of the predatory type and class, which delights in the capture of man. When I began to write the first scene in which Eugenie was to appear, she was still nebulous and uncertain. Then she did appear—suddenly!—as though the mists parted. It was not the woman I had been expecting and preparing for. But I saw her quite distinctly; she imposed herself; and, thenceforward, I had nothing to do but draw her.

John Burroughs was born and spent his early years among the Catskill Mountains, and his latest volume, which will be published next week, is entitled "In the Catskills." It is made up of eight essays and is illustrated with twenty-four views from photographs by Clifton Johnson, including pictures of the Burroughs farm in summer and winter, and of Mr. Burroughs himself in his native surroundings.

The Century Company will issue May Sinclair's novel of London literary folk, "The Creators," in book form, following its serial publication in the Century, October 8.

The Century Company will issue this fall a gift book edition of James Whitcomb Riley's "A Hoosier Romance," with pictures in colors and in black and white, by John Wolcott Adams. The text will be printed against a background of delicate pearl-gray, each page showing a typical Hoosier farm scene.

"The New Machiavelli" is the title chosen by H. G. Wells for his new novel, now in press. It is said to be more similar in style to "Tonio-Bungay" than to "Ann Veronica" or to "Mr. Polly," and it was composed, after the author's fashion, in the intervals of writing the other two.

There is to be a new Brownie book from Palmer Cox this fall; and Ralph Henry Barbour's new football story, "Kingsford Quarter," will be published September 24th. Other juvenile books on The Century Company's fall lists are a new "Betty" book by Carolyn Wells, a new "Lakerim" book by Rupert Hughes, "The League of the Signet-Ring," by Mary Constance DuBois, "The Young Railroaders," by F. Lovel Coombs, and a nonsense picture book with cover in color by De Witt Clinton Falls.

Prentiss Cummings, a Boston lawyer, has devoted his leisure of the past twenty years to translating the Iliad of Homer, into hexameter verse, the meter of the original, which Little, Brown & Co., Boston, are publishing on September 10th, in two volumes. Mr. Cummings has supplied in his introduction the historical and mythical setting of the Iliad so that the ordinary reader can read it understandingly. Mr. Cummings will celebrate his seventieth birthday on the day his translation is published.

LITERARY GOSSIP.

Margaret Deland is now at her country home in Kennebunkport, Me., where she is spending the summer revising the last chapters of a new novel. She has been working steadily on it for three years.

Ralph D. Paine, the novelist and short-story writer, has recently returned from abroad, after a trip in Scotland, England and France, and is now at work at his home at Durham, N. H. Mr. Paine spent much of his time abroad gathering material for a book which will be published next year.

A newly built bungalow study on the stormfield property at Redding, Ct., called "Markland," is the scene of Albert Bigelow Paine's summer activities. He has already begun the preparatory work on the projected Mark Twain biography. The land on which Mr. Paine's bungalow is built was given him by Mark Twain.

Harold McGrath has recently landed in San Francisco, world-weary from his globe-trotting. It has taken him eighteen months to draw a circle 'round the world, a record which Phineas Fogg would have sneered at.

Thomas Nelson Page returned from Europe a short time ago full of admiration for the Passion Play he had just witnessed at Oberammergau. His only criticism was that it was too long drawn out. During his vacation abroad, Mr. Page put in a great deal of work on a new book, to be entitled, "Robert E. Lee, Man and Statesman."

The New York State Library has just announced its selection of the 250 "best books of 1909." The publishers represented on the list by ten or more books each, are as follows: Houghton Mifflin, 25; Harper's, 17; Century, 14; Moffat Yard, 11; Appleton's, 11; Doubleday Page, 10.

Theodore Watts-Dunton has identified the valuable Swinburne manuscripts which recently appeared in Boston, and as he was the poet's literary executor, he may be supposed to know. "These manuscripts I sold to a well-known London bookseller. It was not I who named my modest collection of Swinburne's manuscripts the 'Watts-Dunton Collection.' I never did possess the manuscript of any of the most famous of Swinburne's poems, such as 'Dolores,' 'Anactoria,' etc., nor the manuscript of 'Atalanta.' These he gave to other and earlier friends. They were gifts during his lifetime, like the gifts to others. These ran over many years. If the prices now put upon the manuscripts by the Chicago owner are in excess of the prices at which I sold them in London (and they certainly are,) I do not in the least regret that I had the worst of the bargain. It shows that Swinburne has in America a greater attraction for the public than I had dared to hope."

Mrs. Humphrey Ward, in defending her contention that it is better in fiction writing to take historical incidents and give them modern surroundings, than to attempt to carry the reader into olden days and olden ideals, says: "The form and function of any tale that has ever touched human imagination is undying. And life is always reproducing new substance for the old forms. Mary Stuart, Darnley and Bothwell are darkly repeated in many an ugly Police-Court story; there are modern Adolphes tiring of their Ellenores; there are obscure Swifts, at this moment, breaking the hearts of unknown Vannessas; and the world is never without its Cordelias, whatever it may call them." All of which is becomingly trite.

BOOKISH CHICAGOAN WHO'S OUR VISITOR.

Mr. and Mrs. George M. Millard of Chicago are spending a few weeks in Southern California, with headquarters in Los Angeles.

Mr. Millard has been for many years connected with the A. C. McClurg & Co.'s book store of Chicago, and is now a member of the firm. About twenty-five years ago he organized the rare books department, a department which has grown and grown, until today it is one of the most important and best-known departments of the store.

Gradually about this quiet but genial man, this man of refined tastes and beauty-loving soul, there gathered a coterie of men who also loved books and other beautiful things, and soon the particular corner where the rare books were kept came to be known as "The Saints' and Sinners' Corner."

Prominent among the self-named "Sinners" was Eugene Field, while Rev. Frank W. Gunsaulus was conspicuous among the "Saints." Mr. Millard himself was, by common consent, the High Priest of the Mystic Order.

Mr. Field and Mr. Millard were devoted friends, and for many years before Mr. Field's death they lunched downtown together every day.

Death and distance have removed most of the "Saints and Sinners," the most noted one who remains in Chicago today is Dr. Gunsaulus. On the occasion of the marriage of one of his sons a few years ago Dr. Gunsaulus purchased a rare and costly book as a wedding gift. A few days later he asked permission to return the book, saying: "Joe thinks he would rather have a set of books. Joe," he added apologetically, "is very practical."

"Which, thank God, you and I are not," said Mr. Millard.

To Mr. Millard some ten years ago there appeared a radiant vision in the shape of a young woman who asked for a book of which she thought she had heard at some time or other.

Now Mr. Millard knew there was no such book in existence. A perfectly honest, straightforward dealer would have promptly told the young woman so. He, on the other hand, said to her: "I have not the book, but I will investigate, and if it is to be found will secure it for you." This, of course, made it necessary for the young woman to leave her address, which was all that this designing man wanted.

An ardent wooing followed. Two years later, meeting the young woman in London, the oft-repeated question was pressed with so much vigor that she consented to be married there and then, or at least as soon as English law could be complied with. A few days after his return to Chicago, Thomas Nelson Page was in McClurg's, and asked Mr. Millard: "What is the rarest thing you brought back with you this time?"

"You will have to come to my home to see that," was the reply.

Mrs. Millard says that Mr. Millard needed, not a rest, but a complete change of thought and occupation, consequently since reaching Los Angeles he has spent much of his time in the book stores.

He expresses himself as greatly surprised at the number of these stores, and at the size and the quality of the stock which they carry. One of these stores he called "the most booky book store I was ever in." By this remark he expressed his approbation of the fact that the store in question carries nothing but books, and derives an unusual dignity from the absence of all other things.

For many years Mr. Millard's business has taken him abroad every summer, and that is one reason why he is now makinb his first trip to California. Both he and Mrs. Millard are strong in their belief that there is no truth in the statement so often heard that living is higher and things in general more expensive here than in the East. "People who say that," said Mrs. Millard, "are thinking of New York and Chicago as they were ten years ago. They would find things very different today."

Southern California appeals strongly to both of these people, and when Mr. Millard is ready to retire from business they expect to return and make their home here.

MEDIEVAL ARMS AND ARMORS.

WORN BY MEN THREE CENTURIES OR MORE AGO.

Evidence of the Fierceness of Battles Men Waged Before Modern Firearms Supplanted Hand-to-Hand Conflicts on Foot or on Horse. Curious Guns and Cannon.

[London Morning Post:] Museums of armory such as the famous Armeria of Madrid, of the Zeughaus of Berlin, or that choice collection of armor in the Johanneum in Dresden are interesting, for they are collections of armor and weapons brought from various places, many pieces being of rare workmanship or of historic interest. But to stand in a veritable vast armor intact, ready for absolute work as in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, the gloom of the great buildings permitting one to see the row on row and stack upon stack, orderly arranged in solid fixtures, of arms and armor of the fifteenth to the seventeenth century! Four great floors, lit by deep, splayed windows in the ponderous, solid walls give sufficient light on one side to play upon the polished steel of coats of arms or lance head, on the long barrels of the arquebus, or on long rows of helmets that hang awaiting the medieval heads, long since turned to dust, that once wore them. To stand thus, and to wander down betwixt these rows of solid fixtures, bearing their weight of weapons and armor, is a strange, weird, unique experience, bringing up realistic visions of medieval days. This sensation is experienced in the vast Zeughaus or Armory in Gratz, in Southern Austria.

The exterior of the building is solid and plain, with the exception of the handsome portal with the figures of Mars and Bellona; but within wonder soon seizes one, and that wonder increases as the vastness of this monument of the past is gradually understood. Four spacious floors are there, each with their lines of shelves, hooks rests, fixtures, all filled with weapons, waiting, waiting for the mystic army. Every type of weapon is here, and many a strange device for worrying and annoying the enemy, or assisting attack. Twenty-eight thousand weapons in all, and no less than 2500 full suits of plate armor. These suits of armor are very varied and full of interest; those of the infantry weigh twelve to twenty-two kilograms, those of the cavalry are heavier, and weigh up to thirty-four kilos, the heaviest being forty-two kilograms, about eighty pounds, the metal being eleven millimetres thick. The sensation of putting on one of these helmets that weighed about fourteen pounds and having the visor closed was most dispiriting, and made one wonder how one could fight at all with such a thing on one's head; and one could only attempt to raise the heavy iron shields for the footmen, which all had their handles in good preservation, if one were alert and strong enough. It required knack to lift one to the proper position above the shoulder and when there so manipulate it to ward off blows; and yet the men were shorter and smaller than the men of today. On the first floor of the building are arranged guns, arquebus, muskets and infantry armor. On the second floor cavalry armor and pistols and footmen's armor. On the third floor special suits of armor and the lighter firearms, and on the fourth floor lances, morning stars, and all kinds of pole weapons, side arms, and shields. But this general list by no means discloses the wonders and peculiarities of the collection.

The armory is a genuine one, not a collection, and the inventory of the Zeughaus gives the following dates for purchases: 1568, 1590, 1594, 1596, 1598, 1625, 1647, 1684, 1699, 1704, 1749, 1769, 1806, 1866. But there are weapons and harness that date before the first of these noted purchases. The older of the 2500 complete suits of armor go back between 1500 and 1530. Among these are the finely worked Maximilian suit and some rich examples of Damascened and inlaid armor. Among the 1600 helmets, which are most interesting from their varied forms and devices, are visor helmets, morions, etc. The heavy round iron shields are mostly of the sixteenth century, and there are some Hungarian painted wooden shields among the collection. The swords, daggers, and bayonets form a most rich and interesting collection. Single and two handed swords, and some, proving the quality of steel, for the blades are much older than the handles, date from the fifteenth century. The "armor stickers," with five sides all sharply edged, are uncomfortable weapons for worrying into a crevice and inflicting a horrible wound. Some of the incised work on these weapons is very artistic, or sometimes quaint. The fighting hammers, a nasty weapon, also are very interesting. Nor has music been omitted, as the complete set of music for each regiment or company is here—the two drums and the four pipes that constituted the regimental music of the past centuries, the latter in their handy leather case.

MEDIEVAL ARTILLERY.

Only two real cannon are here, but falconets, mortars, and many thousands of "haken," or arquebus, muskets and birsch, or rifled heavy guns, carbines and pistols. Many of these have the handles inlaid with choice devices in ivory and silver, and the powder-horns and cartridge cases are often richly decorated, while thousands are of the type for the common foot soldier. Worthy of notice is the ingenuity of the double means of firing the guns, consisting of a fire sponge and a spring wheel with flint and steel, which had to be set with its key for every discharge, while an interesting device on some of the guns was a little tube laid along the barrel through which the object aimed at was sighted. There are also curious devices for firing, besides the double arrangement of touch sponge and flint triggers; there was the spring wheel trigger, with an added Stecher or Schneller—i.e., quickener; a thin wire trigger in addition to the ordinary trigger; and some of the weapons had a trigger half way up the barrel, so that in a close melee, when the whole length of the weapon could not be extended, the gun could be fired. Expressively illustrative this of the close combat of medieval warfare. Among the pistols are 240, beautifully inlaid, some of them left-hand pistols, leaving the right hand free.

Some of the Protestant suits of armour are decorated with figures of rraying knights and the chalice and the letters I. N. R. I., and have mottoes such as "Unersucht ist unerfarn" (untried is unwon). The places of rigin of this armour are not wholly rown, but Nuremberg and Augsurg and the Grantz armorers conribute largely. The collection of ikes, halberds, partisans, and morn- stars is remarkably complete, om the light tilting lance to the avy fighting lance it is difficult to ield. The great double-handed ords known as flambards, the

Bullock's The Store You Have Known

A Greater Bullock's

—The store will have approximately 6 acres of floor space.

—But mere bulk does not make a great business.

—The same spirit and policy that have directed the wonderful business building of the past 3½ years will insure the rightness of merchandise, values and service that will have to do with the greater business building in a Greater Bullock's—a store which does satisfy its customers.

Christmas Is Coming

—Last week more than one started gift buying.

—Remember that last-minute varieties are not nearly as merry as last-minute stocks, and begin your holiday buying now at Bullocks.

Toys are being opened more and more every day; some great surprises.

The Neighbor Building Bullock's is Annexing

—and the store is growing to house the business—

—3½ years to outgrow this great 7-story and basement corner building—

—Who would have thought it March 4th, 1906—(?) the day the store opened its doors—Call to mind Broadway at Seventh then—and the skepticism with which those who had a right to know, looked at the big building towering stories above nearly every other structure in a radius of Blocks—"Too far south"—"The right idea, but years ahead of time"—"Good luck, but I'm afraid"—Good wishes were general—but nearly all were limited—

—Come to the Roof Garden, Monday—see the tall buildings to right and to left, already built. Hear the ring of hammers, the buzz of saws, the hum of engines in the great encircling wheel of activity of which Broadway at 7th is the hub—

—Los Angeles doesn't grow according to precedent—

—The pioneer knew the city when he dared—and Los Angeles and Bullock's have set a 3½ year record of growth for all the world to note—

—Hand in hand—the city and the store have gone forward—increases in population and activities by the one have been met with increases in stocks, sales and activities by the other.

—And now 1910—Annexation year for Los Angeles (plus San Pedro, Wilmington and Hollywood) becomes Annexation year for Bullock's—plus 71,000 square feet more room—to give all departments much needed space—to give us an opportunity to raise Bullock service to a higher degree of efficiency —to make the store capable of greater accomplishment in the satisfying of Customers.

—At the very threshold of Fall and the great Holiday trade—the great Neighbor building on the North is joining us in a splendid temporary-expansion, that is to make way for a greater one to come.

—Re-arrangements are in progress; walls are to be broken through; work is being rushed. Carpenters, Painters, Mechanics, are hurrying—while department men are busy unpacking Thousands of Dollars Worth of new Merchandise—new values—which have been bought in anticipation.

—A Greater Bullock's for Greater Los Angeles—the City and the Store are growing and will continue to grow deeper and deeper into the confidence of the public.

BITS OF VERSE.

An Old-Time Favorite.

The light is fading down the sky,
The shadows grow and multiply;
I hear the thrushes' evening son
But I have borne with toil wrong
So long, so long!
Dim dreams my drowsy senses drow
So darling, kiss my eyelids down!

My life's brief spring went wasted
My summer ended fruitlessly;
I learned to hunger, strive and w
I found you, love—Oh, happy fa
So late, so late!
Now all my fields are turning brow
So, darling, kiss my eyelids down

Oh, blessed sleep! Oh, perfect rest
Thus pillowed on your faithful br
Nor life nor death is wholly di
Oh, tender heart, since you are he
So dear, so dear!
Sweet love! my soul's suffi crown!
Now, darling, kiss my eyelids dow

The Moonbeam wooed in velvet n
A Lotus bloom that dreamed

The Lotus moved her petals brig
My Love came forth, my Soul

More fair than any flower may
Her face is pure and fine as d
Her hair is night above the sea
Her fragrant skin is sweet as r

Her robes are silk; in every fold
There shines a pearl, there gle
a gem;
Her arms are clasped with hoop

The Carpenter.

When Jesus paused amid his w and leaning
Upon His plane to take a mome breath,
Did He, like me, thus ponder o'er meaning
Of birth, and life, and death?

Or, when His work was done an the gloaming
He put His tools back in the w en chest;
I wonder if, like mine, when He homing,
Deep sadness filled His breast?

If in the red defeat of day retrea
He saw a symbol of His Calva
Or if, like me, He saw how life fleeting,
And wept that it must be?

If, when He laid His body, limp aching,
With duteous toil, upon His hu

He closed His eyes, nor thought the waking,
And lost, like me, His dread?

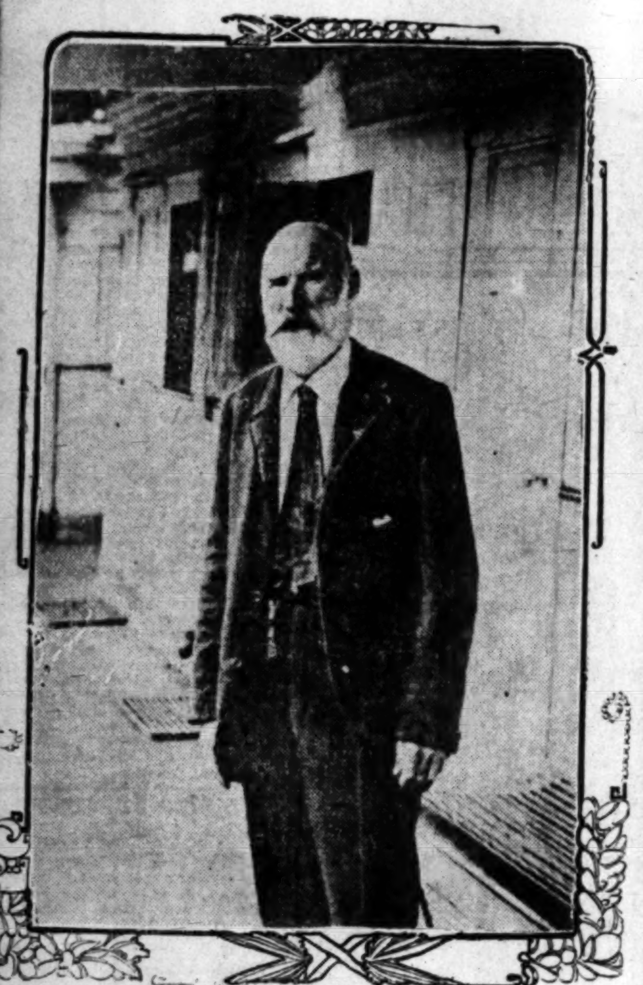
PERSONALITIES.



Maj. Edward J. Monroe.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—"I have dis- overed the fountain of youth," said aj. Edward James Monroe, 94 years d, of Bridgeport, Ct., and Jackson- lle, Fla., when he left for Florida board the Apache, of the Clyde e, to make preparations for his urth marriage. "But the fountain is monopoly with me," he added, "and ybody can find it who looks for it. s fresh air. Help yourself to some." Maj. Monroe, who says he is a son James Monroe, fifth President of e United States, smiled when asked e name of his future wife.

"When you get to be as old as I am, young man," he said, "you will know that a woman can change her mind sixty times in sixty seconds. If I should tell you her name she might change her mind about marrying me. But I'm going to get—married, all right. When a man's relatives all have died except one and he doesn't know where that one is, he begins to feel lonely. Besides, when a man has twenty-five years or more of life ahead of him, as I have, he might as well have company."

HERMAN KLAUSER, who has been a guest at the Angelus several days, is just recovering from ma- rial fever acquired in Sonora. Feeling e first symptoms of the disease, the ning expert prepared to leave at ce for Los Angeles. By the time he rived at Hermosillo he was so se- usly ill that it was necessary to ke him from the train and place him the hospital. There Dr. Wiley of Los ngeles treated him, and just a few ys ago he was sufficiently recov- ed to travel again. Mr. Klauser, in dition to being a mining man, is so deeply interested in oil. Grahame-White, one of the daring and successful of the British aviators who is to compete in the Harvard meet at Atlantic, probably is the pioneer in the use of the aëroplane as a carrier of mail. Acting in concert with the British postal authorities he recently carried letters from Blackpool to Southport in twenty minutes, covering a space that takes one hour and a half for transit by trains.

General Botha's election campaign for control of the first parliament of the union of South Africa, was seriously hampered by the announcement that his daughter proposed to sing the part of Carmen in an amateur opera production at Johannesburg. This levity on the part of a member of the family of their leader and premier so offended the straight-laced Boers that General Botha had to forbid and disavow his daughter's intension.

Edward Ashbee, an employé of a brick company of Tunbridge Wells, England, holds the record of having wheeled more than 40,000,000 bricks in a wheelbarrow in the past thirty years. The total weight of this number of bricks would be about 130,000 tons, and in the course of his work Ashbee has walked nearly 55,000 miles.

Prince Klekleh, son of the late King of Dahomey, has accepted a job as office sweep and general all around man in a Paris factory. His royal highness was formerly sergeant in the French Colonial army, but the lure of Paris drew him to the capital, and he came here persuading himself that he would find a rich heiress willing to buy his title, for in Paris the color line is not tightly drawn. By the way of introduction the Prince distinguished himself in a night battle with rowdies, but the sensation didn't last long and the black Prince got hungry. When he was hungry enough he accepted the job he now holds.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

MAJ. GEN. WOOD, Chief of Staff, has effected a reorganization of the general staff corps of the army. Under the new scheme the Coast Artillery and the militia, the latter now a division of the War Department under the Secretary's immediate direction, are made sections of the general staff, and their heads become assistants to the chief of staff.

This makes the general staff comprise the following co-ordinate sections:

The mobile army, consisting of the infantry, cavalry and field artillery, all under Maj. Gen. W. H. Carter.

The coast artillery, under Brig.-Gen. Alfred Murray.

The militia, under Col. E. M. Weaver.

The Army War College and information, under Gen. W. W. Wothespoon.

These commanding officers will become acting chiefs of staff in the order named in Gen. Wood's absence.

Col. Garrard, commanding the Fifteenth Cavalry at Fort Myer, has issued instructions to every man in his command that in the future he must indulge in more exercise. He gives as his reason for the order, that an athletic man is more proficient in handling service arms.

Sergeant Major W. S. Gendar, who has served more enlistments in the Thirteenth Provisional Regiment of Coast Artillery, Brooklyn, than any other man, has applied for retirement. He will be placed on the retired list as second lieutenant. Mr. Gendar is now serving his forty-seventh year in the ranks.

Medical Inspector H. G. Beyer of the navy has been detailed to command the Naval Medical School in Washington. He believes Medical Director John C. Boyd, who has been assigned to duty as a member of the navel retiring board at the Washington navy yard.

Legislation authorizing the compulsory retirement of officers of field rank of more than thirty years' service is recommended by Gen. E. D. Thomas, commanding the Department of Colorado, in his annual report to the War Department. He made the suggestion, he said, as a legal method of removing from the active list certain officers, who, because of rank and years of service, should, if they were competent to be continued on the active list, properly be placed in responsible positions of authority or command. Such retirements, he said, would result in incalculable advantage to the service. "Otherwise progress is constantly impeded," said Gen. Thomas, "and we cannot look for able administration and training in the numerous ramifications of our service."

Captain Ernest Van D. Murphy, recently promoted from first lieutenant of the Twenty-seventh Infantry, has been assigned to the Twenty-first Infantry, now stationed in the Philippines. Captain Murphy has been ordered to go to San Francisco and report to the commanding general, Department of California, for duty pending the sailing of the first available transport to Manila.

The resignation of Capt. Raymond H. Fenner of the Coast Artillery Corps has been accepted by the president, to take effect December 1, 1910. He has been granted leave of absence to that date. For several months past he has been stationed at Fort Monroe, Virginia.

Brig.-Gen. George H. Torney, Surgeon-General of the United States Army, arrived in San Francisco yesterday afternoon on a trip of inspection of the forces of the medical department stationed about the bay. Gen. Torney was for many years in command of the general hospital at the Presidio, ocupying that position during the great fire of 1906. It was he who directed the sanitary arrangements for the many relief camps which were established after the great disaster and to him is given the credit for the exceptionally high health record maintained among the refugees.

Capt. Charles H. Hilton has been relieved from his position at the head of the Twenty-sixth Company of United States Artillery and ordered to report to the commanding officer of the artillery district of the Pacific, for duty on his staff. Capt. Hilton went with the First Colorado to Manila as an officer of Company I, which was known as the Denver Wheel Club Company. When the First Colorado was mustered out the captain went into the regular army and was assigned to the artillery.

Rear-Admiral Corwin P. Rees retired for age, September 4. Being an additional number in his grade, his retirement will cause no promotions. He served on the Olympia as executive officer in the battle of Manila Bay, May 1, 1898, and at the capture of Manila, August 13, 1898. He was on duty at the torpedo station in 1899. He was advanced five numbers for eminent and conspicuous conduct in battle, February 11, 1901; was promoted commander May 12, 1901; and August of the same year was assigned to command the Monongahela. He was next on lighthouse duty, was captain of the navy yard at Portsmouth, N. H., and commandant of the naval station at Honolulu, that being his latest assignment. He reached the grade of rear-admiral October 25, 1909.

Surgeon-General Charles F. Stokes, chief of the bureau of medicine and surgery, Navy Department, has planned to take an extended tour of inspection throughout the West and Northwest, going as far as the Pacific Coast. Among the places to be visited are the new naval hospital on the Great Lakes, the Mare Island Hospital, training station at Yerba Buena, Cal., and the Naval Hospital for Tuberculosis, Las Animas, Col.

Three officers of the Medical Corps of the army, stationed in this city, have been detailed to act as judges of the intercoal company competition in the application of first and to the injured to be held September 17, at Scranton, Pa., under the auspices of the National Red Cross. They are Maj. Charles Lynch and Capt. Matthew A. De Laney and Howard H. Bailey. Officials of all of the important railway companies and other corporations employing large numbers of men as well as the officials of the general government are interested in the movement to introduce the system of first aid to the injured to all classes of industries.

OLD AND YOUNG.

JOSEPH BARD of Otelia, Huntingdon county, Pa., is 84 years old, but last week he thrashed seventeen dozen sheaves of rye with an old-fashioned flail, taking about a day and a half at the job. He says he could keep right at it with any of them if his eyesight did not fail him.

Though Timina Carry, daughter of Edward F. Carry and wife of Highland Park, Chicago, is only 12 years old, she has blossomed as an author. Her first play is called "A Fairy's Year." It reveals unusual imaginative power in a girl so young, and has a poetic strain considered remarkable. The play was presented recently on the lawn of the Carry home, and more than $200 was realized for charity.

ARTISTS, AUTHORS.

EMILE BECKER of New York and Chicago, expert in old masters, predicts that in five or ten years time, Americans will be painting pictures which will not only be regularly exhibited in Germany, but will be bought by German connoisseurs and retained in Germany. He further asserts that in ten or twenty years, Americans will be able proudly to point to a distinctively American art. At the same time Mr. Becker, who was born in Germany, is by no means blind to the present defects of Americans as artists and art lovers.

Thos. J. Richardson, the San Francisco artist, passes a portion of every year in the glacial regions of the Northwest. So carefully has Richardson studied the drawing and color of these glacier landscapes that at the present time thirty of his pictures are loaned to the Smithsonian Institution at Washington as an aid to the scientific study of glaciers. He has become so thoroughly absorbed in this line of subject since his coming to California, about eight years ago, that he has paid but little attention to exhibiting publicly, working not alone for art's sake, but for science as well.

It is only nine years since George Barr McCutcheon modestly offered his first novel, "Graustark," for publication and was pleased to sell it for a nominal sum. Since that time approximately three million copies of the McCutcheon novels have been bought by the American public, and the author is still kept busy putting out his yearly output.

The latest example of the literary man in politics is Henry Russell Miller. In the last reform campaign in Allegheny he was the fireworks of the performance. Reminiscences of this campaign appear in Mr. Miller's novel, "The Man Higher Up." And to show his broad-mindedness, he has made his hero a practical politician.

CHURCHMEN, EDUCATORS.

DR. RICHARD BURTON of the University of Minnesota recently delivered a lecture upon "The Modern Drama" in San Francisco, in which he did not hesitate to declare that as all the best blood of literature a few years ago went to fiction so now it is going to plays, and as a result the minds of the people are turning more to appreciation and discrimination in the matter of plays. The subject matter did not determine the worth of the play, Doctor Burton said. It might be the mean, the petty and the squalid, but if the master mind were back of the subject matter, bringing out the worth of even the meanest as a part of the scheme of life, it would be worth while. Doctor Burton urged that the public band together and endeavor to raise the standard of plays and accept the drama as a part of their cultural development just as much as reading.

Rev. M. A. Matthews, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Seattle, who is now in New York, said this to a Sun reporter: "On a Sunday night you will find in my church 3000 persons, and of them fully seventy per cent are men. This will indicate that men do go to church out there, if they don't here in New York."

Rev. W. W. Dawley, a Baptist clergyman, of Syracuse, New York, has plans for an apartment-house church, costing $200,000. The first three floors are to be used for church purposes, and the other three for apartments for young men.

After occupying the pulpit of the Oxford Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, for four years, the Rev. Dr. Frederick W. Loetscher will resign to become the professor of homiletics in the Princeton Theological Seminary.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

ALVEY A. ADEE, Second Assistant Secretary of State, has been continuously connected with the Department of State since September 9, 1870, when he was appointed secretary of the legation at Madrid.

Mr. Adee is sixty-eight years of age and is hale and hearty. Every summer he spends a month or so touring Europe on his bicycle. He has been in the State Department proper for thirty-three years. Prior to being appointed Third Assistant Secretary of State in 1882 he was chief of the Diplomatic Bureau. He was appointed Second Assistant Secretary in 1886.

Dr. Charles P. Grandfield, a Missourian, who was appointed postmaster of Washington nearly a year ago, but who was unable to enter upon his new duties because his services as First Assistant Postmaster-General, a position which he now fills, cannot be spared, is wondering if there is such a thing as a "reward of merit." As postmaster, Dr. Grandfield would draw a salary of $6000 a year. As First Assistant Postmaster-General he gets only $5000 a year. Consequently, because he has made himself invaluable to Postmaster-General Hitchcock, he is losing $1000 a year. Now the rumor is current in Washington that Mr. Hitchcock will refuse to give Dr. Grandfield up as his first assistant and right-hand man in matters concerning the Postoffice Department. Grandfield has been in the Postoffice Department for a quarter of a century and has at his finger ends more information about that big institution than any other person, perhaps, in the country. Hitchcock needs him in the work of establishing the new postal savings bank system.

Senator Aldrich, of Rhode Island, accompanied by his wife, his daughter, Lucy, and his son, Richard, sailed for France a week ago. It is not known how long a stay he will make.

Post Wheeler, secretary of the American Embassy at St. Petersburg, has returned to the United States to have an operation for appendicitis performed.

A priceless art and curio collection was left by Julius L. Brown, eldest son of Georgia's war Governor, who died at Atlanta, Sunday. Among notable things in the collection is a lock of Napoleon's hair, with a certificate from the Emperor's phy attesting its genuineness. Keys of dersonville prison, the first cast for Jefferson Davis and Ale der as President and Vice-Pre of the southern Confederacy; a ter off the coffin in which Max lian was placed after execution original manuscript of "L Rookh," are among the curios he collected.

"PRIVILEGED BIGAMY" FAST DISAPPEARING AS A POOR PREROGATIVE OF ROYALTY.

Attention Attracted to Morganatic Marriage by the Approaching Wedding of Victor Napoleon to Princess Clementine of Belgium, and by the Fight Made by the Duke of the Abruzzi and Miss Elkins to Gain Royal Recognition.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Sept. 8.—World-wide interest in the subject of morganatic marriage has been revived by the approaching wedding of Prince Victor Napoleon, the Bonapartist pretender to the throne of France, and Princess Clementine of Belgium, and by the recrudescence of the rumors of an approaching marriage between the Duke of the Abruzzi, who might some day become heir to the throne of Italy, and Miss Elkins. Victor Napoleon already has a morganatic wife. The Duke of the Abruzzi cannot make Miss Elkins his wife in any other way without the consent of his cousin, the King of Italy. As a matter of fact, this is what has stood in the way of the marriage for so long. If Miss Elkins's parents would have consented to a morganatic marriage the ceremony would have been performed long ago.

Happily, Though Morganatically, Married.

Grand Duke Michael of Russia and his wife, Countess Torby. The Grand Duke renounced his royal rank to marry her.

Morganatic marriage has been defined by Sir Edward Clarke, one of the greatest of living English lawyers, as "privileged bigamy," and like a good many other privileges, it is confined to royalty. It had its origin in Germany, but it soon became popular in other countries and there is hardly a royal family in Europe that has not experienced it in the person of one at least of its members. The institution is based on the theory held by the lawyers of most European countries that "royalty can only mate with royalty." An alliance, therefore, contracted between a royal person and one of lower birth would not have the binding force of an alliance between equals. In order to overcome the scruples of royal lovers who wished to make the objections of their adoration their wives, the morganatic marriage was invented. This is a marriage which is perfectly regular as far as the religious side is concerned, and for that matter as far as the legal side is concerned, too, but its offspring cannot inherit the father's royal honors, and in the event of its becoming necessary for the royal husband at some future time to contract for dynastic reasons a marriage with a regular royal bride, the morganatic marriage must not be allowed to stand in the way. This is the case in the Victor Napoleon affair. A royalty who is already married to a royalty, however, cannot contract a morganatic marriage while his royal wife is alive.

TURN OUT WELL.

As a matter of fact, morganatic marriages usually turn out uncommonly well. A royal lover who is willing to go to all the trouble and put up with the gossip and scandal that usually accompany such a marriage is usually willing to stick to the woman of his choice. Indeed he often relinquishes all claim to his royal inheritance before contracting the marriage. Such was the case of the Grand Duke Michael of Russia, and Countess Torby, who are among the most popular and respected couples in English society. There is no danger that the Grand Duke will ever desert his morganatic wife to mate with his equal in rank. Such was also the case of Prince Oscar of Sweden, who renounced his rank to marry Miss Ebba Monck, one of his mother's ladies-in-waiting. He took the title of Count of Wisborg and the pair are working as Salvation Army officers in Lapland. Another famous case of this kind was that of the Grand Duke of Austria who took the name of Johann Orth and disappeared after marrying Millie Strubel, an actress.

Another famous case of fidelity between a couple morganatically married is that of the Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the dual throne of Austria and Hungary and the Countess Sophie Chotek. He has been urged by his relatives time and again to contract a royal marriage, but he refuses and declares that his wife shall reign with him as Empress of Austria. She will reign in any case as Queen of Hungary, for Hungary knows only one kind of marriage and it is a safe bet that the Austrian law on the subject will be changed before the old Emperor Franz Joseph is cold in his grave.

KING GEORGE, NO.

English royalties have had their share of morganatic marriages, but it is my duty here to explode an ancient and persistent scandal which has been circulated about King George. That was the story that he was married as a young man, when he had no hope of becoming heir to the throne, to the daughter of a commoner, and that he abandoned her to marry the present queen when his elder brother's death made him heir. To begin with no such marriage could have taken place, for under the English law any ceremony would have been illegal and void by which any member of the royal family was married to anyone—royal or not—without the consent of the King in council. But I am informed on the highest authority that there wasn't even a midnight ceremony to base it on. The favorite story is that the lady was the daughter of an admiral, and that Prince George married her when he was a young sailor stationed at Malta. I have the authority of a close friend of the late Princess Mary of Teck, mother of the present Queen, who made a thorough investigation of all the stories before her daughter's marriage, for the following version of what really happened:

King George was always an uncommonly serious young man. Unlike his father, the late King Edward, he had no taste for actresses and he detested demi mondaines. His love affairs, such as they were, were always with young ladies whom he met at court or on his journeys abroad, and he had a way of falling rather seriously in love. One of the most serious of his boyish love affairs occurred when he was at Malta. The girl was the daughter, not of an admiral, but of an army doctor stationed there; and the Princess was informed the affair went so far that the young Prince declared that if it were in his power he would marry the girl. It wasn't in his power, however, for no such marriage could have any binding force in England, and there never was any kind of ceremony. This is the only basis for the story so commonly accepted as true, that the present King of England was morganatically married.

THE OTHER GEORGES.

If he were not, however, a good many of his predecessors were as well as a good many of his forebears who never sat on the throne. William III. of England—William of Orange—married the Countess Auguste von Borroch morganatically after his wife's death. George I. went through a marriage ceremony with the Duchess of Kendall. George IV. married Mrs. Fitzherbert, an actress, and William IV. married Mrs. Jordan, their children being known by the name of Fitzclarence. One of the best known cases of morganatic marriage in England during comparatively recent years was that of the late Duke of Cambridge, Queen Victoria's cousin, to Miss Farebrother, a beautiful and talented actress. They lived happily together for a lifetime and their children, who are known by the name of Fitzgeorge, won high rank and honors in the army and navy. So opposed was Queen Victoria to this match, however, that she never received her cousin's wife, and although the Duke of Cambridge was at court constantly she never mentioned her name to him, or in any way allowed him to know that she was aware of her cousin-in-law's existence. Only when the faithful morganatic wife died and the bereaved husband was mourning her as sincerely as man ever mourned did the stern old Queen unbend. She wrote a letter excusing him from attendance at a court function and expressing her sympathy with him in the "severance of so intimate a relationship, which had continued for so many years."

Sometimes the offspring of a morganatic marriage regain their royal state. The present Queen of England was Princess May of Teck and her father, the Duke of Teck, was the son of one of the Dukes of Wurtemberg by a morganatic wife. Prince Henry of Battenberg, who married the favorite daughter of Queen Victoria, and whose daughter is the Queen of Spain, was also the descendant of a morganatic marriage by one of the Princes of Hesse.

It has even been said that the wife of that greatest of all sticklers for caste and regularity, the Kaiser, is only his morganatic wife after all, and the German law courts will be called on before long to rule on the question, which arose recently when the Kaiserin's brother claimed exemption from certain taxation on account of his royalty. The lower court to which the matter was referred ruled that he wasn't royal at all, but only an ordinary German nobleman. If the higher courts sustain this view then the Kaiserin is only the Emperor's morganatic wife.

Morganatic marriage seems to run in the blood of the royal family of Belgium. Of course every one knows about the late King Leopold's marriage to Baroness Vaughan shortly before his death, but it is not so generally known that his father, when a Prince of Saxe Coburg and Gotha, married an actress morganatically and lived with her for a number of years. This marriage took place after the death of his first wife who was the daughter of George IV. of England. When he was chosen to fill the throne of Belgium, however, he divorced his low-born consort. Then there is the notorious case of Leopold's daughter, the Princess Stephanie, who after the death of her husband, the Archduke Rudolph of Austria, married a petty nobleman called Count Lonyay

THE CZAR.

Somewhat similar to the story that is told about King George of England is that which is current in Russia about the Czar. It is that when he was a young man he contracted a marriage with a beautiful Jewish dancer, but that he put her away when he married the present Czarina. The story has never been denied officially and certain it is that there are two young men undergoing their education in Paris who are generally believed to be the sons of that marriage. They are well supplied with money which, it is said, comes from their august father, but, of course, they don't talk about the matter and the people who act as go-betweens are not likely to say anything. When the Czar succeeded to the throne his Jewish subjects built great hopes for better treatment on this connection, but if the story is true his Jewish sweetheart was able to exercise little influence with her royal lover in favor of her co-religionists, for they have been worse treated, if that were possible, under the present ruler than they were before.

There are signs that with the advance of democratic sentiment this mediaeval privilege of kings will disappear and if it does the kings themselves will take the initiative in abolishing it. One can imagine the rage of the Kaiser, who is above all a good family man, if he finds out that under the present German law his wife is only a left-handed wife, and his children not entitled to succeed him on the throne. That law won't last long once the courts declare this state of things to exist. In Austria as I have already pointed out, the law's life is already limited to that of the aged Emperor who now sits on the throne. In England it may be said that it has disappeared already, for public sentiment would not tolerate "privileged bigamy" in these days, even in the case of royalty. In fact the King now hardly ever makes any objection to members of his family marrying persons of inferior rank. King Edward's sister married the Duke of Argyll, a Scottish nobleman, with his consent, and his daughter was won by another Scotsman, the Earl of Fife, who was made a duke on his marriage. The children of both these unions would be eligible to succeed to the crown, in the case of the failure of more direct heirs. There are rumors that Princess Patricia of Connaught, a niece of the late King Edward, will soon be allowed to marry the young Marquis of Anglesey, with whom she has been in love for years, and there will be nothing morganatic about that marriage.

With the three leading royal houses of Europe thus setting their faces against the continuance of this ancient privilege, we may soon hope to see it confined to the rulers of petty states, and it is more than likely that they will soon fall in line with the fashion set by their more important royal colleagues.

Little Home Helps On How to Be Beautiful

By MADAME MAREE

SYMMETRY OF FORM

Symmetrical lines and beauty of form are woman's by Divine Right, and while Nature has been lax in many instances, it lies within the power of every woman to have a plump and beautiful figure and banish forever those ugly, scrawny lines so jarring to the eye. Massaging is primitive and only local in effect, and the woman who would have a plump figure must follow the example of la dame Parisian—use the Vaucaire treatment and build up from the inside. To prepare this treatment, make a simple syrup with a cup and a half of granulated sugar and enough water to make a pint. To this add one ounce of true galiol (be careful not to get the synthetic.) Shake well, and then take two tablespoonfuls two or three times each day and soon you will have a well rounded and attractive form.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Della K.: Clogging of your skin's pores may be due to excessive use of powder, which is apt to cause blackheads and pimply eruptions and coarsen the skin. If you will use the following as a massage, it will clean and clear the skin and give it that pink, satiny glow of youth: Bring a pint of water to the boiling point, then pour into a pint jar and add three ounces of cerol crystals, stirring constantly until thoroughly dissolved, and a thick, greaseless cream is formed. Use this freely, massaging into face, neck and arms until it disapwill never have to use powder or rouge.

D. N.: Your falling hair is due to an excess of dandruff, and the best shampoo I can recommend is eggol, which removes dandruff and acts as a scalp food. Use this eggol shampoo every two weeks at the start, followed with a tonic made by adding one-half pint of pure water to the same amount of grain alcohol; let stand for five minutes, then put in one ounce of beta-canthol. Use the tonic daily for a month, then twice a week after that. This treatment will stop the hair from falling out and make it grow in thick and glossy.

Ruth S.: Don't be discouraged. The hairs on your chin are easily removed by using a paste of powdered delol and warm water. Take a little delol and add just enough water to form a soft paste; cover the hairy spot thickly with this and let it remain for two or three minutes, then scrape off and you will find the hairs have disappeared. You can get delol from your druggist, in ounce bottles, and while it is slightly expensive it is worth several times its cost, as it is unfailing.

Dorothy M.: For that roughness and "lobster hue" to the skin of which you write, I would suggest using the amarol preparation, which is made by dissolving, thoroughly, two ounces of amarol in one pint of hot water. Shake this well and let stand over night, then apply as you would any complexion lotion and your skin will become smooth and clear

Prices Are Lower

WE DO not pay commissions to anybody. We hold that the customer who pays us money is entitled to every ounce of value, and if we should adopt the policy of paying commissions, then we would be obliged to raise our prices accordingly, so that the customer would really pay for it in the end.

If our present prices would stand for any commissions, and we decided to give them, they would be given in the form of a discount to all our customers who pay for the goods, but our present prices do not admit of any such course, and besides, we have no intention of fixing them so they will.

We are often asked to pay a commission, and when we state that we do not pay commissions, we are told that they can be had elsewhere. We know that some stores do pay commissions, but so long as we sell at one price and guarantee to each individual who comes into this store the advantage of the lowest prices that it is possible to secure under any and all circumstances, we shall not allow commissions.

When Trading Here, You Can Have That Positive Assurance That Your Neighbor Does Not Buy a Lot of Furniture for One Nickel Less Than You Could Have Bought It For

We realize that a great deal is expected from Pease Brothers—much more than is expected from the average furniture store. We have, through our newspaper advertising, outlining our business policy, set a high standard for doing business, and the public has taken us at our word. They have given us a most liberal patronage, and their indorsement is an evidence of our having MADE GOOD. The fact that we have made good in the past will serve as an affidavit that we will continue to do so in the future.

Now just one word about LOW PRICES, ABOUT REDUCED PRICES, ABOUT REAL TRUE ECONOMY IN BUYING FURNITURE. You just get firmly fixed in your mind the fact that no matter how low furniture may be advertised, you can do better, you can get MORE FOR LESS at Pease Brothers than anywhere else.

If you haven't taken advantage of the reduced prices on many pieces that were repriced after our annual inventory, then we suggest that you do so quickly, before they are gone, because the sale on all of these articles has been very large.

MY TOUR AROUND THE WORLD.

BY SYDNEY FORD.

NO. XXVII.

drinks afternoon tea. It London drinks afternoon tea. It is served even at matinées. I nt the other afternoon to the his- ic old Drury Lane Theater to see thrilling play, "The Whip," which ludes among its various startling ge effects a railway accident, with collision in detail, and an auto- bile tragedy—enough thrills to keep audience in a continual state of erves."

observed that between acts, after- n tea was served by lackeys in pow- ed hair, scarlet coats, velvet knee- eeches and big-buckled patent leath- pumps, who passed about trays ntaining tea and cakes. It made you quite royal, you know, to have s scarlet-coated, bewigged individ- hand you a cup of tea in kingly hion—"The carriage waits, me lord," rmured Peggy, as she sipped her satisfactorily.

t is this quaint, formal fashion of as that impresses an American as traordinary. You feel as if you had pped back several centuries. For tance, at a little hotel where we d lunch when we were on an all-day htseeing trip, we noticed a portly, mpous gentleman who promenaded dining-room and hotel corridors al- st continually. He wore a long nce Albert coat, a white satin neck- and white waistcoat, and looked like judge of the Supreme Court. It rned out that he was simply the pro- etor of the little hotel, and was ping an eye on his employés as y served the guests.

Hobble Skirt.

ike Banquo's ghost, the "hobble" rt, as it is called because it com- its wearer to hop instead of lk, will not down. Fashion circles Europe and America are now di- ed into two camps—those who think tube-like skirt imparts grace to figure, and those who look upon with horror as rendering ridiculous women who wear it.

he discreet manager of Mme. Pa- n's establishment in Paris says, in mysterious whisper, "Not a word be said before September 15. It secret till then." Mme. Paquin, admits cautiously, is engaged on dels at the present moment, "but, ah—not a word—yet."

n eminent New York modiste, who n this side getting ideas and ma- ials, flatly contradicts the edict of y Duff-Gordon, who is acknowl- ed as a power in the fashions of continents, and who has decreed abolition of the "hobble" skirt.

he New Yorker maintains that the n skirts will prevail because they e the appearance of increasing the ght and add grace and charm to figure. The manager of one of largest London stores also agrees h the New York modiste.

Women are naturally anxious to as becomingly clothed as possible," says, "and any fashion which helps ard this is not likely to be sudden- discarded. When I speak of the bble' skirt I do not mean the ex- erated 'hobble' which compels man to hop when she would like run. Those are not worn by really hionable people. The skirt that asures about a yard and a half in umference does not actually hin- walking, but it is probably two ds narrower than the old-fashioned rts. From what I can see, this ified 'hobble' is likely to rule the ter fashion."

Sweaters, Scarfs and Stoles.

Like the shirt waist, the sweater seems destined to be always with us. It appears in so many shapes and sizes as to be fairly bewildering. The smart shops all along Regent and Bond streets, as well as the more plebeian Oxford-street emporiums, show sweaters of all sorts, colors and materials. Some of them are regular coats which cling gracefully to the figure and extend within a few inches of the bottom of the skirt. Pockets on the sides, big pearl buttons and military collars give them a tailored effect that is very smart indeed.

For more dressy wear there is the three-quarter length sweater made of silk or mercerized cotton, which gives a silken effect. These come in all the delicate pastel shades and are charming. Then there are the short, reefer-like sweaters—some of them fastening from the high-collared throat down the side in bias fashion, with smooth pearl buttons. Nowadays no woman's wardrobe is complete without a sweater of some description, and they are coming to the front more decidedly than ever this fall.

Scarfs and stoles are also very much in evidence. In Paris and London shops you see the satin scarfs, fashioned very simply of a couple of yards of satin, lined with a contrasting shade and finished at the ends with a tassel—so simply made that it is quite an easy matter to construct one for yourself at half the price asked for the finished article in the shops. The smallest of these stole-like scarfs are made of black chiffon lined with colored satin, either in one shade or—more popular yet—the Persian figured satin or Dresden effect. Whatever the fashionable woman has or has not in her wardrobe this fall, she surely must have a scarf of some sort.

Bond Street Invades New York.

Bond street, that shopping emporium for the wealthy and exclusive aristocracy of London, has had a shock. Two of its principal art dealers have abandoned fighting each other and have entered into partnership to unite their collections of art treasures. Moreover, they are going to show New York some of their gems.

"There is no collector as keen as the wealthy American," said one of these experts, "and to suit the convenience of those who cannot come to Europe this autumn we are going to furnish a room at one of the best New York hotels with Chippendale furniture. It will be a 'show room' in the best sense of the word, and will probably cost as much to furnish as any ten of the other rooms of the hotel. This will, perhaps, be looked upon by American collectors as small solace for the fact that I robbed them once of a treasure that they had set their hearts on regaining—the Chesapeake flag wrich Capt. Brooke of the Shannon captured in the famous action. It was put up at auction, and America made sure she was going to get it back. I had a close fight for it, but it is now in the Royal United Service Institution."

These two art dealers who have combined forces have long been recognized as the keenest fighters at Christie's, and two of the smartest experts on art in the world.

The Lungs of London.

"We call our parks the lungs of London," said a long-time resident to me as we were spinning through delightful Regent Park, lined with its handsome residences. There are over 100 parks and commons in London, Richmond Park, which belongs to the crown and is the royal hunting ground, covers some 22,000 acres and measures nine miles in circumference. We drove through it one day, following the winding roads beneath the shade of oaks a century old, under which were feeding herds of deer. Beverly Brook runs through this kingly principality, and the White House, where the present Queen was born, stands in its midst. It is here that the children of the royal family have come for recreation and amusement ever since the time of Henry VII.

It was at Hampton Court, the largest, and, in some respects, the finest of all the royal palaces in England, that we saw what is known as "The Great Vine" in England—a grape vine of the black Hamburg variety, which was planted 150 years ago and has attained such a size that its average mature crop at present is over 800 clusters of grapes, each cluster weighing a pound. As Californians, and interested in horticulture and grape growing, this vine, said to be the largest in the world, was of especial interest. Its principal branch is 114 feet long and its greatest girth forty-eight inches. The whole vine is inclosed in a glass conservatory and the great clusters of grapes, already ripe, hung luscious and luxuriant from the many branches of the enormous vine, which spread itself over the large area of the conservatory.

The royal table is supplied from the fruits of this vine, the surplus being sent to the various hospitals of London, of which there are no less than 100, mostly supported by voluntary contributions, with no compulsory payment on the part of patients. Last year there were treated in London hospitals over 130,000 cases during the twelve months. I met at my hotel a young Los Angeles doctor, who is over here for three months' post-graduate work.

"I see here in a single day frequently two or three cases of a nature so rare that we seldom come in contact with it more than once or twice in a lifetime of work in the ordinary American hospital," he told me.

Do We Stand Corrected?

Over here the elevator is always referred to as "the lift." I considered this a mere English idiom until the other day when, in a moment of idle curiosity, I chanced to comment on it to an Englishman. He regarded me with quizzical amusement, and then, in a tone of half-veiled triumph, remarked:

"Here is a point where, I believe, you Americans stand corrected. You always speak of 'the elevator' when you should say 'the lift.' I'll tell you why and prove that I am right. The 'elevator,' as you are pleased to call it, can elevate you up—but can you refer to it properly as 'elevating' you down? On the other hand, it can lift you up or lift you down."

I'm afraid they have us there.

London's Literary Lights.

In Paris one is impressed with the memorials to Napoleon, with his magnificent tomb under the dome of the Church of the Invalides—and of the numerous memorials placed to his honor along the boulevards. Here in London we are continually reminded of great literary lights—of Dickens and Thackeray, of George Eliot, of Charles Reade, of Dr. Johnson and hosts of writers who have here laid the scenes of their novels.

There's Piccadilly and Mayfair and Saffron Hill with its memories of Oliver Twist, there's Disraeli's birthplace and Garrick's home and Washington Irving's "Little Britain," there's the homes of Reynolds and Sir Isaac Newton; there's recollections of Nell Gwynne, of Swan Walk and Mr. Pepys, of Vanity Fair, and there's the Old Curiosity Shop, standing on the corner just as it did in Dickens's days, when it sheltered Little Nell and her grandfather. It is now a picture shop and we went there one day and bought post cards representing Dickens's famous characters.

In short, there's enough of literary associations in London to whet your appetite for years hence and make you long to bury yourself in your library undisturbed for a twelvemonth to come.

Significant Street Names.

The odd names of the streets are a study in themselves. Milton was born in Bread street and Sir Thomas Moore's birthplace was close by in Milk street, and in that crowded locality, where only commercial houses now are, there is Pudding Lane and Poultry street, from which opens Duckfoot Lane. There's Leather street, too, and this odd custom harks back to the time when it was the habit to name streets according to the business carried on in them. One knew exactly where the bakers were located, and the butchers, and the shoemakers, just by the names of the streets.

London streets too have a puzzling way of changing their names suddenly and without warning. You are for instance in Oxford street and presently, without in any way changing the direction of your walk you look up and find that the street has changed its name and you are now promenading Halborn street or some other thoroughfare. That's what makes it so puzzling to a stranger.

The Lungs of London.

It is the quiet parks in the residential sections of the city which make life in London not only bearable, but delightful.

"We call our parks 'the lungs of London,'" said a long-time resident to me, as we were spinning through lovely Regent Park, which is lined with handsome residences. We whirled along Hyde Park and the famous Rotten Row, reserved only for equestrians, and through Park Lane, past the palatial homes of the aristocracy—Sir Ernest Cassel's abode, he who is the intimate friend of the royal family, past Dorchester House, the residence of Whitelaw Reid, the homes of the Rothschilds and of the Duke of Westminster, whose income is said to amount to a sovereign a minute—and finally, through Kensington Park to the palace where Queen Victoria was born, and then on past the famous Hyde Park Corner and into St. James Park, and before the royal palace of Buckingham, where England's King dwells—a massive, dingy stone building facing the wide boulevard which leads up to it from the Marble Arch and the Houses of Parliament in the distance.

The magnificent fountain in process of building to the memory of the late Queen Victoria, is in the immediate foreground of the palace, and when completed, will be the finest of the hundreds of monuments in London—a city famous for its magnificent memorials to its dead kings and queens and important military and literary men.

Its Stupendous Size.

The longer you remain in London and the more you go about, the more you are impressed with its astounding size. Why, just the water mains of London, if stretched in a straight line end to end, would reach from here to New York and back again to Liverpool.

If we could put all the water London consumes in a year into a canal 200 feet wide and twenty feet deep, it would reach 600 miles—as far as from Los Angeles to San Francisco, and more than 100 miles beyond. There are as many people living in London as there are in all the Dominion of Canada and almost as many as there are in Norway and Sweden put together.

I gather these authoritative facts from a year book just issued here.

Roosevelt's Warning.

It may be worth while to remark in passing that it is currently reported that the four immense lions crouching at the base of the 200-foot monument, topped by a statue of Lord Nelson, at Trafalgar Square were labeled "not to be shot" during the recent visit of Mr. Roosevelt to London. These huge lions were cast from cannon taken by Wellington in his various campaigns and Londoners did not wish them to be slain or mutilated by our strenuous and sportsmanlike ex-President.

We went one day to the House of Parliament and were somewhat shocked and disappointed to find that within this great and graceful pile of buildings standing under the shadow of "Big Ben," both the chambers where the House of Lords and the House of Commons are wont to assemble, could be easily packed away in about half the space occupied by our own Senate or Congress in the Capitol at Washington.

We're So Human.

After all, though you travel the wide world over, there is no more interesting study than human nature itself. The same old nature that prevails everywhere among the sons and daughters of Adam, be they black or white, English, Japanese, Chinese, German, French or any other nationality. You meet people who show such an utter lack of appreciation that you wonder why they came to Europe.

In the great art galleries you hear expressions showing such hopeless ignorance that your rapture over art is momentarily consumed and eclipsed by the absurdity and ludicrousness of the comments.

"Just look at them Cupids, will you?" exclaimed a woman, as she pointed at the cherubs chiseled from marble in St. Peter's at Rome.

"This is a copy of 'The Holy Family,'" explained the guide, as he paused before a masterpiece.

"He says that's a picture of 'The Whole Family,'" murmured a man to his companion. "Whose family does he mean, I wonder. He's been telling us about 'The Whole Family' ever since we've been in Rome, and I don't know what he means. I'm going to ask him. Guide, what do you mean by 'The Whole Family,'" he called out.

The guide looked puzzled, and then repeated his formula. After several minutes it dawned on the puzzled tourist, and he remarked to his companion in a satisfied tone: "Oh, I see, he says it's 'The Holy Family'—H-o-l-i-y,' you know."

This was almost as bad as the man who asked, innocently, why it was that the Madonna was always represented with a child in her arms.

"There's only a few pictures that daughter and I care to see, anyhow," said a Missouri woman, in the Pitti gallery at Florence. "I've come to the conclusion that most of the art galleries in Yurrup are alike. You've seen one and you've seen 'em all. The only difference we can discover is that some of 'em have the old masters' paintings in 'em, and others have just copies, and the first ones are the best. I want to see Titian's 'Baby Stuart' here. That's what I come to this gallery for. Daughter and I both paint—I in oils and she in pastel—and the walls of our home in Missouri are just covered with our pictures and I must say I'd give more for 'em than for all there is here," with a sweeping gesture that included Raphael's "Madonna," Andrea del Sarto's "Saint John the Baptist" and about a dozen other masterpieces, before which the artists of the ages have knelt in wonder and admiration.

We were listening with awe and delight to the wonderful musical door in one of the churches in Rome. As the soft, aëolian tones made the sweetest melody while the monk solemnly swung the door back and forth and the guide was explaining to us the mysterious and wonderful mechanism of the door, I overheard a tourist, who had just come up, remark: "If I only had a can of oil I could stop the squeaking of that confounded door. Why don't they keep things up better over here, anyway?"

WOMAN CROESUS EVICTED.

Miss Richardson, Worth More Than Thirty Millions, Would Not Vacate House Which She Had Sold.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Miss Bellaripha G. Richardson, worth more than $30,000,000, the daughter of the eccentric millionaire, Joseph Richardson, who erected the "spite house" at Eighty-second street and Lexington avenue, was evicted from her home, No. 110 East Houston street, after a strenuous fight. It is charged she failed to pay the rent. The house in which she lived had been her home since her birth, fifty years ago, but recently she sold it to a cigar manufacturer. She had been asked to move, but did not do so.

Miss B. G. Richardson.

Miss Richardson is one of the wealthiest women in the world, having inherited the bulk of her father's fortune. He died in 1897. Since that time she has lived frugally and has added to her fortune. She lived in the East Houston-street house alone with a Miss Emmett, a cousin.

The eviction was one of the most dramatic ever witnessed on the east side, the City Marshal's men being forced to chop open a panel of a door after an attempt to scale the walls with ladders failed. William Briller, one of the Marshal's men, was struck over the arm with a crowbar by one within the house as he was try to unlock the front door after panel had been burst open.

Kind Hearts-Good Deeds

"How far that little candle throws its beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

The Kenosha (Wis.) Hospital Association is enjoying a good instance of unostentatious benevolence. A few days since the president of the board of directors, received a draft for $10,000, with the announcement that the donor did not desire any name to be known in connection with the gift. The money was placed in the general fund of the hospital.

Little Harry Goldberg, five years old, of Chicago, was recently so badly burned about his head and body by a lighted candle setting fire to his blouse, that without skin grafting there was little hope of his recovery. As soon as this need was known, a half dozen men proferred patches of cuticle from their bodies. In addition to those whose services were accepted, a retired army officer called at the hospital and said he was willing to sacrifice himself to save the child. The veteran insisted on giving skin even after the doctors informed him the cuticle was too old to be of use for grafting.

When a man loves to live he usually can go among men who care little whether they live or not and do good. Such a man is Augustus E. Vaughan, immaculate of dress and of heart, venerable in years and usefulness, whom one may see almost any day either on Boston Common or at the Young Men's Christian Union, says the Boston Traveller.

His specialty is helping his fallen and discouraged brother, whether he be a cigarette-smoking boy or a rum-sodden and disheartened derelict of a man. His creed is cheerfulness and his passion is books.

Often one may see him, tall and straight, faultlessly attired in a frock coat, with his flowing white beard and his long and carefully trimmed white locks, standing with or sitting beside some ragged and unkempt victim of circumstances who has sought the only place where the police will not tell him to move on, the Common, and then one is sure to be struck by the contrast. Many a man he has met there has later become as clean of body and heart as himself, and all through his infectious good nature and brotherly comraderie.

Among the younger men with whom this old-young man of seventy-five unceasingly labors he is known as "the General Adviser Without Pay," and he is as interested in their ambitions as they can be, and so youthful is he in their presence that he is always one of them.

Mr. Vaughan is not engaged in active business this summer, but he comes to Boston every day, rain or shine, to talk with his "boys," as he calls them. Some of these have never before known a real friend, and he counts among his freinds many college presidents and professors.

He was born in Middleboro, nearly seventy-five years ago, and traces his lineage back to Peregrine White of Mayflower fame.

ARMY NURSES LOVED.

Their Heroism Excelled by None. Army Officer Tells of Self-Sacrifice.

Lieut.-Col. J. A. Watrous writes: Everybody likes brave acts, and to hear them talked about. One of the bravest I ever witnessed was in connection with the part taken by Americans in the Boxer War in 1900, a demonstration made by fifteen American nurses, all young women. On the transport Grant, which conveyed Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, now a lieutenant-general, retired, two squadrons of the Sixth United States Cavalry and a battalion of marines to China, under Maj. Waller, now a colonel, there were twenty-two trained nurses, who had been ordered to the Philippines. When the Grant reached Chefoo, a name made familiar during that year, there was a hurry-up order and a quick run to Taku, on Pechili Bay. Gen. Chaffee and the soldiers and marines were landed without delay and hurried forward to Tien-tsin, where preparations were being made to move to the rescue of imprisoned American officials and others in Peking.

The next day an order came directing that fifteen of the nurses be sent to Taku, where they would take train for Tien-tsin, for immediate service with the army and in hospitals. The head nurse, hesitating to assume the responsibility of detailing members of her corps for service in China in the midst of a savage war, with little prospect of ever seeing them again, decided to give them an opportunity to volunteer. They were to write on a slip of paper "yes" if they were willing to go, and "no" if they were not.

NOT A "NO."

The votes were collected and there was not a single "no." This left the leader as perplexed as before, but she soon planned her campaign. She ordered seven of the young women to appear in her stateroom, when she said: "Ladies, I must choose fifteen of our sisters to go to the army and the hospitals in China. All have volunteered to go. All cannot go. You seven will remain on the Grant and go with me to Manila."

This brief speech was the signal for handkerchiefs and tears. The seven returned to their staterooms to grieve over what they termed a great disappointment, while the fifteen proceeded in great haste to collect their belongings and get ready to land.

A storm was on and the waves were rolling high, but when the little launch came to the side of the Grant those fifteen American women hurried down the unsteady steps and sprang into the launch. As the little craft rolled and dived, pitched and tossed they were loudly cheered by all on the transport. Many spoke messages of praise and hearty commendation. As they left the Grant I handed each a new piece of silver as a keepsake, with the remark that if I were a millionaire it would be a thousand-dollar bill instead.

WHY IT WAS BRAVE.

Do I hear some ask: "Where is the bravery in all of that?"

In answering that question let me say that it necessary for the reader to realize the condition of things in China at that time. A number of countries, including Germany, France, Italy, Russia, Austria, Japan and America had soldiers in China and in the great bay there were representatives of their navies, but these American nurses were the only women with the expeditions. The Boxers were known as the most heartless and brutal of human kind. For a soldier or a sailor to fall into their hands meant certain death in the worst possible form. The soldiers and the sailors knew it, and these brave young women understood it equally well—realized that if they were made prisoners horrible death awaited them. They knew that they would find no other white women. It was indeed a plunge in the dark, amidst great dangers.

There was an uncertainty in one sense and so much of certainty in another that the bravest of men might well have entered upon the undertaking with apprehension and dread, but there were no signs of fear on the part of those unarmed and helpless women, those messengers sent by their government to care for the sick and wounded. Their only thought was: "Where is my duty and how can I best perform it? Send me."

As I saw that launch make its way to the front at Taku I asked myself if I had ever witnessed anything that indicated a higher degree of physical and moral courage. I had seen lines of battle forming under shot and bursting shell; I had seen the fields scattered with the dead and dying; seen men killed just as a great victory was won, but it seemed to me that I had never known people to display a higher or a loftier degree of bravery than those young women. Their good service in China was acknowledged by their grateful country. In calling them brave, no mistake is made. No soldier ever faced danger more bravely.

BRAVE ALICE KIMMER.

One of the young women had served her two years in the Philippine Islands and was to start for home in the States on the next transport. While waiting for the transport to take on its cargo for the States a smallpox epidemic broke out. A volunteer was called for, to go to the pesthouse and remain during the epidemic. Our heroine, who had done her work so well in China and the Philippines, and was about to return to her dear ones in far off America, sprang to her feet and said: "Please enter my name as the nurse to go to the pesthouse."

It was done, and for two long, weary months, in constant danger, when work of the most exacting sort was demanded of her, Alice Kimmer, this brave American girl, never flinched. Strange to say, she did not get the disease.

But she received her reward. Gen. Chaffee, with whom she and her associates went to China, and who was then in command of the division of the Philippines, heard of her brave act and issued a special order giving her hearty praise and the thanks of himself and the American army. That order was read to all the troops in the Philippines.

Brave Alice Kimmer, brave, duty doing American army nurse! All Americans can well afford a word of praise for such heroism.

The Very Best Chum.

There comes a time in the life of a woman when she confronts what to her and her children is an actual crisis in her motherhood, and upon its outcome depends the happiness of herself and her associations with her children thereafter. It is that period in which she faces the first compelling instance of the maturity of her child, which has expressed itself in the clashing of their wills in some matter of authority heretofore unquestioned. It has reached the point at last where she is shocked into a realization that it is now a question of mother and son, no longer mother and child. It is one of the most pathetically difficult problems of motherhood, and every woman who faces it unexpectedly—as most of them do—deserves the sympathy of all those who can comprehend what it must mean to her. She steps down from the position of rule into that of a familiar mingling with those whom she has ruled—yet it is, or at least should be, surrender with honor. The girl is always more of a woman than a boy is a man. In fact with rare exceptions, the boy retains his boyishness throughout his life, says a writer in the Canterbury Times, deep hidden beneath a thousand cares and absorbing interests, yet forever cropping up to make him dependent upon a woman's help. It is part of the tragedy of womanhood that from her childhood, when she devotes her loving little heart to the care of her doll, the shadow of her motherhood, with attendant sacrifices, should follow her throughout life. Far beyond into his gray-haired maturity the boy in the man will feel the necessity for "mother" in his hours of deep anxiety, when the disinterested sympathy of a woman is the only thing that will soothe and understand his need, and when, alas! the wife he has chosen falls short of this call of the heart, the "mother" he instinctively craves may be mother herself, but if not it will be "sister" or some other woman, since it cannot be wife. If girls were taught their responsibilities toward their brothers or other young men, and were broad enough to see what it might do for themselves, there would be fewer men—and brothers—go wrong through their influence or lack of it. It is the instinct of a boy to protect his mother from physical danger or mental anxieties, and the wise woman will foster this. Courtesy begets courtesy, and as you sow this rare seed in the life of your children, "so shall you reap" a rich harvest of delight. Upon the day of your "abdication" you have no longer the power to say "do this or that" with the imperiousness that most mothers address their children. You are then face to face with men or women who have the right to demand of you the same considerate politeness you would show the young people of your friends. The earliest-born moral sense that we have is that of justice, and it is the one most trampled on by friends and foes alike. If you would stop and question whether you would like such and such a thing done or said to you, fewer children would go about with lacerated feelings and burning resentment where they should have known nothing but the delightful harmony of a mother who was their sympathetic companion, sharer of their secrets, of their hopes and fears, and "the best fellow of the bunch."

Calendar.

The Order of Oogy Wugg Chapter will meet September 29 at 2 o'clock p.m. at No. 1428 West Thirty-sixth street. It will be the first anniversary of the founding of this chapter, and all members are requested to be present at the meeting. (West Jeffer car.)

The Readers' Chapter, under the supervision of Mrs. A. M. Calkins, will meet the second Wednesday afternoon of each month at Cleveland Hall. In this chapter will be found one of the best opportunities which has ever been offered our girls for taking a thorough course in the fine art of reading and speaking. The chapter is open to all members of Each and All Society. The meetings will be held at 3:30 o'clock p.m.

All who are interested in the Health Chapter are invited to meet with the chairman the fourth Wednesday in each month at 1 o'clock p.m. at Cleveland Hall. Those who will attend these meetings are asked to send in their names, and also the special treatment each would like to have considered. Time will be given to such treatments as are in greatest demand. Only those who send in their names to the chairman of the Health Chapter may be admitted to the meetings. Among the subjects of special interest which will come up for discussion will be care and growth of the hair, bathing, indigestion, rheumatism, pneumonia, consumption, foods and fads, catarrh, care of children and other subjects. These talks, for Each and All girls only, are to be plain, common-sense talks, about obeying the natural laws of the physical body regarding food combinations, breathing exercises, and the care of the body in ill-health. Arrangements for special lessons will soon be arranged for those who have inquired about the Health Chapter.

EACH AND ALL MOTTO.

Golden thoughts, golden deeds,
Rid life's garden of its weeds.

OUR PLEDGE.

"To make one another happy, to lighten one another's burdens, to share one another's cares, to be lifters, not leaners, to make the world a little sweeter place to live in, to be mutual encouragers, never discouragers of any one, to start songs, not complainings, and to do every day something beautiful, some kindness which will cheer and strengthen another." Emblem—The California Poppy.

Two Needy Old Ladies.

Two gentle old ladies of this city, who are without means, but who can still do sufficient work about a home to make themselves needful, are looking for such a place to fill. One of these old ladies speaks Spanish only. Will not the girls of Each and All Society inquire among their friends and endeavor to find homes in which these old ladies may fill a long-felt want? The financial secretary of Each and All Society recommends them, and says they will fully pay their way in careful work for the home.

Heartache a Motive Power.

In the less thickly settled portion of one of our great eastern cities there is a long, low stone building, plentifully supplied with piazzas, sun parlors and bay windows and surrounded by a great stretch of velvety lawn. Flowers bloom, fountains play, swings and hammocks are hung in all sorts of opportune places and the whole keeps alive the memory of a little cripple child, whose spirit passed into the great beyond long ago.

Every year scores of children, who have met with accident, children who are deformed from disease, from neglect or lack of proper nurishment, come into its hopsitable doors for treatment. Not only are they given medical attention, but food, clothes, toys, amusement and "mothering." There is a tennis court for convalescents, who are able to play, a croquet ground for those who are capable of hobbling after a ball. There is a chapel for prayers, a kindergarten for the tiny children, a school for those who are more advanced. There are occasional concerts, plays and entertainments.

The children are given a chance to become normal, happy and healthy. When the time comes for them to leave the sheltering roof they do it with the feeling that they are leaving home and the realization that if ever they need a helping hand it is back there ready and waiting.

Behind all this, says a writer, is the heart and brain of a woman—a woman whose only child was the little cripple that was not spared to her—a woman who has been fine and strong enough to use her heartache as the motive power for one of the greatest modern charities.

Moreover, this woman has gathered about her a number of volunteer workers, who give a portion of their time and talents to making life happier for these children. And each of these helpers is a woman who has known some great sorrow, or disappointment, or else has had her ambitions thwarted by physical limitations.

A man who had made a success of his life in more ways than one, once said to a young friend who was despondent over failure. "Whenever you get very far down just try doing something for somebody else. It gives you a chance to get away from your own worries, temporarily, and when you come to them again you find that the rest has given you new vigor for the attack. It is merely using your blues for a boost and is perhaps subject to the same criticism as the motto, 'Honesty is the best policy,' but somehow it looks all right to me."

Numerous instances may be cited of women who have turned their heartache into motive power. Biography teems with the life stories of men and women who have risen above obstacles, triumphed over discouragement. Some go down in the struggle. Some, and these are the fittest, stand firm under shocks and buffets and learn to make their heartaches motive power for the good of themselves and their fellowmen.

Esoteric Chapter.

T. M. B. of Los Angeles is interested in Esoteric Chapter; her letter to Esther, chairman of the chapter, follows:

"Dear Esther: By asking too many questions I simply proved to you my hungering and thirsting for knowledge as well as, possibly, too lazy a streak to hunt it. Which mind do you mean, for like our great Pacific Ocean, it has an upper and an under current? These unseen powers may be discernment, concentration, imagination, suggestion, telepathy, telegraphy, intuition, attraction, magnetism, hypnotism invention, love, joy and of the bad, envy, malice, hatred cowardice, intrigue deceit, covetousness and avarice.

"Please may I not I turn toward the head of the class? Anxious. T. M. B."

Girlie: You did well, for you named two of the unseen powers and gave big hints of two others; the rest are not even "maybes," but you may stand next to Beaver. ESTHER.

From a Shut-in.

Mrs. M. A. S. of Union City, Mich., an old member of Each and All Society, who has been a shut-in for many years, writes:

"Dear Each and All Friends: I want to thank you all who sent me cards or wrote me such lovely letters for my birthday letter party. It helped to make the day a bright and pleasant day for me although I suffered much and am very weak and suffer more and grow weaker all the time, but am always pleased to hear from all the Each and All friends.

"I wish to thank Mrs. W. Rouscup of Burbank, Cal., who was visiting in Lima, O., at that time, for her gifts to me and would be pleased to receive a letter from her, also Mrs. Young of Los Angeles, who sent me an order for my fancy work and a postal card order.

"I thank her very much. All the old friends please write as the days are very lonely to me confined to my bed all the time—twenty-six years is a long time to be a helpless 'shut-in.' Lovingly, MRS. M. A. S.

Little brown kelps of the sea.

Little Brown Kelps of the Sea.

We are a band from Neptune's land,
In the bottom of the sea,
Where he holds sway o'er gardens gay
And rules the waves and sea.

There's Susie Kelp and Johnny Kelp,
And stylish Mary Jane,
Who always longed to see the world
Beyond her own domain.

Far from the shore, a mile or more,
Was perched our little band;
Bound fast were we, longed to be free
To reach the shining strand.

With sudden roar, right to our door,
Came Neptune's prancing steeds.
With trident swift, the rocks he split,
Then on his way he speeds.

This mighty rift cast us adrift—
We cried aloud for help.
The mocking sea but laughed in gl
And upward tossed each kelp.

At last a wave, most kind and brav
Laid us upon the strand.
For hours we lay, almost all day,
Upon the burning sand.

Until there strayed a little maid
Along the pebbly strand.
She stumbled quite, with real deligh
Upon our little band.

She took us home, no more to roar
And bathed our battered faces.
She dressed us in this gay attire
With sea mosses and laces.

How the Germans Get Business.

A commission house in Lima receiv an inquiry for a machine in regard which it had no information. Pro for orders were sent to New York, Lond and Hamburg. In from four to months a short answer arrived fr New York quoting a price in Unit States gold at which the manufactu would deliver the machine at some terior point in Michigan; no other formation.

In from three to five months the swer from London was received. Th quoted a price in sterling at wh they would deliver in London, sent photograph of the machine and pressed a polite wish to have the der.

The answer from Hamburg came return mail. It consisted of a forma invoice made out in Peruv money, showing all the expenses t would be incurred and giving the c delivered in Callao Bay together w a blue print of the machine and structions in Spanish for setting it and yet people wonder why the G mans are getting more and more the business.—[Exporters' Review.

Babies and School Children—Striking Pictures and Points Here and There

A DOLL'S MODISTE.

Interesting Work Done by a Little Woman—Very Busy Making Becoming Gowns.

There is a certain shop not very far up Broadway which always has a great attraction for the little folk who accompany their mammas on shopping tours. In fact, the little people never seem to tire of looking in at these shop windows at the many varieties of dolls on exhibition there, and the dainty, becoming and distinctive styles in which they are always dressed. It is doubtful, however, if any of the little folk who thus stand for hours in mute admiration of these dolls are aware of who their modiste is, neither would they ever guess that the dollies' have one of their own. She is the dollies' own costumer, and as much thought and as much planning is given to every one of the pretty dresses and dainty bits of finery which these dolls wear, as is given by their mammas to the dress of the little girls themselves.

When a doll arrives at the big store this modiste is summoned at once to look the newcomer over. It is she who states what this doll's position in Los Angeles dolls' society shall be. It is she who selects what manner of gowns she shall wear for her first appearance in public—in the show window. Much care is taken in the selection of the materials for the wardrobe of the new doll. Those are selected which will show off the color of her eyes and hair and her little figure. Maybe you have seen this modiste of the dollies on the street, as she was hurrying on her way to see a brand new dolly which just arrived from abroad, but of course, you did not know her; in fact, you would pass her on the streets a hundred times, and she would be the last person you would guess as the one who held the fate of a doll in her hands, that she was the one who would decide whether a doll would rule as Felicia or Venetia of the drawing-room, or merely Mary Ann of the kitchen. It will be surprising to know that this judge of doll blood is just a little old lady, who wears spectacles, and who doesn't give the snap of her finger about style herself. She is always very plainly dressed, and she does not ride in an automobile, either, and she is nearly always carrying a bundle.

This modiste of the dollies lives all alone in a little California house, and all day long and far into the night you might hear the hum of her sewing machine, if you should pass by this little house, as she fashions the lovely doll clothes that you admire in this Broadway store. These are busy days now at the little house, for orders are away in advance for the great holiday display these dolls will make.

Recently a hurry-up order was sent to the little modiste for two dollies. Twin sisters were to be gotten ready for a trip East. They were to go to two little sisters. Party dresses, afternoon gowns, and negligees, were to be made, and all in a hurry, for a relative was to take the twin sisters to two little eastern sisters. They were all ready on the appointed day, dressed in their daintiest frocks, and packed each in a little trunk of her own in which all the accessories of a doll to the manor born were also tucked. Their opera bags and manicure sets and dainty parasols were all included in the wardrobe, and late advices state that the little sisters who received them were charmed, and are now anxious to themselves see beautiful Southern California, from which their pets traveled.

A Jolly Party.

A jolly party of the week was given to celebrate the seventh birthday anniversary of Master Clinton Woodruff, at his home, No. 1814 Bushnell avenue, and fifteen of his little friends helped to make it a memorable occasion. Jolly games for which prizes were awarded, and a dainty feast were enjoyable features of this party. Those who attended were Marjorie and Frances Vail, Florence and Muriel Adams, Helen Bradbury, Marjorie Updyke, Frances Maddox, Dorothy and Chula Bennett, Billy Caffery, Clement Meserve, Arno Appell, Lawrence Updyke and the Misses Cope and Crabtree.

A Queer Pet.

The pet of all the little fishermen, and for that matter, the big fishermen, too, down at San Pedro, is a young pelican. The picture of this pelican devouring a tid-bit with which one of his little admirers is feeding him is reproduced on this page today. The pelican is quite tame, and may be seen any day along the wharf at San Pedro, chumming with the little fishermen, for they are all his friends, and each boy is his special protector. Every night the pelican is carefully tucked away in a shed at the wharf and is let out again in the morning. He is an unfettered pet, and, though he flies all about, he never goes very far from his home, and friends along the San Pedro wharf. He evidently finds it very much more comfortable to be fed choice and delicate fish by his little friends than to be obliged to forage for himself.

GERMANY'S FUTURE.

CROWN PRINCE NOT A WARRIOR.

HAS PROVED HIS FIRMNESS OF CHARACTER.

Wins the Favor of His People in All His Public Acts, and Is Not Afraid to Do His Duty in Both Public and Private Affairs—Is an Excellent Sportsman.

To sketch a future monarch is more than a mere pastime in these days of international complications and hair-trigger diplomacy, writes Edward Goldback in the New York Evening Post, in an article about the German Crown Prince. And in this connection it is natural to look toward Germany and the Hohenzollern dynasty, for Germany is likely to acquire the political leadership of Europe in the near future, and it is the country above all others in which the monarchial principle is most deeply rooted.

The development of Germany is a fact which no thinking politician can overlook. Germany has a surplus of a million briths every year, and in twenty years its population will amount to eighty millions. This population is clever, industrious, sober and disciplined. Germany combines to a rare extent theoretical science and practical application. She is a dangerous rival even for England and America in the markets of the world. She commands the best army of the European continent, and a navy which causes England herself a certain uneasiness. She is to be reckoned with in every international combination.

MONARCHICAL FEELING STRONG.

Monarchical feeling is very strong in Germany. True, it is possible that William II has been too prodigal of his eloquence and that therefore his words have lost some of their value; but, in spite of all democratic and social democratic agitation, the opinion of the Emperor is still, law to many people. For more than two centuries the Hohenzollerns have incessantly endeavored to pound the necessity for strict obedience into the heads of their subjects. They have succeeded, too well perhaps, and the German Emperor is indeed a very powerful man, not only because of the rights the law gives him, but also by virtue of the great weight of monarchical and patriarchal tradition and feeling.

For all these reasons it may not be without interest for American readers to hear something about the personality of the German Crown Prince. The present Emperor, William II, is known to everybody, and his character is a perfectly defined one; he will scarcely surprise the world by new ambitions and new aims. His son, Frederick William, is still featureless, yet a watchful observer will be able here to draw some important inferences from what material there is. Besides this, his education is a typical one, with all the merits and demerits of the monarchical tradition.

IN SMARTEST UNIVERSITY CORPS.

Usually German princes are taught at home, and this was the case with the Crown Prince. William II himself went to college, but he did not choose this method of education for his eldest son. Probably he did not think it exclusive enough for the heir to the throne. But in spite of this the crown prince studied some years at the University of Bonn, on the vineclad banks of the Rhine. Here he was a member of the smartest corps.

Here we see the most striking defect of monarchical education. It would be invaluable for a future monarch to know all classes of the population and to become familiar with their opinions early in life. Instead of giving such an opportunity to this Prince, he is kept carefully secluded from contact with the middle classes for fear of the contaminating influences of their ideas. This seclusion is a great danger; it hinders the monarch from recognizing the needs of his nation and from understanding the language of his people. He becomes the prisoner of a single caste.

Every Prussian Prince enters the army at the age of ten, and with the rank of lieutenant. Of course this is only a formality; the real military service begins later. But here also mistaken exclusiveness deprives the Prince of the opportunity of widening his horizon, for in his regiment, as in his corps, only the scions of the nobility associate with him. He always hears the same opinions, he is spellbound by obsolete prejudices, and he confounds the small "society" clique with the nation itself.

OPPOSED TRADITION.

The Crown Prince gave the first proof of individual development when, as a student, he refused to submit to the terrible drinking laws which oblige the younger students to swallow an enormous quantity of beer at the command of the older ones. This rebellion was cosidered by his fellow-students as a breach of sacred tradition, and a report was drawn up and presented to the Emperor; stating the revolutionary behavior of his son. The Emperor is not a very lenient father, but on this occasion he took the side of the Crown Prince, and only the other day he lectured to the students on the evil effects of this custom of excessive drinking.

The Crown Prince has not made a stir in the world, although once he delivered a public speech, in which he called the social democrats "miserables." This, of course, was a blunder for the German social democratic party is made up of several millions of members, and the future Emperor must not offend a powerful party, except in a caseof urgent necessity. The newspapers were almost unanimous in their denunciation of this speech, and the Prince was silent for years.

AN EXCELENT SPORTSMAN.

One knows only that he is an excellent sportsman, and that he assumes no airs. He treats the pompous festivities of the court as "humbug," and he charms the people who approach him by the natural easiness and simplicity of his manners. He is very slender, graceful in his movements, and a remarkable horseman. He is interested in the theater, and he went seven times to see one comic opera. The political education of the Prince was confided to the secret counselor, Von Falken- [illegible] This choice was characteristic. Von Falkenhayn is a clever man, but a supporter of the most stubborn conservative opinions. He is a prototype of a tory, and quite unable to give the future emperor an impartial view of the political standing of Germany. One should have chosen a broad-minded man for this important and difficult task—a man above the creed of parties—and it is a dogmatizing reactionary who has been selected. So the political education of the future emperor has been one-sided and intolerable. This is so much the worse, because the Crown Prince has not strong intellectual force. He has not the piercing eye of Frederick the Great, nor the quickness of perception of Frederick William II, and probably he will stick obstinately to the opinions of his teacher.

But he has a strong sense of honor and duty and he is modest and reliable; he reminds one of William I, whom the present reigning Emperor has called "the great."

NOT A KEEN SOLDIER.

One of the most important questions to ask about a monarch is whether by temperament he is peaceful or warlike. The Crown Prince is not a keen soldier. His promotion was strikingly slow. When William II ascended the throne the European world feared his impetuous temperament; when his son follows him public opinion will probably be very quiet. And besides this somewhat phlegmatic temperament the future monarch will be clever enough to understand that an unhappy war might mean disaster for his dynasty.

But the Crown Prince is no weakling. He proved himself possessed of a certain firmness of character in the case of Harden vs. Eulenberg. Maximilian Harden, the editor of the Zukunft, the most original and influential German weekly, accused Prince zu Eulenberg, one of the dignitaries of the empire, formerly German Ambassador in Vienna, knight of the highest Prussian order and the most intimate friend of the Emperor. The articles in which Harden pictured the pernicious activity of Zu Eulenberg made a sensation in Germany, but William II knew nothing about this important publication.

Nobody dared to draw the Kaiser's attention to the articles. Even the Chancellor, Prince von Beulow, declined to do it, on the threadbare plea that this was no political matter. Then the Crown Prince took upon himself the painful task of presenting the articles to the Emperor.

He saw that the honor of his house was engaged, and he did his duty without hesitation. He knew that his father was very fond of Zu Eulenberg that the accusation would be a blow to him, and that at first he would probably resent interference, but he did not shirk the difficult interview.

Perhaps it is only in a monarchical country that the courageous behavior of the Crown Prince could be fully appreciated. In a republic such an event could not be hidden from the representative of the nation for twenty-four hours, and nobody would shrink from telling him the truth. In a monarchical country, and especially in the country of William II, everybody carefully avoids the task of bearer of ill tidings, because the disagreeable remembrance might cling to the bearer's name and injure his career.

Prussian tradition imposes on the Crown Prince the strictest reserve in political matters. All the Hohenzollerns have been quick to take offense when the successor to the throne made the slightest attempt to emancipate himself and to express an individual political conviction. The Crown Prince is bound to be nothing but "the first subject of the Emperor," and is set his compatriots of inferior rank example of silent obedience.

WON POPULAR CONFIDENCE.

In the days of excitement follow the publication of the Zu Eulenberg ticles the young Prince won the c fidence of his country. He is now po lar, and a part of this popularity is to the charming woman he marri The Crown Princess is not alone woman of great beauty, she posses in the highest degree the art of mak friends everywhere. She has a str influence on her young husband. Si his marriage he has shown a m serious turn of mind.

One may risk the prophecy that German Crown Prince will not come one of the great creators or stroyers, but that he will fulfill the duties of his high position to best of his ability. He is not a geni but it is a moot question if genius the most desirable quality for a mod monarch to possess.

BRAZIL'S IRON DEPOSITS.

Estimated That Billions of Tons H Already Been Located—Will Be Developed.

One of the interesting features ab the Victoria and Diamantina Railw says Cassier's Magazine, is that will enable the exportation of la quantites of iron ore, of which th is an almost unlimited supply betw the Candonga Serra (238 miles,) Itabira de Matto Dentro. The B zilian estimates speak of billions tons, and in any case there is certa ly an enormous amount of the v highest grade of ore available h The extent to which Brazil, especia in the newer States, offers a field foreign enterprise, especially for r way material and the opening up these large deposits of iron ore, sho influence the situation very materia both in the export of the ore and the development of the iron manuf turing industry in Brazil itself.

The growth of such industries sho enable the country gradually to d continue the importation of loco tives and machinery as well as structural steel. The new contract the Diamantina Railway with the g ernment December 20, 1909, stipula the reversion of its lines to the g ernment after ninety years, but gra the company a number of privile in exchange, with a view to the velopment of the deposits of iron

The company intends the exportat of between two and three million t or iron ore annually, and as it fe that even with the use of Mallet comotives weighing sixty tons, hav 30,000 pounds tractive power and ha ing 400-ton trains, it will be unable cope with this heavy traffic, it has cided upon the complete electrificat of the lines, an undertaking wh must be completed within three ye of the signing of the contract.

A branch to Itabira de Matto De tro will be built immediately into heart of the iron ore district. This but a short distance from Santa B bara, where connection with the bra of the Central Railway of Brazil easily be made. This branch will le the main line at Santa Anna de Ferr.

is a mooted question. Congress at its last session authorized the building of two ships that will be as large as any in the world; each is to be armed with ten fourteen-inch guns. No one can tell when the limit of size will be reached."

"How did you get into the navy?" I inquired.

"I went to Admiral Farragut in 1864. I was then 14 years old, and with awe and fright asked him to recommend my appointment to Annapolis. He took my case to President Lincoln and the appointment was made. My father was an old friend of Farragut and commanded the Hartford, which was Farragut's flagship, during the operations against New Orleans and the bombardment of Vicksburg. Farragut rarely commended any one by name, but he complimented my father very highly in his letters."

"Was your father killed?"

"No, he died of river fever, while still captain of the Hartford. Once, a cannon ball went through his bunk, but he was on deck fighting, where he should have been, and escaped unhurt. His bed clothes, torn in shreds, were afterward sent to our home in Washington. I felt like being a lawyer, but on my father's death decided to follow in his footsteps, if I could. My father was born at Charlestown, Mass., while his father was in command of the marines at that point. Originally, the Wainwrights came from North Carolina."

ONE OF THE MAINE SURVIVORS.

After being graduated from Annapolis at the age of 18, Admiral Wainwright served in a sailing ship. "Back in those days," he said, "we kept the propeller lifted, even when he had steam, except on entering and leaving port." He passed through the various grades of the service—remaining lieutenant on small pay for twenty-one years—until 1894, when he became a lieutenant-commander. The Maine sailed for Havana in 1898. Capt. Charles D. Sigsbee was in command. Richard Wainwright went along as executive officer. He was known all through the navy as a very painstaking and accomplished sailor.

"Will you tell me," I asked him, "about your movements on the evening of February 15, up to the time of the destruction of the Maine?"

"I had been writing family letters in my cabin, and had gone to Capt. Sigsbee's office, where I was talking to his clerk, when the explosion occurred. I immediately went on deck, where I belonged."

"What thought was in your mind?"

"I heard things falling overhead, and for the moment believed we had been fired on by the Spaniards."

SEES EFFECT OF EXPLOSION.

"What scene of that night is most vivid in your memory?"

"I saw smoke, smelled burning cellulose—the odor has been with me ever since—and noticed that the forward part of the ship was gone. Then—and the sight remains first in my recollections of the event—I saw my own shipmates, some dead and some injured, floating or struggling in the water. Many had been blown overboard. Others, with broken bones or mangled bodies, had jumped into the harbor. In all 258 men lost their lives that night. Only two of our small boats remained, and one of them had a hole in its side. They were lowered as soon as possible. Meanwhile, boats from an American ship and Spanish boat came to the rescue of the men in the water."

"You remained in the harbor of Havana for two months, but refused to go ashore?" I said.

"I did not refuse. I went to the wharf once on official business at Capt. Sigsbee's order. The divers at work on the wreck were put under my management. I lived on the Fern, a dispatch boat, and was busy day and night."

"Still you could have found time to go ashore occasionally?" I ventured to observe.

"Oh, certainly."

FEARED TO GO ASHORE.

"But you declined to put foot on Spanish soil?"

"Yes, sir, I did. I didn't care to trust myself," and Admiral Wainwright raised his voice, "to walk the streets and to be scowled at without scowling back."

A few months later, off Santiago, seeing the smoking junk that a few hours before had been Spain's proudest squadron, Wainwright, having contributed his splendid share to the result, is reported to have said: "The Maine is avenged."

"You have always believed that the Maine was blown up by a submarine mine?" I observed.

"I know it. I was the executive officer on the ship, and had never left it for an hour after going aboard in that capacity. I was everywhere. Had the coal in the bunkers become heated, I would have known it. Besides, I read and studied the reports of all the divers. I knew about conditions under the water. An explosion within the ship would have gone upward through the hatches. Explosions follow where there is the least resistance. I examined the wreck of the Maria Teresa at Santiago. A magazine blew up inside the ship and its course was toward the deck, which was broken and turned outward. On the other hand, the side of the Maine was bent inward, and the turret, toppling overboard into the mud at the bottom of the harbor, as we suppose, was never found by the divers. Furthermore, the hull of the Maine was shattered. It is my conviction that the forward magazine, containing black powder, did not explode. Cases of black powder were picked up and found to be undamaged, except by water."

PLACED THERE BY SPANIARDS.

"Who placed the mine in the harbor?"

"My theory is that it was put there by some one connected with the Weyler government. Then Ramon Blanco became Governor-General of Cuba, but he was not informed concerning the mine. When we entered the harbor of Havana, a government pilot took us to the buoy where we were to anchor. It is not likely that he knew anything about the mine. He acted on orders."

"How was the mine exploded?"

"That is a mooted question. It hardly could have been exploded by contact—that is, by the hull of the Maine while swinging at anchor. In my judgment it was connected with the shore by wire, and some person or persons knowing the state of things exploded the mine with a current of electricity."

"What happened to you after your work at Havana was completed?"

"I came to Washington as fast as I could, wanting to get into the war at the earliest possible moment, but understanding, of course, that my rank would preclude me from obtaining command of a large ship. But I was determined to have something. Mr. Roosevelt was Assistant Secretary of the Navy. For a month I spent most of my time in the outer room of his office. One day I heard that the government had purchased the Corsair, a yacht, belonging to J. Pierpont Morgan, and would convert it into a scout and dispatch boat. I begged so hard that Mr. Roosevelt—also to get rid of me, I imagine—gave me command of the yacht, which, on being armed with three and six-pounders, was renamed the Gloucester. It could sail eighteen knots an hour, and I hoped its speed would carry me into some zone of action.

SET TO CARRYING DISPATCHES.

"I sailed from New York, and, reporting to Admiral Remey at Key West, was handed a message for Garcia, who was on the north coast of Cuba. Garcia was to give me a message for Gen. Shafter, and was to wait in the old Bahama Channel until Shafter and his troop ships and convoys came along on the way to Santiago. I showed Admiral Remey, however, that I could make better time by going straight to Santiago, seeing Shafter there instead of watching for him in the channel. Moreover, I desired to get close to Admiral Sampson and his fleet of battleships, then on blockade duty before Santiago. Cervera was in the harbor, and I felt that a fight was sure to occur, sooner or later."

Black smoke, around a bend in the harbor, on Sunday morning, July 3, 1898, warned the American fleet that Cervera was headed for the open water. "Cervera was ordered out by Blanco but he knew well enough what would happen," Admiral Wainwright said to me.

"The American ships went forward," I remarked, "and Capt. Taylor of the Indiana signaled you 'to close in.'"

"At all events," Admiral Wainwright replied with a smile, "I read the signal that way. Taylor afterward explained that his signal was: 'The gunboats are coming out,' meaning the Pluton and Furor. I knew they were coming out without being told, and closed in, thus obeying the instructions previously given me by Admiral Sampson."

CERVERA KNEW HIS FATE.

The Spanish ships steamed out of Santiago at 9:30 o'clock in the morning. "I shall never be the one to decree the horrible hecatomb," Cervera had said, "which will be the only possible result of a sortie from here by main force." And Blanco had replied by telegraph from Havana: "Main thing is that the squadron go out at once."

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the Cristobal Colon, the last ship afloat, ran ashore seventy-five miles west of Santiago and hauled down her flag. The Infanta Maria Teresa, Oquendo and Vizcaya were driven to the beach, burned and blown up within twenty miles of Santiago. Wainwright, in the wooden Gloucester, destroyed the Pluton and Furor within four miles of port—the Pluton and Furor, "sharks of the sea," that were to creep up under cover of the smoke of battle and torpedo the battleships of Sampson's fleet!"

"Was the Gloucester hit during the fight?" I asked Admiral Wainwright.

"Not once, so far as I could see, although a shot or two went through the masts, I was informed afterward. The Spaniards worked their guns very fast, but were wild, being confused, perhaps, because we got into action first, and it is the first blow that counts in any kind of a fight. They had torpedo tubes, but waited until the battle began before trying to put the torpedoes in place. We shot down two crews of men who were engaged in that duty. Still the Spaniards came on, their aim getting closer all the time. Small rapid-fire guns can be played much like a hose, and we could see the water splash nearer and nearer as the Spanish measured our distance. However, before they could reach us both destroyers were on fire. One ran in a circle and—sank, and the other ran to the shore and was beached."

NO ONE TO GUIDE THE SHIP.

It is said, but Admiral Wainwright evaded giving any information on the subject, that the boat which circled and sank was practically unmanned toward the last. Its guns had been silenced, their crews were either dead or wounded, and the rudder had no one to guide it.

"How near did you get to the enemy?" I asked.

"Within 600 yards, which was rather close quarters for a sea fight."

"In the meantime," I inquired, "what were you thinking about?"

"My business, of course. Incidentally, I was amazed that during all the fire—and it was heavy throughout—not a man on the Gloucester was hit."

"So dash and marksmanship won the fight?"

"Well, we got started first. But the marksmanship was bad, compared with the marksmanship of the present. Before the war with Spain we did not know that a gun is an instrument of precision. Today one of our battleships, with such officers and men as we have, would do more damage than was done by all of Sampson's ships in front of Santiago. Furthermore, my crew was made up of new men, with an old hand here and there to give it steadiness."

GLIMPSES OF SAN FRANCISCO.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 16.—The State Appellate Court sitting en banc has unanimously decided that the right to carry a pistol does not exist with a membership in a humane society. This seems sound in law and in principle. It is hard to imagine the frame of mind a man must be in who joins an organization to prevent cruelty and yet insists on his legal right to carry on his person the means of inflicting it. There are six humane societies in this city and for two years they have been fighting bitterly in the courts for the right of their members to carry arms.

An enterprising space writer has discovered that Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., is doing her own gardening instead of employing a gardener and for that reason society ought to do something about it. The Roosevelts were blamed for extravagance in stopping two nights at the St. Francis Hotel when on their honeymoon and now it is hardly fair to blame them for economizing in the cultivation of flowers.

Some prudish citizens, perhaps men of family, censured Police Chief Martin for allowing young girls to roam the tenderloin and patronize the cafés. The censured one denies that the females in question are young girls. He says that most of them are veterans from the Barbary Coast wearing short dresses to fool the guileless stranger. By this novel defense the head of the coppers thinks that he has silenced his detractors and he is firmly wedded to the idea that a soft answer turneth away wrath.

While selling ice cream cones to school children Thor Heydenfeldt, son of a former Supreme Court Justice, discovered that his mother had a claim on property valued at $1,000,000. If the young man had been selling popcorn he might have found a claim of two millions. Anyhow it made a readable story and helped him in his business so that it may not be long before he amasses another fortune to take the place of the one he disposed of via the race-track route.

It is a satisfaction to watch Ed Bowes, who used to sell real estate here before the fire, and Actress Margaret Illington, his wife, who left the stage to darn his socks. She so thoroughly believed in domesticity that she unselfishly sacrificed her quiet home life to portray it on the stage while Bowes is wearing holes in his socks walking between the box office and the green room. The play is called "Until Eternity," but whether Margaret will stay put that long is open to conjecture.

A gallant struggle for principle is made by Manager Kaiser of the Valencia Theater in his effort to get the legal right to exhibit the Jeffries-Johnson prize-fight pictures. Police Captain Gleason has made affidavit that the pictures are brutal and Judge Sturtevant has turned aside temporarily from hearing divorce cases to listen to the matter. Kaiser's main contention is that his show-house will be idle unless the pictures are exhibited and furthermore he question's Gleason's expert knowledge on the subject of brutality.

Postmaster-General Hitchcock is certainly lightning on wheels when it comes to getting through with work. In an hour he mastered the details of the local postoffice and then visited the Cliff House to see if the pony express out there was giving good service. At night he started for Lake Tahoe with Postmaster Fisk to further familiarize himself with our postal needs.

To be or not to be once worried a Shakespearean personage, but to pay or not to pay is now worrying R. N. Whitney, a former tennis champion, ordered by the court to pay his wife alimony or go to jail. As there is no tennis court at the jail, Whitney will probably pay the alimony. PLUTO.

At Autumn in Iowa.

[To the editor of The Sun:] Sir: This poem shouldn't be denied a certain peculiar privilege by any select assemblage like the F. P. P. It was written by "Bob" Burdette for the Burlington Hawkeye upward of twenty years ago and was entitled "A November Sketch" ("Just a Pinking Coat.") In my opinion it ranks as a classic:

All the golden rod is gone,
Tidy dum;
And the dead leaves on the lawn,
Lumty tum,
Tell me that the summer's fled
And the butterflies are dead,
And the tennis days are sped,
Tidy dum.

Chill November's dreary skies,
Cold and gray,
Seem to tum de dah surprise,
Tumti day,
And the sobbing of the brook
In the tal de de di nook
Brings the tra, la, la, la crook
By the way.

But the dying sunset's glow
In the west,
Lifts its rol de dol to show
On its crest;
By the hilltops touched with gold
Rum dum dum in splendor rolled
Tal lal, lal in glory fold
Of the blest.

When life's summer time is sped
Here below,
And its lum te tum is fled
Ho, ho, ho,
Winter skies fal lal lal dal
For the ta de da is near
And the rum te tum appear
Soft and low.

MILBURN.

MILBURN.

The reliable licensed Psychic Scientific Scientist and Astrologer.

911—SOUTH HILL—911.

Some come and some go, but Milburn remains. His forty years practice, coupled with his twenty-four years' residence in this city, stamp him as the greatest reader of the present age. His powers are wonderful. Your life to him is an open book, its pages he reads one by one. If you need help, do not take his word, come and see for yourself. If he does not help you, it costs you nothing. That is surely fair.

If you desire to hear fairy tales and nonsense, go elsewhere, but if you wish the truth, see Milburn at once. All readings reduced. Hours 10 to 8, daily and Sundays.

911—SOUTH HILL ST.—911.

P.S.—Do not pass judgment without knowledge. Call and see Milburn, he will be glad to make your acquaintance.

PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,

EXPERT ASTROLOGER AND PALMIST.
305½ S. SPRING, NEAR THIRD ST.

A resident of Los Angeles 26 years.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an experienced practitioner in the science of modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE calculated from the PLANETS at your birth, will show what a powerful influence they have in all affairs of life. It shows diseases, deaths, domestic affairs, financial affairs; your talents; your environments; tells about children; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when in danger of illness, accidents, death, losses, troubles, etc., etc., also your good periods coming—GIVING DATES OF THESE EVENTS FOR THE FUTURE, in fact, the HOROSCOPE gives ACCURATE AND RELIABLE information on ALL AFFAIRS OF LIFE. No important changes or ventures of ANY kind should be made except at such a time when the planets in YOUR horoscope are favorable. PREDICTIONS for the FUTURE—made by the trained judgment of Prof. Althouse, will stagger the senses. PROF. ALTHOUSE read E. H. Sothern, Nat Goodwin, Virginia Harned, Gadski, Admiral Schley, David Starr Jordan, ex-Gov. Pardee, ex-Senator Clark, Gen. Chaffee, Edison, Sousa, Modjeska, Annie Besant, Frederick Warde, Louis James, Lillian Russell, Calve, Admiral Evans, Baron Rothschild, H. E. Huntington, Julia Marlowe, Anna Held, Joaquin Miller, Capt. Hobson, Jefferson, etc. These are a few of the more NOTED PUBLIC PERSONS—and for this reason only are they here mentioned—ALL positively read by PROF. ALTHOUSE, besides hundreds of the best people of Los Angeles, with whom all his readings are strictly CONFIDENTIAL.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is an expert PALMIST, and WITH EACH PALM READING GIVES ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S skilled work must in no wise be classed with that of other readers.

Therefore, do not waste your money on the idiotic advice and warning of HUMBUG astrologers, palmists, psychics, Hindu readers who never saw India, and those jealous of Prof. Althouse's work and success.

DR. J. A. LARSON writes: "I want to say that your reading was the most satisfactory thing I have ever had in my life. I know a great deal about these sciences, and I consider your work as the most thorough and reliable of any reader in the United States."

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in the casting of horoscopes and hand reading has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.

HIGHEST GRADE OF WORK that skill and experience can produce; therefore, HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

Daily and evening. Sunday, 10 to 2.
STUDIO PARLORS, 305½ S. SPRING ST.

PERSONAL—

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., may be consulted at 222 S. SPRING ST. (over Owl Drug Store,) by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions, and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity, can all be told you through scientific palmistry. WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.
(Daily and evenings; Sundays, 2 to 5.)

PERSONAL — A GENTLEMAN WHO HAS lived in Mexico for many years, thoroughly conversant with her resources and opportunities, desires to meet this week a number of shrewd, enterprising men who are looking for investments in lands, commercial enterprises, mining properties, power and railroad concessions, etc. I will give you the benefit of my experiences in the land of opportunities with the understanding that if, upon your personal investigation, every project is not just as represented, I will pay your expenses. Have a number of good tracts of agricultural and timber lands and business opportunities on hand now, and can secure you what you want. I return to Mexico within ten days. I am not a promoter or grafter, and if you are, don't answer. Address S, box 96, TIMES OFFICE, or Phone West 5834, two rings.

MINING—

ATTENTION, MINING MEN AND INVESTors—

Our dry placer machine will be ready for demonstration September 22, at 2 p.m., at southwest corner Central ave. and Jefferson st. This machine will be placed on the Manhattan Gold Mining & Milling Company's property, southwest of Tucson, Ariz., where we have dirt that goes $2 to the yard; and plenty of it, and machine handles 100 yards daily. There is a few shares of stock remaining unsold out of the block set aside for machinery; they would be a good pick-up at this time. Every one should see this machine who is interested in dry placer.

COMPANY NOW BEING ORGANIZED TO take over and develop 10 claims, showing 6 ledges highly mineralized gold-bearing ore, in an Arizona camp where "in all the ore bodies opened up the big end is down." This camp is the "Cripple Creek" of Arizona. No mine has yet been bottomed, and in one property $2,500,000 has been taken out above the 600 level. A mill test of five tons from above claims averages $27.50 per ton on the plate, and $29 per ton concentrates, total $56.50 per ton, and will make attractive proposition to capital. Address R, box 86, TIMES OFFICE.

GOLD MILLS—FOR $4000 I WILL BUILD you one of the best gold saving mills in existence with a daily capacity of 25 tons. For $5000 I will build you one with a daily capacity of 50 tons. For $8500 I will build you one with a daily capacity of 75 tons. These prices are for the mill complete, including all of the machinery and the building ready to run; you do the grading for the mill and pay the freight. Address WM. C. STANLEY, Agent for the Denver Quartz Mill, 540 S. Spring st., Los Angeles, Cal.

WANTED—MILLMAN DESIRES POSITION as foreman or superintendent of small mill; has had over 12 years' practical experience in the reduction of gold, silver, copper and lead ores, embracing amalgamation, cyanide and concentration; thoroughly versed in the elimination process, and the refining of precipitates; can furnish the best of references. OIL PROPERTY—

FOR SALE—

Leases on proven oil territory, with guarantee of cash paid at the wells for all oil produced.

I control about 200,000 acres of proven oil territory in many large and small pieces, adjoining wells producing from 500 to 3000 barrels of oil daily. The owners of this property will, if desired, furnish tools, rigs and all necessary machinery, casing, etc., together with leases on from 100 to 5000 acres of this land, at from one-eighth royalty up, according to location and size of property leased. Will also agree to buy all oil produced, and pay for the same at the wells—the price today is $[illegible] gold. This property all lies in the Tampico and Huasteca districts, Mexico, and adjoins and is intermixed with the Huasteca Petroleum Co. (Doheny,) and the Pierson & Son Limited, as well as many other oil companies. The owners of this land are buyers and consumers and not producers, and will give 20 to 30-year leases. This is one chance in a lifetime to get a long lease on proven territory, with a guarantee that all oil produced is already sold for cash at the well. Guarantee to run with the lease and a saving of 25 per cent. to you on the cost of each well drilled. For further information inquire of CHAS. E. EAGER, 318 H. W. Hellman Bldg.

I CONTROL OVER 3000 ACRES OF OIL lands alongside of well producing over 300 barrels per day of 41 gravity oil, containing over 50 per cent. gasoline, benzine and kerosene. Depth of well less than 100 feet and cost only about $200 to drill. The crude oil has been contracted for by the refinery at $2.25 per barrel.

This large body of land lies directly on the anticline between the above mentioned well and the railroad, and is reported to be worth millions by oil experts. I wish a good reliable company or several men with $500 to $5000 each to join me in operating said property. A pipe line is now being built from oil wells to railroad, past this tract of land.

These oil lands will make every member of syndicate taking over same independently wealthy.

Address P, box 11, TIMES OFFICE.

OIL MEN, WE OWN 300 ACRES OIL LAND on Santa Maria oil belt, within few miles of Palmer gusher; we will sell for $30,000; we are so confident of it being 100-barrel well territory we will forfeit property, appraised by the late Henry Hart, appraiser for Security Savings Bank, at $30,000, if it does not produce 100-barrel well. J. E. KREPPS, 702 H. W. Hellman Bldg.

WRITER SUES LADY COOK.

Alleges He Made Agreement With Her to Write Her Biography—She Denies His Assertion.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Tenessee Chaflin Cook, who, in England, is Lady Cook, appeared yesterday in the office of Coudert Brothers, her lawyers, to give testimony in a suit brought against her by Harry C. Silver, a writer, to recover $30,000, which Silver claims under an alleged agreement with Lady Cook to write her biography.

She denied emphatically that she ever made any agreement with Silver on the subject of her biography or that she ever talked with him about it.

Silver secured from Justice Hendrick of the Supreme Court, an order for the examination of Lady Cook before the trial of the suit, on the ground that he would be unable otherwise to obtain certain evidence in support of his case.

He declared that he had information which led him to believe that Lady Cook was about to leave the United States and go to England, where she would be out of reach of a subpoenae of the court.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The general advance in freight rates on lumber by the Vicksburg, Shreveport & Pacific Railroad Company, which is participated in by 280 other Interstate carriers, was suspended today by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The tariff provided for advances principally on yellow pine lumber from all points on the line of the Vicksburg, Shreveport & Pacific Company in the yellow pine territory, to all points in the United States.

The commission held that the increases "are unlawful and that the rates, fares or charges established by said schedules are unjust and unreasonable."

MUST T.P.A.'S PAY FARE?

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Railroads in the Western Association, comprising the lines between Chicago and the Rocky Mountains, have adopted a recommendation that after January 1, 1911, no complimentary annual passes be issued to the officers and agents of other railroads below the rank of assistant general passenger agent. This will cut off from transportation thousands of traveling passenger and freight agents, and local representatives of roads accustomed to traveling free.

IMPERIAL-SILSBEE LINE.

PART OF SANTA FE SYSTEM?

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

IMPERIAL, Sept. 17.—Definite announcement is made that construction will be begun early in October on the railroad connecting Silsbee and Imperial. A construction force is now being assembled in Los Angeles. While the road as outlined is but ten miles long, it is considered of much importance, as it is believed to be part of the Santa Fé line to connect the main line at Parker with San Diego and Arizona. The road will traverse Imperial Valley southwest to northeast, and will make a great reduction in the mileage between Parker and San Diego.

ELVAS BRIDGE WORKING.

HEAVIEST ON THE COAST.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Southern Pacific company is using its new bridge across the American River at Elvas.

The structure is guaranteed to withstand the wild flood torrents which have torn many Southern Pacific bridges away. The completion of the bridge renders it possible to use the double track, which has been down between this city and Roseville for some time. A crew was a little over a year in building the new structure and during its erection caissons were necessary, while piers were placed on bedrock.

Superintendent H. M. Sheridan of Sacramento said today that the bridge is the heaviest of its kind of the Coast, carrying a weight of 4,600,000 pounds. It cost three-quarters of a million dollars to build it.

ARMY OF EMPLOYEES.

CANADIAN PACIFIC LARGEST.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

OTTAWA, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The statistical department of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company has just completed a census of the number of employés on the pay roll of the company. It has been found that this number now amounts to 76,-000 persons. The company is thus rapidly outdistancing its rivals in magnitude, for even the great Santa Fé system, which runs through much more thickly populated areas than does the Canadian Pacific road, has but 60,000 employés.

The usual computation of statisticians is that five persons depend on the wages of each employé. Taking this as a basis at the present time, it shows a total of 380,000 individuals dependent for their livelihood on wages paid out by the Canadian Pacific Railway.

SOLVENCY ENDANGERED.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The rate hearings will be resumed here Monday and will probably continue ten days.

Western railroad managers have followed the eastern rate hearing closely, without changing their own plans in the least. When the western hearing is resumed, a dozen railroads will present their case individually.

One of the strongest systems proposes to show that its own solvency depends upon rate advances.

"If the present scale of wages had been in effect in 1906," says an officer of this railroad, "we would have been insolvent. Earnings might decline the next four years as they did between 1902 and 1906; but we cannot figure on a cut in the wage unit, because that would precipitate a strike, the results of which would be too horrible to contemplate. Rates would not be advanced in hard times. Therefore, they must be advanced now. Otherwise we fear for the solvency of every western railroad.

FACT AND COMMENT.

If Los Angeles is visited this winter by the record-breaking host of tourists expected by the railroad companies and others alive to the travel situation, there is every indication that the housing facilities of the city will be taxed to the utmost. The Fact and Comment writer has, during the past week, made a careful study of the apartment houses in various sections and the result is illuminating. Two weeks ago was presented in these columns a general summary of the whole rental situation as it was sized up by the various rental agencies. The data presented herewith were obtained through the medium of interviews with various "landladies" in the guise of a prospective tenant, and as such is obviously the real "dope." As the result of the investigations mentioned, the writer feels constrained to say that if he were an Easterner wanting desirable apartments in Los Angeles, he would try to be on the ground mighty early this coming season. The present moment, in fact, is not a bit too early. Readers of this department who have friends elsewhere who contemplate spending the winter in Los Angeles will be conferring a genuine favor upon the expected visitors if they will mail them this information in the form of a clipping. In a word, suitable apartments of the types which have proven most popular in the last few years are not to be picked up with anything like a desultory search right now in the middle of September, when by all account the great annual influx of tourists has barely begun.

Close-in Houses Nearly Full.

The Bunker Hill apartment area was carefully investigated. In the elevated section bounded roughly by Temple, Fifth, Olive and Hope streets, there are dozens of apartment houses. No less than four of these houses are "full up" from the ground to the roof. A great many of them have only a single apartment unrented, and practically none of them have as many as four or five suites open. Many of the apartments open for rent are in odd corners or on inside courts, giving evidence of careful "picking over." Without exception, proprietors report an unprecedented amount of inquiry. Prices range from $25 to $100 a month for two-room apartments with kitchen and private bath, and throughout the district generally are a bit "stiff." In this section even apartments which are lacking in one or more of the up-to-date conveniences or appointment features to be found in some of the more recently built houses farther out or less commanding situations appear to find an easy rental market.

The demand seems to be based more on location than on any other class of facility offered, although it cannot be denied that some of the finest apartment houses in the city are to be found on this "close-in" hill.

Similar Conditions Elsewhere.

The conditions prevailing on Bunker Hill are to be found in many other choice apartment areas, and it would appear that within another month a similar state of affairs will probably be almost general. The fact that literally scores of modern apartments have been erected during the period since last winter does not apparently have much effect on the situation, for the demand is greater than at the corresponding time a year ago. Naturally, the houses which are the most up-to-date are, as a general thing, being snapped up first, but it is quite likely that no apartment which has any particular virtue of location will long go begging. In the question of desirability price does not appear to be playing as great a part as formerly, and it was noted that often the most expensive apartments are the ones first preëmpted by the renters. Many a house has disposed of all of its south and east front rooms and still has $16 to $25 apartments to show the inquirer. There is no apparent disposition to cut prices anywhere with a view to filling up quickly. The term "far out" is this year more than ever a variable one. Paying apartments are today occupying sites which a few years ago were considered as hopelessly remote for anything but private residences. "Easy walking distance" is no longer the desideratum it once was, and the so-called "convenient car service" zone is constantly expanding.

The "Whyfor" of It All.

A builder who has erected a great number of apartment-houses in Los Angeles since 1902, when he built the first structure of this class ever constructed in the city, stated to the interviewer that the demand for apartments during the past summer had been far and away the best for any hot season in the history of the city. He expressed the belief that the apartment as an all year around place of residence would soon practically supercede the old-time flat. He attributes this fact to an ever-growing indisposition on the part of the women of the cities to endure the old-time drudgery of constant sweeping and house-cleaning. In the modern apartment-house one apartment with its quota of disappearing beds, cabinet kitchens and other hideable paraphernalia will serve the purposes of a large house or flat. When a woman sweeps her dining-room she is pretty apt to be sweeping her bedroom or general sitting-room as well. The strenuous cleaning is done by employés of the management, who also attend to many another duty which in a flat or private house would fall to the lot of the woman. Apartment-house life means leisure for self-improvement or pleasure. More and more people are coming to hold these advantages as worth possible differences in cost. The apartment-house, declares this builder, is solving the servant question.

Apartments as Investments.

The same gentleman, who it will be agreed ought to know what he is talking about, gave it as his opinion that the apartment-house is one of the best forms of investment in this ctiy, admitting that he averaged 15 per cent. upon his own buildings. Asked why some hotels in perfectly desirable but far-out sections failed to pay up to the expectations of their builders he gave the brief but expressive answer: "Because they are not apartment-houses. When people want to live in a regular hotel," he declared, "they wish to be in or near the heart of the business and theater section. If they intend to stay for any length of time in the city the apartment hotel comes more nearly meeting their requirements than any other kind of place. Fine apartment hotels in exclusive and fashionable neighborhoods pay, and will continue to pay, but the straight hotel in the same kind of neighborhoods is a doubtful experiment." This builder also gave it as his belief that there would soon be a growing demand for apartments which provide for the habitation of children. "The modern apartment," he said, "has put the ban on children, and most apartments will not tolerate them. The time is coming when apartments for families will be as common as they are uncommon today. These apartments will have roof playgrounds and yard spaces, where the youngsters may amuse themselves." Every year the apartment-house is coming to be more and more like the apartment hotel with its lobbies, billiard-rooms and amusement and social rooms, and consequently more desirable to live in and as an investment. This fact, together with the increasing demand for fireproof or semi-fireproof construction is going to raise the price of apartment-house living.

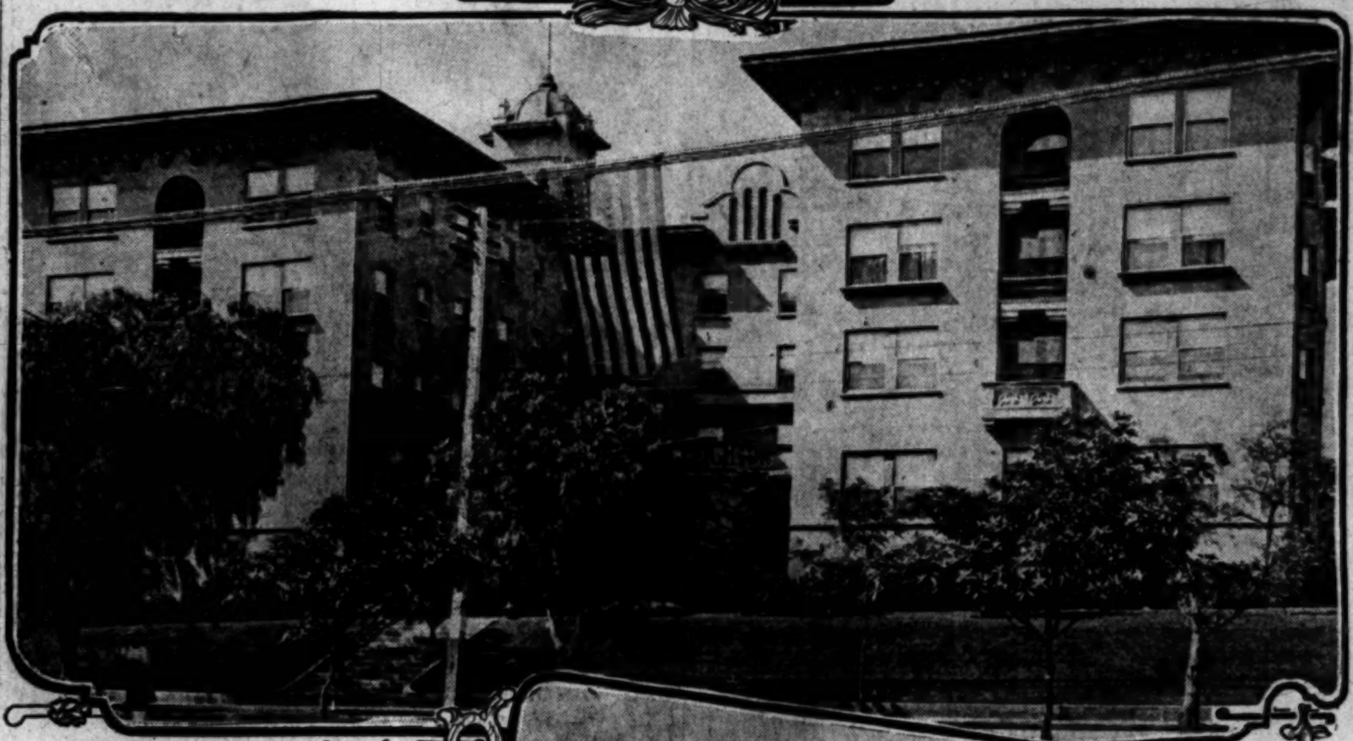
By Way of Criticism.

In conclusion, the Fact and Comment man wishes to register a criticism which it has long been on his mind to utter. It is a protest against the way too many of the apartment houses in Los Angeles are constructed. It is a truism to say that Southern California is an out-of-doors country. The California bungalow, with its large windows and sleeping porches and general adaptability to the Southland climate, has come to typify the very spirit and life of the section. The same thing cannot be said for the average apartment-house, which is constructed as though it were intended for a climate whose wintry blasts must be kept outside at any cost. The lack of ventilation in some lacol apartments is unpardonable. Windows are made small, and are few in number. Porches are lacking. Eastern models are followed slavishly, and here is the whole trouble, both with the architect and the builder. What is wanted is a California type of building, an apartment for the out-of-door kind of life that is lived in this section.

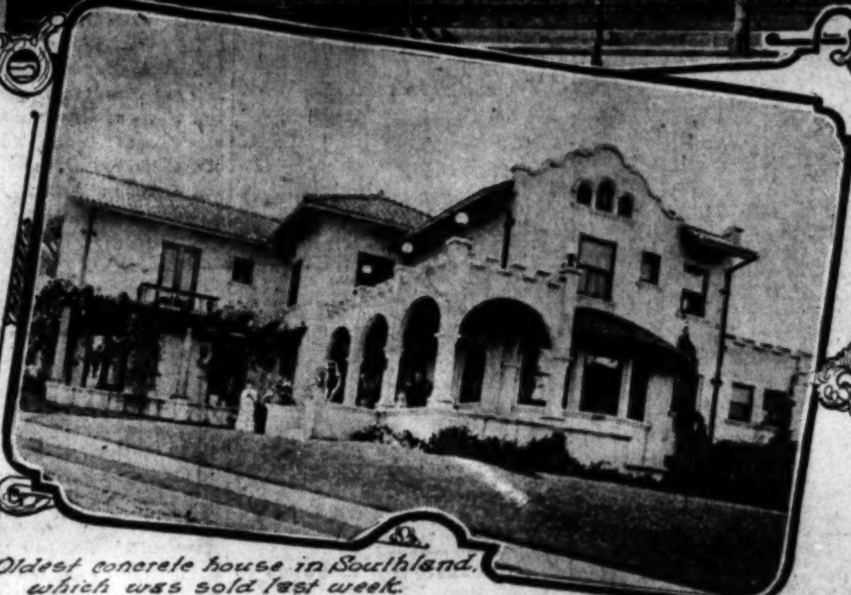
LEASE TO MANUFACTURERS

A deal has just been consummated by Carleton B. Parsons, assisted by Walter S. McKee, between the Beacon Lumber Company and the George H. Lee Company of Omaha, Nebraska, whereby the latter firm has taken a five-year lease on the premises owned by the former and located at the southwest corner of Alameda and Fourteenth streets, at a total rental of approximately $1000. The property has a spur track from the Southern Pacific Railway, and there are several frame buildings, which will be eventually enlarged are needed. The George H. Lee Company manufactures incubators and chicken supplies, and has a large Pacific Coast trade.

TWO BEAUTIFUL WESTLAKE STRUCTURES WHICH HAVE CHANGED OWNERS.



Hotel Leighton, the transfer of which is herewith made public for the first time.



Oldest concrete house in Southland, which was sold last week.

The sale prices of these properties total a quarter-million.

DISCOVERED.

NOTABLE DEAL COMES TO LIGHT.

TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND PAID FOR HOTEL LEIGHTON.

Exclusive Westlake Hostelry Has Changed Ownership—Palatial Reinforced Concrete Mansion in Same District Bought by Arizona Mining Man.

Two of the most important realty transactions in the history of the Westlake section of Los Angeles came to light yesterday. The largest of these deals, which was nothing less than the transfer of the famous Hotel Leighton, has been kept from the general public for several weeks. The other, the sale of the palatial reinforced concrete mansion of F. A. Urban at No. 2530 Ocean View avenue, was consummated on Friday.

The Leighton is one of the most exclusive and fashionable tourist hostelries in the Southwest, while the residence mentioned has the distinction of having been the first concrete house erected in Southern California.

The former was sold by George A. Leighton, its builder, to W. S. Crane, head of the realty firm of Crane & Vail, and the consideration is reported at approximately $200,000. The price involved in the sale of the Urban place is $45,000, the purchaser being John W. Sharpe, a wealthy mining man of Phoenix, Ariz.

The Leighton was built six years ago, after plans prepared by John C. Austin. The new owner has had tentative plans prepared by the same architect for additions which would practically double the present capacity of the building. The date of the construction of this addition has not, however, been determined.

Upon the completion of the hotel it was leased to the present owner for a term of ten years at a rental of $1000 a month. The property was held under this lease until the time of its recent acquisition by Mr. Crane, who had in the meantime determined to back his faith in Westlake Park frontage by coming into outright ownership.

The site has a frontage of 350 feet on Sixth, extending from Alvarado to Lake street, and a depth of 272 feet. Owing to the slant of the latter thoroughfare, the width of the rear of the property is 239 feet. The basement of the building is 54 feet above the level of the lake in the park and the windows of the structure overlook a most charming district, including all of Westlake Park and a beautiful residence area. The grounds of the property are ornately landscaped, there being two formal gardens, one 50x172 feet in size and the other 50x190 feet. There are also tennis courts and a putting green. Two attractive cottages lie along the Lake-street side of the holding.

The building is four stories in height and 150x105 feet in size. It contains 105 guest rooms, a handsome lobby and a magnificent ballroom. It is of a mission type of architecture. The appointments are unexcelled.

Mr. Crane stated yesterday that he considered the property as the ideal site for the finest tourist hotel in the Southland, and gave it as his belief that values in the Westlake section would far outstrip those in any other portion of residential Los Angeles when the population of the city grew to such an extent that people would come to fully appreciate proximity to park areas. He has in contemplation the organization of a company to convert the present building through alterations and additions into such a palatial hostelry as he has in mind and expresses his intention to play a big part in the financing of the enterprise.

TRADES HOME FOR RANCH.

The residence just sold by Mr. Urban contains eighteen rooms and is of absolutely fireproof concrete construction. It is in the Spanish style. It is finished in mahogany downstairs and in white enamel on the second floor. The appointments are of the most elegant type.

The lot has a frontage of 178 feet and ranges in depth from 67 to 160 feet. The site is a commanding one, overlooking Sunset and Westlake parks and the Rampart boulevard section. The lot was bought five years ago when there were practically no houses in the neighborhood. The growth of the section during that period has been amazing.

The sale of the property, which was consummated through the agency of J. S. Mills of Woodruff & Mills, involved a cash consideration of $10,000, the rest being in the form of exchange for 1440 acres of fine ranch land near Florence, Ariz., 320 acres being in that city. Mr. Urban will greatly improve the place.

OLD RECORDS DOOMED.

One Million Valuation in Twelve Days Is September Permit Total.

With only twelve actual business days included in the reckoning, September, 1910, already boasts a building record of 517 permits and $1,050,985 valuation, and there can no longer be the slightest doubt that the present month will completely eclipse the record figures of the corresponding period last year. September, 1909, held a good lead over all previous Septembers, with 837 permits and $1,375,909 valuation and was in all ways a wonderful month in the city's construction history. This notable record should, however, be easily eclipsed before another report and the final figures of the month will probably bury it completely out of sight.

Already the totals exceed those for the whole of September of the boom year, 1906, and press closely upon the whole September totals of other busy years. The clerks of the building department were never before so busy at this season of the year.

Permits issued for residences alone between September 1 and September 16, inclusive, number 232 and represent a valuation of $445,335. Apartments and small stores represent a valuation of $157,317. A five-story reinforced concrete apartment hotel at Sixth and Rampart is valued at $160,-000. The only other big single item is a seven-story business block for the Young Market Company on South Broadway, to cost $72,000.

Following is the classified report.

	Permits	Valuation
Class A, reinforced concrete	2	$262,436

REPORTS RANCH SALE.

J. W. Weightman & Co. report the following sales: A. C. Neighbors to Jacob Sutton, thirteen and one-half-acre ranch two miles west of Downey, nominal improvements, $3500; R. Hogue to M. Nixon, five-room bungalow at No. 2342 West Twenty-seventh street, $2500. The lot is 40x140 feet. W. D. Murray assisted in the last-mentioned sale.

LARGE TRACT SOLD.

Acreage in Occidental Boulevard Section to Be Improved at Once.

Robert F. Jones has sold to James G. Warren, the Robert F. Jones Tract No. 1, which lies on the west side of Occidental boulevard, one block south of Sunset boulevard, for a consideration of $52,500. Mr. Warren will begin the improvement of the tract at once, putting the street work in excellent condition, doing all the necessary grading, and will place the property on the market. The sale was made through Elvin J. Curry.

The same agent reports that James G. Warren has sold to Robert F. Jones, through his agency, an eight-room residence, No. 472 North Lake street, for a consideration of $7000; a nineteen-room flat building at No. 1424 West Tenth street, for $11,500, and the northwest corner of Sixth and Rampart street, 80x170 feet, for $8000.

SOUTHWEST ACTIVITIES.

The Victor G. Kleinberger Company reports the following sales: D. A. Edwin, Thirty-ninth street, $825; Mrs. Mary T. Kelore, Thirty-eighth Place, $775; George J. Wilson, business lot on Western, near Thirty-ninth, $1400; J. P. Allen and Mary E. Allen, two lots on Middleton Place, $900 each; T. R. Scott, Thirty-eighth Place, $1000; A. B. Clifton, Thirty-ninth street, $1050; Fred T. Clifton, Thirty-ninth street, $900, and Charles R. Foutty, Thirty-eighth Place, $850. The lots are 40x135 feet in size.

GROVE IS EXCHANGED.

Marcus H. Saxton has sold to F. W. Ridgway and wife, Anna, ten acres of oranges and lemons, improved with a ten-room house, in the lands of the South Riverside Land and Water Company, for $12,000. Mr. Saxton took the southeast corner of West Twenty-first street and Arlington avenue, improved with two modern residences, one of nine rooms and one of five, valued at $12,000. The difference was adjusted with cash and mortgages on both properties. The deal was made by Harry L. Heck, who was assisted by A. G. Berry.

GENERAL NOTES.

The McCarthy Company reports that the contract has been let for twelve to fifteen bungalows to be built on its addition No. 1 to the Greater Los Angeles tract, by Josephine Lenneker, who recently purchased sixteen lots in this tract. They are to be modern five-room residences.

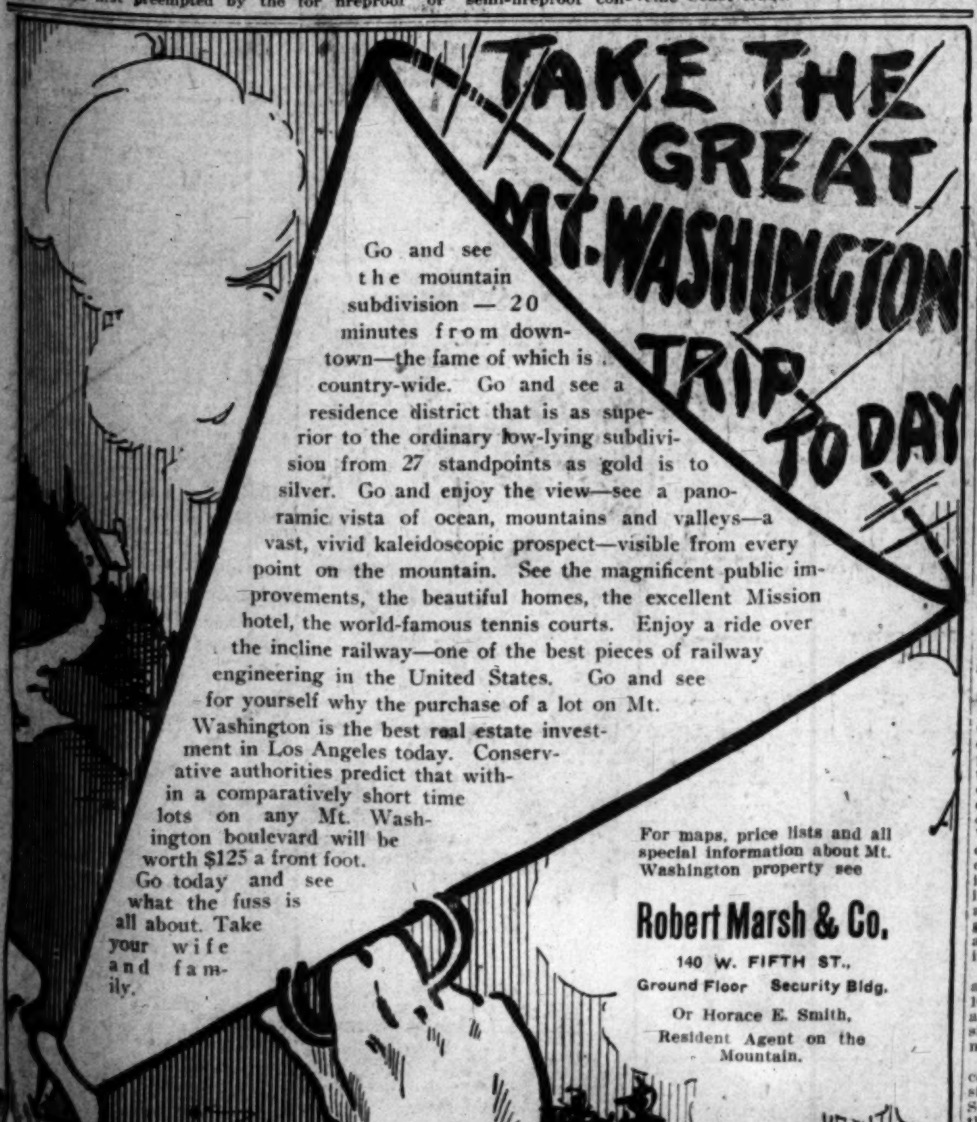
George I. Banta, secretary of the Haugh-Banta Realty Company, left yesterday for an extended tour through the East. His visit will combine business with pleasure.

John D. Bowler, son-in-law of Harry Iles, editor and publisher of the Builder and Contractor, is the proud father of a "native son," who appropriately enough arrived in this world on Admission Day. Mr. Bowles is himself a native of California.

The Nimmo Realty Company has secured the agency for the Ferry tract on Hollywood boulevard at Crown Oak and Serrano avenues. The piece consists of twenty-five lots ranging 75x200 feet and larger. The area is elevated and surrounded by a well-improved section.

Architect B. Cooper Corbett has returned from a two weeks' vacation trip to Lake Tahoe.

Architects Eager & Eager are established in their new and attractive quarters on the roof of the Story building, and their new offices are among the most complete and beautiful in the city.



TAKE THE GREAT MT. WASHINGTON TRIP TODAY

Go and see the mountain subdivision — 20 minutes from downtown—the fame of which is country-wide. Go and see a residence district that is as superior to the ordinary low-lying subdivision from 27 standpoints as gold is to silver. Go and enjoy the view—see a panoramic vista of ocean, mountains and valleys—a vast, vivid kaleidoscopic prospect—visible from every point on the mountain. See the magnificent public improvements, the beautiful homes, the excellent Mission hotel, the world-famous tennis courts. Enjoy a ride over the incline railway—one of the best pieces of railway engineering in the United States. Go and see for yourself why the purchase of a lot on Mt. Handsome, new seven-room bungalow in Wilshire district, worth $6000, situated close to the car line on splendidly located elevated lot, 50x150.

A large living-room, handsomely finished in Oregon pine, with highly polished oak floors, is the main feature of this very attractive bungalow. At the north end is the large stone fireplace with cosy chimney nooks at either side, while at the south a unique partition separates the room from a beautiful glass-inclosed conservatory, with French doors leading to the dining-room. This pleasant room, which also opens off of the living-room, has a southern exposure. The pine finish is most effective in the numerous built-in features, and the massive lighting fixtures are of solid brass. Delightful cabinet kitchen, breakfast-room which can be used as maid's room, two bedrooms, bathroom with modern plumbing, and rear porch with laundry tubs complete the house. There are cement basement, garage and cement walks.

Very easy terms can be arranged on this most attractive place.

Eight-room residence, new, on Oxford boulevard, close to the Fourth-street car line, and in the desirable Wilshire district. This home is artistically arranged, and the construction is of the highest quality. The first floor contains the living-room, den, dining-room, breakfast-room and kitchen. The woodwork is finished in grained effect, which closely resembles oak. The wall decorations are done in hand work. The fixtures are of hammered copper and the fireplace is protected by a large copper hood of the same design. The second floor has three spacious bedrooms, large bath, splendidly equipped, all exceptionally well finished in white enamel, and a fine sleeping balcony. The closets are unusually large, with built-in wardrobes. There are a good sized garage and servants' quarters on the premises. The lot is highly improved with flowers, trees and shrubbery. Price, with reasonable terms, $6250.

POPE PLAN.

Every man or woman buying property has a perfect right to demand absolute protection in the deal.

To this end it is Pope's Rule to have all purchases gone through a strong financially responsible and competent Title and Trust Company or National Bank, under the careful scrutiny of skilled attorneys every paper and every item is passed upon. The buyer thus positively knows that everything is right before he puts up one cent of his money.

We have just taken over a new tract on the highest ground in the Wilshire section and can give you a special bargain in lots during the next 30 days as the tract has just been opened and we expect to advance the price of all lots Oct. 1. These high restricted lots at present are $1000 to $1650, on yellow car line, with water, gas, electricity, curbs, with high class restrictions on all sides. All of these lots are considered to be $300 under value, are being sold very fast. If you build within 30 days we can make special inducements. We can make terms to suit.

RESIDENCE.
$27,500.
117x200.

If you have never visited Oneonta Park South Pasadena, with its elegant homes and acres of well kept lawns and flower beds, you should accept this opportunity to see it under our competent guidance, and to inspect this, the newest and most carefully planned home of them all. This place was intended to be the home of the owner, an experienced builder of fine homes, who gave up the greater part of his time to supervising and directing its construction; as a result, you have the opportunity to secure an exquisitely finished and perfectly appointed house set in a bower of flowers and trees with every detail of arrangement and finish carefully planned and selected by an expert, and at much less than it would cost you to hire an expert and build such a place yourself. The style of architecture is decidedly pleasing and harmonises perfectly with the surroundings; from a broad cement porch you enter the large comfortable living-room, which is finished in quarter-sawed oak, beautifully grained and polish to a smooth velvety finish; the walls are paneled high, with imported silk tapestry above; from this room you enter the dining-room through double doors; dining-room is also paneled high in oak, with imported tapestries above; has beamed ceilings, broad bay window and handsome center light; the den is a front room, adjoining the living room; walls are lined with bookcases, built-in writing desk, one end all windows, with finest hardwood; every window has small transom window above that can be left open for ventilation without fear of burglars—even when there is no one in the house; three perfectly charming bedrooms, all woodwork and closets in cedar, enameled pure white walls hung with the daintiest of French papers; two of these rooms have built-in dressing cases with full-length mirror and all closets are as large as ordinary dressing rooms; bathroom is fitted with the newest and finest plumbing; has fine tile floor and four mirrors; an ideal buffet kitchen with cabinet of cedar, inlaid linoleum on floor, woodstone sink and board full length of room; fruit closets, Rudd water heater, screen porch and laundry tubs; the best type of furnace.

The outhouses consist of two-story garage large enough for two machines and completely fitted with running water, toilet and robe closet; separate tool-house and separate house with running water and all equipped for Japs or other servants.

A great deal of money has been spent in making the grounds remarkably beautiful. Lot is 117x200 feet, and has been laid out by an experienced landscape gardener into lawns, flower beds, and borders, with winding gravel paths and inviting summer houses; there are a number of beautiful palms and other ornamental trees besides the three huge live oaks banked with ferns.

But you must see this place yourself to get an adequate conception of its beauty and value; any real estate agent will show it to you; or communicate with us direct. The property is located corner Oak and Milan.

FOR SALE—

IDEAL HOME.
FOR ELDERLY COUPLE.
AT GREAT BARGAIN.

This home—never occupied—was built by us under special order for elderly man and wife.

Its only objection is small size and on this account will be sold at great reduction below value.

In all other respects it is extremely desirable, no expense spared in workmanship or materials. For elderly couple or small family it is a rare opportunity—strictly high class built-to-order home for less than cheap house.

Has 5 rooms. White enamel bathroom. Best porcelain tub, lavatory, toilet, electric fixtures hand made and most $84. All hardware solid brass. Polished oak floors; hand-polished wainscoting. Beamed ceilings. China cabinet, leaded glass doors. Open fireplace. Cabinet kitchen. Extra number of windows.

The one purpose in designing this home was to reduce housework and add to comfort.

Exterior is equally pleasing. Cement porch. Cobblestone outside chimney. Solid concrete foundation. Shingled sides and roof. Fence, tool-house, lawn, flowers, fern-boxes, young fruit trees set out.

This is not located on outskirts of city away from conveniences, with slow city car line, but right near interurban cars in picturesque suburb with quick and comfortable service and every convenience such as gas, electricity, telephones, daily delivery of ice, milk, groceries, vegetables, etc. Morning newspaper delivered before breakfast. Fine stores, churches, clubs, etc. convenient. All city comforts without city drawbacks.

Our company would not duplicate this home for $3200. We will cut the above price so low as to give the greatest real estate bargain offered for years. Terms if desired.

See us or take Monrovia cars and get off at Mayflower ave. Walk two blocks away from mountains. Green bungalow with cobblestone trimmings. Open Sunday.

BUNGALOWS—AND—BUNGALOWS.

Intending purchasers of same will do well to consult us, as we have a large number of very desirable homes, many of them now on the market for the first time. We specialize in the medium priced ones ranging in cost from $2000 to $3500 in choice localities and on easy terms. Let us show you, for instance, some that we have in the beautiful northwest part of the city, where the land is high and sightly, where fog is practically unknown and the pure ozone of the atmosphere gives joy to living. The distant view of the mountains from here is superb, and with an excellent car service of about 25 minutes, and prices and terms being right, we should be able to meet your full requirements in the purchase of a suitable and right priced dwelling.

YOUNG'S GLENDALE ORANGE GROVE TRACT.

New tract, street work starts this week; now is your chance to make your money talk, as I need cash to complete this work.

Glendale is growing faster than any other section of Los Angeles.

I purchased acreage in Glendale for subdivision purposes in preference to buying anywhere else, because I believe this is one district where it is still possible to sell you a lot at such a figure that you are sure to make a profit on it.

Tract is covered with full-bearing orange, lemon and olive trees, soil is the finest sandy loam.

We will have gas, electricity, 'phones, water, and the very best street work, all within next 60 days.

This is not an isolated spot, but settled up on each side already.

Prices $200 to $1150, easy terms.

FOR SALE—
IN THE SOUTHWEST.
ARLINGTON SQUARE.
$625 UP.
$25 CASH, $10 MONTHLY.

Think of buying a lot in the beautiful Southwest for only $625 up! Think of being able to get into this select district on these easy terms! You will not be able to do so much longer. These Summer prices and terms will soon be withdrawn—there will be an advance of $50 or more on each lot November 1st, and a further advance December 1st; the tremendous demand, the superior improvements and the general advance in this section warrant it. This property is reached by several carlines, with a 5c fare. Every city convenience available—such as gas, electricity, telephones, nearby schools, stores, etc. It is nicely improved with graded and oiled streets, cement walks and curbs, and wide parkings planted to large shade trees. Just right for a home, with restrictions that insure good neighbors. Come in and see me about it, or go to the tract. Take Inglewood car to Arlington street. My Tract office is there. Fare 5c.

FOR SALE—
ONE ACRE; $10 CASH, $10 MONTHLY.
PERFECT FOR CHICKENS, TURKEYS
DUCKS, BERRIES, VEGETABLES.

Do you know that you can "do things" on an acre? That is, if you get the right kind of an acre, and get it close to town. You can make an acre a good producer—a sure money-maker—and still keep your work here in the city, going back and forth on the car. Many are doing this thing at Somerset Acres—my attractive, suburban property, 30 minutes away by trolley. It has the perfect soil, the rich sandy loam that brings results. I furnish abundant water free. You can get a Somerset acre for only $350 up, on the above easy basis. Put your next $10 into one. Full information at my office. Excursions every hour daily and up to 2 p.m. Sundays.

FOR SALE—
IN THE TREND OF PROGRESS.

ON THE VENICE SHORE LINE.

There is no other specific section in the whole southwest today where the profit to be realized in so short a time will be as great as that derived by the purchasers who now invest their money in property along the VENICE SHORT LINE. Property on the line of the subway that is now being offered for sale can never again be purchased at such ridiculously low prices as are now prevailing, and it can be truthfully stated that in one year from now every piece of property we are now selling will be quoted at exactly twice the present price. It is hard for even the most optimistic person to realize what it will mean to be within 15 minutes of the heart of the city, to be able to enjoy all the pleasures of a country home and at the same time retain and have all the conveniences of the city.

ONLY—$1000—ONLY

Large 100x151½-ft. lot; east front; cement walks and curbs, high ground, beautiful view and only 30 minutes out now; will soon be 15 minutes; easy terms.

$1500.

A beautiful acre, 100x330 feet; an easterly exposure on a wide boulevard; close to car line; cool in summer, and a rare bargain at price asked. Terms easy.

$1500.

A fine acre, well located, 131½x192½; elegant soil, high ground, beautiful view; just the place for a rambling California bungalow.

FOR SALE—
THE CHEAPEST CLOSE-IN CORNER IN ALL LOS ANGELES.
NORTH OF 10TH; EAST OF FIGUEROA.
AWAY UNDER INSIDE FRONTAGE PRICES.

$650 A FOOT.
$650 A FOOT.

This is without question the very cheapest close-in corner in this city today.

In fact, at the rate inside frontage in this vicinity has sold for it is well worth today $1000 a foot. At $650 a foot it is cheaper than inside property.

It is absolutely the biggest bargain in a corner on the market.

It can be handled on exceptionally easy terms, $20,000 to $25,000 cash. It pays now with ordinary improvements, $[illegible] a year.

If you want an inside corner at a price that will never be duplicated in this city again buy this corner now. It will make you a handsome profit, as it will assuredly double in a very few years. In ten years it will be worth a fortune.

If you are thinking of making an investment in close-in Los Angeles real estate, be sure and see us about this corner.

HERE IS A BARGAIN FOR AN INVESTOR

20 acres strictly first class orange land, in a frostless belt, and where there is so much demand for young orange groves. Any amount of cheap water for irrigation for domestic use. Two rows immense eucalyptus trees, easily $500 worth of wood. Small house, barn and the handsomest ornamental and shade trees; place all fenced; included is a fine team, cow, nearly new wagon and harness, chickens, and all farming implements and tools. Big lot irrigation casing; 4 acres in fine crop of sweet potatoes, which will bring good price.
This land is leveled for irrigation, and can easily be set to alfalfa, or, better still! plant to oranges, and this property should sell next year for $10,000. Adjoining 20 acres (absolutely no better) recently sold for $7500.
BUY THIS PLACE AND FIX IT UP AND YOU CAN CLEAR $2500 in a short time; it's a bargain. Right on main oiled county road, in a splendid community; beautiful orange groves, alfalfa ranches, etc., all around. Easy terms.

FOR SALE—THE STRATHMORE ORANGE district joins the Porterville district on the north, the Lindsay district on the south, and extends from Frasier Valley on the east (a broad valley extending into the mts.) to a large acreage of first class alfalfa land on the west. The land of the orange district is a rich red loam, with abundance of water close to the surface, and can be handled with centrifugal pumps.
Strathmore is a new town on the S. P. R. R., which runs through the center of the district, and is six miles from either of the above named towns. One year ago Strathmore contained one store and postoffice; now there are three stores, hotel, lodging-house, barber shop, blacksmith shop, lumber yard, cement pipe factory, real estate office, city waterworks, church, school, and an up-to-date packing-house, which will pack from twenty to thirty carloads of oranges this season.
We offer lands on better terms than any of the older districts.
Round trip fare from Los Angeles to Strathmore refunded to purchasers of twenty acres or more.

YORBA LINDA ORANGE LANDS.

ABSOLUTELY FROSTLESS.

$150 AND UP PER ACRE.

A LITTLE COMMON SENSE ADVICE.

If you want to grow ORANGES or LEMONS buy ORANGE OR LEMON LANDS.

Plant upon your lands the crops adapted to them. ALL LANDS ARE GOOD FOR SOMETHING. BUT ALL LANDS ARE NOT GOOD FOR EVERYTHING. You would not think of sinking an oil well in a gold mine.

YOU NEED NOT EXPECT TO GROW ORANGES AND LEMONS SUCCESSFULLY IN LOW, COLD, FOGGY LOCATIONS.

YORBA LINDA IS the PERFECT ORANGE and LEMON LAND. High elevation. NO FROST. With soil and climate that grows VALENCIA ORANGES THAT NEVER TURN GREEN AFTER RIPENING.

NO SWEATING. NO SMUDGING.

FOR SALE—

TURLOCK IRRIGATED LANDS.

20 to 40 acres.

$100 PER ACRE UPWARD.

UPON MOST LIBERAL TERMS.

Excellent climate, rich land, abundance of water, cheap transportation.

"Union Temperance Colonies" contain admittedly the cheapest and most productive soil in the Modesto-Turlock Irrigation Area. It is known and designated upon the U. S. Soil Map as "Fresno Sandy Loam," considered and recommended by the U. S. government Soil Experts as the most adaptable land in California for alfalfa, sweet potatoes, vegetables, berries, etc.

Only 1½ miles from the Southern Railway at Keyes, 4½ miles from Ceres, where there is a well equipped creamery. Whenever necessary their wagon calls and collects your cream, thus eliminating the expense of hauling.

Your crops are assured by the never failing supply of water, furnished from the greatest and most complete irrigation system in the United States. You own your own water, and it is always at your command. The supply is never affected by dry years as in the case of wells.

All our assertions are more than confirmed in the "Soil Survey of the Modesto-Turlock Area, California," a copy of which can be obtained by writing to us. When you buy in the "Turlock" you are advised to do so by the highest authorities in the country on lands, the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

WHY WE CAN AFFORD TO SELL OUR PROPERTIES UPON MORE LIBERAL TERMS THAN OPERATORS IN LESS FAVORED LOCALITIES.

Deferred payments are assured by the magnitude of the yield of the lands.

By employing intensive farming methods you can make upon a conservative estimate from 1 acre in sweet potatoes, $175.
1 acre in beans, $100.
1 acre in berries, $600.
1 acre in cantaloupes, $100 to $250.

These quotations are deducted from authentic source. Citations from "Sunny Stanislaus," a booklet compiled by L. W. Fulkerth, judge of Superior Court of Stanislaus, for distribution by the Chamber of Commerce of said county.

No land in California will yield the immense interest on the invested capital that these will.

We have several unexcelled properties from 20 to 40 acres planted in alfalfa and Malaga grapes. Alfalfa land from $150 to $160. Lands in Malaga grapes, $175 an acre. The alfalfa and grapes are three years old, respectively.

DON'T delay, but write today for free literature.

FOR SALE—

WE KNOCK AT THE FARM BUYER'S DOOR
ARE YOU AT HOME AND AWAKE?

FOR $1000 CASH WE WILL PUT THE BUYER IN POSSESSION OF A FARM THAT WILL NET $3000 TO $4000 A YEAR ABOVE ALL EXPENSES OF LIVING AND OPERATING.

The high intrinsic value of our land will double the present price in two or three years. This is profit, too. When in alfalfa it rents now for $20 a year—figure this out yourself—does it not mean $200 an acre actual value?

We sell for $100 an acre, 1-4 cash.

$1000 paid on 40 acres and the rest is easily earned.

These tracts are in the well-known Eaton Ranch, in Tulare and Kings counties, Cal.—over 3000 acres of the richest land, all in cultivation now.

FREE WATER FOR IRRIGATING EVERY ACRE.

WE ARE SELLING IT IN TRACTS OF 20 TO 320 ACRES.

HERE IS PROFITABLE FARMING IN COMFORTABLE HOMES. ELECTRIC POWER AND LIGHTS, GOOD ROADS, SCHOOLS, CONVENIENT TO SEVERAL PAVED ROADS AND PROSPEROUS CITIES. THE SOIL IS THE RICHEST, DARK, EASILY-WORKED SEDIMENTARY LOAM, OF GREAT DEPTH, WHERE THERE ARE NO BAD FEATURES AND ABOUT ALL THE GOOD ONES.

NEIGHBORING RANCHES IN ALFALFA, FRUITS, ETC., ARE NETTING $100 TO $125 A YEAR PER ACRE.

OWENS RIVER LANDS

FOR SALE—LOS ANGELES' NEW WATER supply from the Owens River Valley opens up the most fertile land in all Southern California. This land is wonderful in its productiveness beyond belief. Potatoes that run as high as 500 bushels to the acre with an average of 230. Alfalfa 3 tons to the cutting. Timothy with 12-inch heads. Corn 70 bushels to the acre. Famous for onions and hogs. The world's prize at Portland Exposition for honey. The finest apples grown on the Pacific Coast, Spitzenburgs and Winesaps being the favorite varieties. No better poultry country in California.

No other land in California to compare with it. Foothill land, with gentle slope, giving perfect drainage. One of the most complete gravity concrete water systems in the State now being installed by men whose irrigating systems in the orange belt of Southern California stand as models for modern orchard irrigating. Water from the hundreds of lakes in the high Sierras. An inexhaustible and assured supply. The Southern Pacific's new main line to the East, now nearing completion, places this valley in close touch with all markets. The choicest apple land will be subdivided into tens, twenties and forties.

The elevation is 4000 feet. Typical California summers, with no excessive heat and cool and restful nights. Mild winters, with thermometer at 10 deg. above being the coldest. Practically no rain, about four or five inches during the entire year. Three hundred days of sunshine. Absolutely no fog. The finest scenery in America. The high Sierras at your very door. Trout streams within walking distance. You can leave the valley in the morning, go to the summit of the Sierras, 11,000 feet elevation, pass a dozen beautiful mountain lakes and return to your home the same evening.

Special inducements to early settlers. This land is not for speculators, but for real serious farmers, who know the value of good land, water and climatic conditions when they see them. Will send kodak pictures and full descriptive matter upon application. JAMES R. H. WAGNER and H. S. COOK, 229 S. Hill st., Los Angeles, Cal.

FOR SALE—

$21,500.

"THE WONDER OF THE DISTRICT"
"LATE VALENCIA ORANGES."

20 acres; the prettiest sight you ever saw in an orange grove; 11 acres set solidly to "Late Valencias," great big uniform trees, AND TREES THAT ARE ABSOLUTELY PERFECT if such ever grew. It's the handsomest grove in the famous frostless district, where orange groves pay so well, and are in such heavy demand with very few for sale. There is an enormous crop well set, and the income for the coming year is conservatively estimated at [illegible]. Each succeeding year is bound to see a substantial increase. Nine acres in splendid thrifty full-bearing softshell walnuts, and the present crop now ready to harvest should net $1200; WALNUT CROP WITH SALE.

The soil is that famous, rich, black, mellow loam, 20 feet deep, which produces such splendid trees and best of fruit. Cement pipe line for irrigation, and about the cheapest water in the orange districts, and ANY AMOUNT OF IT. Also good 8-inch well for domestic use. Nice barn, good team, wagon, harness, buggy, all necessary farming implements and tools.

A limited description cannot even fairly portray the magnificent features of this superior property. Inspect, if you will, one hundred orange groves and then see this one; it will bear comparison with the best. It's one chance in a hundred to purchase a grove of such rare merit. Based on adjacent valuations, this 20 acres would be CHEAP at $35,000; $21,500 is the sacrifice price; death in family has called owner East, so it is a forced sale, and a lucky deal for some one. IF YOU CAN APPRECIATE AN ORANGE GROVE OF SUCH MERIT, IN AN ABSOLUTELY FROSTLESS BELT, WHERE YOU HAVE THE VERY BEST OF SOIL AND WATER CONDITIONS—AND WHERE VALENCIAS COMMAND SUCH ENORMOUS PRICES, JUST SEE THIS ONE RIGHT AWAY. A PRINCELY INCOME IS AWAITING YOU IF YOU BUY IT. Easy terms, 6 per cent.

SUPERB ORANGE GROVE.

20 ACRES.

We have one of the finest Orange Groves in Southern California to offer. There are 8 acres of the FINEST VALENCIA TREES you ever saw, and 12 acres in GREAT BIG NAVEL ORANGE TREES. There is an eight-room bungalow on the property and the electric line passes within 200 feet of this property. It is situated on a very sightly eminence, commanding an unrestricted view for miles over solid orange groves, with the oak-covered hills to the south and beautiful mountains to the north and east. THIS VIEW CAN NEVER BE SHUT OFF. The [illegible] is excellent, has been heavily fertilized this last season; the place has an abundance of the CHEAPEST WATER IN THE DISTRICT, and frost is absolutely unknown. This property absolutely cannot be duplicated and is only an hour's ride by electric from Los Angeles. Can be handled on half cash, balance terms. IF YOU ARE LOOKING FOR A CHOICE PROPERTY, which is yielding close to TWENTY PER CENT. NET, where the element of risk is as near eradicated as it is possible to make it in a big producing property, HERE IS YOUR CHANCE. Fine team, Jersey cow, implements, etc., included.

FOR SALE—
VERY UNUSUAL.
$150,000 FOR $65,000.
We have an option on a hotel, with 100 guest rooms and a number of parlors and reception rooms. Completely furnished and ready to begin business. The grounds surrounding the hotel contain nearly four acres with rare trees and shrubbery. The situation of this hotel is the equal of any in Southern California. It has its own electric plant, it own laundry; in fact, it is in condition to open at once, and an experienced hotel man can make a fortune out of the property. It is less than 50 minutes from First and Spring. The owner of this property one year ago put a value of $100,000 on the improvements and furniture, and $50,000 on the real estate, making a valuation of $150,000.
We can deliver the entire property, including improvements, furniture and real estate for $65,000, $35,000 cash and $30,000 mortgage.

Santa Ynez Valley Lands in the heart of

Best Bean District

Santa Ynez Valley Lands are located in Santa Barbara County—40 miles north of Santa Barbara. No better bean land in California. Lowest average yearly yield 23 sacks (approximately 2100 pounds) per acre. Crop worth $95 per acre. Cost of seeding, cultivating and harvesting only about $10 per acre.

No irrigation required at any season. Situated 10 miles from ocean. Soil and atmosphere always contains sufficient moisture for growing crops. Plenty of water for stock and domestic use—springs, wells, 6 miles frontage on Santa Ynez River.

Soil and climate also excellent for many other products—celebrated Bellefleur apples, English walnuts, potatoes, garden seed, etc.

$50 Per Acre

Land will be sold in tracts of 20 acres or more, at $50 per acre and up. Terms are easy. No impossible contracts or conditions. Land deeded and certificate of title given at time of purchase.

If you want good bean land, in the best bean district in California; land that will produce anything grown anywhere in California; land that will pay for itself and bank money every year; land that will rapidly increase in value, don't fail to investigate this. And don't wait until the price jumps. Buy now. Call or write for illustrated descriptive booklet.

ATTRACTIVE.

TRANQUIL DUARTE AN IDEAL HOME REGION.

District Is Not Only Prominent as Citrus Center, But Has Many Advantages as Place of Residence for Los Angeles People.

SET in a crescent of the Sierra Madre range, about 18 miles from Los Angeles, is the alluring district of Duarte. It possesses an appearance of serenity and permanence which is especially attractive. Handsome residences nestle at the feet of the great peaks while the valley spreads wide in front, giving a singular impression of tranquillity. This tranquillity is indicative of neither apathy nor industrial inertia, for Duarte is distinctly to the fore as a citrus center. No word seems to so satisfactorily describe it as "contented."

Duarte was evolved, and not made to order; like the native live oak, it is the product of sun and soil, and environment. One knows instinctively that storm and stress have driven its roots deep into the earth, and its growth has been strong and sure. Also it is easily seen that people lived and rejoiced in this pleasant land long before the present era of occupation. Here one is shown a rose vine planted forty years ago, a foot in diameter at the ground. Yonder is an oak with the lobed leaf of the eastern varieties, sprung from an acorn that a pioneer woman brought from her home over the overland trail a half century ago. Lusty trees, bearing a full crop every season, still remain of the citrus orchard planted in 1860 by Beardslee. Everywhere are evidences of long tenure and affectionate home-building.

Despite the obliterating effects of intensive cultivation, traces yet remain of a numerous aboriginal people whose villages were scattered along the foothills adjacent to the mouth of San Gabriel Cañon. Though the district was not included in the San Gabriel Mission demesne, its water supply was partially utilized by the Franciscans. Vestiges of the acequias which swarthy neophytes built along the foothills and across the valley are discernible.

WHENCE COMES THE NAME.

The district derives its name from Andreas Duarte, a Spanish soldier of fortune, who cast his lot with Mexico in her struggle for independence and was rewarded with a grant of land in Alta California about eighteen miles northeast of Los Angeles. It consisted of many thousands of acres extending west from the San Gabriel River, and south from the mountains, but was somewhat indefinitely described as "three leagues each way" from a certain intermediate point. A few leagues more or less were of small moment a century ago. Eventually, by elimination and compromise, the grant was construed to include the tract west of the San Gabriel River to Santa Anita grant, and south from the mountains to the boundary of San Francisquito Rancho, later owned by Gov. Pio Pico.

Duarte took possession in 1828 and built the first house along the foothills. This was replaced a few years later by a far more substantial structure, which is today the home of a weathy orchardist. It is probably the best example in Southern California of the adobe ranch house of the old Spanish régime.

A curious illustration of the dearth of permanent, describable points from which a surveyor could locate corners, is afforded by a deed from Andreas Duarte to Nehemiah Beardslee, the first American settler on the grant. In all the empty land there was but one monument that held promise of enduring, and so the location and description of the tract purchased were based "on a line from the east window of the San Gabriel Mission," seven miles distant. The necessity for even the possibility of such an expedient seems far back in the past, but time is measured by change rather than by years, and one woman, Mrs. Jesus Maron, whose father and husband owned all the silent leagues that the surveyor swept with his transit in search of a base line, is still living. She is the daughter of T. Lopez, grantee of Santa Anita, and married Felipe Duarte, only son and heir of Andreas Duarte.

This background of tradition, pioneer endeavor and slow development before transcontinental railroads were built, is unconsciously seen in the Duarte of today, and contributes to its charm.

INDUSTRIAL RESOURCES.

Duarte is in a highly specialized district, with orange growing the principal industry. The orchard area is small, consisting of about 1250 acres, but the quality of fruit has won a distinction in the markets disproportionate to the output. It was a proved district from the start. In the twenty-five years since planting became extensive there has not been a reverse. Even the unprecedented weather of the past winter wrought no injury. Young trees set out the previous spring were unscathed. Practically the district has reached its maximum acreage, but with the maturing of young orchards the output will materially increase. Groves are small, probably averaging less than fifteen acres, the largest consisting of but eighty. For several years net annual returns to orchardists have approximated $275,000. This total includes a considerable acreage of non-bearing and partially bearing young trees. Few orchards are listed for sale, and the few transfers in the past year have been direct from owner to buyer. Prices range from $1500 to $2000 per acre, the latter ruling.

With negligible exceptions the citrus crop is marketed coöperatively, and has been for a decade. The Duarte Company is a growers' organization, selling to permanent markets, and controls about 20 per cent. of the output. Among its most prominent members are A. C. Thomson, originator of "Thomson's Improved" and "Navelencia" oranges, varieties which have been widely planted; Arthur S. Church, Mrs. W. S. Newhall and Capt. H. D. Fowler. The Duarte-Monrovia Fruit exchange handles the balance of the crop. It was one of the first members of the Southern California Fruit Exchange, and has been the most powerful influence for success in the district. It is stated by experienced fruit men that but one or two packing-houses in the State are as completely equipped as the Duarte house. Questioned regarding this, Secretary A. T. Blain said:

"I wouldn't make any comparisons, but we intend to have the best equipment devised. The initial expense of real improvements is a small item compared with the steady saving of fruit from injury day after day and season after season. Wherever we find automatic handling the best, we employ it. I think that, despite all house improvements, and they have been many in recent years, the greatest gain has been accomplished by the growers themselves, through better cultural methods, more careful picking and hauling. The packing-house is capable of handling six carloads of fruit per day. All machinery is run by electricity, with separate motors for the several processes. Prominent Exchange members, identified with it from the beginning, are W. H. Young, John Scott, W. W. Bacon, Dr. C. A. Brown, E. D. Northup, J. A. Shrode, G. S. Storrs and William Chippendale.

The future of citrus culture is naturally one of absorbing interest. John Scott, Exchange director and formerly a horticultural commissioner, outlines the situation thus: "To begin with, the industry is on an assured basis. The doubts of twenty years ago as to whether California could supply the markets of the country have been dissipated. We have encountered and solved many problems in orchard, packing-house and market. Transportation conditions have improved and movement of the crop is along business and not speculative lines. Old districts have been proved and doubtful areas eliminated. While there is an average annual increase in yield from orchards now in bearing, it is not large. The population of the country is not only rapidly increasing but there is every prospect of our being able to find markets outside America should necessity arise. In the past three years a very large acreage in Central California has been set to citrus fruit, but I see no cause to fear overproduction. Most of the crop from these new districts will mature at a different season from ours and, in effect, will make orange shipping an all-year-around business. Moreover, it will be at least ten years before these groves come into heavy bearing, and by that time we shall have the benefit of through water transportation to the Atlantic seaboard and foreign markets, via the Panama canal. Cheaper fruit means increased consumption. As a question merely of remuneration it makes no difference to the citrus producer whether his legitimate profit is maintained by a reduction of transportation charges or by a higher selling price, but it makes a deal of difference to the consumer."

While orange growing is the principal interest of Duarte, exceptional climatic conditions have invited horticultural experiments of note. On a plateau 1600 feet above sea level and immune from even a menace of frost, the first citron ranch in the United States was started about twenty years ago. The possibility of profitably raising this most delicate of the citrus species was fully demonstrated and resulted in the planting of a considerable acreage in other favored localities. On the F. A. Bliss ranch, at an elevation of 1200 feet, the avocado is being successfully cultivated and the orchard is said to be the first in the State. At a considerably lower elevation Wm. Chappelow has developed a variety of the avocado which is described in a recent year book of the Department of Agriculture as "The Chappelow" and is recomended for its hardiness and flavor.

The lower levels of the district are devoted to berries, gardening, poultry raising and general farming.

The cultivation of winter rhubarb deserves special mention because of its growing importance. Returns from experimental tracts for three years were so satisfactory, averaging $300 per acre, that a stock company has been formed to plant 50 acres, principally on the Jos. R. Loftus ranch and adjacent holdings.

Besides agriculture, the only enterprise of note is that of the San Gabriel River Rock Company, whose investment in plants and equipment is $50,000. The output of the rock crusher is 1000 tons per day. The company controls several hundred acres of river "wash" adjacent to the Santa Fe, Southern Pacific and Pacific Electric lines and the supply of material is unlimited since winter floods replace all that is removed during the dry season. As cement construction increases, operations of the company will be steadily extended and it is evident that the heretofore condemned detritus of the river will yield more gold than was ever taken from the mountain mines or washed from the river placers. Officers of the company are B. R. Davisson, president; C. E. Slosson vice president and manager; C. C. Bowerman, secretary.

THE WATER SUPPLY.

In its water supply Duarte is exalted among all the tribes that dwell amid the hills. No other section similarly located is comparably favored. Its proportion of the San Gabriel River is sufficient for all ordinary years and a well supply of equal quantity at a high level among the foothills has not been drawn upon in years. A subterranean channel of the San Gabriel, in the eastern section of the district, affords a potential supply almost equal to that of the great submerged reservoirs of the coastal plain. Irrigation and domestic systems traverse the entire district.

In scenic attraction Duarte is peculiarly rich in striking contrasts. Mountain range and valley meet with scant intervention of friendly foothills and heights rise abruptly from the plain. The contour of the mountains is such that from any point in the district the splendid peaks of San Antonio, San Gorgonio, San Jacinto and Wilson are visible. San Gabriel Cañon, the fair road to the high hills, with its ever extended invitation to a holiday, debouches here and the sinuous course of the river is traceable across the valley to the pass in Puente Hills where it finds outlet to the sea. Fish Cañon is a smaller pleasure ground with easy trails looping around to Monrovia Cañon or on to Rincon. With its forested glades, precipitous walls, and noisy brook it is a diminutive summary of cañon fascination. Being near the Pacific Electric it is much frequented by Angeleños. In itself, Duarte pleases the eye with vine-clad homes and well kept avenues bordered by thrifty orchards. A keen appreciation of the beautiful environment is manifested in the location of ranch homes. Wherever opportunity permitted, the builder occupied elevated sites.

The social life of Duarte is the simple, wholesome intercourse that naturally results where extremes of station, wealth or poverty are wanting. There are no distinctive organizations of purely social character, the great majority of residents affiliating with Monrovia clubs and, in civic enterprises, coöperating with the Monrovia Board of Trade.

The number of pupils does not warrant the maintenance of a High School, but a very large proportion of grammar school graduates attend the Mon-

GETS BUSINESS, MILLIONS OF IT

Traffic Manager Stubbs King of Freight Rustlers.

Sixteen Thousand Miles of Railroad His Field.

Right Selection of Associates Secret of Success.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept 16.—A mighty getter of traffic insufficiently describes John C. Stubbs. King of freight rustlers, a rough phrase, also lack in expressive quality.

Superlatives seem feeble when applied to a man who is obtaining business for 16,000 miles of railroad and for water lines that are 4000 miles in length. Practically he is responsible for interest on a mountain of bonds and for dividends on an ocean of shares, not to mention the wages of many thousands of men at work. In round numbers the freight he procures pays his watchful and mathematical employers the immense sum of $200,000,000 a year for carriage.

Business, big business—individualizing it and giving it the faculties of judgment and speech—has declared that Edward H. Harriman was as conspicuously eminent and potential in transportation as Grant was in battle, or as Rockefeller is in coal oil and gasoline, or as Morgan is in iron, steel, agricultural implements, life insurance and banks. Eliminating himself from the case, Stubbs said: "And he had a woman's intuition in choosing his assistants."

MARSHALS TO A NAPOLEON.

Then Stubbs mentioned Robert Scott Lovett, now president of all the Harriman lines, and Julius Kruttschnitt, director of maintenance and operation, both of whom, along with himself, were marshals to the Napoleon who captured the West by brilliant hand-to-hand fighting, and was besieging the East when he died.

A long, slender man, of the John James Ingalls type, but not so thin, and of the Frank S. Black type, but not quite so tall; gray-eyed, nervous, shrewd, incisive, intense and cyclonic, Stubbs is logical, philosophical and thoroughly informed. Facts fill his magazines. He always has the figures for his big and little guns. When other traffic men generalize, he specifies and mows them down. Meanwhile, he can recite the railroad laws of Congress backward and forward, and point to court decisions by paragraphs and pages. He smiles at his own success. "I know," he says, "how to select my associates. Besides, I have worked right along for important companies."

When Collis P. Huntington established his celebrated Sunset Route—rail from San Francisco to New Orleans and water thence to New York—Stubbs was sent to the front after traffic. He remained in California and hired Edwin Hawley, now president of several railways, as eastern agent. Stubbs and Hawley were probably the greatest team of freight-getters the world has even known. A differential of 10 cents a hundred pounds was given shippers because of the ocean haul between New York and New Orleans. Theoretically freight would be slow, but Stubbs put it through from East to West in eighteen days and from West to East in twenty-one days. Once, a trainload of high-priced drygoods went into a Texas ditch. Ten acres of broken boxes littered the right of way.

ROAD PAID THE BILLS.

"Duplicate your orders," Stubbs told the San Francisco merchants, "and the Southern Pacific will pay the bills. We shall sell the wreckage for what it will bring."

Thus Stubbs and Hawley obtained the freight and kept the freight, although the all-rail lines compelled them to abolish the slight difference in rates. Running along with his other work, Stubbs is said to have counted all the orchards on the Pacific Coast and to have measured the ore in the mines of half a dozen States. Likewise, he discovered that shippers have infirmities like the rest of mankind. Consequently the study of human nature has engaged a considerable part of his time.

The greedy eye and the devious eye are read by the signs of their shifts and blinks. With lawyers, he talks like a lawyer; with farmers, like a lecturer on agriculture, and with a professional interviewer, most candidly and courteously in all respects. One feels that John C. Stubbs is a normal human being with a mighty good head. Nothing further need be said. He spoke of Huntington and Harriman and the national characters he has met, but, without realizing it, he was infinitely more interesting, on being urged for details, when he referred to himself. I told him I heard he was born in Ashland, O., in 1847.

"Yes," he answered, "and I lived at Ashland until I was fourteen years old. I have never lived there since, but I am to be buried there when I die. The babies I knew are now old men and women, but they remember me and I remember them, and Ashland is the spot for me—when I am dead."

NEVER LIVED ON A FARM.

"Did you wear cowhide boots and a hickory shirt and live on a farm?"

"No sir; I am not an aspirant for public office, and have no hesitancy, therefore, in saying that my father was a cabinet maker, having his own shop and selling his own furniture. Several members of the family were well to do and a Stubbs made steel in Pennsylvania long ago. In some way my father fell heir to $1000. Being a rich man, as he and his neighbors thought, he engaged in boots and shoes with a partner, who broke the firm by the extravagance of his personal habits. The failure, so far as I can learn, did not bring on a general panic.

"With the coming of the Civil War, my father went into the army as quartermaster of Col. James A. Garfield's Forty-second Regiment of Infantry. He sent home, from Camp Chase, at Columbus, the State capital, for our horse. We were sixteen miles from a railroad. I rode the horse to Columbus, 100 miles distant. After that I lived no more at Ashland. I went to the front with my father. My first work for pay, except hoeing corn in Ohio, was on the levee at Nashville, where

BIG DITCH OF TARR COMPANY.

Will Supply Power for Old Gravel Deposits.

E. W. Tarr's Victory Over Labor Council.

Balaklala Smelter to Open in Short Time.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 16.—The Tarr Mining Company, composed of prominent San Francisco and Los Angeles financial interests, is rapidly proceeding with the construction of its big ditch, which will supply power for the extensive operation of the famous "Paddy" Campbell gravel deposits, near Smartsville, Yuba county. The ditch, when completed, will have an approximate length of thirty-five miles, and runs about six feet wide throughout the entire length. The depth will exceed four feet. An immense volume of water will be carried throughout the entire year, but the company plans to use the water for generating electricity, which will be employed to drive a large plant of machinery at the mines.

The Campbell deposits were formerly among the richest auriferous producers in California, and for many years yielded fabulous returns. Water troubles and lack of ambition on the part of the owner, gradually resulted in the reduction of developments, until the famous properties were practically abandoned, only enough work being done to hold the titles. Under the old régime "hydraulicking" was employed, and the enforcement of the regulations against this form of mining seemed to discourage the owner from effective operations.

After Campbell's death, the heirs became interested in the further development of the property, and arrangements were perfected about three years ago whereby the famous group passed into the hands of E. W. Tarr and associates, for a large consideration. Manager Tarr early displayed his stability by defeating the Labor Council of Nevada county, when the latter sought to compel the company to discharge its Greek laborers and employ American help. Tarr called the bluff by offering employment to all Americans at $2.50 per day, and the laborites came back by demanding $3. This was refused and a committee went down to warn Tarr that unless he obeyed the mandates of the council, he would not be allowed to continue work. Tarr declined to allow outside influences to dictate his course of procedure, and after making many dire promises of what would happen, the discomfited labor leaders retired in confusion. No further attempt has since been made to hamper the operations of the company, and many of the men who formerly scored the management are now glad to receive employment at its hands.

It is expected to complete the big ditch before next spring, and with its inception, it is confidently believed that the Tarr properties will become the largest gravel producers in Central California. According to present plans of the company, much of the mining will be conducted by the dredging method. The company has designed a new type of machine for the handling and washing of the gold-bearing gravel, and expects to commence heavy production early in the coming year.

Deep Mining at Gold Leaf.

The Gold Leaf Consolidated Mining Company of Los Angeles, operating the Gold Leaf, White Oak and other properties in the Lower Springs district, about four miles from Redding, reports the intersection of the main ledge at the 400-foot point. The vein shows the same richness and strength as prevails on the 300 level, with every indication of persisting to great depth. It is understood that it is the intention of the company to continue the shaft to greater depth, and to open territory below the present workings. A seventy-five-horse-power compressor was recently installed to aid rapid developments, and five drills are in commission.

The high-grade silicious ores of this property are in constant demand by the Shasta county copper smelters, and steady shipments, averaging two and three cars per week, are being made to the Balaklala smelter. It is expected that this will be largely increased as soon as the smelter resumes operation, as the Gold Leaf is now in a position to maintain large shipments to the big plant. Franklin J. Griffiths of Los Angeles is understood to be heavily interested.

Smelter to Reopen.

It is officially announced that the Balaklala smelter at Coram will resume operations on September 20. One furnace will be blown in at first, the second to go into action shortly after. An immense quantity of copper ore from the Balaklala and Bully Hill mines is awaiting treatment, while large consignments of silicious ore are stored at the ore bunkers. The Cottrell fume-controller has been practically completed. The transformers have not yet been received from the East, but the Northern Electric Power Company has offered to loan transformers to the Balaklala Company until the machinery arrives. This will enable the management to resume operations sooner than expected.

Big Things at Bunker Hill.

The Bunker Hill Company, operating near Jackson, recently intersected the main vein in the 1950 level, 200 feet below the main workings. The ore body shows a width of twelve feet, of which eight feet runs over $8 per ton, and the remaining four feet from $10 to $12 per ton. In every respect the vein equals, if not surpasses, the ore developed in the upper levels.

Ground was broken last week for twenty new stamps to the mill, which will bring the total capacity up to forty stamps. The company has been disbursing regular dividends of 5 cents per month, and with the completion of the plant expects to double this rate without much effort. Stock is in demand at $7 per share on the San Francisco Exchange, with holders declining to consider offers. Considerable stock is held by Southern Californians.

Will Raise Dredger.

The Consolidated Gold Dredging Company has ordered several large pumps to assist in the raising of its big dredge, which sunk in the Sacramento River three miles above Redding, a few days ago. The dredger rests on a sand bar in sixteen feet of water, with about sixteen feet of the hull showing above the surface of the river. The dredge has been at work throughout the summer, and the clean-ups have been very satisfactory. Superintendent W. D. Egilbert is particularly anxious to float the big boat before early rains cause a rise in the river. Southern California capital is interested. It is not thought that the hull is seriously damaged.

Will Use Thrashing Engine.

The Ft. Bidwell Consolidated Milling Company has decided to use a large threshing engine, secured from a nearby farm, to furnish motive power for its recently completed fifty-ton custom mill. This plant is located in the Hoag district, and was designed to be operated by water, but the streams in the district are too low this fall to furnish the required power. Hence the bringing in of the threshing engine.

Activities throughout the district are pronounced, and several Los Angeles interests are particularly in evidence. Lack of adequate milling facilities continues the principal obstacle militating against the rapid development of a number of properties. Several companies have recently reported improvements in the condition of the ore bodies, while in several instances bonanza ore is being extracted.

Highland Mine Changes Hands.

The Highland mine, near Etna Mills, Siskiyou county, has passed into the hands of H. Mattern and associates for a cash consideration said to exceed $200,000. It is reported that San Francisco, Los Angeles, Nevada and Oregon people are interested. The Highland is one of the big properties of the county, and the new owners plan to expend fully $200,000 in immediate developments. A large force of men will be put to work at once, and a modern milling plant erected. The ore bodies are noted for the high gold contents, considerable bonanza ore being frequently taken out. The deal is considered the most important in the annals of Siskiyou mining.

MEXICO.

MINING INDUSTRY PROMINENT IN INDEPENDENCE CELEBRATION.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 16.—Twenty gold-silver-lead producers of Mexico have paid dividends within the last eight months aggregating $2,846,837, United States currency, this total not including numerous velvet distributions from diggings and metallurgical plants owned by individuals, partnerships and close corporations. If these items were taken into account the sum would probably be double. The American Smelting and Refining Company has paid $4,125,000, gold, in dividends within this same period and a no inconsiderable share of these profits were earned by the trust's plants in Mexico.

In the one month of August four Mexican propositions paid out bread-money to the mark of $199,494, these being the Dolores, $88,000; Amparo, $60,139; Lucky Tiger, $35,750, and El Rayo, $15,601.

Mining is taking a prominent part in the independence celebration. Among all the magnificent floats in the recent allegorical parade none eclipsed the mines display on wheels and among the thousands of wealthy visitors occupying costly suites at the fashionable hotels the miner is greatly in evidence. On September 11 there was unveiled a tablet commemorative of the foundation of the Royal Seminary of Mining and of the students of that institution who gave their lives to the cause of national liberty in Mexico. The tablet was unveiled by Gov. Escandon of the Federal district and the oration of the day was delivered by an alumnus of the National School of Engineers.

Many mining men of Mexico and the United States, gathered now in the capital for the freedom anniversary festivities, will linger until after the climacteric events of September 15 and 16 and will soon after that start for Los Angeles, to be present at the opening of the American Mining Congress, September 26.

In a recent article dealing with the powerful and beneficient influence exerted by Americans and American capital upon mining in Mexico, Dr. James Douglas of the Phelps Dodge syndicate, asserts and proves that United States gold is building most of the Mexican railroads and metallurgical works and is operating most of the mines that produce gold, silver and the inferior metals; that the average annual investment in Mexico diggings from 1892 to 1907 was $7,000,000, gold; that of this total American capital contributed 44 per cent.; that in that period United States money built almost all of the metallurgical works; that in 1902 fully $80,000,000 of Yankee coin was invested in mines in Mexico, since which year the figure has rapidly increased; that the influence of American capital can not be measured alone in terms of dollars and cents, but also by effects upon the industrial life of this republic, and that an important result of it all is the closer binding of international friendship between the two republics through a mutuality of interests.

A. W. Donly, Canadian trade commissioner, has advised his department to look into the feasibility of Canadians' erecting big smelter in Mexico, especially in the mineral commonwealths of the Pacific Coast belt, arguing that Mexico is at present short on some classes of coal which Canada has in abundance and is long on ores that Canada cannot boast. He shows that annually the reduction works of this republic import great tonnages of coal from Pennsylvania, fuel of certain kinds that are not produced by the mines of Coahuila and other States of Mexico, while there lie dormant vast reserves of ore that can be smelted at enormous profit by plants built by Canadian capital and consuming Canadian coal.

CHIHUAHUA TO THE FRONT.

Viewed from the mines standpoint, Chihuahua possesses advantages over some other mineral commonwealths of the Mexican Union. Mining operators of California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas are among the foremost Americans in Mexican activities and Chihuahua, being one of the five Mexico States along the international border, offers to visitors the great El Paso port of entry and the central artery of the National Railway system coursing the republic, with branches and spurs to every important district. Its easy accessibility is largely in its favor.

In connection with the mills and smelters and the coal to make their wheels go round, it is noteworthy that there is in process of installation in Chihuahua a hydro-electric plant that will furnish 90,000 horse power to the mining camps of Parral, Santa Rosalia, Jimenez, Santa Barbara, Minas Neuvas, Naica, Santa Eulalia and other districts. On the Conchos River, nineteen miles west of Santa Rosalia, the Mexican Northern Power Company will have finished by September of 1912 the building of the largest dam and formation of the largest artificial lake in the world, to impound seventy billions of cubic feet of water, to back up the stream of the Conchos River a distance of thirty-six miles, to spread a reservoir over an area of sixty-eight square miles of water surface, to cost, for the dam and hydro-electric plant alone, about $10,000,000 in United States currency and eventually to irrigate a million acres of soil now useless. Provision of this power will work a revolution in mining and reduction methods and profits in camps surrounding the electric energy source within a radius of many miles in every direction.

Parral's production, according to the records of shipments to smelters and local ore treatment, has been 10,600 and 11,290 tons, respectively, in the last two weeks, approximately one-third of the output going to the smelters and the remainder being passed through the Parral mills. Throughout the camp there is a revivication of old workings and exploration of new territory that promise greatly-increased production, especially after the district has been supplied with abundant and cheap power from the Conchos plant.

El Refugio silver mine in Parral has been sold by A. J. McQuatters of Dallas, Tex., to J. F. Moffett of Boston, and his associates of Watertown, N. Y., and Montreal, Can., organized as El Refugio Mining Company, with a capital of $1,250,000 (gold.) With the diggings the incumbents have acquired a mill on the premises.

Six score men are at work through two shafts on the estate of the Veta Colorado Mining and Smelter Company, Parral, where development is strenuously progressing and where other large crews are building a company mill and power plant. The cyanide works will have an initial capacity of 300 tons a day and this will later be enhanced to 500 tons daily. The deeper shaft has reached a point 700 feet vertically from the surface and the other has dropped to the 600 level, there being extensive laterals from both, drifting in or driving for proved bodies of rich ore.

The first unit of 333 tons daily capacity of the Palmilla cyanide mill, eventually to be of 1000 tons' capacity per day, will go into commission before the first day of 1911. This will be the largest cyanide plant at Parral and one of the greatest in the country. It will treat the company's ores and also engage in custom service.

On the mining estates of the Alvarado Consolidated Mines Company, to which the Palmilla corporation is subsidiary, powerful pumping and hoisting equipment is being implanted and an aërial tramway is being constructed to the reduction works from the main working tunnel.

The Tajo of Parral is shipping monthly about 3500 tons of its total output of 4500 tons of sulphide gold-silver-lead ore, in which is also an occasional dash of copper. On the Prieta mine the Parral Consolidated Mines Company has begun operating a thirty tons' mill.

Virtually all details are arranged for the agreed merger of the Dolores Mines Company and El Rayo Mines Company with the Mines Company of America, whose stock will be listed on the New York exchange. The properties are near Santa Barbara, Chihuahua. When the Mines Company stock has been raised in par value from $1 to $10 per share, each share of Dolores will draw in exchange for the merger securities ten shares of the old issue of Mines Company of America. Ten shares of El Rayo will be accepted for seven shares of the new merger stock. Prominent operators of Illinois and New York control the coalition, among them being John J. Mitchell of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank, Isaac L. Ellwood, now deceased; John Lambert of the Illinois Steel Company, and Harry S. Black of the Fuller Construction Company, New York. The total outstanding shares of the Mines Company will be about 900,000, of a par value of $9,000,000 (gold.) El Rayo, mining and milling about 5000 tons of ore a month, is piling up monthly profits at the average rate of about $55,000. Dolores is turning out bullion worth an average of approximately $75,000 a month and concentrates of almost equal value. La Dura, recently acquired by the merger crowd, is believed to possess earning qualities equal to the best of the other bonanzas.

The Sierra Consolidated Mines Company, organized about one year ago, has issued a report covering operations from November 1 of 1909 to July 1 of 1910. The mining properties, seventy-six claims, are at or near Ocampo, Rayon district, Chihuahua, and the corporation also owns 100,000 acres of unproved territory in the same neighborhood, besides water rights, mill sites, machinery, concessions, personal property and town lots in Ocampo. The home office is at Duluth, Minn. Some of the claims have produced gold and silver liberally in the past and will be explored for values at lower levels. On June 30 development work under the new management had blocked out incidentally about 45,000 tons of average $10 ore. Work is proceeding at a cost of about $15,000 a month. The average working force is 170 men, of whom 150 are natives.

New Yorkers have a deal on for the purchase of the Camdemaña silver mines near Ocampo. D. W. Smyth of New York and W. R. Morley of New Mexico are developing a promising gold proposition south of Ocampo. Edward J. Davis of Pittsburgh is negotiating with W. H. Wyman of Massachusetts and William P. Miller of San Francisco for the sale to these two of the Sahuayacan Mining Company's properties and mill at Sahuayacan, in Ocampo district. The prospective buyers have retained as their expert Col. William A. Farish of New York, and have made an examination of the diggings.

A thirty days' experimental run of the new company cyanide mill at the diggings of the Yoquivo Development Company, operating at Yoquivo Rayon district, in Southwestern Chihuahua, has proved eminently satisfactory. Shipments are also going forward regularly from the diggings, a recent carload lot having shown returns exceeding $20,000 (gold.) The railroad station nearest the mines is Bocoyna, twenty miles distant, on the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient.

Within six months, according to contracts awarded, there will be in commission a 200-ton mill at the Rosario mine in Guadalupe, Calvo, Chihuahua. The principal lead of the Rosario group ranges in width from sixty to 150 feet, with four distinct high-grade shoots between the walls and vast tonnages of truck that averages around $10 the ton.

The Candelaria Mining Company is treating its diggings, in San Pedro district of Chihuahua, to more than a billion pounds of new machinery and is building a railway spur from San Pedro station to its Leon mine, where powerful pumping equipment is being installed. That company is operating a six-mile spur from San Pedro to the old camp of Candelaria.

Adjoining the great Congreso mine of the Candelaria group is the San Pablo, which L. T. Bryant is equipping with machinery for deep development of the gold-silver-lead reserves. Patrick Durack is opening some life-sized stopes of rich ore on his group in the Escandidas Mountains, south of San Pedro.

CHLORIDE.

U. S. TREASURY MINE ACTIVE.

CONTRACTS MADE FOR SINKING ON TWO SHAFTS.

This Work Is for the Double Purpose of Development and Getting a Water Supply—Big Ore Bodies in Sight—Work on Other Properties in the District.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

CHLORIDE (N. M.) Sept. 16.—A contract has been awarded to Lewis Orear for 100 feet of sinking in United States Treasury shaft No. 1 and for 100 feet of upraising from the breast of north level No. 2 to connect with the bottom of White Eagle shaft No. 1. Work has started and is progressing rapidly. The shaft sinking is for the double purpose of development and water supply, and recent increase in the flow of water in No. 2 level both north and south justifies the expectation that an additional 100 feet of sinking will supply all the water needed for mining operations and for the proposed mill, inasmuch as well No. 1, the company's main source of water supply, is now full and flowing strong.

When the upraise to the White Eagle shaft is finished it will complete the first unit of development work at this property and will place the mine in position to supply a 100-ton mill for several years. It is understood that the ore body is showing extraordinary width in No. 2 level. One crosscut driven toward the hanging wall is said to have been run nearly forty feet through ore of excellent grade without cutting the hanging wall; and it is known that the largest and richest ore bodies in this mine have always been toward the footwall. The footwall side of No. 2 level shows excellent ore. In south level No. 2, a crosscut has been driven about twenty-one feet toward the footwall without encountering the wall, and it is reported that the ore disclosures in this crosscut have been exceptionally rich.

The top of the big dump shows ore of bonanza grade from the lowest workings. A six-ton run of United States Treasury dump ore was recently made at the Morrison crusher located at the Keystone property in the north end of the district, and it is understood that a considerable portion of the pulp is en route to the headquarters' office of the company for preliminary mill tests. The entire field staff of the company, including the general manager and consulting engineer, have been in conference here for almost thirty days and it is understood that they are much pleased with conditions in general.

The Patrick property, including several lots and two houses, has just been purchased for hotel purposes and a new hotel has opened up under the management of Mr. and Mrs. Hogue, formerly of Colorado Springs. It is understood that extensive additions will be made to the buildings and that a plaza and other attractive features will be added.

The Silver Monument property, whose operations have been handicapped by lack of water, is again in full operation, following recent heavy rains. Manager Hollinger states that he has abundant water and that there will probably be no further interruptions in the work.

Work on the Black Range Reduction Company's mill is progressing slowly, most of the workers having recently been laid off. It is announced, however, that the mill will be ready to receive ore in about sixty days.

Work has been actively resumed on the Elephant Butte dam. It is reported that the government will have 1500 men at work within a short time and it is expected that the railroad from Engle to the dam will be completed by the first of January.

NATIONAL IS BOOMING.

MUCH HIGH-GRADE ORE.

The Stall Brothers' lease at National, Nevada, is without doubt the richest gold property ever opened up in the State of Nevada. About a year ago the Stall Brothers took a lease from the National Mining Company and began the sinking of a shaft. At a depth of sixty-eight feet they encountered the first rich ore shoot and took out $80,000. The ore at the surface assayed from $2 to $4.

Some of the high-grade ore runs $50 per pound, and runs from one inch to fifteen inches in width and next to the foot-wall. At present their shaft is down 450 feet and during the month of August they took out $485,000 in this high-grade ore, besides piling up on the lump much ore that runs from $100 to $1100 to the ton. As they have six months to remove the ores from the dump after the expiration of their lease, all efforts at present are being spent in removing the very richest ore, which is treated at National and the bullion sent to the mint at San Francisco.

During the last eight months they have taken out something over $1,000,000 in high-grade ore and have several millions more blocked out. This lease, it is stated by those acquainted with mining in that State, is the richest ground that has yet been discovered in that State of high-grade camps. National is a young but growing camp, having a population of 500 and growing rapidly. It is located seventy-two miles northeast of Winnemucca, which is one of the principal towns of that section, being located upon the Southern Pacific and Western Pacific Railroads. A stage and auto line make daily trips to National from Winnemucca. There have been many new and important strikes made recently and present indications are that the camp has come to stay. Much development work is going on and several other properties give much promise for the future.

A lease upon the same vein the Stall Brothers are working has recently been taken over by G. E. Tomlinson, H. D. MacMaster and H. W. Boyer of this city, but formerly of Goldfield, and S. L. McClelland of National, and work has already been started upon a tunnel, the work being prosecuted day and night. The ground is ideal for a tunnel, which follows the vein into the mountain. This is considered a most valuable piece of ground and indications are that other high-grade ore shoots will be encountered upon this property. It is located about 1500 feet from the Stall Brothers' lease and upon the same vein. Assays at the surface run from $2 to $14.25. National is on the eve of a boom and this fall and winter it is expected that the camp will be heard from in a most satisfactory manner.

IN THE EARTH.

RARE MINERALS, METALLURGY AND CHEMISTRY

This Department is not conducted for pay. Its object is to convey reliable information of interest and value to the public, and it is not for the private benefit of any miner, collector, speculator or prospector. Correspondents are particularly cautioned to take careful note of the statements and injunctions contained in the paragraphs below:

(1.) Specimens must be small and bear a tag giving name and address of sender, and the general—not the exact—locality from whence the specimen was taken, also the name of it as nearly as the sender knows. Send also with the specimen, a clearly-written letter briefly describing the find and what the finder wishes done with it. The letter must be properly dated and plainly signed.

Letter and specimen must be in one package, not in separate inclosure.

(2.) No attention will be paid to anonymous letters or to letters signed merely with initials.

(3.) No examinations of samples or specimens will be made in cases where The Times may decide that the specimen and inquiry are not of public interest. This office does not undertake to perform the work of an assay office.

(4.) Inquiries relative to matters of purely personal interest will not be answered.

(5.) When no response to an inquiry made or specimens sent appears in these columns, the inquirer will understand that his inquiry does not come within the purview of this department.

(6.) It is impossible to return specimens, as they must necessarily be destroyed or impaired in the process of analysis.

Address, invariably, The Times.

Native Arsenic and Arsenopyrite.

CITY OF MEXICO (Mex.) Aug. 18.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I take the Sunday Times here through News Company, and read with much interest your mining articles, and determinations of specimens, and herewith mail you some samples from Bella Madama mine.

Please state if No. 1 is tellurium (telluride of silver, or gold, or both,) some here claim it is, and some it isn't; if not what is it? Please settle the controversy.

No. 2 sylvanite, please state if this is the genuine article, if not what is the analysis? Assays from this ore gave us $4315.20 per ton ore (in gold.)

No. 2½ "San Sebastian," please state if it has any ruby silver or native silver, from croppings.

Nos. 3 and 4 are better specimens and for your cabinet. Have asked Mr. E. E. P. to call and inspect, you are at liberty to give them to him, if he wants them.

Yours, etc. W. B.

ANSWER.—It is pretty hard to figure out for whom Nos. 3 and 4 are intended, but as the editor of this department is not in Los Angeles at present, and the results of analysis having been rather "hard" on the samples there is but little left for anybody.

Sample No. 1 carries no tellurium values, microscopic arsenpyrite, pyrite and chalcopyrite are scattered sparingly throughout the mass, pyrolcite is present. No. 2 is a variety of No. 1. No. 2½ is a sample of "base ore." You direct us that it is "for determination of ruby silver and native silver;" no ruby silver is in the mass, and if silver is present it must be among the sulphides. In this sample (No. 2½) we find microscopical mica, galena, pyrite, chalcopyrite and arsenopyrite present, with zinc trace, and tellurium absent.

Nos. 3 and 4—One sample is botryoidal, and the other specimen, is in somewhat acicular crystals. The botryoidal specimen is native arsenic, and the somewhat acicular sample is arsenopyrite, with not a trace of tellurium in either sample.

There is absolutely no sylvanite, or [illegible] of tellurium in any sample, submitted by you.

It is no easy matter to segregate and test so large a number of samples as represented in your "bunch."

With the exception of samples 3 and 4, there appears to be but little that would be confused with tellurium, the specimens referred to, at sight with the naked eye, very much resemble nagyagite (lead telluride,) and tellurium, but under a powerful miscroscope crystals of arsenopyrite appear clearly.

Nagyagite is soluble in nitric acid, leaving a residue of sulphur, while arsenopyrite (mispickel) dissolves in strong nitric acid with separation of sulphur and arsenious acid (arsenic.)

Native tellurium is hexagonal; "primary form an acute rhombohedron. Occurs in six-sided prisms, with the terminal edges replaced by single planes, generally massive and granular. Color and streak tin-white passing into lead-gray. Luster metallic, shining. Brittle. Yields to the knife. Hardness 2 to 2.5. Specific gravity 6.1 to 6.3."

Tellurium fuses readily b.b. burns with a greenish flame, and almost entirely volatilizes in white vapor of telluric acid, the fumes are pungent.

Mispickel is 5.5 to 6 in hardness, gives sparks when struck with a steel hammer, and emits a garlic odor when "sparking," as it were. B.B. emits strong arsenical fumes, and yields a magnetic globule.

Ores of tellurium when played upon with the b.b., flame yield globules of gold color (sylvanite hessite, petzite, calaverite; and even nagyagite is somewhat confusing in color when fused or "roasted.")

The file streak of mispickel is a black-gray.

Steatite.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you a sample of a mineral from —— county. It is found in a stratum about two feet deep near the —— hills; it dissolves in water, acts very much like soap —— on exposure to the air. What is it?

Yours truly, W. L. A.

ANSWER.—By mistake, the envelope containing your neat typewritten letter was opened at the business office of The Times; the spaced lines were "yanked" off and missing when the letter reached the writer. There is no question about the bona fide part of your communication, however, and therefore it will be replied to without approximate locality stated.

The minerals you submit are two samples of steatite (soapstone,) one white in color and the other one brown-red. Neither sample, dissolves in water, however. Material represented by the samples will make pigment (paint;) in some heathen countries the natives have it on their bills of fare, baked and raw.

Crystallized Specimens.

BISBEE (Ariz.) Aug. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I am sending you seven samples of ore, all of them crystallized.

No. 1 comes from a stringer in this immediate locality. I call it pink spar; am I right? What is the rock around crystals? No. 2 may be lime-tungsten and comes from my claim in the Tombstone district. No. 3 comes from the outcrop of mineral of some kind on government land west of Fairbanks, I take it to be iron-tungsten. No. 4 comes from a claim in which I am part owner and my partner thinks it is molybdenite, or graphite; the claim is near Nacozari, Mex. No. 5 is a strange rock, it must be spar of some kind but it is softer than quartz, it may be crystallized kaolin and comes from near place where I got No. 1 sample. What is No. 6? They tell me it is a telluride of some kind and it comes from twenty-two miles north of Nogales on the Arizona side. No. 7 comes from near No. 6, is it crystallized topaz?

read once in your mineral column "the Earth" that samples sent you not exceed three in number, but going to the hills again in or four weeks my partner and I will not have a chance to come to town again for at least seven months, and maybe you will help us along anyhow.

Thanking you in advance for an answer. Yours truly, B. & L.

ANSWER.—Under the circumstances stated by you seven samples are not too many; but as a matter of fact three samples from one correspondent at one sitting, as it were, should be a sufficient quantity.

No. 1 is a rose-red fluorite (fluor-spar) in small crystals in an impure matrix of massive fluorite. No. 2 is not scheelite (tungstate of lime,) it is a very pure specimen of calcite (carbonate of lime) crystallized, and possesses the quality of double-refraction to a marked degree; it is pure enough, and transparent enough, for optical uses. No. 3 is not wolframite, it is spathic-iron ore in large cube form. No. 4 is molybdenite in hexagonal crystal. No. 5 is not crystallized kaolin (kaolinite,) it is a silicate of lime, when "it is rubbed or warmed it becomes phosphorescent in the dark," and gelatinizes in hydrochloric acid. The sample is probably wollastonite. No. 6 carries no tellurium, the streaked microscopical sulphide in the mass is arsenopyrite (arsenical pyrote.) No. 7 is not topaz, it is a crystal of amethystine quartz.

Asbestiform Actinolite.

AZUSA, Aug. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please state in your "In the Earth" column if the sample inclosed is asbestos. It comes from San Gabriel district. Yours truly, E. F. T.

ANSWER: The sample is asbestos, but not the high-grade serpentine asbestos (chrysotile.) If you have a quantity of the mineral, sufficient for commercial purposes, there should be no difficulty in finding a market for it.

Stream Tin and Scheelite.

SEATTLE (Wash.) Aug. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I send you a sample of rock from Bonanza Creek, on the east side of Norton Sound, Alaska. What is it. From the same vicinity I panned some coarse gravel and the concentrates—less the gold—I inclose in this package. Please give me an analysis of the two specimens in your "In the Earth" column and oblige, yours fraternally, "NOME."

ANSWER. Glad to hear from you. The whitish-gray mineral is high-grade calcium tungstate. The concentrates carry iron values with approximately 65 per cent. tin present.

Lava and Iron Oxides.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] These specimens found in great quantity, well defined ledge, and 120 miles north of Los Angeles (in Kern county.) Please give your opinion is containing gold or if any other valuable metal. Yours sincerely, F. F. M.

ANSWER: No. 1 yellow iron oxide with trace of lead. No. 2 quartz and feldspar with iron oxides. No. 3 lava with iron oxides. For gold and silver values kindly consult reliable assayers.

Clay With Phosphoric Acid.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 19.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The following may seem like a foolish question, however, if you can possibly find room in your valuable "In the Earth" column to answer it I will greatly appreciate it:

"Would it be generally considered that phosphoric acid up to about 30 per cent. be a detrimental element in a clay to be used for a Portland cement?" Thanking you, I remain yours very truly, N. B. C.

ANSWER: Your question is a thoroughly proper one, and it gives us much pleasure to reply to your polite communication.

It is observed that your question is a quoted one. Clay carrying about 30 per cent. phosphoric acid, and to be used for Portland cement, would indicate that the clay comes from a locality at which cement could be manufactured at a profit, such a construction is patent on the face of your letter.

At this particular time of interest in national mineral resources, when high-grade "phosphates" are being securely withheld from the fertilizer trust, the question naturally arises: Why make cement with 30 per cent. phosphates?

If you have such clay in quantity you are indeed fortunate, and if it has passed muster as fit for cement, then, it could not carry any matter deleterious for phosphates that could not be eliminated.

Very frequently correspondents submit minerals with the information that they "come from a deposit of phosphorous;" not so in fact. Phosphorous is an element and does not occur in the free state in nature. If one places a bone in the fire and the flames be allowed to "burn" the bone, a porous, white, spongy mass, is obtained, when this mass is powered it represents "bone-ash" of commerce, from bone-ash phosporous can be manufactured, and phosphorous can also be made—by twentieth century methods—from clay carrying 30 per cent. phosphoric acid.

Clay carrying 30 per cent. phosphoric acid would be, decidedly, a detrimental factor in the manufacture of Portland cement. We would like to have samples of the clay and request information on the deposit for the benefit of California.

Malachite and Azurite Present.

PASADENA, Aug. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Please find rock inclosed that I took from large ledge which I found in the foothills a few miles from Glendora. Please state in your "In the Earth" what mineral there is in it and if it would pay to work. Yours truly, C. F. M.

ANSWER: Sample is a siliceous iron oxide, carrying malachite and azurite, as coatings, with low per cent. sulphides of iron, and copper. Not tested for gold.

Given a large quantity of such ore and water, the rock contents could be concentrated, and if gold present, at a profit.

Prospectors' Books.

OLIVE (Cal.) Aug. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] If you consider it of sufficient interest to the public I would like to have you give in your "In the Earth" department the names of some books and where they could be obtained that would be a help to a prospector in Southern California. Yours truly, E. M. C.

ANSWER: If prospecting for gold, commercial minerals and petroleum, anywhere, buy "Osborn's Prospector's Guide and Field Book," obtainable at book sellers. Consult "Mineral Resources of the United States, 1908, Metals and Non-Metals," at public libraries, and obtain "Structural Materials of California," from State Mining Bureau, San Francisco, Cal.

Not Oil Shale.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I hand you herewith some samples of rock taken out of the bottom of a 90-foot well that has recently been put down on a tract of land I own near Hollywood.

I should greatly value your opinion as to what the indications show or indicate, that I may have. Very truly yours, F. C. S.

ANSWER. Samples are three in number. The yellow-white specimen is a siliceous, calciferous, and fossiliferous rock. The gray-blue sample is a fossil—limestone—and should be analyzed for phosphoric acid, if any. The brownish-black sepimen is a siliceous-porphyric rock, with black iron oxide and manganese dioxide present—of no commercial value.

Silky Halotrichite.

OCEAN PARK, Aug. 23.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Local: Kindly analyze inclosed mineral and notify G. & G., Ocean Park, through the "In the Earth" column of The Times and oblige respectfully yours, "G."

ANSWER. We thank you for the very neat manner in which you boxed and marked the samples. Sample No 1 is halotrichite (iron alum,) in silky-looking tufts. No. 2 is potassium nitrate with iron shale; and very much resembles an artificial product of "saltpeter." No. 3 carries a bare trace of asbestos (chrysotile.)

We also find a peculiar compound of potassium nitrate with iron-alum in sample No. 3.

Spathic Iron Cube.

JUNCTION (Ariz.) Aug. 25.—[To the Editor of The Times:] To settle a dispute between me and my partner, I send you a sample which I call garnet; my partner says it is pyrites of iron. Please state in the "In the Earth" just what the cube is; it comes from our claim 15 miles out. Yours gratefully, E. S.

Halotrichite.

LANCASTER (Cal.) Aug. 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Find inclosed a sample mineral I found in the hills near Lancaster. I do not know what it is. Please state in "In the Earth" column the name of the mineral and its value, if any. Yours truly, G. P. C.

ANSWER. Sample in one pasteboard container is impure iron-alum (named mineralogically at the sub-heading.) and the other sample (white) is a purer grade of the mineral.

There should be a market for halotrichite on the Pacific Coast, but manufacturers of the metal aluminum will have none of it as yet; perhaps in the near future they will look with more favor on the California, Nevada and Arizona deposits, or acquire their sulphates from and by a more expensive mineral and chemical process.

Quartz and Iron Oxides.

NOGALES (Ariz.) Aug. 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Secured three miles from Nogales, Sonora, Mexico. Yours truly, F. L. P.

ANSWER. Reddish sample is quartz with iron oxides. Black sample carries micaceous iron ore (a variety of hematite.)

Massive Beryl.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I send you a sample of I do not know what, taken from a claim in which I have an interest and located in Lower California. Will you please give me a description of the rock in your "In the Earth" department, with commercial values. Sincerely yours, J. G.

ANSWER. The sample is massive beryl. Gem-beryl is a variety of emerald, of the same crystalline form, specific gravity and hardness, the only difference being in color. Hardness 7.4 to 8. Specific gravity, 2.6 to 2.73.

Aquamarine and emerald are the only two valuable varieties of beryl. Emerald is green colored beryl, and aquamarine is the bluish beryl. Aquamarine is perfectly transparent; emerald is translucent.

The massive sample you submit could not be used as gem material.

The commercial value of massive beryl, like that of molybdenite varies very much indeed; its powder makes a good abrasive, however.

Chiefly Sulphides.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 22.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Herewith I hand you two samples from the San Bernardino Mountains near Big Bear and Holcomb Valley. Sample No. 1 from a well-defined 4-foot vein encased in porphyry walls. I find by assay that it carries only a trace of gold and a trace of lead 2 ounces, silver per ton ore.

On panning I find a heavy white tailing which I took for carbonate of lead, also, occasionally, a color of gold; but hard to save, as the white tailing appears to be the heaviest. What is this ore?

Sample No. 2 of sulphide ore is from another vein 5 to 6 feet wide, about 2 feet like sample, balance soft iron and porphyry mixed and carrying a little free gold, but assays show only trace of gold and lead with nearly 2 ounces silver per tone ore. What is this sulphide ore, and is it of any value? An early answer in your "In the Earth" columns will much oblige yours truly, C. L. M.

ANSWER. Sample No. 1, white-pearly in color, is a badly crushed and altered rock carrying low per cent. kaolin, silica and mica, the gold color that held back in the pan must have been microscopical in size. There are no metallic values in the rock that would pay if worked on the commercial scale, and the kaolin percentage would not pay to wash out, the rock is in part feldspathic, but it is not pseudomorphic after feldspar of any variety.

Sample No. 2 carries mixed sulphides of iron, copper and arsenic, some little pyrrhotite (magnetic pyrite) is in the mass; the ore is very "base" ore, and we cannot find anything encouraging for a profitable mining venture in any sample submitted.

Baryte.

LIDA (Nev.) Aug. 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Will you kindly tell me in your mineral column what the inclosed mineral specimen is?

I think it is either scheelite or baryte. The rock is from the Lida mining district, and about 20 miles from Goldfield. Thanking you in advance, I remain respectfully, C. H. R.

Borax not Present.

SANTA PAULA, Aug. 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Inclosed sample taken from along small water course near the water edge and located in Ventura county, Cal.

I have always considered this of an alkaloidal nature, but in the last few days I have noticed indications which led me to believe that this substance may appertain to borax. Would be pleased to read your version in "In the Earth." Respectfully yours, W. J. C.

ANSWER. After a thorough blowpipe test and qualitative analysis we find present in your sample chiefly gypsum, lime carbonate and salt (sodium chloride.)

Petroleum Absent.

ALBUQUERQUE (N. M.) Aug. 27.—[To the Editor of The Times:] This shale and sand comes from a locality south of Gallup, N. M. To me both samples, which are average ones, look fine for petroleum.

I will thank you very much if you will test the samples and advise me in your "In the Earth" column what are the results. Yours truly, H. J.

ANSWER. Glad to hear from you. The shale and sand-stone at sight look most promising, but after a thorough fire-test we find no trace of petroleum and barely a trace of ammonia. It would appear that you have struck an "off-color" territory, as it were, for petroleum.

Chromite and Its Uses.

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Aug. 17.—[To the Editor of The Times.] Herewith I hand you a sample of chromite taken from a good, large body of ore, and located in the Santa Lucia range of mountains northwest of this town.

Will you please give me some information on the mineral through the columns of your paper, of which I have been a reader for many years; what I particularly desire to know, I submit to you in the following questions:

(1) Is this average sample commercially valuable chromite?

(2) What is the selling price per ton in the open market?

(3) What are the uses of chromite?

(4) Do you know anything of the history of mining for chromite in this section? Fraternally yours, "W."

ANSWER. Glad to hear from you; thought you were in Europe. (1) Yes. (2) About $10. (3) The uses of chromite are very many; it is used in the manufacture of chromium steel; it is the base for chrome pigments such as chrome green and chrome yellow; in the manufacture of chromates; chrome mordants; for tanning skins; for the separation of ozone by using potassium bichromate in the presence of phosphorus, and one of the chief uses of chromite is in the lining of furnaces.

"Chrome brick is generally made of crude chromite and coal tar, but sometimes of a mixture of chromite with kaolin, with bauxite, with milk of lime, or with other materials. It is being used to a considerable extent for furnace linings on account of its neutral character and refractory nature, and will doubtless be much more extensively used when its value becomes better known.

"These linings, together with those of basic magnesite brick, are gradually replacing linings of refractory acid bricks and highly aluminous silica brick in furnaces used for smelting lead, copper, antimony and similar metals, the slag of which rapidly attacks and eats acid linings. Chromite has the advantage over magnesite in several particulars: (1) Magnesite is basic and is attacked by acid slugs, while chromite is neutral and resists corrosion; (2) magnesite becomes soft when heated to high temperatures, while chromite retains a fair degree of hardness and is in general more resistant to abrasion; (3) chromite is able to stand sudden temperature changes without cracking; (4) magnesite requires more delicate handling than chromite. On account of these qualities chromite would be preferred in all furnace work were it not for the fact that crude chromite ore is twice as expensive as burnt magnesite. Chromite is generally used for furnace linings in the form of bricks, which are held in place by tar mortar, but crushed chromite mixed with tar has been used. When heated the tar burns away, leaving a solid chromite lining. In some instances irregular fragments of chromite have been hammered into place without the use of cementing materials. . . . In 1880 the production of chromite in the United States (in long tons) was 2.288 tons, valued at $27,808; in 1905 the production was but twenty-two tons, valued at $375; since 1905 the production has been slowly increasing until in 1908 the production was 359 tons, valued at $7230."

Since 1880 the entire production of chromite in the United States figures up to 38.889 long tons, valued at $591,-713. "This entire product (added up from figures of the United States Geological Survey by the writer) was obtained from California, with the exception of a small quantity (100 tons) from Maryland in 1885, and from Wyoming in 1908."

(4.) We know but little of the history of mining for chromite in the locality referred to by you, but we quote the matter following: "SAN LUIS OBISPO COUNTY.—Numerous and large bodies of chromite occur in the serpentine areas of San Luis Obispo county, along the southwestern slope of the Santa Lucia Range, northwest of San Luis Obispo. Small deposits of chromite occur in the San Luis Range southwest of San Luis Obispo."

You probably can sort out a better grade chromite than the "average" sample submitted. If so, it will be worth $20 per long ton.

Dividends of less than 10 per cent. a year are not cordially regarded in the business world of Japan. Some industrial companies pay as high as thirty or even forty per cent—spinning companies chiefly.

Japan's tea output in 1909 was worth $6,250,000.

Alfalfa-Dairying
A Fortune-Building Combination At IOWA COLONY

If you are looking for quick and ever-increasing returns in ranching—start alfalfa raising and dairying on Iowa Colony lands. Profitable alfalfa raising depends upon three things—rich sedimentary soil, plenty of cheap water, quick access to market. In these three points, Iowa Colony Lands are unexcelled.

Rich Sedimentary Soil Our lands were once the bottom of old Tulare Lake. This delta soil is a silt deposit that has proven the best obtainable for alfalfa. Eighty feet deep and not a trace of alkali in the entire body. The lake receded years ago, and is now eighteen miles away, twenty-six feet lower than these lands during the highest water mark of 1884. The lands are high and dry.

Free Water With the land goes an abundance of free water from the best irrigation system in the State. Our own steel-cased wells—flowing fourteen inches crown above casings—pour into our immense main ditch an inexhaustible supply of purest water. Laterals from this main ditch feed every single tract.

Easy Access to Market Iowa Colony is midway between Los Angeles and San Francisco—the two largest markets on the Coast. The main line of the Santa Fe runs full length of land, and has a station right on our lands.

Alfalfa now growing on Iowa Colony Lands proves every claim we make.

Farmers in this section are making from $100 to $150 per acre per year from alfalfa alone. Ranchers who have put dairy herds on their alfalfa have incomes as high as $10,000 a year.

These lands are also especially adapted to garden truck, vegetables and fruits of all kinds—except oranges and lemons. Some of the finest orchards and vineyards in the State are on adjoining lands.

Call or write for complete information. Arrange to visit these lands now.

The Most Highly Productive Alfalfa Land in the State at $77 per acre for September and $80 during October. Easy Terms.

Review of The Oil Industry in California

PROBLEMS.

BOTHERATION OF MUCHNESS.

What to Do With Gusher's Paralyzing Output.

hain of Lakes of Oil in the Lakeview Hills.

Distinguished Visitors Expected in Bakersfield.

PECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

BAKERSFIELD, Sept. 16.—The plan eported by the sub-committee of the ndependent Oil Producers' Agency for iving the Lakeview oil the right of ay through the Producers' Transportation Company's pipe line, has just een put into effect. The oil is now unning. Meantime the big gush- r is adding its daily produc- on of 17,000 or 18,000 barrels per ay to the 6,000,000 barrels or more of il forming a chain of lakes on the wer Maricopa flat. The Union Oil ompany has completed its ar- angements for the better protection this stored oil, and it is stated that e former danger of the oil escaping nd running down into Buena Vista ake has been largely averted.

Under the direction of F. F. Hill, eneral field superintendent for the nion, two great reservoirs holding an ggregate of 5,000,000 barrels have en built in the edge of the hills west the Lakeview. These reservoirs built in short, deep cañons that ve very small watersheds, and are ade by the simple process of throw- g dams across from one hill to the her. By raising the dams the capacity the reservoirs can be very greatly creased if desired. Estimates have en prepared of the amount of water at would drain into the cañons in ry heavy downpours, and provisions r handling the maximum quantity ve been made. A pipe line is now ing laid to pump the oil from the wer levels into these new reservoirs. The reservoirs on the flat have been engthened meantime, and as a final ecaution, a great catch-basin has en built to arrest the oil in case it apes from its present control and urs down toward the great irriga- n reservoir, Buena Vista Lake. This a partly natural and partly artifi- l reservoir, covering a little more an thirty-six sections of land, in ich the waters of Kern River are pounded and stored for irrigating lands of Miller & Lux. The only inage from the lake is upon cul- ated fields or through an artificial hal, and natural water courses to lare Lake.

LAKE WOULD BURN.

Vere the millions of barrels of oil m the Lakeview reservoirs to es- e into Buena Vista Lake it would sent a problem for which no one yet suggested a solution. The oil uld float on the surface of the lake, in so thin a layer that it could rdly be separated from the water. drain the lake across the old wa- courses to Tulare Lake would be multiply the difficulty, and if the were set on fire the lake undoubt- y would boil over and spread a sea flame to all the adjacent low land. e men in charge of the Lakeview ve it fully fixed in their minds that atever else happens, the oil must kept out of Buena Vista Lake.

Although the plan of giving the Lake- w oil a clear right of way through pipe line for thirty days is car- d out, the Union officials do not pect to reduce the storage in the d more than 500,000 barrels. Other imates are that they could do no re than handle the daily production, ving the accumulated oil untouched. e Producers' pipe line out of the nset field has a present capacity of 00 barrels, or almost exactly the ount of the Lakeview's flow. This pacity could possibly be increased 30,000 barrels by installing heavier mps and engines, but it probably ll be necessary in any event to pick some other oil between Maricopa l McKittrick, and whatever this ad- onal amount may be, must be sub- cted from the total maximum ca- city of 30,000 barrels. "They will ver get the Lakeview oil out of the nset field until they build another e line," is the judgment of several the prominent agency members.

LIKE A HURRICANE.

he troubles of the Union with the keview bid fair to be duplicated in case of the American Oilfields with great well, No. 79, on section 36, 31- The gusher is roaring away like urricane, and sending oil at the rate 25,000 barrels per day in a solid eam twelve inches in diameter ainst a great iron shield placed over well at a height of fifteen or twen- feet for the purpose of partly othering its force. The sand thrown by the well has built a mound t covers all but the very comb of engine-house roof. Many workmen now constructing, with boards, th and sand bags, a great levee out the well. The reservoir so med is more than 300 feet across, l the banks are ten to fifteen feet height.

he two gushers that burned last nday are but a short half-mile from ll No. 79. After the burning gush- sanded and went out late Sunday ernoon, one of them began flowing ain, caught fire from the smoulder- embers of the derrick and lit the avens with a torch of flame 300 feet height. The burning oil generates great quantity of gas, which burns ve the oil, adding height and vol- e to the flame.

he well sanded again about mid- ht, and since then both have been ctive. Nothing remains about either a tangled heap of scrap iron.

PERSONAL.

he Board of Trade has extended mal invitations to Assistant Secre- y of the Interior Pierce and to Sen- r Smoot to visit the Kern county fields as the guests of the board. Pierce is expected in Bakersfield ut the middle of October, and Sen- r Smoot will attend the mining con- ss beginning the 26th of this nth. Secretary Pierce's visit is arded as of great importance, as questions involved in the Munzer, kersfield Fuel and Oil, and other ebrated cases, will be up for de- nination before the Interior De- tment officials in the very near fu- . Every effort will be made to w Mr. Pierce the entire situation pecting the oil operations on with- wn land. The invitation to Sen- r Smoot is prompted by the fact t he has been taking an active t in drafting proposed laws for the posal of oil lands. "We have got bring these people here and educate them," said a member of the Board of Trade.

OIL LAKE FROM MIDWAY VIEW WELL.

Northeast Corner of Oil Reservoir of the Midway View Oil Company, Midway-Sunset oil field.

The Midway View Oil Company, whose property is located in the southeast quarter of section 2, 11-24, Sunset-Midway field, has recently brought in a good producer at a depth of only 550 feet with over 100 feet of rich oil sand. When this well was commenced a heavy rig was erected with the expectation of having to drill in the neighborhood of 2000 feet. When the drill touched the upper sands the well began to flow, and has given an estimated production of from fifty to 400 barrels a day.

As the great difficulty in the Midway field has been caused by the heavy gas pressure forcing the sand into the casing, and sanding up the wells, the company placed on the inner string of casing, and in the oil sands, what is known as an oil screen. This screen is so arranged that only the oil can flow into the well, leaving the sand outside.

The Midway View well was drilled in the short period of twenty-nine days at a very small cost compared with the deep holes of the field. It has already filled the big earthen sump-holes constructed by the company, and shipping will commence as soon as the Southern Pacific finishes the construction of a spur track on the east line of the company's property. The company has two full strings of tools in the field, and is now erecting a deep well rig to drill for the lower sands, near the northeast corner of the property.

The stock of the Midway View will not be listed till the company begins paying dividends. The officers are: Lee C. Gates, president; N. W. Thompson, vice-president; Charles H. Treat, secretary and treasurer; Thomas Cassou, auditor; Samuel O'Connor, superintendent; Dr. J. T. Stewart, Robert N. Bulla and Thomas Hughes, other directors.

The Union Oil Company has started on what appears likely to be a thorough exploration of the deeper strata of the Upper Midway in Sheridan well No. 1 on section 10, 31-22. The well is now nearly 4000 feet deep with an 8¼-inch casing and has penetrated no oil sands. It will be continued another 1000 feet or more in case no satisfactory oil sands are struck, and if the hole can be carried down so far, as now seems quite certain. This well is near what is supposed to be a break between the Midway and McKittrick fields.

The Twenty-five Oil Company, on section 25, 32-23, has completed well No. 35, and is down nearly 1200 feet in well No. 25. The first-named was finished in 300 feet of sand at 1500 feet depth. The Twenty-five now has a production of 2000 barrels per day, which is contracted to the Associated at 50 cents per barrel for a total of 4,000,000 barrels.

The Union's Regal gusher on section 15, 32-23, is making 1200 barrels per day. On the same section the Bedrock is 2500 feet deep. The Union is extending its water line to this section in order to facilitate operations.

TEXAS OIL.

TOYAH FIELD STORM CENTER.

THREE COMPANIES IN CONTROL CLOSE DOWN.

Much of the Land Surrounding the Oil District Is School Land, and the Companies Want It Determined What It Is Worth—Small Companies at Work.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

EL PASO (Tex.) Sept. 16.—Texas's virgin oil field is to be abandoned, at least for the present. Having obtained what oil men consider unmistakable indications of the presence of an oil body underlying the Toyah field in Western Texas, 200 miles from El Paso, the three prospecting companies are planning to temporarily abandon the field because of a hitch which has been found in the land laws of Texas.

Much of the land surrounding the town of Toyah is public school land which has not yet been appraised by either the land or tax commissioner or the State. The nominal price per acre for this land is $1 where the mineral rights apply. Since the activities of the Texas Company, the Guffey Oil Company and the Prairie City in prospecting this field the price of land has been increased to $25 and $30 an acre by the speculators who expect to make fortunes by unloading their land on the tide market.

Two wells were drilled to a distance sufficient to satisfy the men in charge of the operations that there is oil in paying quantities in the field. As soon as this was determined by the logs of the wells, operations ceased and the three large companies are planning to close down until spring at least, when the Legislature of Texas is expected to fix a value on this land and settle the disputed ownership of the oil claims in many instances.

It is reported from the Toyah fields that the three operating companies—the Texas, the Guffey Oil and the Prairie City—are planning to organize a lobby to go to Austin and work for the passage of a bill favorable to their interests in West Texas. Should this prove successful, it is expected that renewed operations will be started as soon as the land values are fixed. The three companies own a greater part of the land surrounding Toyah, although individuals have scattered holdings throughout the valley. While the field is closed an effort will be made to prevent the independent owners from putting down wells and bringing in the field. This is exactly what the big companies do not want to happen. It would mean that their holdings would be appraised at oil land prices, when they were purchased for public school land. But small companies are being organized by the land owners and a well will be started at once in order to prove the field to the world and have the country developed at once, instead of waiting for the pleasure of the controlling companies.

The Texas Company has already spent more than $100,000 prospecting in this field, and now has the ownership or control by lease of 32,000 acres of land surrounding its wells. It is now in the market for 200 miles of pipe line from the Toyah field, according to the Texas Oil Journal. This is taken to mean that the company is planning to operate a pipe line from its field to El Paso, as this is the only city within that distance of Toyah. This company has maintained a profound secrecy about its operations in the Toyah field, even going to the extent of shutting down operations when strangers approached the oil rigs. That oil has been obtained in these wells has been proved beyond doubt by those who have gained access to the barbed-wire inclosure surrounding the wells. Just what the future of the field will be depends upon the action of the State Legislature and the trio of oil companies which control the field.

HAS MADE GREAT RECORD.

HOW TO PRODUCE PETROLEUM.

One of the most remarkable instances of increase of production made in the Midway oil field is that of the North American Oil Consolidated, a concern with a capital of $15,000,000, organized and financed by San Franciscans.

This company owns and leases 1860 acres of the richest land along the Spellacy anticline. It began active operations in November of last year, and, beginning with an initial pipe line delivery of 4000 barrels in January, has shown a remarkable gain.

In July this company delivered to the Standard Oil Company over 74,000 barrels of oil. In August the deliveries jumped to 86,000 barrels, and the September record will put the company in the 100,000 barrel class.

The North American Oil Consolidated is now running ten strings of tools and adding five wells a month to its producing list. The company is not a member of the Independent Agency, but has contracted its entire product to the Standard for a period of years.

EASTERN CAPITALISTS.

INTERESTED IN CLEVELAND.

Judge J. W. Campbell, president of the Cleveland Oil Company, has been visited the past week by a party of friends from Cleveland and Columbus, Ohio. Among them were Frank and Edward Gosse, W. R. Tutt, and James McNabb.

The gentlemen are all stockholders of the Cleveland company and visited its properties on Thursday and Friday. They report that they are well pleased with all they saw, and believe that the concern has a bright future. The Kern River wells are producing about 15,000 barrels a month, and more wells are being drilled. The refinery, which was partially burned by fire recently, is being rebuilt and will resume operations in about three weeks. Work on the well on the company's property in the Midway field, is progressing rapidly, and a depth of about 1500 feet has been reached. The visitors predict great things for it, as it is situated on proven ground.

DECLINE IN PRODUCTION.

AUGUST SHOWS SLUMP.

The official figures show a heavy decline for the month of August in oil production in the San Joaquin Valley fields, where the most of the California oil is produced, and an increase of refining oil in Ventura and Fullerton. The net decline in the valley fields was 243,899 barrels, and the decline in all California fields 158,806 barrels over July.

The figures in detail follow:

San Joaquin Valley—	July.	August.

WONDERFUL CONTRIVANCE.

CONSOLIDATED MIDWAY.

E. A. Wiltsee, managing director of the Consolidated Midway Oil Comcompany, is a visitor in the city from Bakersfield, and is stopping at the Van Nuys. He reports that the Standard people finished laying a pipe to the company's section-30 gusher some days ago, and is now taking 5000 barrels of oil from it per day.

Mr. Wiltsee has recently had an iron hood clamped into the derrick of this phenomenal well, and now when it is turned loose none of the rushing, ten-inch stream is lost. Before this was put on the well shot the black liquid more than 150 feet into the air, and there was considerable loss in the form of spray.

The Consolidated's well No. 1 on section 32, is down about 1900 feet, and is due to come in almost any day now. There is reason to believe that it, too, will prove to be a gusher, and every precaution is being taken to control it, should that prove to be the case. The company also has another well on section 30 and still another on section 15, in the Midway district. Within three weeks it is expected that three more big wells will be brought in.

It is conceded by all oil men familiar with the northern district that the Consolidated Midway gusher is the most wonderful oil well in California, and that means in the world at the present time.

CALIFORNIA OIL FIGURES.

FOR TWENTY-THREE YEARS.

The following table shows the production and value of California oil from the beginning of 1887 up to and including the first seven months of 1910, a period of twenty-three years and seven months, with estimated average price per barrel for each year:

AT THE MIAMI MINE.

PUTTING IN MACHINERY.

GLOBE (Ariz.) Sept. 16.—At Miami the machinery equipment is being rapidly assembled. Now being placed are two large Crocker-Wheeler electric generators of triple expansion, condensing type, costing $56,000. These will furnish electric power for the mill and surface works and lighting for the camp and mines. Three 600-horsepower boilers have been set and an immense amount of other power equipment is now arriving. About 1000 feet of development work a month is being done in the mines, which have already been well developed by drills.

Churn drills are to be started soon on the twenty-eight claims of the Barney Copper Company, in addition to the deepening of the company's two main shafts, now about 400 feet deep. D. A. McMillen of Globe, formerly with the Old Dominion Company, has been engaged as the company's consulting engineer.

In Toyah, Tex., Field.

EL PASO (Tex.) Sept. 16.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Using 240 quarts of nitro-glycerine, the Texas company which is prospecting in the Toyah (Tex.) oil fields, shot its No. 1 well Thursday, getting a geyser of oil which spouted fifty feet above the top of the derrick, or 130 feet, in the air. An expert well-shooter was brought to the Toyah field from Oklahoma and results obtained were conclusive. Men familiar with this oil field say there is a body of oil underlying the Toyah field. The well is now at a depth of 2200 feet, and is in a stratum of oily sand which is thought to cover a pool of oil some miles in extent. Further drilling will be done in the field by this and the Guffy and Prairie City Oil companies.

Court Authorizes Lease.

W. Ladd, executor of the estate of the late Benjamin Healey, in the court of Judge Coffee at San Francisco, last week, was granted authority to enter into a contract of lease with M. P. Callahan, who represents several parties with capital, to prospect for oil on 1700 acres of land about eighteen miles from Coalinga. It is believed that all the land will prove to be oil-bearing.

Concentrating Mill.

PARADISE (Ariz.) Sept. 15.—The stockholders of the Whitetail Mining Company have determined to build a fifty-ton concentrating mill, to handle their own and custom ores. The company has been reorganized, with H. M. Davis of Stanton, Tex., as president. Most of the stock is held in Stanton.

THE OLD PECK DISTRICT.

RICH ARIZONA MINE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PRESCOTT (Ariz.) Sept. 16.—After years of idleness, some activity is being manifested in the old Peck district, south of this city, where some of the richest silver ore ever known in Arizona was milled more than thirty years ago. The Douglas-Lacy Company, for a while handled the old Peck, which was rechristened the "Great Peck," and which proved a great income producer in the way of stock sales. Almost as well-known in pioneer days as the Peck was the Black Warrior, which is now owned by the Swastika Mining Company, a corporation headed and managed by F. W. Wood, one of the best known miners of the Southwest. He, Frank Wright of Prescott and three eastern friends own all of the stock and have purchased the Warrior, the Black Prince, Hardscrabble and Isis claims, all of pioneer fame. The property lies about eight miles north of Crown King and only a mile from the Bradshaw mountain railway. Though the deepest of the old workings is only 140 feet below the surface, the mines have a production record of $800,000, when development was stopped by the water level and a change in the character of the ore. There is a probability that copper will soon be struck in sinking, though this is believed merely an addition to the richness of the ore.

The Mid Day mine in Peck district is to have extensive development, the money furnished by a syndicate of Ohio men. The property already has had 500 feet of development, showing up some good chloride and horn silver. It is on a continuation of the old Peck vein and there is hope that similar ore conditions may be found.

The Zonia and McMahon groups near Placeritas have been bought by J. Dyer, a Globe mining man, who proposed to develop the property at once. He has twenty-three claims in all, with good gold and copper croppings and with 1000 feet of develop work already done.

I checked freight for the government. So began my experience in the transportation business.

BECOMES A RAILROAD CLERK.

"I was not an enlisted man, but I carried a revolver and sometimes a musket. Twice I was under fire; once as a spectator of a fight, and again while I was going forward with a body of soldiers. I was in the army until 1868 as a quartermaster's clerk, and then went back to Ashland temporarily. My father wanted me to study law. I read enough Blackstone to discover that educationally I was not prepared for the legal profession. Still, I could have been a second-rate country lawyer, a thought that made me write to a relative in Columbus, promising if he would get me a job on a railroad I would never ask him for another favor. He obtained a $900 clerkship for me in the general offices of the Pan-Handle, which ran from Pittsburgh to Cincinnati. That was in 1869.

"My chief, C. W. Smith, soon went to California as traffic officer of the Central Pacific, taking me along as head clerk. When Smith returned to the East he said: 'You are to be the acting assistant general freight agent until they find an older man.' I was 24 years of age, and they didn't find an older man, but I worked on a clerk's pay for some time. I kept stepping along until 1884, when I became general traffic manager, at $10,000 a year. I am now vice-president and director of traffic for the Union Pacific, the Southern Pacific, the Oregon Short Line, the Oregon and Washington, and the Oregon Railroad and Navigation Company."

"You made the acquaintance of Collis P. Huntington, I suppose, in California?"

HUNTINGTON AN ABLE MAN.

"Yes; after I had grown to be big enough for his personal observation. In some particulars he was the ablest man I have ever known. Certainly he was our greatest railroad builder. His industry was actually astonishing. He worked like a horse year in and year out, and the harder he toiled the more amiable and jocular he became, which is contrary to ordinary human nature. I knew him after he had passed the age of 50. He was then the handsomest man, I thought, in the United States. He was 6 feet 2 inches tall, had curly hair and a full beard, and wore an 8½ hat.

"In his social moods he overlooked the tremendous things he had done and talked of the little bargains he had made in nails, screws and flies while a hardware merchant in Sacramento. He was also proud of his muscular strength, saying that he could throw any wrestler in Litchfield county, Connecticut, where he was born, and that, at the age of 18, he could lift a barrel of flour breast high by the chimes.

"I recollect we went into Texas to examine some roads that were to be sold. When we came to a bridge, Mr. Huntington would go below and look up at the character of the construction. At one place, I walked ahead, and jumped a fence with the help of both hands. Mr. Huntington was nearly 60 years old, but he winked at Henry L. Pierce of Boston, who was present, and then jumped the fence with one hand. He loved the old poets, and was specially fond of Chaucer. A poet himself, he dreamed of a railroad across the continent, and then, as a practical business man, he laid it down and put it into operation.

MEETS MR. HARRIMAN.

"My acquaintance with Mr. Harriman began in California, where, the other officers of the Southern Pacific being away from home, I gave him a dinner. He was already a rich man, and one of the owners of the Union Pacific, but he was not nationally famous. Later, he had a notable dinner of his own in New York, and was gracious enough to send me an invitation. I sat next to Levi P. Morton, formerly Vice-President of the United States. 'I have been in many companies of great men,' Mr. Morton said to me, 'but none was so distinguished as this, in the matter of finance and business, and that old man there,' pointing to Mr. Huntington, 'is the ablest man present.'

"It was a fine compliment, I thought, from a very high source, and I repeated it to Mr. Huntington.

"'Did he call me an old man?' Mr. Huntington loudly asked.

"'Yes,' I replied, somewhat surprised at his tone and manner.

"'Why didn't you knock him out of his chair?' Mr. Huntington shouted. He was then in his seventy-sixth year."

"What were your early methods of informing yourself about the freight within the reach of your railroad?" I asked.

"It was said I took a census of the plums and peaches in the orchards, but that was a joke of some men who knew more about pomology than railroading. The carrying of ore was then our principal business. I was also accused of suggesting the phrase, 'under similar circumstances,' as found in the section of the national law concerning the long and short hauls of our transportation companies. Indeed, I have heard much about myself that I have never denied. Whenever competition meets, let me say at this time, there is a readjustment of customary or prevailing prices. In San Francisco, I paid 10 cents a copy for the Bulletin or Alta. The price in Sacramento, where those sheets had to sell alongside of a local newspaper, was 5 cents.

HAD TO MEET COMPETITION.

"When making rates for hauling freight we had to consider the natural advantages of New York and San Francisco. They were on the water, on a right-of-way made by the Creator, and were given the wind for motive power, which was also a free gift from heaven. There were no tracks to lay and no coal was burned on sailing vessels. Manifestly, we had to meet the prices established by water competition. The natural advantages of locations have caused endless arguments and countless strained efforts toward equalization.

"An inland town is without the regulatory influence of steamboats and sailing ships, and the railroads are charged with unfairness and greediness, whereas, the accusation properly belongs against the Maker of the universe. Years ago, I heard the members of the Interstate Commerce Commission say, while we were all playing whist at a hotel in Denver, that every little city in the country wanted to be a jobbing center and was clamoring for lower rates than were given its nearest neighbor. No human agency can bestow upon an interior town the geographical and commercial advantages of a town on the seacoast.

"While I lived and did business in California, I had to meet the problem of water competition, and I was compelled to give rebates. The practice of selling at wholesale at a lower price than at retail is as old as civilization. Connected with the question, as it concerns railroads and factories, is the element of operation cost. On the unit of production, it is cheaper to run a railroad or a plow factory to its full capacity than at half capacity. A merchant would say to me: 'I pay you $100,000 a year for freight. My competitor across the street pays you $10,000. I demand a lower rate; otherwise I shall transfer my business to another road.'

CAUSE OF REBATES.

"Rebates were granted that roads might be busy up to their capacity. The little men knew it, but they made no objection. But conditions changed and business becoming centralized among groups of strong men, it was well that rebating became unlawful. I only want to say that it was logical, natural and defensible as practiced by railroads at the beginning. Even insurance companies gave rebates until recently."

"And all the time," I observed, "public sentiment was being slowly turned against the transportation companies?"

"Yes, but mainly by the politicians who were after public patronage for themselves. The railways, no doubt, were guilty of misdeeds, but they were grossly misrepresented by the politicians, and what the politicians said stuck in the minds of the people. Few men, comparatively, ship or receive freight. They are without personal knowledge concerning the alleged abuses of transportation. What information they have comes from the politicians, and they believe the politicians. Seemingly, railroad men are the most unscrupulous and audacious liars on earth. Why, railroading is a useful and worthy profession. I am as fond of my profession, of its works and honors as a lawyer or a physician is proud of his professional calling. Nevertheless, I am weary of the everlasting struggle against unjust prejudice. I shall quit in a few years and live on one-fourth of my present income merely that I may have rest and tranquility.

MADE RICH BY RAILROADS.

"Stand 100 traffic men in a line; representative men, who are toiling day and night to build the country. Look at them. They are optimistic, patriotic, and strong, but they are poor. Stand 100 merchants, 100 manufacturers, 100 farmers, and 100 lawyers in a line. Gaze at them. They are no better as men, nor are they any more desirable as citizens than the traffic agents. But they are rich, and the railroads have made them so.

"Christian men in the South owned slaves. They honestly believed in slavery. They saw no injury to themselves, or their slaves in an institution sanctioned by the laws of the country. A slave was fed to produce cotton, rice, or sugar, economically. He was given no luxuries and was worked to the limit. In a sense, the railways have exchanged places with the African bondmen. The laws of the States say how much railways may charge for carrying freight, and they fix the quality of the service. Cars must be modern. Stations must be large and convenient. Tracks must be safe and smooth. But dividends are limited to 5 per cent., or 6 per cent. on the shares outstanding. Nothing is said of the lean years, when there are no dividends, or of the past, when the railroads had to fight like hungry wolves for existence, with never a penny for their owners.

MUST ACCEPT RISKS.

"What manufacturer or merchant would accept the risks of business for 6 per cent. on the money invested? However, railways are said to be overcapitalized. They have discounted the future, it is complained. Electric roads are being built today with bonds, and the stock is to be the profit of the undertaking, if the enterprise is ever successful. The hazards are many and the years may be long, and I say the projectors are entitled to a reasonable reward for their patience, imagination, and energy.

"Our ears are full of the noise about railroads, but we note a dead silence with respect to the United States Steel Corporation. Andrew Carnegie was given bonds for his properties, and is buying church organs and distributing free libraries with the interest. Other plants were bought with an issue of $360,000,000 of preferred stock. The organizers of the company, together with the proprietors, got $508,000,000 in common shares as the prospective profits of the adventure—water in other words, and lots of it. Common stock is now selling at about $70 a share. Dividends have been renewed. However, the politicians are dumb as grave yards and they vigorously looked the other way when Mr. Roosevelt, as President of the United States, permitted the Steel Corporation to buy out the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company, its strongest and most dangerous competitor. Something was contributed in the way of justification, it is true, concerning an alleged panic that had thus been circumvented.

DANGER OF PANIC.

"The politicians, however, overlook the possibilities of a panic that may follow if the railroads are not decently dealt with in the future. One-fifth of the coal mined in this country, to the value of $170,500,000 annually, is burned in locomotives. The railroads are the largest purchasers of steel and timber in the United States, and of labor. Baiting the railroads is popular and an easy way into public office, but it is getting to be dangerous business for the country—dangerous because of the threat of government ownership and the disaster that would surely follow. With a politician at the throttle of every engine, and another one running every train, I am afraid something rather tragic would happen in Washington. In short, it seems to me that the railroads are building the nation, only to be destroyed ultimately by the very power they are creating."

"What is your estimate of Edward H. Harriman?"

'He was a very great man, a constructor as well as a financier, spending $500,000,000 to make his properties physically competent to do the business of the western part of the country, and grasping the elementary principles of the transportation question. 'I want to get our lines into such a sound condition,' he once said to me, 'that we can make a profit while other lines are losing money.' A bluff newspaper will not sell for long; a bluff railroad will carry mighty little freight when the years are averaged.

HARRIMAN LACKED TACT.

"The weakness of Harriman was his lack of tact—his seeming brutal insensibility of the feelings of other men. His self-confidence made him appear arrogant and impatient, and he was misunderstood by those who failed to comprehend his methods and his character. To his strong qualities I would add a sure instinct that controlled him in the picking out of his helpers. One of the wisest acts of his life was his choice of Judge Lovett to be his legal adviser. Judge Lovett knows men and can get along with them. He not only helped Harriman's property immensely, but he helped Harriman personally, saving him from situations that might have been serious in their consequences."

"In what part of the country will the greatest development occur during the next few years?"

"Out West. A man came to me the other day and said he could bring 1,000,000 Polanders from Russia to the United States if we would find them sufficient land at a cost not to exceed $15 an acre. The Polanders are farmers, and if they came here would have from $500 to $2000 apiece. But I didn't know where land could be purchased at the price named.

"I remember that when first I rode between Denver and Cheyenne I wouldn't have given 10 cents an acre for the desert that lay for hundreds of miles on either side of the railway track. That land today, planted in potatoes and sugar beets, is selling from $200 to $1000 an acre. Irrigated land with perpetual water rights is cheaper at $60 an acre than prairie land at one-fourth that figure. So, while farms in the arid regions are bringing a high price, apparently, they will be purchased by farmers who know their value, and that is where the most important development in the future will occur, in my opinion."

THE LONDON PIT.

No Reserved Seats Sold, But the People Wait in Line for the House to Open.

In the orchestra there are only eight or ten rows of stalls, and immediately behind them is the pit, which is walled off by a barrier, or fence, that stretches clear across the theater, writes Clayton Hamilton in the August Bookman. In the pit there are no individual seats—merely rows of long benches on which the people sit rather closely together. It is, of course, impossible to reserve seats in advance, and people who are going to the pit have to come early on the evening of the performance in order to secure the best places. Hence, in the case of a popular play, a long queue of people may be seen at 7 o'clock stretching from the pit door all along the sidewalk, waiting for the house to open. They keep their places very patiently in line, united by a common mood of pleasurable anticipation. One manager, a while ago, tried the experiment of selling reserved seats in the pit, at the usual price, but to this the pit people objected strenuously, on the ground that they could seldom know in advance just when they would find themselves possessed of that happy combination of money and an evening off which would permit of theater-going, and preferred to take their chances waiting in line when the fortunate opportunity arrived. The pit is patronized by people of a very estimable class, and is often frequented by well-educated men and women who wish to save money and do not care to dress. Whereas a seat in the stalls costs half a guinea (or approximately $2.50,) a place in the pit costs only 2 and 6 (or approximately 60 cents,) and the play can be seen very nearly as well. In the pit the same programme that is sold in the stalls for sixpence is sold for twopence, and the pit has a refreshment bar of its own which is cheaper than the main bar of the theater.

Dew as a Beverage.

Dew, which, according to the poets, has always been the favorite beverage of the faries, is now utilized for the more prosaic purpose of slaking the thirst of the British soldiers at Gibraltar. The scarcity of the water there has resulted in the collection of dew by the following simple method. A large pit is covered with straw, which in turn is covered with sheet iron. The straw serves as a heat insulator, and consequently the iron cools much more rapidly at night than the surrounding earth. Dew forms upon it in large quantities, and is drained off in reservoirs for drinking purposes.—Boston Courier.

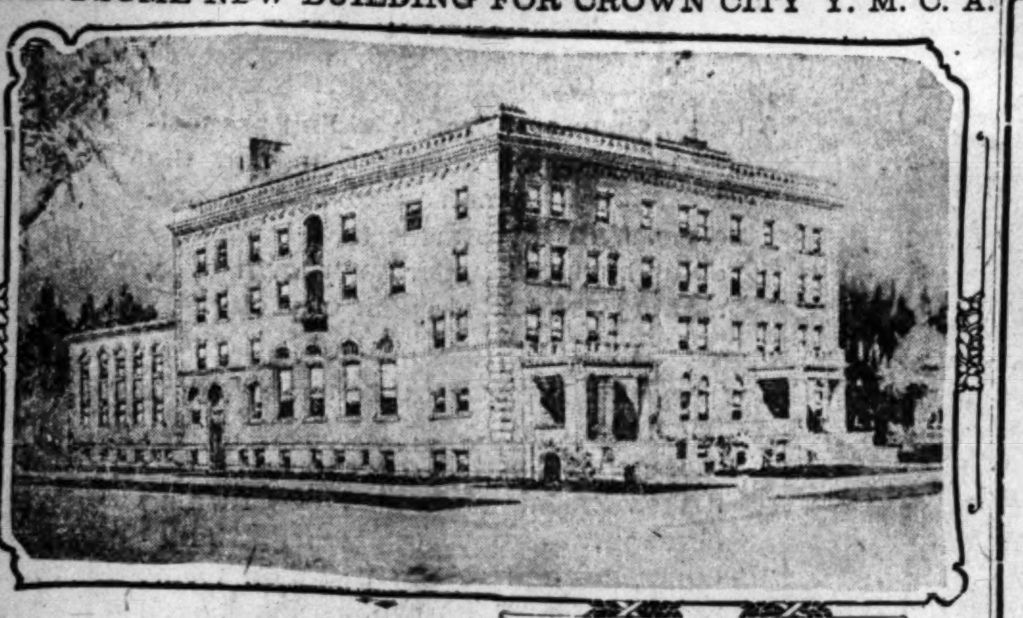
HANDSOME NEW BUILDING FOR CROWN CITY Y. M. C. A.



Social Center for Pasadena's Young Men.

Plans for the above structure have been completed by Arthur B. Benton, architect of the Los Angeles association's building.

THE architect's perspective of the new Y.M.C.A. building, to be erected at the corner of Ramona street and Marengo avenue, Pasadena, is herewith reproduced for the first time. The plans, as drawn by Arthur B. Benton of this city, call for a five-story structure, complete in every detail, and which will rank high among the association buildings of the Southwest, in point both of architecture and appointment. Bids for the construction will soon be in.

The structure will be of the Colonial type, being of pressed brick, laid in Flemish bond and having belt courses of moulded brick. The site is large, occupying 220 feet on Marengo by 295 feet on Ramona. The building itself will be 100x160 feet in size.

Four handball courts, each forty feet deep, will be laid out at the rear, and a new power plant is to be built back of these. The old building will remain at its present location and will be joined to the new structure.

The ground floor will contain a large plunge, showers, baths, locker rooms and the dining-room, the latter occupying the entire front of the building. The first floor will contain an auditorium seating 500, together with the lobby, offices, game rooms and gymnasium. The second floor will be divided into reading, lecture and class rooms, and will contain the galleries of the gymnasium and auditorium. The next two stories will be given up almost entirely to dormitory uses.

The lower floors will be finished in hardwood. All lavatories and showers will be wainscoated in marble and the plunge will be finished with glazed brick. The equipment will include steam heat, electric light and passenger and freight elevators. The entire outlay will be approximately $125,000.

Mr. Benton, the architect, is the designer of numerous association buildings in the Southwest, these including the handsome Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. structures in this city, and the buildings at Riverside, Redlands and Long Beach.

FAVOR GOLDEN STATE FRUIT.

Capital Consumes Two Hundred Fifty Cars Yearly. Italy and Florida Are Chief Competitors.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—This is not a big market for California fruit, and it is not quite so well or regularly supplied in consequence, as other markets which require larger quantities to meet the demand. The annual sales of California oranges, according to some of the leading commission merchants, amount to about 250 carloads. Of lemons the sales will approximate only about twenty-five carloads.

Of course, Washington has a good supply during the season of oranges from Florida and lemons from Messina, and other Mediterranean ports. The Messina lemon is preferred here, according to the trade, because it holds up better, but the total sales of foreign lemons amount only to 125 cars, if the dealer consulted is right in his estimate. At the same time, California lemons bring 25 cents a box more, on an average, than the Sicilian fruit. Probably this may be accounted for because the California fruit is put up better, the size is more uniform and the fruit looks well. The Sicilian fruit runs to smaller sizes toward the bottom of the box. At the present writing there are no California lemons on this market, and Messinas are bringing $5 and $6 a box. The dealers say that the California lemons are absorbed by markets nearer home—that the supply does not reach this far. It is claimed that the foreign lemons come through in pretty good shape, and although a few boxes were noted at a commission house in bad condition, partly bursted open, it was said that this was unusual.

Sweets hold the boards at present exclusively. They were $5.50 last week. Now they are bringing $4 and $5. The exchange has an agent here, and the independent growers have several agents. The trade seems to be pretty well divided. A large Italian commission house bought ten cars of sweets f.o.b. early in the season from the Growers' Packing Association at San Marino, in the San Gabriel Valley. They bear the brand of the Titus ranch. Sweets will command the market until the first Florida oranges arrive, some time next month. The Florida fruit will have things all its own way for a time, or until the early navels arrive for the holiday trade, and they will continue to be in competition with the California fruit until March, and even into April, if the crop be as good as it was last season. The navels, however, will command at least 25 cents a box more in the open market, and perhaps 50 cents.

There seems to be no complaint regarding the manner in which the California fruit is put up. Possibly it might be better if some means were devised to keep the tops of the boxes from spreading. The tops are not nailed across the middle, and when the boxes are set on end to display them, the fruit has a tendency to press the tops out allowing the oranges to escape. This could be remedied by putting a wire around the box, or by fastening wire to nails driven into the middle section of wood a few inches below the top of the box.

"Nobody can beat California for putting up fruit in style," said a dealer who is well known as a handler of California oranges and lemons. "It comes well graded and packed and regularly put up. As a rule, it is very reliable, but last year some packers sneaked in some frosted fruit in the bottoms of the boxes. We had to stand a loss on that. They couldn't keep us supplied regularly last year, either. They claimed that other markets did better for them, and of course, we know that this is a small market, so we can't expect to get as good treatment as some other markets which take much more fruit."

California deciduous fruits reach this market mostly through Baltimore, in small auction lots. It is difficult to get a line on the local consumption of these fruits because of this fact. However, in spite of the well-known reputation of this region as a fruit country, California sends hither a large amount of its finest fruit, and it commands excellent prices. Two or three retail stores—and they are the best appointed in Washington—call themselves "California Fruit Stores." One is run by the California Fruit Company, and this concern has a branch store. Another is known as the California Fruit and Delicatessen Company, while a third is the California Fruit and Produce Company. Many of the retail dealers display the sign, "California Fruit," conspicuously, and what with a "California Mineral Water Company," and several "California mine companies" the word California is pretty well worked for trade purposes.

SPECIALIZE ONLY

These California fruit stores do not confine themselves wholly to fruit from California, but they do make a specialty of fine California fruits, and they do not charge more for it than other places ask for good fruit. In fact it is often the case that the best California fruit can be bought of them as cheaply as poorer fruit at the Italian fruit stands, or in the combination grocery and produce stores, which frequently do not hesitate to palm off very indifferent fruit at high prices—and not California fruit, either. With a crop so heavy that much of it has rotted on the ground, Georgia peaches have been selling at 15 cents for a small basket holding about a dozen peaches. One can get such a package of local peaches or pears for 10 cents. The pears, about the size of hen's eggs, are not to be compared with the California pear. Still this kills the market for California fruit. Other things being equal, the public rather leans to the local product.

The effect of a heavy local fruit crop is shown in the sale of three cars of peaches in Baltimore on September 4, at 35 to 50 cents per half-bushel basket. Just now peaches are bringing here 40 to 75 cents a basket. Pears, of course, are over. Oregon pears, however, are selling for $3.25 to $3.75. The California pears came in on a particularly bad market when canteloupes, an enormous local crop and of very good quality, were selling at 50 cents a crate, and the best that could be got for choice Bartletts was $1.85 and $2.25. Local cherries, large and choice, were selling at 8 and 9 cents a pound at the time.

Tokay grapes are scarce at this writing, none coming in. They are quoted at $1.75 to $2.25 a crate in New York. Plums are not in great demand. Cress, Wilkinson and Kelsey are $1.25 to $2. Malaga grapes are in fair supply, and are selling at $1.25 to $1.50. These prices are mentioned only to explain local conditions. It is probable that this market could be improved. However, there is always the fruit from Maryland and Virginia to compete with, although it is seldom that there is so good a yield as there has been this year. When the railroads give better service, and the pre-cooling system is perfected so that the fruit can be laid down here in better condition, riper and of better flavor, it will prove to be a more dangerous competitor to the fruit from near-by orchards.

VALLEY CANTELOUPES LEAD.

There is one thing which California will have a practical monopoly in for a long time to come, from present indications, and that is the Imperial Valley canteloupe. This choice fruit made its first appearance heer three years ago, and it was regarded with suspicion. Who wouldn't be suspicious of a canteloupe coming on the market at the time this one does, when he knew what sort of an unsatisfactory, insipid fruit the local product is wont to be? Buying home-grown canteloupes is such a lottery that many persons have given it up in despair. They can't grow the things, and have any sweetness and flavor in them, when the skies lower and the rains descend, and the sun holds aloof for weeks at a stretch. But with the California melons, grown where the sun and the soil and the irrigating water combine in nature's alchemy to put flavor and sweetness beneath the netted rind, the epicure has a treat which he is not likely soon to forget.

The first year one of the big dealers was approached with the proposal to take a car of Imperial canteloupes. "Can't do it," he replied; "I couldn't get rid of a car at $3 and $3.50 a crate." "You won't have to," was the response. "These will be about $2.25." The sale was made at that figure and the melons went out in a day, and second carload was on hand two days later. That season, with the low prices, some ten cars were sold here. The next year they brought $2.75 and $3.00 and there was a slightly better demand, the sales amounting to twelve cars. This year people were getting used to them. They were soon at all the fruit stores, and were served even at the lunch rooms, where the standard luncheon is a cup of coffee and a piece of pie for ten cents. The price this season was $3 or thereabouts. The sales amounted to fifteen carloads.

The Imperial melons came in at a time when there is no competition except from the South, and the melons coming up from Georgia and Florida hardly bring $1 to $1.50 in competition with those from California. One hears a great deal about the celebrated melon from Rocky Ford, Colo., and those are now on the local market. They are going slowly at $1 and $1.25, as the local crop is very plentiful and very good as well. The Rocky Fords at their best do not sell like the California melons, bringing under good market conditions about $2 to $2.25. The local melons are going at 60 and 75 cents, and the market is full of them.

Though Japan's agricultural products are worth $750,000,000 a year, her factories number only 11,390. It will be many years before she takes rank as an industrial country, in the full sense of the term.

In the last days of May of this year the Japanese government received $50,000,000 of French capital for use in connection with its domestic loan conversions.

DUARTE.

rovia High school, only one and one-half miles distant. Many ultimately enroll at California universities and technical institutions. The grammar school building was erected two years ago at a cost of $20,000. It is a handsome fireproof, concrete structure.

Building improvements consist mainly of new ranch homes. Two notable residences, one completed and the other in course of construction are those of Joseph H. Loftus and E. B. Radabaugh. Both are reinforced concrete of modified mission or Moorish architecture, and cost $10,000 each.

IDEAL HOME REGION.

The love and labor of two generations have made Duarte an ideal home region. Few places so closely approximate the Utopia of dreamers where none is very rich or very poor and each draws subsistence from the soil and the home gives occupation and livelihood. But the livelihood includes the refinement of civilization. Here in the open, where the air is sweet and undefiled and the clamor of shop and factory does not intrude, is found every convenience devised to compensate the city dweller for his unnatural environment. Los Angeles is but eighteen miles southwest and the Santa Fé, Southern Pacific and Pacific Electric bring it within easy reach. Inevitably, "the old order changeth." As Los Angeles increases in population a region offering so many advantages as a place of residence is bound to receive a proportion of the overflow. In this suburban development the water supply, existing and potential, will be an important factor. It is owned by orchardists, generally in proportion to acreage, and goes with the land, obviating the complications arising where the water is owned separately by companies operating for profit.

Another factor will be the foothill boulevard, a main artery of the county good roads system, extending from Los Angeles to San Bernardino. When completed this road will make possible almost an air line route to Los Angeles via Monrovia, Arcadia and Alhambra.

While Duarte has reached maturity as a citrus producing center the invasion of Los Angeles business men seeking locations for country homes will result in a civic development and the establishment of new interests.

LOTS AND ACRES SOLD.

Local Dealers Report Activity in City and Suburban Residence Property.

The Edwards & Wildey Company reports the following sales: E. L. Hoskins to W. L. Trutt, lot in the Downey tract, 54x150 feet, on north side of Fourth street, near Bixel, consideration $4500; W. Harding to G. L. Louden, lot 60x150 feet, on east side Kingsley drive, near Fifth street, $3660; F. E. Handel to Edith Hosick, 14-acre walnut ranch on the main road, three miles southwest of Covina in the walnut center district, consideration $4600; J. W. Smith to B. Lowe, eight acre ranch adjoining the town of Burbank, $6500.

H. A. Church to W. Thompson, two-story eight-room house, No. 215 Ardmore avenue, lot 50x160 feet, consideration $5500; C. H. Barlow to J. K. Wilson, five acres on the San Fernando road, three miles west of Burbank, $1500; Clinton Hoover to C. P. Reed, lot 50x180 feet, on west side of Mariposa near Melrose, consideration $1400; L. A. Royce to K. Carter, lot 60x125, feet on west side of Manhattan, near Ninth street, consideration $1800; H. A. Church to E. L. Vence, two-story ten-room residence on northwest corner of Second street and Ardmore, lot 60x160 feet, consideration $5700.

Practically all of the vacant lots transferred will be handsomely improved.

Report Busy Week.

The Los Angeles Investment Company reports the following sales: No. 1812 West Forty-eighth street, to Henry Hopkins, eight-room bungalow, $5900; No. 5001 Wilton Place, to Bradford Peck of Fresno, five-room bungalow, $2775; No. 1828 West Fiftieth street, to John and Regina F. Cowan, five-room bungalow, $3450; No. 1742 West Fiftieth, to Marian M. Is Some Growth for 30 Months

It means that "Home Builders" stockholders' money is in a virile, progressive, well-managed institution.

It also means that part of the phenomenal growth of Los Angeles is due to "Home Builders" energy and that a goodly share of Los Angeles' prosperity has gotten into "Home Builders" resources.

However, it is not as fulsome praise of a fine record; of good work, or of accomplishment, that the above striking comparison of resources is drawn, for it might mean Buncombe or Blarney, if that were the purpose back of it.

But it is to point out the added responsibility to its stockholders that this growth thrusts upon "Home Builders," and enforce the fact that with these larger resources—plus the experiences and tireless energy which has wrought these results, it will achieve greater victories, will earn larger profits, will add greater security, and will increase the growth of this already "Fastest growing Home Building enterprise in Southern California."

Paraphrasing the automobile man's maxim, "Blessed be the clutch that clutcheth," "Home Builders" would say "Blessed be the growth that groweth," and it offers the man or woman who would make best use of their money a stewardship for their funds unsurpassed in the business life of Southern California.

WORKERS' PAGE—Freedom in Industries—Notable Achievements.

ALL AT STAKE.

TO DISUNIONIZE SAN FRANCISCO DETERMINED MOVE OF EMPLOYERS.

They Must Do it or Go Out of Business—Non-Union Shops in Operation in Bay Counties and the Reform Spreading.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 15.—A cloud obscures the horizon of the labor world in San Francisco and vicinity. A cloud which threatens to spread and o'ercast the sky and precipitate a storm that will sweep the union labor movement from its already crumbling foundations into the sea of oblivion.

The professional union labor leaders have heard the rumblings, have seen the signs of the approaching tempest, and are even now scurrying to get under cover.

Even the most optimistic trade unionist here is forced to acknowledge that the day of the union shop will soon be a thing of the past in San Francisco. The general public, which has suffered so long at the hands of the unionists and their tyrannical leaders, is quick to see the signs of the times and is waiting to welcome with a sigh of relief the open-shop policy soon to prevail.

It seems almost too good to be true, but it is, thanks to the bravery of a number of our employers' associations and the noble example set by the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association of Los Angeles.

The climax has come. The manufacturers and contractors of San Francisco must either disunionize the city or be ruined. The extortions of the labor unions have become so intolerable that the employers see that it will be cheaper to fight them than to give in to them longer. They see Los Angeles industries prospering with non-union shops and getting their business away. They first thought it would be possible to unionize Los Angeles, but they have given up that idea. The only alternative is to disunionize San Francisco. It will be done. The employers have got to do it or go out of business.

The open shop is already a reality in the adjoining county of San Mateo and in a portion of Santa Clara county. There the building contractors a short time ago decided to throw off the yoke of trade unionism. At first they were strenuously opposed by the unions, but like the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association of Los Angeles they stuck to it and won.

Today in San Mateo county practically all of the building contractors and those dealing in building material are conducting their business on the open-shop plan. Although the Building Trades Council officials deny it, it is a fact that the men working in the planing mills and employed by the building dealers and contractors formerly belonged to the unions, and are not, as the union leaders would have the public believe, professional strikebreakers imported from the East.

That the open-shop policy will spread not only to San Francisco but throughout the bay counties, is the prediction of one of the most influential contractors and dealers in building material on the peninsula. He stated this week that he was confident that by the first of January, if not sooner, the open shop would be in successful operation in all the bay counties, and that the unionized shop would be forever wiped out of existence. This man points to the open shops now in successful operation in San Mateo county and a portion of Santa Clara county.

The building contractors here are getting ready to fall into line and follow the example set by the contractors down the peninsula. They have formed a powerful organization with which every building contractor in San Francisco is affiliated, and that they mean business is readily seen from the statements given to the press that they intend to protect themselves and the building industry in San Francisco.

NON-UNION BUILDERS.

While it is not generally known, it is nevertheless a fact, that several big apartment-houses now in course of construction in the most desirable section of San Francisco, are being erected by non-union men and as far as is known the Building Trades Council is making no effort to unionize the jobs.

The fact is that the Building Trades Council, though it realizes the predicament it is in, is powerless to prevent or alter conditions.

San Francisco today is filled with mechanics seeking work. Many of them are men from the East who have been refused admission to the unions here, although they presented paid-up traveling cards from the unions to which they belonged in the East, on the ground that there is not enough work for the mechanics already in the unions. Others have long been identified with the union-labor movement in San Francisco, but who prefer to work for a living wage under good conditions, even though they work for an open-shop contractor, than to starve or permit their families to suffer while they hold out for the closed-shop and strictly union conditions.

All this is being accomplished in a very quiet way. The general public is hardly aware yet that the dawn of a new and more prosperous era and the freedom from the bondage of unionism is at hand. The Building Trades Council, however, realizes it, and is sending circulars throughout the country warning building mechanics to stay away from San Francisco and vicinity and stating that there is a concentrated effort by the employers to inaugurate the open-shop in San Francisco.

The Building Trades Council has long been considered the most powerful union-labor organization in the United States and it has long reigned supreme to the detriment of the building industry in San Francisco and greatly [illegible] the employer as well as the building artisans who were not willing to surrender their manhood and liberty to the leaders of the council and its unions.

Once the backbone of this organization is broken, and it will be as sure as there is a sky above us, it will be easy to persuade the unions of the other crafts to yield to the wishes of their employers and agree to the open shop.

This will mean everything to San Francisco. It will give the merchants and manufacturers an opportunity to compete with the merchants and manufacturers of other cities on an equal [illegible], and to the mechanics who refuse to bow [illegible] their manhood and liberty too [illegible] to the unscrupulous professional union-labor leaders, it will mean that they will be given a chance to earn an honest living.

[illegible] talking and boosting for home industry among the unions here of late. Talk is cheap. But here is a sample of the way the unions, or at least one of them, is actually boosting home industries: The Upholsterers' Union made a demand on the manufacturers of mattresses and upholstered furniture for an increase of 50 cents per day in wages and a half-holiday with pay on Saturdays. The men were getting $4 per day for eight hours' work with no half-holiday. The demands of the union were promptly refused and on Monday last 300 upholsterers quit work, completely crippling the mattress and upholstered furniture industry in this city.

What will be the result? Simply this: The home manufacturers find themselves unable to fill orders right in the midst of the busy season, while eastern manufacturers will reap the benefit. This is the way the unions are aiding the manufacturing industry in San Francisco.

There is still another phase of this strike of the upholsterers that is most significant and shows how the unions fail to keep faith with the employers. Two of the largest firms manufacturing mattresses in this city fought the Upholsterers' Union for many years. Finally, within the year, they signed up with the union and conducted business on the closed-shop policy. Now, when the union thinks that it has these manufacturers thoroughly subdued, it comes back at them with this demand for a half-holiday each week and an increase of 50 cents a day in wages.

The employers are heartily sick of the whole business and are determined henceforth to run their own business and the union will have to accept the terms offered by the employers or remain idle. An open-shop in this industry will be the result.

TWENTY PER DAY.

Labor Day will long be remembered by a certain prominent citizen of this city, who in order to complete plans for the coming-out reception of his daughter was forced to pay carpenters working on a temporary dancing pavilion $20 each for their services on Labor Day.

The carpenters who worked on the job, will also not forget the day. While they received $20 each for their day's work, it is reported that they were compelled to turn it all over, and then some, to the unions as fines for working on that day of days.

And this, in spite of the fact that both the employer and the employé were given to understand that there would be no objection on the part of the union to these men working on Labor Day providing they received $20 each.

VULNERABLE.

CLOSED SHOP IN THE COURTS.

DECISIONS ARE INVARIABLY AGAINST THE UNIONS.

Plenty of Precedents Have Now Been Obtained to Encourage Bringing Suits for Maintaining Strikes or by Workmen for Being Prevented Obtaining Employment.

The union demand for a "closed shop" never gets any encouragement from the courts, no matter where an appeal may be made to the legal tribunal for its decision. Nothing more than this is needed to indicate the illegality of this labor union movement, and nothing more should be needed to cause employers to maintain a firm stand against union domination. As at present conducted labor unions, while seeking to control the action of all employers, are themselves the closest kind of a trust. Despite their claims of benevolence towards their members, they are anything but benevolent. The members must walk in the straight and narrow path laid down by their leaders or fall into trouble.

Once well organized the unions refuse to enlarge their membership, except they are paid stiff initiation fees. In union-ridden San Francisco the initiation fee of the Musicians' Union is on a par with that of the Union League, Pacific Union, Bohemian and Family clubs, says one of the papers of that city. The fee for entrance in the musicians' trust is $100, and the committee on membership is so exclusive that it does not recognize the international body. It has Oakland as an active auxiliary and the two control the whole town and the State. Musicians not in the ring are driven into other occupations. Forty members compose the ring.

Certainly there is no charity, nor any friendship, nor any disposition to uplift other musicians than those who are in control of the union. And yet the cry is continually made that unionism is intended to uplift the workingmen by helping them to secure better wages and exclusive employment.

Another instance of the uncharitableness of unionism was the recent treatment in San Francisco of a member of the Elevator Constructors' Union, who fell ill and neglected to obtain a withdrawal card. The original initiation was fifty dollars, which the man paid to become a "brother" elevator constructor. After his illness his neglect to obtain a "withdrawal" card cost him another fifty dollars. He worked about two weeks and then fell sick again, this time with the fashionable ailment of appendicitis. He was successfully operated upon, but his savings were all exhausted before he fully recovered from the second affliction. He was denied a new card, but was allowed to make a living on a "permit card" which was issued once a week at the nominal price of $1.50. Even this was withdrawn after the second week and the man was told that his place had been filled by a member in good standing in the union.

The man's employer, who recognized his ability, decided to retain him, but the labor trust more potent than the United States government said that the employer could not have him, and so the luckless citizen wandered afield seeking the wherewithal to feed a wife and numerous children. He now has a place as a night watchman.

These things are done in such a way that the courts cannot get hold of them or the union labor trust would be so heavily assessed for damages to so many different spots that living would be a burden. The decision of the court in the case of the Danbury hatters shows that the courts have no use for labor-union methods.

Corporations suspected of restraining trade have been relentlessly pursued, while labor-unions have gone about destroying trade and bringing ruin upon firms and men guilty of no crime save that of going on their own way about their lawful concerns, because no one has taken the matter into the courts for redress.

The heavy verdict of the court in favor of the Danbury hatters will undoubtedly be followed by another heavy verdict in favor of the Buck Stove and Range Company, as when the suits recently instituted by C. W. Post are reached by the courts.

Many other suits with resultant verdict could be conducted were firms against which strikes have been maintained to secure "closed shop" conditions to take the matter into the court. The reason this is not done is because the manufacturers prefer to give their attention solely to their own business. The decision of Justice Goff of New York affords a sufficient basis for such suits. A strike which demands a "closed shop," he decided, is a conspiracy in restraint of trade. The firm against which such a strike is maintained could bring suit for damages or the non-union workmen who are prevented from obtaining work could do so, were they so inclined. The numerous court decisions of the past two or three years have made the union-labor movement very vulnerable.

Last month seven coal companies operating in the Irwin and Westmoreland coal fields of Pennsylvania brought suit in trespass against Francis Feehan, president of District No. 5, of the United Mine Workers of America, and seventy-four others, officers and members of the local, charging conspiracy in preaching sedition against the laws of the State and nation and with distributing inflammatory literature. The companies also assert that more than 10,000 men have been thrown out of work, and the plaintiff companies have suffered damages of $1,000,000.

It is charged that the organizers, mostly foreigners, have openly defied the State and Federal laws, uttered treasonable and incendiary language at meetings, "used the torch, gun and dynamite with as much freedom as though conducting authorized warfare," and have wantonly defied court injunctions.

The companies bringing the suits represent a capitalization of $50,000,000. Their bill states that the organizers led the strikers in marches upon and about the property of the companies to intimidate men at work, that men who remain at work have been in danger of their lives if appearing on streets, that court injunctions have been "wantonly defied," and that organizers in public meetings have urged resistance to the officers, calling them "bums," "blacklegs," "thieves," and "robbers."

THINGS JAPANESE.

The annexation of Korea will add about 12,500,000 to the population of Japan and lighten the general burden of national taxation, besides increasing Japan's supply of foodstuffs, lessening importation thereof. Relatively much more of Korea's area is tillable than of Japan's.

Bicycles are in general use in Japan. In 1909 the imported wheels numbered 19,649, of the value of $333,832, besides $800,324 worth of parts, the latter indicating that the Japanese manufacture of bicycles is increasing, although the home manufacture has never come near filling the home demand nor overcoming the belief that imported wheels are the best, says a consular report. Of these imports the American share has fallen from 52 per cent. in 1905, to 10 per cent. in 1909, while the British share has risen to 86 per cent. per cent.

Both imports and exports fell off in the first quarter of 1910, at the Japanese port of Tairen (late Russian Dalny.) Re-exports fell from $3,237,567 in the first quarter of 1909 to $63,553 in the 1910 period, while the total exports, $7,190,782 were $2,231,887, in spite of an increase of nearly $1,000,000 in Manchurian products exported. The imports were $3,028,251, a decrease of $188,865, caused in provisions, sugar, hides and textiles. Beans were the chief export, $4,723,489, besides $796,912 worth of bean cake, and $349,413 worth of bean oil. The Japanese are learning that foreign trade can not be forced into any particular port, no matter what are the regulations and restrictions, as trade, like water, always finds its own level.

Including Korea and Formosa, the Empire of Japan has a total population of nearly 66,500,000.

Japan proper has sixty-six cities, 1237 towns, and 13,957 villages, spread over an area of about 175,000 square miles.

Japan has 903,925 household tea factories; 391,114 home and other silk factories; 1997 operating mine companies; and 11,390 factories of all lines—establishments of the kind we class as factories. These latter employ 649,276 operatives.

Japan has 2157 commercial banks; 104 electric light companies; 10,720 corporations and partnerships; 5651 coöperative societies; and twenty-six electric railway companies.

Japan has 2260 merchant steamships; 5880 merchant sailing vessels (new style); and 22,276 sailing vessels of the old Japanese style. The steamship companies have a paid-up capital and reserve of $70,000,000.

Japan's money circulation is $259,000,000, and her banking capital and reserves amount to $314,000,000 and deposits of $807,000,000.

Japan has 6878 postoffices, and 24,973 postal routes, handling 1,500,000 pieces of mail yearly. The country also has 3571 telegraph offices and 723 telephone offices.

Commencing with Yokohama fifty years ago, Japan now has thirty-five ports open to the trade of the world. Harbor works are being pushed at Kobe, Yokkaichi, Nagoya, and Tsurugave.

Japan's government has organized a bureau for hydro-electric water power investigation. Great schemes in that line, are being projected (and some started) by foreign capital. For the investigation the country will be divided into seven sections, with a branch office in each section, says the Japan Financial and Economic Monthly, (an authority,) of Tokio.

Yokkaichi is an important port, situated in the Isewan, the largest Island Sea on the Pacific coast of the main island. Yokkaichi is next to Nagoya as an important industrial city.

Japan's postal business has increased 350 times since 1872, and the telegraph business 150 times since 1869.

The Yokohama Specie Bank has been designated as the official organ for the financing of Japanese Manchuria. The capital set apart for this purpose is, $1,500,000. So far, high interest rates have kept Manchuria back, the country being short of money.

THE HOWL OF THE BEATEN.

[EDITORIAL.]

RECENTLY the labor press and certain daily papers that cater to the unions from pecuniary motives, have had considerable to say about the alleged victory that the unions are winning over the manufacturers on the Pacific Coast.

Of course, there was not a word of truth in the boasts. The humbugs only wanted to put on a bold front, thinking that thus they would continue to rake in the golden graft from the poor duped unionist and; perhaps, frighten the small manufacturer into yielding to the demands of the union.

How well they have succeeded in the attempt is shown by conditions here in Los Angeles where the manufacturers are successfully continuing business at the same old stands—a condition of affairs that is duplicated in all the great cities on the Pacific Coast, with the exception of San Francisco, and even in that hotbed of unionism the employers are planning to assert their independence and the dawn of liberty in that union-ridden city is not far distant.

The union leaders, realizing that their little bluff has been called and that they can no longer deceive the people into believing that victory for the unionists is close at hand, have within the past week changed their tactics.

Instead of telling the public, particularly the trade unionists, how they have whipped the manufacturers into line, they are now busy making excuses for the industrial warfare which they say is being waged all along the Pacific Coast.

Their excuses are many and varied; but in this one particular they all agree, viz.: "The employers brought on the trouble and the employers alone are to blame."

As usual, in telling how it happened, the union leaders do not confine themselves to the truth, but resort to all sorts of fabrications, many of them absurd in the extreme, in order to win the sympathy of the public.

One of the most ridiculous causes assigned by the unions for the present alleged trouble in the metal trades on the Pacific Coast, and one designed to enlist the sympathy of the public, is the statement appearing in a certain daily paper, subsidized by the unions, to the effect that the Metal Trades Association brought on the trouble in order to drive white men from the foundries and machine shops and substitute in their places Hindus, Chinese and Japanese.

This statement is so false on the face of it that it is hardly worth notice, but there is a certain class of people to whom such an idea will appear plausible, and for this reason we desire to make plain the motives which actuated the union leaders in coming out with such a statement at this stage of the game.

It is acknowledged that the majority of the people on this Coast are opposed to Asiatic labor; at least that is the supposition. The union-labor leaders realize this and believe that if they can get the public to believe that the manufacturers are aiming to supplant white labor with Asiatic labor, they will win the sympathy of the public in their fight against the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association in Los Angeles and against the various employers' associations on the Pacific Coast; a fight which even the most sanguine trade unionist recognizes is already lost.

Again, the union-labor politicians in California are attempting to force candidates for political office to pledge themselves in favor of the exclusion of all Asiatics. Those who so pledge themselves are given the support and endorsement of the union bosses. Now, if they can arouse public sentiment on the Asiatic question, they are confident of electing the union-labor candidates to office and thus place the State of California in the control of union sympathizers; and through them they hope to whip the manufacturers and all employers of labor into subjection.

These are the real motives which actuated the union-labor leaders in circulating the canard that the employers have forced the unions into an industrial warfare with the view of installing Hindus, Chinese and Japanese in their places in the shops and factories.

The trouble, and its extent has been greatly exaggerated by the union leaders, was brought on by the unions themselves and not by the employers. Here in Los Angeles the unions made a demand for an increased wage, the eight-hour day and the closed shop. When their demands were refused they called a strike. Now, when they are beaten, and badly beaten, too, they begin to shout about the employer "forcing the fight on them."

The unions are beaten and might as well acknowledge the fact. To our way of thinking they are acknowledging defeat through the howl they are putting up about the tactics of the employers.

American Hop Growing.

IS NOW PRACTICALLY CONFINED TO THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST STATES.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

For a thousand years hops have been used in the manuufacture of beers. For centuries the hops of Bohemia and Bavaria have been favored for their excellence and crowned heads have quaffed the brew with delight. Germany and England had hop gardens as early as the eighth century, but gradually the industry of producing hops drifted to other parts of the world.

Hop culture on the Pacific Coast began about 1880, when the total acreage in the United States devoted to the crop was 46,800. In twenty years the acreage increased 10,000 acres, and the center of the industry had shifted to Oregon.

In 1849 the total production of the United States was 3,497,029 pounds, of which Oregon was credited with producing just eight pounds. No other Pacific Coast State had ventured even so far into the industry. In 1906 the product of the country had grown to 65,295,000 pounds, and Oregon had forced herself to the top of the list of producing States, with 23,985,000 pounds. California followed with 20,475,000 pounds and Washington was credited with 8,775,000 pounds. The total production of hops in the United States last year reached 49,209,000 pounds.

Culture of the hop was begun in the United States in 1626. In 1648 the people of Virginia were trying out the industry thoroughly. Not until 1800, however, did hop production take its place among the important industries of this country. Early in the last century Vermont produced seven-eighths of the American hop crop, while for fifty years the Stae has been entirely out of the business. In 1892 California marketed 40,000 bales.

The hop plant can be grown generally throughout the United States, but at present its commercial production is practically restricted to areas in the States of Oregon, California, New York and Washington. Small quantities are raised in Wisconsin, Idaho, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Vermont, Kentucky and Ohio.

Hop plants may be raised from seeds, but this method is seldom employed, since by using cuttings strong plants are more easily and quickly secured. Moreover, seedlings have a tendency to vary greatly, both as to the time of maturing the hops and the quality of the product. Yards planted with seedlings usually show little uniformity in the variety of hops produced and in the time of ripening. Seedlings will not produce hops the first year, and only a small yield may be expected the second year.

The simplest method of growing hop vines is from root cuttings, called "roots" or "sets." In some localities roots that have been in the nursery for one year are called "sets." The numerous surface runners sent out by the hop plant are removed when the plants are pruned in the spring, and these, cut into pieces each bearing at least two sets of "eyes" or buds, are used to produce new plants.

In some sections of the Pacific Coast a crop may be obtained from cuttings planted in the spring, but generally, a full crop is not harvested until the second year.

The time at which planting is done depends very largely on the local conditions existing where the crop is grown, but in general the best results are obtained by planting as soon as the soil can be worked into a fine mellow condition. In Oregon and Washington hops are planted in March or April, and in New York successful plantings have been made in April in favorable seasons.

The methods of cultivating the hop necessitates straight rows. Three and often four cuttings are set in each hill. Differences of opinion and practice exist, and the number which it is advisable to set is in a measure dependent on the system of training employed and the cost of the roots. The setting of a fourth root is a measure of precaution against the possibility of loss by rotting or injury of one or more of the cuttings after they are set.

The price of the roots is quite variable, ranging from one dollar per 1000 when they are plentifuy to from eight to ten dollars per 1000 in the years when they are scarce.

Except in the hop-growing regions of New York, the use of hop poles has been largely discontinued in those regions where there is a scarcity of available timber, and even in heavily wooded sections many growers have dispensed with them. This is not due to the labor and expense of handling alone, but experience has proved that it is only a question of time when poles will be almost entirely abandoned. The hops are healthier on strings, more successfully sprayed, mature earlier, are usually richer and brighter, arm out lower, and are not so leafy; they do not wind-whip so readily, can be picked cleaner, and are much more easily torn down for picking. Also the hops can be picked without cutting the vine, a practice which is harmful, since it prevents the return of materials from the vine to the root of the hop, and, by causing a loss of food reserves to the stock, produces a weakening effect on the succeeding crop.

When the young vines are about two feet long training is begun. Usually the four runners most closely approaching in length the average of the field are selected from each hill and the remainder are cut off. In case of an uneven stand it may be well to cut off the whole field and wait for the second set of runners. However, vines which may be inferior at first sometimes develop a vigerous growth after they have reached a length of four or five feet. Two runners are usually trained to each string, care being taken to twine them from left to right about the string.

The time when hops should be picked varies with the locality, the season and the variety cultivated. A consideration is the capacity of the drying plant to handle the crop as fast as harvested. If the acreage is large and the crop heavy, the facilities for handling and drying the hops will be taxed to their utmost, and if more hops are picked than can be put upon the kilns and dried without delay they undergo heating and are thereby seriously damaged in quality or lost entirely.

Another consideration, which is recognized by all progressive growers, is the effect of the picking time upon the quality of the product. The development of the essential oil, the desirable soft resins, and other valuable constituents reaches its height about the time the hops become fully ripe, in which condition they are generally regarded as possessing the finest flavor.

The object of curing hops is to reduce rapidly their moisture content to such a degree that they may be safely stored and their properties preserved. Hops must be dried soon after their removal from the vines, as otherwise they undergo a process of heating which seriously injures their appearance as well as their aroma and other valuable qualities. According to the variety and the degree of ripeness when gathered, freshly picked hops contain sixty-five to seventy-five per cent of moisture, but when in a dry state fit for storage or marketing they should contain only from ten to fourteen per cent of moisture.

The most important and at the same time most difficult part of hop production is proper drying. No other factor effects the quality, appearance, and market value as much as the manner in which the hops are handled during the curing process.

In the drying process three factors are of primary importance. These are (1) degree of temperature used; (2) length of time drying; (3) volume of air passing through the hops. Also, in drying at a very low temperature the humidity of the air is an important factor. Only the first two of the factors mentioned have been generally recognized, and the high temperatures used at present are the result of shortening the time of drying. It is possible to diminish the temperature materially without lengthening the time of drying by forcing through the hops a large volume of air at low temperature.

Hops are frequently cured in from ten to twelve hours, but, other conditions being equal, a higher temperature must be used than when the time is extended to eighteen or twenty hours. Even a moderately high temperature continued too long will damage the quality of the hops, the same as too high a temperature. In order that the hops may be dried at as low a temperature as can be made to do the work a strong draft is necessary during the drying to continuously carry off the moisture from the hops. There is no doubt that the principle of the air-blast kiln at present most satisfactorily meets these requirements.

The practice of sulphuring the hops, which is now almost universal, is a response to the demands of the market chiefly for the pale yellowish green grades. The use of sulphur not only gives the hops the desirable yellow color, but makes them more uniform in appearance, thus increasing their salability. Many dealers are guided more by color than by other qualities, and such dealers have been known to rate unsulphured hops as inferior, while sulphured hops from the same field were classed as choice.

The use of sulphur improves the color by bleaching, injures the micro-organisms present, thus probably improving the keeping quality and, according to a widespread belief, accelerates the drying. The sulphur is usually burned beneath the kiln floor at the commencement of drying. The usual practice is to use from 2 to 6 pounds of the sulphur for each 100 pounds of undried hops. The action of the sulphur is most energetic while the hops are yet fresh and damp.

A very important part of the successful curing of hops is the handling which they receive in the cooling or storage room. The building used for this purpose is generally detached from the drying kiln and placed at a distance of 100 to 200 feet as a safeguard against fire. The kiln is connected with the cooler by an elevated tramway, over which is run a large car carrying the freshly dried hops. The sides of the car are hinged so as to swing open from the sloping bottom, allowing the hops to be readily removed with little handling.

The hops are spread out on the floor of the cooler, where they lose their heat and absorb some moisture from the air. The stems are usually not so dry as the other parts of the hop, and during the sweating process the moisture is equalized and the hops become tough and pliable. The best-informed growers recognize that other important changes occur during the sweating process which materially effect the quality of the product. A finer and more pleasing aroma, as well as a better physical appearance, is developed during the sweating, provided the process is carefully watched and the hops prevented from becoming too moist or heated. Under ordinary circumstances these two evils are avoided by loosening up the hops and turning them over with forks or by moving them to another part of the cooler.

After the hops have been in the cooler for a week or ten days they will have passed through a sweating process and be in good condition to bale. Hops may be left in bulk for many weeks and suffer little injury if the storehouse is tightly closed to exclude atmospheric moisture. When suitable for baling, hops contain just enough moisture to make them pliable and to prevent their breaking when compressed. If too much moisture is present in the bale, the hops will soon heat and turn black, being damaged thereby both in color and aroma, or they may be ruined entirely.

The most serious problem confrontin the hop grower is how to market his product at a figure which will give a fair return for investment and labor. Owing in part to great fluctuations in prices, hop growing from a business point of view is extremely variable and uncertain.

WALL OF BROKEN CHINA.

Detroit Woman Saved All Her Broken China and Built It Into a Wall.

Mrs. Denier, wife of Capt. John Denier of Canfield-avenue Police Station, has built a wall of china in her residence, 300 Dragoon avenue, Detroit, and it is a question in the minds of her neighbors whether her feat does not rival that of building the Chinese wall, says the Detroit Free Press.

Old smashed china! Laid in kaleidoscopic patterns, with a keen view to color effects and size. A very patchwork of porcelain, bisque and glass. Heads of Dresden shepherdesses, executed in some catastrophe of dusting; triangular scraps of white and ruby glass, emerald, and amber bits of lemonade jugs long gone to perdition; heads of powdered marquises once the proud center of a plate, now diademed with glazed crowns that once did humbler duty as a breakfast cup; umbrella knobs and broken coffee pots are imbedded in this wonderful wall, among a hundred other things. Everything lost is "saved."

Mrs. Denier looked at her work with satisfaction as, pointing with just pride to the highly enameled metal ceiling of her unparalleled sun parlor and the neatly boarded varnished floor, she said: "I did it myself. Laid the floor, put four coats of paint on the ceiling, lathed the walls, put on the 'hard wall'—did everything.

"I have saved old china for years," explained this pattern of housewives. "Some of it because it was a household treasure and the rest because I meant to do something with the pieces I really valued some day—I didn't know what. Finally, this idea came to me, and I got all my friends collecting, too."

The china-walled conservatory is lined with flowering plants and palms, heated to the same temperature in winter as it gets in summer from its southern exposure, and equipped with armchairs and a phonograph. Over it fly snow-white pigeons, and behind it tiny chickens peck.

OUT OF WORK.

BLUNDERING OF UNION LEADERS.

CAUSED MANY STRIKERS TO LOSE PERMANENT POSITIONS.

Sugar Factory Strikers at Williamsburg, N. Y., Failed to Accept Opportunity to Return to Work When Strike Was Called Off and Other Men Were Put in Their Places.

The strike in the Williamsburg (N. Y.) sugar refineries has been settled, but a large proportion of the men who went out at the demand of the union leaders have failed to profit by the same. Of the situation the New York Tribune says:

"Now that it is all over, those most deeply affeted by it will proceed with the stock-taking that should have been made at the beginning. We do not attempt to say what were the merits of the contentions in which the men in the Williamsburg refineries based their determination to strike. Just at the present moment it probably doesn't matter much to them. All they know is that some one else is working within those walls, and they have not only failed to win the greater remuneration they demanded, but have lost the wage at which they had been working, after long idleness, which only a short time ago culminated in a riot, resulting in one death and many painful injuries.

"A few days ago the refinery people placed in the local newspapers an advertisement stating that, as reports of the destitute condition of the men had reached them and clergymen working among the strikers had appealed personally for them, an opportunity would be offered for all to return to their old work without prejudice. Some were for accepting this offer, but the number opposed to it was great enough to prevent those willing to go to work from embracing the opportunity. Thursday the managers of the refineries brought in an entirely new force of 1500 men, and when it was learned by the strikers that the places had been filled and they hurried to the offices of the company to get their old places back, they were told that their services were no longer required.

"Against the uncertainty as to the exact justification of the men who left their places in the refineries one thing stands out—that some one has blundered. Whether or not it was a leader with personal ends to serve, who led a body of men none too familiar with American conditions and none too well equipped for looking ahead and determining the probable outcome, is beside the question from the point of view of the hundreds of workless men who had depended for their livelihood upon the sugar refineries. Men do themselves a grave injustice when they enter upon a strike foreordained to failure, as this appears to have been. Perhaps if the men were to do it over again they would act differently, but the opportunity has passed. Doubtless at the end of a year some of the men who walked out will not have obtained positions as good as those they left. The strikers have lost in wages, the refiners have lost something in inconvenience, and perhaps a little in property, and the public has lost because of the expense to which it has been put in policing that part of the Williamsburg section. The public will continue to lose, because some of the strikers and their families are now and will continue for some time to be objects of charity. Did anybody gain? If so, there has been a crime as well as a blunder."

Union Oppression.

The Morning Democrat of Durango, Colo., was last week tied up by the refusal of the owner, D. F. Day, to sign a union contract. Mr. Day was willing to employ union men, but was unwilling to sign a contract. The contract was, however, presented with the ultimatum of signing or causing an immediate walk-out, and Mr. Day told the men to "git."

The same contract was presented the afternoon paper, after its edition was out. The contract was not signed. For twenty-odd years the owner, George N. Raymond, has acted in the capacity of "make-up" on the paper, at times doing the presswork. Mr. Raymond claims that had he not been able to do this, many times dull seasons would have forced suspension. Under the new contract it is provided that a union printer shall fill the position. Mr. Raymond claims the privilege of being able to work in his own office, and has appealed to the president of the International Union. Being a practical printer, he will be able to issue a paper each day, as it is not his intention to put on non-union men until all reasonable efforts have been exhausted.

Rewards for Factory Dynamiters.

A Peoria (Ill.) Dispatch announces that an aggregate of $12,000 reward has been offered for the apprehension of the perpetrators who dynamited the A. Lucas & Son's foundry and damaged the Russell manufacturing plant and the Peoria Cooperage Company, besides the two great steel girders for the new Peoria & Pekin Railway bridge.

Mayor Woodruff called a special meeting of the City Council, and upon his recommendation and that of Chief of Police Rhodes a reward of $5000 was authorized for information that will lead to the arrest of the dynamiters. Superintendent R. H. Johnson of the Peoria and Pekin Union has offered $2000 and has recommended to the company that the amount be made $5000.

McClintock & Marshall of Pittsburgh, manufacturers of the Peoria and Pekin Union girders, add $2000 reward, which will bring the total up to $12,000.

Labor Union Fallacies.

When Mr. Roosevelt tells workingmen that they should have shorter hours, higher wages and better terms of labor, whether as the result of legal regulation or of organization, he does not take into account the question of efficiency or productivity, says the New York Journal of Commerce. Labor cannot, any more than capital, arrogate to itself more than it earns, more than its share of the product of the industry in which it is engaged, without bringing trouble upon itself. If its hours are shortened without an increase of efficiency, it inevitably produces less and its just share in what is produced is lessened. If by some coercion it secures more than its share for a time, the industry will be made unprofitable and capital will gradually desert it until labor is constrained to do more for less pay and restore the industry to health. Forcing wages above the economic level for any industry will have a like effect. It is a matter that cannot be controlled by law or by combination without injurious results. Nobody is entitled to more than he earns, and what he earns depends upon how much his efforts contribute to the production of that from which all payment must come.

REVIEW OF THE WEEK---Lots, Lands and Building Developme

WORLD-BEATER.

DRIVE WILL BE SCENIC WONDER

Crown City Highway Project Ready for Council.

South Pasadena Also Said to Be Interested.

Good Realty Movement in the Near-by Towns.

PASADENA, Sept. 17.—The long drawn out controversy over Arroyo Drive is about to be forever settled. The ordinance, composed of some thirty pages of typewritten matter, is completed and passed for first reading. The second reading will be had next week when it will become a law and within a very short time the grading and paving of Arroyo Drive will be advertised and the contract let. The beautiful scenic drive will be forty-five feet wide with a thirty foot roadway. It will start at the boundary line with South Pasadena and run along the east bank of the Arroyo Seco, following the winding course of that wash, to Terrace Drive and Grand avenue.

It will be one of the most expensive pieces of work ever done in the city on account of the great amount of grading and the big fill required at the north end, where an eight per cent. grade will lead out onto Grand avenue and Arroyo Terrace. Near this point, which will probably be the most beautiful of the entire drive, it will pass under one of the great stone archways of the new Arroyo Seco bridge and thence wind around up the hill to the approach of the big bridge. The drive will also open out on Linda Vista drive which leads across the Linda Vista bridge. From this point there is now projected a county drive or roadway along the west bank to Devil's Gate.

It is believed that South Pasadena will also take up the project and extend the new driveway on south to the proposed new South Pasadena bridge near the ostrich farm. When all this work is done Arroyo Drive will excel in beauty and grandeur, in rustic scenery and natural embellishments any street or driveway in the United States. For nearly its entire length the drive will be lined on one or both sides with great spreading live oak trees, with glimpses now and then of the wild and rugged landscape of Arroyo Seco on the one side and the most beautiful residential section of Southern California on the other. This latter background is composed of Orange Grove and Grand avenues. From the drive can be seen the homes of many of the millionaires. It passes through Busch's gardens, skirts along The Blossoms, passes near Sunnycrest, and in plain sight of the Schiffman Italian Gardens. When completed Arroyo Drive will be without doubt a most popular drive for winter tourists mainly on account of the scenery and the pleasant sensation of whisking along the winding curves.

Three fairly good sales were reported during the past week. The William R. Staats Company sold to A. T. Bloomer of York, Neb., a beautiful lot at the corner of Grandin avenue and Huntington drive on which he will build a $25,000 home. Mr. and Mrs. Bloomer arrived in the city during the past week and until their new home is completed will live in the old Richardson homestead in Oak Knoll. Mr. Bloomer is a wealthy merchant of western Nebraska and has decided to make Pasadena his home.

The Citizens' Realty Company sold for Mary Burton to T. W. Nape a lot on Rolliston avenue adjoining the Sutton Villa tract, the consideration being $1000; also a house and lot at the corner of Elm and Maple to Dr. Schnell, a recent arrival in the city, for $1000. This is known as the Louis A. Bartlett home.

Building permits for the first half of September have again beaten the record with a total of $154,742 as against the entire month of September a year ago of $238,000; 1908, $136,806; and 1907, $114,000. Among the permits taken out the largest one was for the new home of Mrs. J. M. Burns, which is a two-story, sixteen-room residence at No. 1291 South El Molino avenue, Oak Knoll. Another good sized permit was taken out by Mrs. Irene Hammer for a two-story apartment house to be located at No. 416 North Raymond avenue.

Announcement has been made that the new Presbyterian chapel at the corner of Lincoln avenue and Montana street will be completed and dedicated October 1.

SHOE FACTORY PLANNED.

IS A PROMISING ENTERPRISE.

SAN DIEGO, Sept. 17.—Ground was broken this week for a two-story brick building, 50x140 feet, for the San Diego Shoe Manufacturing Company. It will be located on Sixteenth street between Logan and National avenues. Plans were drawn by Del W. Harris.

The ground floor will contain the business and executive offices and a portion of the machinery. The second floor will contain the cutting room, stitching room, operating and stock rooms. The building will be equipped with a freight elevator and two stairways.

The company has a paid-up capital of $40,000, the principal stockholders being H. A. Fuller, F. A. Garetson, Ray Garetson, A. C. Riordon, J. R. Carlisle and several Los Angeles men. Mr. Fuller is an experienced shoeman from Lynn, Mass. The capacity will be 600 pairs of shoes a day. Shoes for misses, boys and infants will be made. Employment will be given to 100 men and youths.

M. Hall will build on the east side of Third street between B and C, a one-story, fireproof building to be used as a moving-picture theater. It will cover a ground area of 50x100 feet and will contain the latest improvements embodied in picture houses. The cost will be $15,000. The house has been leased by a Los Angeles firm.

San Diego's building permits for this year are rapidly approaching the $3,000,000 mark. The week opened with a rush: Monday, twenty permits were issued, calling for the expenditure of $21,750 for new residences. New dwellings are to be built for the following: A. F. Hunt, Second street between Spruce and Thorn, $5500; J. R. Downs, Third street north of Lewis, $3000; A. D. Corditz, Second near Upas, $4000; A. D. Shockley, Union between Henry and Nermay, $5000; F. S. Sessions, Hoover between Lewis and Broadway, $4000.

Real estate sales are normal, transfers of small properties being numerous. Wells & Lane sold to Mrs. E. Caskey, 50x100 feet on the east side of First street between Fir and Grape, improved with an apartment-house, for $10,500.

The same agents, among other properties, sold the following: R. W. Belding, two lots on First between Date and Elm, $5500; N. S. Lowe, lot and five-room house on Twenty-first between B and C, $3200; A. A. Buck, lot on Twenty-first between B and C, improved with a house, $3000; Hilarie Cessmat, two lots and five-room cottage, Second between Broadway and Union, $2750; M. A. Luce, two lots on J between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth, $1000.

D. T. Colson, a garage owner, has bought a six-room house on a lot 50x100 feet on Falcon street between Douglas and Bush, for $3150. The property was sold by Charles F. O'Neall for Nathan Rigdon.

O'Neall sold for Oscar Creekmuir two lots on the west side of Goldfinch between Getti and Lewis, for $1050. The purchaser is M. C. Evans, who will build.

J. C. Rice sold to A. T. Johnson 50x120 feet with a six-room house, at the southwest corner of Stephens and Stockton, for $5000. Rice also sold to R. L. Johnson 50x100 feet on First street between Cedar and Date, improved with a modern flat, for $7000.

Sales by M. Hall: On Marine View to R. C. Thayer, $600; lot, same street, to B. C. Thayer, $900; five acres of Pueblo tract to Harry Fulton, $2500; block in Old Town, to Union Title and Trust Company, $2500; block in Middleton, to Union Title and Trust Company, $5000; block in Higgins's addition to Union Title and Trust Company, $2800; lot in Seaman & Choate's addition to Henry M. Roberts, $300; two lots in Ocean Beach Park to Miss Amelia Schmack, $500.

READY FOR SERVICES.

INDIAN MISSION COMPLETED.

SAN JACINTO, Sept. 17.—A fiesta is now in full swing here in celebration of the completion of the Indian Mission of the Roman Catholic Church at the San Jacinto reservation. The structure, which has just been prepared for the first services, was constructed entirely by Indian labor. The mission is in charge of the Rev. Father William Hughes, who has made a distinct success in administering to the spiritual welfare of Indian communities in the Southwest.

The plans for the edifice were drawn by Albert C. Martin of Los Angeles, designer of many notable Catholic churches and institutions in Southern California. The building is of reinforced concrete construction and fireproof. The seating capacity is about 100. The church has already withstood one earthquake shock without suffering any damage.

REMODELING BANK.

LONG LEASE ON PREMISES.

ONTARIO, Sept. 17.—The heavy steel girders arrived the first of the week and work has started upon the extensive remodeling of the Agnew block at the corner of A street and Euclid avenue, that means practically a new building for the First National Bank. The work is being done by Contractor Wiechman of Los Angeles, after plans drawn by Architect Earle Remington.

The bank already occupies the corner of the building. This space, together with an additional thirty-five feet fronting on A street, will be worked over into new banking quarters. When the work, as planned, is finished the block will be practically rebuilt.

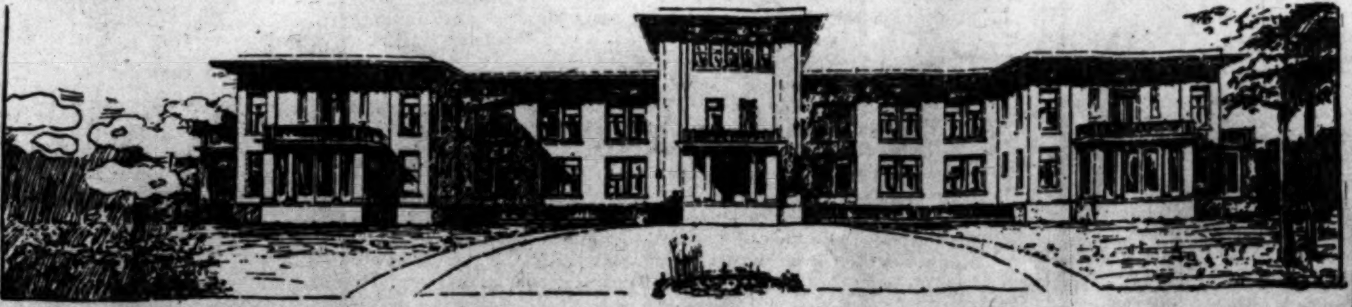
The lower floors will have a frontage of plate glass and ornamental pilasters. The interior will be finished with ornamental steel ceiling and decorated walls. Two new steel-lined, concrete vaults are to be built for safety deposit boxes. The fixtures will be of marble and mahogany. There will be a ladies' room, safety deposit lobby and coupon booths. Floors will be of tile.

A thirty-two-year lease has been given the First National Bank by the owners of the premises. The improvements will represent an investment of over $20,000.

Earle B. Williams has sold his home property on West G street, consisting of a lot and six-room bungalow, to Everett Henry for $3000. Mr. Williams has plans being prepared by Architects Taylor and Graettinger for a new home, that he will erect upon his ranch property.

The Minter Hardware Company has purchased of D. H. Akey the two-story brick business block at Nos. 116-8 Euclid avenue, which now houses their business, for $12,500.

PROPOSED FIREPROOF HOSPITAL FOR SANTA BARBARA PRACTITIONERS.



Model structure designed by Architect E. Russel Ray of the Channel City.

PLAN FIREPROOF HOSPITAL.

WORKING DRAWINGS COMPLETE.

SANTA BARBARA, Sept. 17.—Working drawings have been completed by Architect E. Russel Ray of this city for the unique Cottage Hospital building which is to be erected by the Cottage Hospital Association of Santa Barbara. The construction of the structure will, in all probability, be started within the next two months.

The plans for the hospital embody many unusual features and the arrangement and equipment will be the most modern in type. The building will be absolutely fireproof, being of reinforced concrete construction. The floors and roof will be of concrete and the partitions of hollow tile.

The building will have a frontage of 172 feet by a depth of sixty-one feet, and will be two stories in height excepting in the center, which will boast three stories. The architecture will be classic. Accommodations will be provided for about fifty patients. The operating department will occupy the third story of the central portion of the hospital. The present hospital building will remain where it is.

Mayberry & Parker of Los Angeles, are the engineers of the building.

TOWN IS GROWING.

MANY TRACTS TRANSFERRED.

WESTMINSTER, Sept. 17.—Many strangers are settling here. Among the recent sales are: R. McClintock's home place to J. W. Alvas of Los Angeles; A. B. Solomon, thirty acres, improved, to B. Benson, Los Angeles; H. Smith, twenty acres, improved, to a Long Beach buyer; F. J. Molique, five acres, improved, to a Long Beach buyer; E. C. Phelps, forty acres, improved, to an Anaheim man; A. Langto, one acre, improved, to H. Francis of Chicago.

A. B. Solomon has sold his stock and implements and leased his thirty-seven-acre ranch for one year to Ernest Stanfield of Montebello.

REPORT GROVE SALES.

GOOD PRICES FOR ACREAGE.

HEMET, Sept. 17.—Sales by the Hemet Realty Association follow: Fairview Land and Water Company to Ellen L. Cash, twenty-three and one-half acres in the Fairview tract of unimproved orange land, about $4000; L. B. and J. L. Turner to A. L. Belton, twenty acres, unimproved, in Hemet tract; twenty acres, unimproved, in Hemet tract, $10,000; Guy W. Paquette to W. L. Sears, two and one-half acres in the Hemet tract, $2000.

GROVE CHANGES HANDS.

THOUSAND DOLLARS AN ACRE.

AZUSA, Sept. 17.—The Case Realty Company reports the sale for Mrs. J. W. Sheaf to Walter Heth of an orange grove containing about five acres on Gladstone and Azusa avenues. The consideration was approximately $5250.

PEN AND SQUARE.

CONSTRUCTION RECORD LARGE.

Building Permits Indicate a Live Season.

Big Projects Few, But Small Ones Numerous.

Realty Men Report Buyers Intend to Build.

The architects of the city continue to report new local and out-of-town commissions for various kinds of buildings and indications point to a busy fall and winter in the different draughting offices. At the moment things are not quite so lively as a month ago, but many of the designers are still engaged in working on plans for structures that have already been featured in the news and comparatively at least, the present month may be considered a good one in construction circles. The building permits are looming up in big totals and former September records appear to be doomed.

The only real falling off to be noted in most offices is in the class of big projects, huge downtown business blocks and the like. The demand for residence plans and for drawings for apartments and small business structures is strong, representing as it does the expansion of the city in population. Realty men report that an unusual proportion of lot buyers will at once erect substantial improvements. Altogether, conditions appear to be bright in the local building business.

Following are a few of the projects not reported in other parts of the real estate section of the paper: Train & Williams are preparing plans for a fourteen-room residence to be built for Mrs. M. F. Shannon in the Victoria Park section. The house will be of cement plaster exterior over a concrete foundation and will have brick porches. The appointment will be elaborate. The same architects have completed plans for the theater and store buildings which are to be erected by Fred Barnum at Eighth and Broadway.

G. W. Grimes has had plans drawn by Garret and Bixby for a ten-room dwelling to be built on Fairmount Drive, near Alta. The exterior will be rustic in effect. Edelman and Barnett have finished designs for an eleven-room house to be erected by J. B. Jacobs at Catalina and Eighth. These projects have both been previously mentioned in The Times.

Dennis and Farwell have drawn plans for a one-story brick building on Broadway, between Eighth and Ninth. The Southern Trust Company is the owner. The structure will contain three handsome storerooms. C. C. Rittenhouse has completed plans for a three-story apartment house of frame construction to be built for A. L. Jamieson on Flower near Second. The structure will contain sixty rooms. Plans have been completed by Thornton Fitzhugh for a two-story reinforced concrete bank building which will be erected at Monrovia by E. T. Hargrave.

Arthur S. Heineman has drawn plans for an eight-room residence to b by Robert Adams in the Wilsh trict, for a seven-room house erected by Arthur Keitch in Pasadena and for an attractive to be built by T. J. Rivers at and Second. Frank Matthis has designs drawn by John P. Kremp an eight-room house on Garfield Hollywood.

E. A. Strause has had designs by Eager and Eager for a large of the Italian Renaissance type erected on New Hampshire street Third. The exterior will be of plaster The interior will be finished in mahogany. B. Cooper bett has finished plans for a of the same style of architecture erected on Lake street near G. W. Maxon.

John P. Krempel has finished for a large concrete and brick which is to be built for the Brewing Company at Amelia and mercial streets. Plans for a flat building for H. N. Cohen at and Normandie have been complet L. S. Moore. E. C. Kent has com drawings for a one-story brick building at Seventh and Lake. & W. Thum Company of Pasade the owner. Plans for a one-story theater building to be erected on near Fourth by Dr. West Hughes been completed by Hunt & Burns.

F. H. Peters is preparing plans sanatorium to be erected by the helm Sanatorium Company at place. The structure will cost $20,000 and will be of hollow til struction.

FOR EXCHANGE—
Country Property.

FOR EXCHANGE—

10-acre Valencia orange grove at Azusa. Only one mile from the center of town, with the old Azusa water plant right. The whole ten acres is planted to 2-year-old Valencia budded trees. Price $12,000. Will exchange for a residence in the Wilshire district.

20-acre orange grove in the beautiful colony of Etiwanda, near the proposed line of the Pacific Electric Railroad, that is now building. This land is solid to Washington navels, from 10 to 12 years old. With a perfect water right in pipes and distributing cement flumes over the land. The owner of this land is compelled to live in this city and will accept good residence in the southwest or vacant lots on the high ground west of the city, in payment for the property.

This is an income property. With proper care will produce 10,000 boxes of oranges a year. Price $25,000.

CHARTER OAK.

$25,000 for a 19-acre orange grove near the Los Angeles Electric line at Charter Oak. All Valencias and navels. It is decidedly the best 4-year-old grove in the district. There is an abundance of water. City property up to $10,000 will be considered in part payment.

MENTONE HEIGHTS.

$25,000 for 20 acres on Mentone Heights, Redlands district, with 15 acres in oranges, 16 years old, about 1-3 navels, 1-3 sweets and 1-3 Valencias, that will pay $5000 a year at the present price of oranges. With two free water rights. With the water in pipes and fine distributing rock and cement flume. Cottage, barn, team, wagon, harness and implements.

The location is sightly, the soil is perfect. The oranges command the top price. No scale, no frost, to injure a single orange. School and packing house within half mile.

If you know what a free water right means to an orange grower, no frost, no pest, you will think this a cheap place.

The present owners will allow $5000 for the crop now on the trees. A cash payment of $5000, and the balance at the rate of $2500 a year.

They will accept in lieu of the crop a house in Pasadena, Alhambra, or near a high school, in one of our pleasant suburbs.

FOR EXCHANGE—

CHOICE VALENCIA ORANGE GROVE.

IN THE FULLERTON-PLACENTIA DISTRICT.
20 acres surrounded by the highest class VALENCIA property in the State. In the VERY HEART of the choicest district, near the "CHAPMAN RANCH."
10 acres of "Late Valencias," in the very pink of condition; IN BEARING with excellent crop, well set. Reliable estimates place crop at least 1200 boxes.
10 acres of large walnut trees; "the finest ever," and "just loaded" with nuts.
The trees attest the quality of the soil, which is a rich black loam as fine as anything in this State or elsewhere.
WATER in abundance and cheaper than most sections.
AN ABSOLUTELY FROSTLESS DISTRICT, and this can be proven to satisfaction of the most skeptical.
The grove is bound to be a BANNER PRODUCER; will unquestionably increase in value $10,000 in two years.
Prompt disposition of this property is imperative, owner is forced to leave State for indefinite period.
We would like 1-3 cash, as first payment, or will consider some "good lots" in "Western" part of city; a couple of "New Bungalows" or "Wilshire Residence" for part payment.
Please do not submit anything not first-class, and please submit your good property promptly.
CASH PRICE $35,000.

THERE ARE GOOD OPENINGS FOR three or four kinds of business in Perris, Riverside county, Cal. The best of all is a comparatively small modern dry goods and notion store, with a stock large enough to hold the largest portion of the trade that now goes to a town 18 miles away and to Los Angeles. Which I think amounts to from $40,000 to $50,000 a year, possibly more. The income tributary to this village amounts to $1,500,000 a year and is increasing rapidly. There are over 400 depositors in the local bank, as an old dry goods man, retail and wholesale, I am positive that this is a very good opening for a live, up to date man, with a capital of from $5000 to $8000 to start with, to be increased to $10,000 within a year. Such a man with above capital can turn his stock rapidly. The one modern store room that I am holding for this business is 25x72 feet, this with two or possibly three stores are in two-story brick buildings, some will not be ready for use before Oct. 20. The one store will be held for dry goods and notions only, and is not for rent with capital of less amount than amount mentioned above. There are good openings for several other kinds of stores, but no general store and will not rent to conflicting business. Free water and acetylene gas at about cost. T. H. SHARPLESS, Perris, Riv. Co., Cal.

DO YOU WANT THE LITTLE WONDER money-maker? It is sure to bring money your way. Can't help it. Easily handled by any one from any place. Besides, it requires almost no capital, as all the work is done by correspondence. It deals with the present post-card craze, yet you have no cards, no printed matter of any kind to buy or sell. Complete plan and sample sent postpaid to any address upon receipt of $1. If you follow my instructions and fail to make money I will cheerfully refund your money. Can I do any better?

MONEY WITHOUT THE KNOWLEDGE OF FRIENDS OR EMPLOYER.

Anybody housekeeping or wage-earners can get $10 and upward from us. If you have a regular position we'll make you a loan on your own name—unknown to employer.

SMALL EASY PAYMENTS.

Weekly or monthly, repay the loan. You know, perhaps, that it's a hard matter to get a sum of money together to meet emergencies that often arise. However, there is no reason why you should destroy your peace of mind and the comfort that a little money would give you, when you can get it from us quickly and privately.

OUR RATES ARE THE LOWEST.

No other concern can equal our terms and you are assured quick service. Don't hesitate or be at all timid about coming to us for money. If you cannot call, write or phone and our man will call and arrange a loan at your home. Phone Main 6346.

CHANGES HIS PLEADING.

Ramon M. Wiley, College Boy an Football Player, Guilty of Robbery, Will Ask Probation.

Late yesterday, Frank F. Pratt, attorney for Ramon Manuel Wiley, wh has been in jail for several month awaiting trial on a charge of robbery took the prisoner before Judge Davis in the Superior Court, and change his plea to that of guilty, and the cas was set for further hearing on nex Friday morning.

Mr. Pratt has just returned from th East, where he visited the parents o Wiley at Riverford, N. J., and verifie practically all that the young fellow has told of himself.

It will be recalled that Wiley wa caught by a number of persons, wh gave chase after he had robbed th residence of F. J. Yankie on Bonni Brae street, of a quantity of jewelry.

The prisoner, who is 24 years of ag is not of Mexican parentage, as hi name would seem to indicate, but h was named by President Diaz of Mexico, who stood as his godfather. At th time the boy was born, the elder M Wiley and wife were living in the Cit of Mexico, where the former had contract for putting in a conduit system, and he was in close friendshi with Diaz.

Mr. Pratt verifies the statement th young Wiley was a member of th Princeton football team at one tim and that he has also been a student the University of Pennsylvania. He said to have never before been in serious trouble, and was never befor charged with a crime.

His parents say that he was in po session of at least $1200 when h reached Venice, in company with woman, and that he must have go through with all of this before h sought menial work at the seaside r sort.

It is the purpose of Mr. Pratt make a strong plea to have Wile placed on probation, and is prepare to state to the court that a positio has been secured for him. Wiley, a matter of course, never denied th robbery, for he was caught red-hande but entered a plea of not guilty in order that he might secure his leg rights.

PROPOSE SEWER BONDS.

Building Projects in Anaheim Held Abeyance Because of Lack of Drainage System.

ANAHEIM, Sept. 17.—Mayor Ru announces that Anaheim will be calle upon to vote sewer bonds this yea He says the City Trustees are solidl for it, and the business men are urgin the matter daily. The City Truste are desirous of bringing the matter a vote at the earliest possible tim and he believes that time will arriv before the end of the year. Severa building contracts have been temporarily sidetracked because the investo do not care to go ahead with buildin until this matter is settled.

LEARNS "JUICE" YOUNG.

Anaheim has a moving picture sho owned, operated and installed by a la 15 years old. All the wiring and electrical appliances are the handiwork the boy, and the results obtained a remarkable for their excellence. an early age he showed an aptitude f electrical work, and has mastered th details better than most of the grow workmen.

Voting is now in progress for th maid of honor to represent Anahei at the Orange County Carnival Products at Santa Ana. Votes are so at 1 cent each at the various store the proceeds of which will be used buy the victorious girl a costume f the occasion. Miss Elsie Meinecke at present the leader in the contest about 800 majority over her neare competitor.

The following sales have been ma this week: H. A. Todd, five acres Olive road to Mr. Green, for $3500. Sa Hemmerling sold twenty acres sout east of the city to H. W. Chase Los Angeles for $7000.

PRINCIPAL PROTESTS.

Head of Manual Arts High Sch Speaks at Mass Meeting Against Car Barn Location.

Action in line with a protest again the establishment of trolley car bar south of Agricultural Park was tak at a mass meeting held last evening Forty-eighth street and Central avenue.

Dr. Albert E. Wilson, principal of t Manual Arts High School, southwe of Agricultural Park, raised his voi against the location of the barns proposed and gave reasons. He sa the Board of Education has boug ten acres and already expended $340 000 on the school for which a total e penditure of $500,000 is in prospec That and the Agricultural Park improvements, he said, will, with the fi residences in the neighborhood, ma a snow place which would be sad marred by the presence of the barns.

Among other reasons Dr. Wilso urged against girl students having pass where many of the carmen are o duty, although he wished to make clear that he has a high regard f the men generally.

A representative of the street ra way company took issue to Dr. Wilson's remarks and argued that th presence of the barns would not be detrimental to the neighborhood.

A committee consisting of Gardne Curran, Dr. Lyman Gregory and F. Tucker was appointed to wait o the Mayor, the City Attorney and th City Council and present the situatio to them.

A committee to wait on the stre railway company was appointed composed of C. E. Cort and Messrs. Va and Ballou.

PHOENIX HAS A CASE IN COURT.

Sewer Concern Files Suit to Force a Sale.

Alleges City Agreed to Buy Present System.

Would Prevent Bond Issue for Another.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Sept. 16.—The uilding of a municipal sewerage sys-em is to be fought by the Phoenix ewer and Drainage Company, which as just filed suit in the District Court prevent the city of Phoenix from elling $400,000 worth of municipal onds till the city government has ful-lled an alleged contract to purchase e present sewer system, owned by e plaintiff corporation.

This system covers only the busi-ess section of the city. It is small nd entirely inadequate, compared ith the elaborate system planned by ngineers for the city at large.

The company alleges that its prop-ty is worth $82,000, inclusive of the alue of a farm southwest of the city. s yearly revenues are set at $4000.

The franchise yet has thirty-one ears to run. According to the fran-hise ordinance, after five years the ty was given an option to buy the ewer on appraisement, and this ac-on is now demanded.

It is also alleged that the action of e City Council in calling a bond ection was illegal and that the whole ection thus far is void, inasmuch as correct ordinance has been passed vering the transaction.

ARIZONA INCORPORATIONS.

Of extreme interest to incorporating gns, lawyers and newspapers in hoenix especially is the late decision the Supreme Court of California the case of Thomas vs. the Went-orth Hotel Company, an Arizona cor-ration.

The judgment of the court was that e laws of California are over such corporation with respect to all the siness it may do in California, and, erefore of no avail is the very es-ntial provision in all Arizona incor-rations that "the private property of ockholders shall be exempt from lia-ility for the payment of corporate bts."

This one provision has been the eatest single reason for the rush of corporations to Arizona, where the corporation laws have been adver-ed as "the most liberal in the Un-n."

In reality they are loose, rather than eral, drawn for the purpose of bring- hither the fees demanded, which, the way, are notably low. These s at first went to the Secretary's ice, but a Legislature, finding the cretary growing too rich, later ned the work over to the Terri-ial Auditor's office, and the income o the Territorial treasury.

This income now amounts to about ,000 a year. A half dozen incor-ration firms keep busy in supply- work for the Auditor's clerks, and e supply seems everlasting. The eater number of the companies thus corporated are said to be ephemeral d many are claimed to be even audulent.

TOO MANY TEACHERS.

The Arizona teachers' supply almost s overstocked in the September ex-inations, whereat 111 applicants pre-nted themselves. A large number re granted Territorial certificates on edentials, including the following-med from California:

California State Normal—Martha R. oney of Douglas, Bess Given of Bis-e, Ethel A. Carr of Florence, Maude Y. Martin of Ash Creek, Edna orge.

University of Southern California—rolyn M. Hidden, Blanch M. Robert-n of Prescott.

One negro secured a certificate and ll teach in the colored school that to be started this term in Phoenix. The schools of Phoenix begin next nday, and the trains from California w are crowded with families hurried ck on this account. As several new hool buildings are not complete, it become necessary to hire a num-r of storerooms for temporary use.

Work has been begun on construc-n of the buildings of the new cement ll near Tempe, on the north side of lt River, and beside the Phoenix and stern tracks. The machinery will from the abandoned Reclamation rvice mill at Roosevelt, purchased by local company of business men.

The drought still continues in Cen-al Arizona, and with cooler weather ere seems to be little probability of in in the near future. About 40,000 re-feet of stored water remains in e Roosevelt reservoir, only about ough to last a month longer, when e normal flow of the Salt and Verde vers will have to depended upon. less there be fall rains, little grain ll therefore be planted in the valley out Phoenix.

PLEASING THE SENSES.

ighty Subjects Will Give Way to Enjoyment of Music at Association Social.

An excellent programme has been ranged by the Brooklyn-Evergreen sociation for the social to be given xt Thursday evening at Forest ave-e and Malabar streets. The associa-n is urging the extension of the ooklyn-avenue car line and the es-blishment of a public school in that ighborhood, but these subjects will laid aside Thursday night to en- the musical programme provided. There will be vocal solos by Miss May Moyer, Mrs. William Frauenberger and William E. Bloomfield. There will be selections by the Glee Club, a reading by Miss Pentecost, a mandolin and guitar duet, flute solo, piano solo by William Harding, and the Hughey Trio; Miss Gray will make a brief address on the work and aims of the association.

At the last meeting of the association the following officers were elected to serve for six months: Otto Schultz, president; James L. Pentecost, vice-president; J. W. Owen, treasurer; George S. Welch, secretary. A. H. Neigehauer, J. B. Lawyer and William Edmondson were elected members of the executive board.

YOUNG GIRL MISSING.

Comes to City to Buy School Books and Fails to Return Home.

Since she left her home in Sawtelle, yesterday morning, to come to this city to buy school books, nothing has been seen of Miss Addie Short, 14 years old. Her father, J. A. Short of No. 912 Oregon avenue, Sawtelle, asked the detectives last night to try and locate her.

The father does not think that the girl has run away, but believe that she may have gone to one of the beaches with some friend. She had but sufficient money with her to purchase her school supplies and return home.

After talking with Short a few minutes about his family affairs the detectives expressed the belief that the girl may have gone to visit relatives in the city, and failed to notify her father.

MILLIONS MOVED IN VANS.

Like So Much Cordwood Bank Transfers Cash from Old Building to New in Chicago.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Four millions of dollars in gold and currency were conveyed through the streets of Chicago today as if they had been so much cord wood. They were tumbled haphazzard into waiting vans and driven through the traffic of two city blocks to the new home of the National City Bank of Chicago.

One slight incident alone marred the orderly process of installation today. Cabinet makers, who were working on the new building, placed a pane of glass in the gaping partition and incurred the displeasure of union labor. A truce was finally patched up when the bank officials ordered the glass removed.

All day long and until well into the evening there was a great stir of activity in the vicinity of the Woman's Temple on the second floor of which the bank has had its home since its organization three years ago. Clerks and officials started papers and greenbacks, making them up into portable packages ready for carriage and porters stumbled under loads of accounts which were destined for the new building.

It is no easy task to transfer the entire business of a great metropolitan banking stitution from one home to another, but by banking hours on Monday all the kinds will have been straightened out.

SAN JUAN AT FLOOD STAGE.

Many Towns Washed Away—Others Under Water in Texas—Citizens Flee to Hills.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

HIDALGO (Tex.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The valley of the San Juan River, from the point where that stream empties into the Rio Grande, just above here, all the way to Monterey, 150 miles, is suffering a repetition of the flood of one year ago, which caused the loss of more than 3000 lives.

The present flood is reported to have swept away a number of small towns, which had been rebuilt. The town of Camargo, fifty miles above here, is under water. The inhabitants had warning of the coming torrent and fled to the hills. The Rio Grande is at flood stage for 125 miles along its lower course.

WHITTIER, IDEAL CITY OF HOMES.

Oil, Citrus Fruits and Walnuts, Resources of Great Wealth for the Community—Excellent Moral Environment. Educational Facilities Exceptional.

[SPECIALLY CONTRIBUTED TO THE TIMES.]

"A life not void of pure intent,
With small desert of praise or blame;
The love I felt, the good I meant,
I leave thee with my name."

Thus wrote John Greenleaf Whittier, the Quaker poet, as he gave his name to the jewel city of the Puente foothills. All that the poet breathed in his verse—the love he felt, the good he meant, his general character, in fact—seemed destined to become characteristic of the town. Quiet, conservative and reserved, but continually progressive as was the man, so likewise has been the town. Distinctive and refined above the average, the select people of this community have built up a city which has become a splendid educational center with a model home environment.

"Where is there a retreat from the hum and whirl of the busy city?" cries out the broken-down business man of the metropolis. "Where can I find a profitable investment for my capital?" asks the Easterner desiring to live in California. "Where will I turn to find select educational facilities for my children?" queries the homeseeker. To these we suggest Whittier, feeling that a visit to the town and a talk with its people would be sufficient to convince.

Whittier is a clean, wholesome city, not contaminated by any of the undesirable influences very often found in other towns of its size. There has been hardly need of police protection since the town was founded, and the City Marshal's chief duty as an official is to draw the monthly endowment donated to him by the taxpayers under the name of "salary." Occasionally the Marshal has arrested an intruding peace disturber from some other town, but even this is a rare circumstance, for the roisterers from afar cannot mix with the elements to be found in Whittier, so there is nothing to attract them. The fact that there are no saloons and that the people would not tolerate one is perhaps the chief reason for the orderly condition of the city.

SETTLEMENT.

In 1881 Aquila Pickering headed a band of Quaker colonists from Chicago to the West. This party finally located on what they thought was an ideal homesite and commenced their settlement. They named their community Whittier after their beloved Quaker poet. John Greenleaf Whittier later came to see the town and wrote a short poem concerning it, the first verse of which appears at the commencement of this article.

The town had been peopled only a short time when the Southern Pacific ran a spur from its main line through the settlement. Similar action was soon made by the Santa Fé and Salt Lake roads also. The greatest advantage, however, which the town received in its railroad communication, was when the Pacific Electric built its line connecting Whittier direct to Los Angeles, supplying a fast and convenient service with the metropolis.

Whittier lies fourteen miles east of Los Angeles and is reached by either the Pacific Electric or the Southern Pacific railroads. The Santa Fé and Salt Lake roads have a station at Los Nietos, about one and a half miles from the city. The electric cars run once every hour all through the day, with a half-hour service during early morning and late in the afternoon.

PUBLIC CONVENIENCES.

The town was incorporated under the laws of California as a city of the sixth class, in 1898. Its present area is about [illegible] acres. The population has been continually increasing ever since the foundation of the town and today it numbers a little over 5000 people.

The assessed valuation of the city property for the present year is $2,-[illegible], and the taxation rate is $1.72. The city owns its own water and sewer systems. The water is obtained from wells two miles out of the city and pumped to a high elevation in the hill just east of the town. Here it is collected in a large reservoir, furnishing a constant supply and fine pressure to the inhabitants. From the time the water is taken from the well until it is used in the home, it is not for an instant exposed to the daylight, and this is why cool, fresh water may drawn from the tap on the hottest day. The people pay a flat rate of $1 for the use of this water, and they are entitled to use all they want for a house and lot at this rate. This is one of the cheapest water rates in this part of the State. The entire system cost in the neighborhood of $[illegible], and is large enough to supply [illegible] people.

The newly constructed out-fall sewer system is a fine example of municipal engineering. There is about twenty-five miles of sewer pipe laid through the streets, through which the sewage is led out of the town a distance of four and one-half miles, and is then disposed of on a 100-acre sewer farm, after being purified in an aseptic tank. The entire system represents an outlay of [illegible].

Whittier has fifteen miles of graded, oiled and sidewalked streets, and one-half mile of asphaltum-paved streets. All the improved streets of the city are lighted by sixty-watt Tungsten electric lamps, [illegible] forty-two-candle power. These are placed every 150 feet all through the city, there being from three to five on a block. The main streets are illuminated with large arc lights at every corner.

All the electricity for both illuminating and power purposes is furnished by the Southern California Edison Company at the rate of 10 cents per kilowatt.

A local gas plant supplies the residents with gas for both lighting and heating at the rate of $1.35 per 1000 cubic feet. The pressure has been good and the service satisfactory.

Both the Home and Sunset telephone companies have established their systems at Whittier. Connections are made to Rivera and the La Habra Valley without extra toll, and communication with Los Angeles can be had at the rate of 15 cents for three minutes.

In June, [illegible], the Whittier postoffice commenced a free city delivery to all residences and the people have enjoyed this service ever since. The total receipts of the postoffice for the fiscal year ending June, 1909, were $12,867.05, and for the year 1910, $14,894.73. These figures show an increase of about 16 per cent. During 1909 the office handled [illegible] pieces of registered mail matter and [illegible] pieces in 1910. Besides attending to the city service this office also has to take care of two rural routes, one of which is twenty-five miles in length and the other twenty-[illegible] miles.

The municipality supports a first-class fire department. There are [illegible], all of whom receive a monthly salary. The apparatus consists of a fifty-horse-power automobile chemical engine and hose cart combined. There is also an emergency hook and ladder and hose supply carts. Alarms are given over the telephone and the department has always been able to reach any part of the city within one and a half to two minutes after the alarm has been received. A silent night alarm signal has lately been installed which will add to the efficiency of the department.

The city park, with its wealth of trees and shrubs, is a delightful recreation center. It covers about six acres of ground. Seats and benches are placed in cool and shady places and a pretty fountain playing in a small fish pond adds to the attractions. During the summer evenings the city furnishes an instrumental band to play in the park and this has proved to be highly appreciated by the people. The city is contemplating the purchase of another piece of ground in the near future which will also be laid out as a park, but as yet nothing definite has been done about it.

The Board of Trustees has just voted for a bond issue of $40,000 for the erection of a City Hall building. The matter will be presented for a public vote at an early date and will undoubtedly carry by a large majority.

The Carnegie Library building of Whittier is valued at $25,000. Its architectural beauty and attractive grounds make it one of the features of the city. There are 5853 volumes in the library and the 2068 borrowers enrolled show the popularity which the institution has met at the hands of the citizens. There was a circulation last year of 33,836 pieces.

The Southern Pathological Laboratory and Experiment Station of the University of California is also located at Whittier. This institution was established in 1906 at a time when many of the local ranchers were suffering severely from the walnut blight. This station is partly supported by the United States Department of Agriculture and partly by an appropriation by the State Legislature and its purpose is to investigate all plant diseases with the object of discovering remedies for them. If a farmer is troubled with a plant disease which he knows nothing about he may bring specimens to this institution and they will be scientifically investigated. The results of the work are published in the form of bulletins and circulars, which are distributed free to all who may desire them. The farmer is also given access to a large botanical library kept in the building, where information may be obtained on almost any agricultural subject. This station has under its supervision several other sub-stations in Southern California. In its extensive investigations much attention has been devoted to the diseases of citrus fruits, asparagus rust, watermelon wilt and the dry rot of the Irish potato. The station has also discovered a cure for the walnut blight. This cure, however, being very expensive, the institution went to work on another line and has now developed a certain kind of walnut tree which is practically immune to an attack of the blight.

About two miles due west of Whittier on the main county road is the location of the old Pico mansion. This is a historic old relic of early California days. The building was originally the home of Gov. Pico, one of the last Mexican Governors of the State, before this Territory became part of the United States. The oldest part of the building was built in 1836. In 1875 there were thirty-five rooms, all built of adobe around a center court, paved in red brick. In the middle of this court the old Spanish well is still to be seen and the crumbling walls of the old place are fine specimens of the famous Mexican adobe masonry. In its day this was the largest two-story house in the State.

The city of Whittier has purchased the old mansion with five acres surrounding it and a local historical society is undertaking to preserve the building. In a few months the destroyed portions of the structure will be remodeled and a beautiful Spanish garden will be laid out on the grounds. It is the intention of the townspeople to make this an attraction to the tourist and the work of preservation is being furthered with an almost universal coöperation on the part of the inhabitants.

CLIMATE.

Whittier's geographical situation is responsible for its mild climatic conditions. The city is locked in the protecting bosom of the Puente Hills. The hot desert winds of summer strike these hills before reaching the town and glancing upward are carried high above the Whittier Valley, leaving the lower air strata at a moderate temperature. The cold mountain winds of winter have also to contend with this same barrier. During the spring, the best part of the summer and the fall the delightful breezes from the ocean blow across the valley and, attacking the city on its only unprotected side, give her the full benefit of its balmy breath.

Owing to this natural circulation of its currents the moisture in the air is not given an opportunity to condense and this is the reason why frost is almost unknown in the district.

With these exceptional conditions we find lemons, oranges, walnuts, apples, peaches, apricots, pears, plums, tomatoes, beans, cabbage and every variety of berries growing side by side. Even in January radishes and lettuce can be had fresh any day. Everywhere the beauty of the valley smiles out to the stranger through its flowers. Carnations, English violets, lilies, golden poppies and roses are to be found in almost every garden.

By far the majority of the people buy nearly everything they need in the town, and as a result the merchant has been able to lower his prices to such an extent that now it would hardly pay the housewife her car fare to trade elsewhere.

The Whittier National Bank and the Home Savings Bank of Whittier were started several years ago to meet the demand of the growing city and surrounding country. The Whittier National started with a capital of $25,000 as a State bank, but soon found it necessary to enlarge its capital to $50,000. Later it was increased to $100,000 and was organized under the National Banking Act. It has at present $35,000 surplus and undivided profits. The bank occupies its own building and its equipment is of the very best which can be obtained. The vaults are protected by the electric alarm system of the American Bank Protection Company. The ojcers and irectors of the ban kare well-known men in the community and noted for their good business sagacity.

The First National Bank of Whittier was organized in 1894 as a State bank and in 1900 was changed to a national bank with a capital of $25,000. In 1906 the capital was increased to $50,000 and again in 1907 to $100,000. It has at present a surplus of $20,000 and has always paid dividends to its stockholders. The president stated that their business has always been most active and steadily increasing. Its loans are nearly all made to Whittier people for the improvement of the local property. The First National Bank building occupies a very prominent corner in the heart of the city.

The real estate situation of Whittier has always been active. Although citrus lands are exceedingly high, many exchanges are going on, for even at the high prices a man can afford to buy, for he will immediately realize a good interest upon the capital he thus invests. Walnut lands are still in the market at reasonable rates. Walnut groves from three to four years old sell at from $400 to $500 per acre. Walnut groves bearing sell at from $600 to $1000 an acre. Vacant unimproved lands suitable for oranges, lemons, walnuts, alfalfa or vegetables can be had at from $200 to $400. City residence lots 50 feet by 140 feet bring from $250 to $1000 each.

Business lots 25 feet by 140 feet can be bought at from $1000 to $2000 each. There are several live real estate agents in Whittier, all of whom are thorough "boosters" for their town. They are all very courteous and agreeable and a stranger falling into the hands of one of them will be shown the town in its entirety.

SCHOOLING FACILITIES.

The Whittier Union High School is a model institution. It has been the intention of the local school board to make this a modern agricultural polytechnic school. The general plan originated by them was to adopt the principles of the city Polytechnic, but substituting in the place of machine shop, forge and foundry work, a thorough and complete course in agriculture which will be more appreciated by a country community.

A beautiful $40,000 brick building was erected in 1904 to accommodate about 250 students, but owing to the exceptional growth of the town, this building has already become entirely inadequate to supply the needs of the population. At the commencement of the new term, the latter part of August of this year, 300 students enrolled. The girls' lunchroom, the library and other rooms had to be turned into classrooms to make accommodation for the many new students.

The Whittier Board of Trustees had months ago seen the inevitable increase in the number of high school students and with quick action prepared to meet the situation. A bond issue of $75,000 was voted upon and passed and as a result of the splendid coöperation of the citizens two new brick structures will be added to the present High School building.

A $50,000 two story Science hall building will be erected almost immediately. Material is already being delivered on the ground for the construction work. This building will be fitted with all the latest equipment for instruction in all High School scientific studies comprising physics, chemistry, botany and scientific agriculture. In connection with the agricultural department some five acres of land will be bought for the purpose of raising different experimental crops.

About $9000 of the bond issue will be used in the construction of an up-to-date woodwork shop and manual training building. This structure will be one story high. The two new buildings together with the present one will be located on three sides of a large five acre athletic field forming as near as possible a quadrangle after the university style.

The present building has three floors. The basement is given over to a large gymnasium, boys' and girls' locker rooms, lunch rooms and domestic science kitchens. On the main floor are the principal offices, a large auditorium seating 600, a library and several recitation rooms. The chemistry, physics and botany departments are located on the second floor. A science lecture hall seating seventy is also on this floor. The school's drawing department occupies the third floor.

There is a corps of nineteen competent teachers on the faculty and the school offers six courses of training, which are as follows: Classical, literary, commercial, agricultural, scientific and musical. This school has a feature of teaching instrumental music which is not common to most high schools.

Student body activities are much alive. The basket ball team has especially made itself noticeable, winning pennants from every quarter. A football, baseball, tennis club, debating and oratorical club have also won many laurels for the institution. Twice a year the senior students present a play, which is coached by a member of the faculty.

Two well-equipped grammar schools in the city and several in different parts of the country offer fine advantages for the children of the primary and grammar grades.

The Whittier College is located in the northeastern part of the city. This is an interdenominational institution instructing in all the academic and scientific branches of college education. The college was first opened September 27, 1891. Up to the present time a preparatory department has always been done away with as soon as possible.

There are three buildings on a 20-acre campus. The Hall of Letters is a substantial brick structure located on the top of a hill overlooking the city. This building has three floors and seventy different rooms. On the main floor is an auditorium and lecture hall seating 600, a library and a reading-room containing about 5000 volumes, the principal's offices and reception rooms. On the other floors are the chemical, physics and biological laboratories. Conveniently adjoining the laboratories are work shops and recitation rooms.

The girls' cottage is a two-story bungalow situated north of the Hall of Letters. It contains a large kitchen, a dining-room and sleeping accommodations for twenty-two young ladies. The gymnasium is a large wooden building affording a splendid basket-ball floor 40x72 feet. It is well equipped with a liberal supply of physical apparatus.

The institution has an enrollment of 125 and is on the accredited list of both Stanford and Berkeley universities. The students are in every way most energetic and active. Many of them are working their way through the college by earning money during vacation periods. The college teams have captured basket ball, tennis and oratorical pennants from many other schools. The students print a monthly magazine called "The Acropolis," and a quarterly bulletin is also issued by the faculty.

The Whittier College is prepared to accommodate about 200 students and additions and enlargements will soon be made to accommodate many more. The alumni of the college are spending $2000 on the improvement of an athletic park and a boy's dormitory building will be erected before long.

RESOURCES.

The three great resources of wealth for the people of Whittier in the order of their importance are oil, citrus fruits, and walnuts. Grains and vegetables are also raised to a considerable extent.

The district is practically divided up into three distinct zones, each of which is particularly adapted to its special industry. To the north of the city lie the renowned Puente Hills holding within their depths untold quantities of the best oil. At the foot of the Puente hills and to the east of Whittier the country is producing the second great source of wealth, namely, the citrus fruits. This land cannot be surpassed for raising Valencia oranges, Navel oranges and lemons are raised in abundance and pay the producer exceptionally. To the south and west of Whittier is the walnut belt. No better walnuts can be found anywhere than those grown on these lands.

The following figures show the total output of these prime industries for the year 1909. Oil, $1,000,000; citrus fruits, $650,000; walnuts, $450,000. Besides this money, the community also reaped the same year $150,000 on the grain crop and $100,000 on vegetables.

OIL.

Oil was first discovered in 1899. There are several prosperous companies who own or lease the lands and all these have found the supply very constant. In some places they have met with great difficulties and had to bore in some cases as deep as 3000 feet before striking the oil strata. It is said that these fields are the most expensive to operate of any in the State. The oil is piped direct from the wells to Los Nietos, about five miles distant, where it is then shipped out by rail to the Los Angeles refineries. This district is producing close to 100,000 barrels of oil a month, which net the producers nearly as many dollars. Much of the oil finds a ready sale in Whittier where it is used for street work and fuel.

The oil industry has done a great deal for the progression of Whittier. The best part of the money derived in the business has been circulated through the town's banks and the oil men have always done nearly all their trading in Whittier ever since the fields were first opened.

CITRUS SITUATION.

The Whittier district has about 1000 acres in well established citrus fruit trees and about 700 acres planted in new trees. Whittier oranges are the earliest of any in Southern California, the first car of the season always being shipped from this center. The Whittier Citrus Association handles most of the product of the vicinity. In 1907 this association shipped out 488 cars of fruit. In 1908 it shipped 516 cars, in 1909, 703 cars and in 1910, 647 cars. It is expected that at least 800 cars will be shipped out next year. There are 173 ranchers in the vicinity who are members of this association.

A mature lemon grove nets the Whittier growers from $500 to $1200 an acre. Some growers have exceeded these figures. The Valencia orange is even more profitable than the lemon in some sections. Navel oranges do not yield such good returns, averaging from $300 to $1000 an acre. With such profits to the growers it is hardly necessary to say that there are not many ranches for sale.

WALNUT CULTURE.

The Whittier Walnut Growers' Association has 175 members. This organization is a member of the Walnut Growers' Association of Southern California. Its business is to exploit the product of the local walnut growers and to protect a special grade of walnuts known as the "Quaker Colony Brand." In the country immediately surrounding Whittier there are some 5000 acres given over to walnut culture. This year it is estimated the crop will amount to 100 carloads. The nut culture has proved very profitable to the people in this section. Here are several examples of what has been done.

S. W. Barton on a 5-acre tract planted out in 14-year-old trees realized last year on his walnut crop $1511.67. C. A. Barr, on 5 1-2 acres planted in 10-year-old trees realized $501.94. E. Albertson on a 10-acre piece of land in 6-year-old trees reaped $523.71. F. A. Hassard on 20 acres set out in 12-year-old trees made $3054.63. Walnut land is now for sale at from $250 to $800 an acre and there is not a great deal available.

Berry growing is another industry that pays well. There are grown here blackberries, loganberries, dewberries and strawberries. The crop pays on an average $400 per acre net and an instance is on record which shows where $50 worth of strawberries were picked from a patch 50 feet square.

No irrigation is necessary to grow grain in this district as the grain is planted in the winter during the rainy season.

There is a vegetable union which handles most of the vegetables grown by the local farmers.

SOCIAL ORGANIZATIONS.

All the principal fraternal orders are represented in Whittier, including the Whittier Lodge, F. & A. M.; Whittier Chapter, No. 91, Royal Arch Masons; Lyra Chapter, O. E. S.; Ora Lodge, I. O. O. F.; Daughters of Rebekah, Knights of Pythias; Whittier Camp, W. O. W.; Improved Order of Red Men; Whittier Camp, M. W. A.; Royal Neighbors of America; Rosecrans Post, G. A. R.; Women's Relief Corps; Whittier Lodge, T. F. B.; Whittier Council, F. A. A.; Whittier Star Council; Order of Pendo; Independent Order of Foresters; Whittier Legion, N. P. L.; Sons of Veterans; Whittier Homestead, No. 1509, Brotherhood of American Yeomen; Women of Woodcraft.

The following local clubs are very active: Hillside Club, Homemakers' Club, Women's Club of Whittier, Women's Improvement Club of East Whittier.

All the leading churches are well represented. Among those having their own houses of worship are the following: Christian Science, First Baptist, First Christian, First Evangelical Lutheran, First Methodist Episcopal, Free Methodist, Friends, Holiness, Nazarene, Plymouth Congregational, Episcopal and Catholic. Recently the Methodists completed a $25,000 building and the Congregationalists are at present constructing an artistic $30,000 stone building.

There is also a well equipped hospital in the city.

F. E. Frantz, president of the Board of Trustees, stated as showing the immediate necessity of houses for rent, that a gentleman friend of his built a residence for himself a short while ago and that as the house was nearing completion a stranger came by and asked what the cost of rental would be. He was informed that the house was not for rent, but that it was built as a residence. "What rent will you take for it?" insisted the stranger. "My house is not for rent," returned the builder. "I will pay you any price you see fit to ask for it; I am sent down here by a company in Los Angeles and I have to live in this town but I can't get a house," the stranger added and after considerable wrangling the owner finally leased his home to the perplexed man for a term of five years at $45 a month and the first year's rent was paid in advance to close the bargain. "I am a lucky man," remarked the stranger as he paid over his money, and so he was.

There are many men in the oil fields who are at present separated from their families in Los Angeles, who would readily rent a home in Whittier if they could be had. On a capital of $2000 or $3000 it is thought by many of the business men that 12 per cent. to 15 per cent. could be realized without an effort in this business.

Next to building houses for rent an apartment house is needed in the town. Apartments of two or three room suites are strongly advocated by the business men. On an outlay of from $30,000 to $35,000 in a first-class apartment house it is stated an interest could be realized of from 10 per cent. to 16 per cent., and those interested in the town are prepared to prove this fact. The real estate men claim to be able to furnish tenants immediately for such an enterprise. Up to the present time nothing of the kind has ever been undertaken in the town although several of the leading real estate men have drawn plans and invite the consideration of outside capital.

It is thought that a first-class hotel with all modern conveniences would also prove a profitable investment.

Los Nietos is the junction of three steam railroads and is the terminal of the several pipe lines from the "oil fields. It is situated about and and fields. It is situated about one and the shipping point of all the oil product from the Whittier fields. Up to the present time the oil for refining has had to be shipped to the Los Angeles refineries and then shipped back again to Whittier before the people can use it for domestic purposes and the Whittier people are paying the freight rate both ways. To keep this money in the town and to interest more capital in the community it is suggested that an oil refinery be established at Los Nietos. It is stated that the proposition will bear inspection and there are many in the town who would be glad to give information concerning it.

Several men interested in the citrus fruit district have suggested that a marmalade factory would be of mutual interest to the community and the capitalist. The citrus growers have a quantity of culls each season which are practically given away to the Italian venders from Los Angeles.

The foothills just to the north of the city offer a superb site for high-class residences. The peculiar fact that these hills are immensely fertile and suitable for citrus fruit growing make them an exceptional residence location. A. Thompson, late of New Orleans, is perhaps the pioneer in the movement in this direction. He has purchased eighty-three acres on the hills, which he has undertaken to terrace and set out in orange and lemon trees. He is building a beautiful residence on the property.

WIDEAWAKE.

The following ranchers and business men of the community have assisted in compiling this article and will be glad to furnish further details than those enumerated here on any subject which the stranger might like to know. These persons are all of the progressive spirit and are anxious to correspond with the outsider seeking information:

THE MARKETS.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

The week end was rather tame, with no changes in the fresh fruit or green vegetable market. There were no heavy sales and shipments out were normal. Quite a number of cars of potatoes are being billed through Los Angeles to Arizona, Nevada and Texas points. Prices on spuds went down last week, f.o.b. Stockton river points the best prices of the week were only $1.30 and a great amount of stock sold as low as 85 cents. Receipts here were heavier. Yesterday was the lightest day of the week, when only 1061 sacks were received.

The price of eggs declined 1 cent on case count and candled local stock, making the best on the market 41 cents a dozen. There were no changes in the eastern egg prices and arrivals of that kind of stock are light, none coming on consignment, but are only being shipped here on absolute order. Receipts of locals were only 80 cases.

The call for butter was not big and prices were unchanged. Receipts of local were 31,800 pounds. The demand for cheese was also rather slow and offerings were smaller than on other days of the week. Receipts were 1480 pounds.

Total arrivals of onions were 467 sacks. The higher prices on this product are not very firm and dealers are selling all around the fixed quotation of $1.50. There were no bean receipts and the market was comparatively firm. Sweet potato arrivals were 24 sacks and prices are steady.

Arrivals of apples were 12,810 boxes. The market is holding up very well, as evinced by the advanced prices on several varieties.

The movement of dried fruit during the week was very heavy as was buying among the wholesalers. Prices on raisins and prunes are very firm and are reported advancing sectionally at packing points.

LOCAL STOCK MARKET.

Week's Trading Good and Brokers Report Numerous Inquiries—Associated Strong.

The market on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange for the week was very good, and while Saturday's trading was possibly not as great as on some other days, it was lively.

Associated continued very strong through the morning call, selling at 45. Enos Oil was traded in to the extent of 600 shares at 112; Cleveland and Consolidated Midway showed the bulk of the trading, with Cleveland Oil fairly active and strong at 7, the last sale being at 6¾; Consolidated Midway opened at 26¾, selling down to 26½, which was the last sale. California Midway was traded in extensively, 16,000 shares changing hands. This was the largest day's trading in this stock of any day this week. Palmer was strong at 137.

The rest of the market showed a good undertone, but the oils have practically monopolized the trading for the week. The shares of other corporations are being traded in more or less on the curb at prices on or about the quotations made on the exchange. If last week's business is any criterion, next week should be a pretty good one. All the brokers report plenty of inquiries, and while the bond and industrial lists were quiet, there is still something doing in many of these shares.

SAN FRANCISCO LIST.

Belmont Shows Strength, Closing Ten Points Up—Comstocks Contribute Largely to Transactions.

[Special Service to The Times by B. F. Taylor, No. 112 West Third street.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—Taking it altogether the volume of business this week has been very disappointing for Southern Nevada stocks. The Comstocks have contributed at least two-thirds of all the transactions on the Exchange.

Goldfield Consolidated was better by an eighth, Florence was up 5, Silver Pick 1 and Atlanata sold at 12, otherwise there were no changes in the Goldfield list compared with yesterday. The strongest stock on the list was Belmont which sold up to 435, closed 430, up 10 points. This was the only important change in the Tonopahs. Nevada Hills scarcely held its own. Pittsburg Silver Peak, Round Mountain, the Bullfrogs and the Rawhides were unchanged.

There was another sharp drive at the Comstocks, Ophir losing 7½. Consolidated Virginia 10 and the cheap stocks from 2 to 3 points. This movement is purely manipulative.

Compared with last week Thursday, the last business day before the Admission holiday, Consolidated shows a gain of 30 points, Florence 10, Jumbo Extension 4, with Fraction unchanged. Nevada Hills is up 12½, Belmont 30, Montana 5, Comstocks are generally off, Ophir being down 22½, Mexican 15, Consolidated Virginia 20, the balance from 2 to 5 points.

BIG RUSH TO COVER SHORTS.

SPECULATIVE SENTIMENT GOES TO BUYING SIDE.

Higher Cables, Better Cash Demands and Lighter Northwest Receipts of Wheat Are Chief Features of the Market—Corn Improves—Oats Close Up and Provisions Down.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Speculative sentiment switched decidedly today to the buying side in wheat. Higher cables, better cash demand and lighter Northwest receipts were the chief features. The close was firm at a net gain of ⅛ to ⅝@¾c. Latest quotations showed corn ⅜c lower to a shade above last night's figures; oats, up ¼ to ½c and provisions at 12½c decline to 2½ advance. Extensive covering of short wheat seemed to have declined the market here. Simultaneously there was strength in Europe due largely to a let up in Russian offerings. The fact that primary receipts were nearly 2,400,000 bushels less than for the corresponding week last year, had considerable bearing on the improved demand for cash wheat. The Southwest in particular reported liberal sales to Eastern mills. On the bull side, too, were a well-known crop expert's figures, putting the total yield of winter and spring wheat in the United States at 604,000,000, against the government's September indication of 675,000,000. Earlier in the day the market had been weakened temporarily by an estimate from another source that the crop in the Dakotas and Minnesota is 6,000,000 larger than has been deduced from the government report. Foreign strength, however, encouraged buyers and helped force shorts to cover as the market advanced. December ranged from 99¼ to 100½, with the close ⅝c up at $1.00¼.

Splendid weather made corn easy. No 2 yellow, cash closed at 55¼@½c. December fluctuated between 53⅞@53c and 53½c, and closed steady at 53⅜c, a net loss of ⅛c. Diminished receipts caused oats to be independently firm. December varied from 33⅝ to 35⅛ and finished ⅜c up at 35⅜. The end of the day left pork 2½ to 12½c down; lard 2½c higher to 10c off, and ribs ranging from last night's figures to 7½c decline.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Cash quotations were as follows: Flour steady; winter patents, 4.35@5.05; straights, 4.10@4.50; spring patents, straights, 4.70@4.95; bakers', 3.80@5.15; No. 2 rye, 73½@71; feed or mixing barley, 58@64; fair to choice malting, 66@74; flaxseed, No. 1 southwestern, 2.61; No. 1 northwestern, 2.73; timothy seed, 7.75@9.00; clover, 10.00@15.50; mess pork, per bbl., 20.50@20.75; lard, per 100 lbs., 12.30; short ribs, sides (loose,) 11.25@11.75; short clear sides (boxed,) 12.25@12.50.

Grain Statistics.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Total clearances of wheat and flour were equal to 311,000 bushels. Primary receipts were 1,207,000 bushels on the corresponding day a year ago. The visible supply of wheat in the United States, 1,412,000 bushels for the week. Estimated receipts for Monday: Wheat, 65 cars; corn, 429 cars; oats, 124 cars; hogs, 22,000 head.

New York Cotton Market.

[Special Service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, No. 112 West Third street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Fair weather is promised for the belt over Sunday. The week's statistics were bullish in every detail and as it is too early to make predictions far into the future, the only logical thing for the market to do is to accept the week-end figures at their face value and remember that this is only a straw showing the direction in which the wind is blowing. Notwithstanding the fact that many mills are still idle, there exists today a much more urgent demand for prompt shipment than existed at this date a year ago, as shown by the movement at interior towns. While receipts were smaller than last year, shipments were larger by a good margin. Exports also show an increase over the previous year thus far 235,533 versus 222,216 bales. The Liverpool stock is less than 200,000 bales and the gravity of the situation is reflected in the strength of the spot position, which is being maintained around the 14d level. We continue to favor the long side on all moderate recessions.

Logan & Bryan's letter says: "Accepting minimum deficiency in the invisible stock and noting the 700,000 existing deficiency in the visible supply it is hard to see how we can get along with a crop as small as 12,000,000 bales, which sized crop is a conservative conclusion, barring an extremely late frost. Thus far this year port receipts, interior movements and volume of cotton moving into sight are well below last year and unless our market moves to higher levels during the coming week we will find ourselves below last year's prices. Spot values are well maintained and the levels which they hold justify a much better contract market. Crop accounts are mixed, but we are probably enjoying an August deterioration."

Boston Copper Market.

[Furnished by Logan & Bryan, Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges, Bradbury building.]

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—Algomah was the most active. Selling came largely from people who had expected the diamond drill to strike the lode as rich as it did in Lake. Insiders are talking as confident as ever and claim that their expectations were fully realized in striking the lode stall and that the lack of copper in that particular spot should not be a great disappointment. Indiana was weak in sympathy with Algomah. The report of a rich showing on the thirtieth level of Franklin was responsible for the best buying in that stock seen for many weeks. New York Curb Stocks.

[Special Service to The Times by E. F. Hutton & Co., Members New York Stock Exchange, No. 112 West Third street, Los Angeles.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The curb market closed at about the opening prices, with a feeling of optimism prevailing. Ely Central was active, selling in large quantities at 9-16. Chino was stronger, selling 16⅜; numerous transactions in Giroux at 6 11-16; South Utah was active, 1 15-16 bid for 1000, with sales at 2. This market should do better. Trading in Boston coppers was extremely dull, with an irregular tone. The following were the closing bid and asked quotations:

WORK FOR WOMEN.

A number of large concerns in Los Angeles report inability to get the needed number of industrious young women for their respective establishments. Bishop & Co. are looking for a number of girls of this class to work as chocolate dippers, candy packers, and in other lines offering congenial steady employment at good wages. The factory at Seventh and Alameda streets is noted for its cleanliness and for the efforts made and interest shown toward promoting the health and comfort of employés.

KANSANS GATHER.

Near Two Thousand of Them Do Honor to the Memory of Hero of Harper's Ferry.

Kansas people—near two thousand of them—were in Sycamore Grove yesterday, to attend the annual high [illegible] of the sunflower State. The president of the Kansas Society had issued a proclamation that it was to be John Brown Day, in as much as the W. R. C. of the State of Kansas [illegible] together and raised enough money to buy a twenty-acre piece, which was dedicated to John Brown, August [illegible] Theodore Roosevelt delivered the dedicatory address.

So the local Kansans felt that they ought to make some public demonstration of their pride in being in [illegible] their home State, although so far away, and held what might be called a memorial service at their picnic. G. Major Taber presented the society with a portrait of John Brown in pastels. The donor was well acquainted with the hero, and was with him the night before the memorable raid on Harper's Ferry. Mr. Taber read a poem about his friend, and was followed by a eulogy on "John Brown" delivered by John W. Hupts[illegible].

Rev. J. R. Lovejoy made a short speech on his reminiscences of Kansas and Prof. L. A. Hadley spoke on Kansas citizenship.

Wanted—Typewriting.
By experienced public stenographer, dictations, manuscripts [illegible] work. Call [illegible] Branch Office.

Announcement of Foreign Bankers Anent Insurance of Cotton Bills of Lading Creates Sentiment That Compromise May Be Affected. Bank Statement Shows Loss.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The week-end found a moderate uncovered short interest remaining from the selling operations of the previous day or two, and the demand to cover on that account was an influence on the market. The expressed intention of the foreign bankers' organization to consider further the problem of insurance on cotton bills of lading aroused fresh hopes that a compromise would be effected which would avoid disturbance of the money and exchange markets in the financing of the important cotton export movement. The loan expansion disclosed by the weekly bank statement was attributed to the week's large syndicate transactions and the concurrent loss of cash brings the actual surplus down to $22,270,000. The money market was replenished today by a redemption of $10,000 British treasury bills. Mexican gold to the amount of half a million dollars received in New York today. Bonds were steady. Total sales, par value, $1,906,000. U.S. 2's have declined ¼, and the 4s registered ¼ per cent. in the bid price on call since last week.

SOLD—ONE EXPRESSMAN.

Deliveryman Makes Way With Trunk Containing Only One Small School Desk.

T. E. McNulty would like to see his trunk. Also, he would like to see the face of the expressman who "swiped" it.

McNulty is a traveling salesman for a wholesale desk house, and when he returned from a business trip to Beaumont a week ago, he brought back with him a large sample trunk, containing one small school desk. That trunk has disappeared.

When McNulty reached Arcade Station, he handed his check to an expressman and started for his home. The trunk was to have been delivered at his place of business, but when he arrived there the next day there was no trunk in sight.

For several days McNulty waited; but, the trunk came not. Then it dawned upon him that the expressman, noting the plethoric look of the box, had made way with it.

"I want that trunk—but, gee, I'd like to have seen that fellow's face when he opened it," said McNulty yesterday.

TAKE ANYTHING HANDY.

Thieves Invade Residence District and Householders Report Their Losses.

Sneak thieves and petty burglars continue harassing house holders in the residence districts. Mrs. M. E. Edwards, of No. 1222 West Twenty-second street, reported to the police yesterday that her home had been entered, while she was at work in her yard Friday afternoon, and a purse containing $4.80 stolen.

A watch and chain, a gold nugget and $7 in cash was the haul made by a burglar at the home of Mrs. A. McLaren, No. 437 West Seventh street, Friday night. Entrance was effected through a window.

Mrs. Anna Mills, No. 912 West Sixth street, called at the Police Station with a complaint to the effect that her home had been robbed of an alligator handbag containing $5, a draft for $58 and a silver watch.

NOW, WHERE IS FLYNN?

Detectives Find Jewelry He Was Robbed of Last Year, But Cannot Locate Him.

Pete Flynn's jewelery, stolen sixteen months ago, has been found by the detectives, but they are unable to find Pete Flynn at this late date and have appealed to the newspapers to help them.

Flynn was working as a laborer on the aqueduct. In May, 1909, he came to Los Angeles for a good time, as he had frequently done before. But on this occasion he fell among the Philistines and was robbed of his watch and other jewelry. He told his troubles to the police, and although every pawnshop in the city has been watched since the report was made, the jewelry was never found.

A few days ago Detectives Jones and Boyd, assigned to the pawnshops along South Main street, south of Fourth, found the missing articles and took them to the Police Station. A letter was sent to the address left by Flynn, it came back, stamped "uncalled for." Nobody knows where he is, so far as the detectives have been able to learn.

Certain Quick Cures

Piles, Fistula, Hernia, and Varicose Veins

M. S. CHENOWETH, M.D.
THE MASTER SPECIALIST.

The photograph which I publish above is one taken of me in May, 1910, and is a perfect likeness. I do not hide under a false name, nor publish a false picture, nor make a false statement of any kind. I personally conduct my own office, see my patients, and treat them personally from the time they come to me until I discharge them as cured.

I am the oldest licensed and longest established specialist in California. I am a graduate of one of the largest medical colleges in the United States. I was physician of outdoor clinic, St. John's Hospital, St. Louis, Mo., 1888-1889, and railway surgeon on Harriman lines of Colorado for four years. Member of American Medical Society six years and the author and publisher of medical works of recognized authority. My years of experience, the right kind of experience, together with the cures I have effected, has earned me the title, The Master Specialist.

NEW TESTIMONIALS EACH WEEK.

I have known Dr. M. S. Chenoweth for 16 years personally and intimately, and can recommend him as a physician and as a man whose character is above reproach.
JACOB EPLER,
Real Estate and Investments,
Glendora, Cal.

Dr. Chenoweth cured me of a rupture of the right side thoroughly and permanently without loss of time or pain.
ANDREW JOHNSON,
Del Amo.

"It gives me pleasure to say that Dr. Chenoweth cured my varicose veins completely and permanently. I was not confined to my room at all and there was no bad after effects as a result of the treatment which was painless."
WM. G. DENMAN,
335 W. 30th St.

"I was in very bad condition when I first consulted Dr. Chenoweth. I am pleased to state that after placing myself under his care I noticed rapid improvement and am now entirely well. I cannot recommend the Doctor too highly."
JOHN PERRY,
1917½ Central Ave.

"After taking Doctor Chenoweth's treatment for six weeks, my trouble and pain is fast disappearing and I am about cured of ailments that other specialists have treated me for eight years."
ARTHUR LOGAN,
1601 Meridian St.

A WORD OF ADVICE.

Before beginning treatment elsewhere, take my friendly advice and ask the doctor to tell you of his qualifications to cure you, and then be sure he shows you the proofs of his ability. Mere talk means nothing; promises and guarantees without ability behind them are of no value to you or any one else. After you are satisfied and begin your treatment it is up to you to see the promises are carried out. If you should be unfortunate enough to select the wrong doctor and find it out in time, come to me and I will be glad to do all that can be done for you.

I can refer you to most reliable people for absolute proof of cures of ailments mentioned below, as well as to cite you to cures of Varicose Veins I have made that other specialists failed on by the tieing-off process and other silly methods.

I will cheerfully donate $1000 to any charity if any statement in this announcement is not absolutely true.

PILES.

Piles are common among all classes and ages of men and women. They are indirectly caused by a defect in nutrition and constipation. If anything tends to make life a burden it's a well developed case of Piles. The whole system is thrown out of working order, and the pleasures of life are denied to the sufferer. My method cures the most obstinate case without pain. I do not use a knife; there is no cutting, no pain of any kind; no after inconvenience but immediate relief and a permanent cure. Most of my cases have come to me after other specialists and drug store doctors have failed, and I have yet to treat a case I did not cure.

FISTULA.

There is no more annoying and dreaded disease of the rectum than Fistula. It requires the strictest observance of almost impossible hygienic laws to maintain cleanliness and may result fatally if neglected. Only a few days under my treatment and the worst case of Fistula is cured. No knife; no bleeding; no pain; no after misery; just a permanent cure.

HERNIA.

Hernia or Rupture. This is a condition which does not permit neglect. You cannot afford to be used as an experiment, and you will be, unless you choose the right specialist. Neglect of Rupture has proved fatal to many; neglect may cause strangulation, and if this occurs surgical relief is the only means of saving life and in most cases proves fatal. My treatment cures in a few days. You leave my office knowing you are going to get well. I do not use a knife; there is no pain, no detention from pleasure or occupation. Absolutely no danger. You come to my office wearing a truss; you leave your truss behind; there is no further use for it; your rupture is cured.

VARICOSE VEINS.

Varicose veins do more to destroy human vitality than many other diseases put together. They sap up the strength of the body. You come to my office with your varicose veins and you leave absolutely well. Only a few days' treatment is all that is necessary. Not weeks nor months of endless doctoring, but in many cases one single visit. I permanently cure you without the loss of time, no pain whatever and no after trouble.

CONSTIPATION.

Constipation is the mother of most of these diseases. The clogging up of the bowels is the beginning, then comes depression, and indisposition to do anything; headache, backache and all other aches. Drug store remedies may give temporary relief, but why take medicine all your life just to get relief when my treatment cures constipation forever? Neglect gives birth to Piles, Fistula and so many other diseases that it is hard to tell of them all. My treatment permanently cures. It is a blessing to suffering mankind.

I guarantee to cure these diseases just as I say I do, or refund every dollar paid to me. If I fail, the fault is mine, not yours. Why should you pay? I have no home treatment; I do not treat by mail. All patients must come to the office for treatment.

Free Consultation and Advice

I offer not only FREE Consultation and Advice, but of every case that comes to me I will make a Careful Examination and Diagnosis without charge. Ailing persons should not neglect this opportunity to get expert opinion about their trouble.

My offices are open all day from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., and Sundays from 10 to 12.

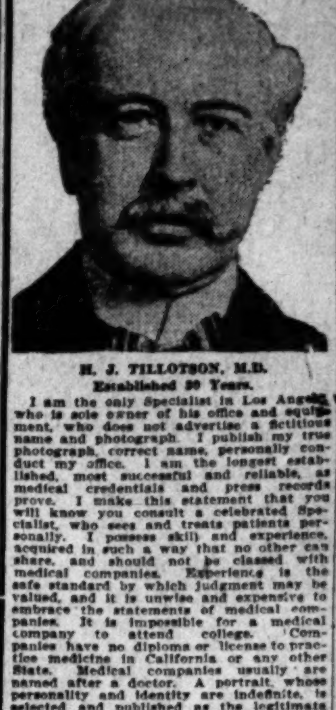
Cured In Five Days

Hernia, Piles and Varicose Veins.



H. J. TILLOTSON, M.D.
Established 30 Years.

I am the only Specialist in Los Angeles who is sole owner of his office and equipment, who does not advertise a fictitious name and photograph. I publish my true photograph, correct name, personally conduct my office. I am the longest established, most successful and reliable, as medical credentials and press records prove. I make this statement that you will know you consult a celebrated Specialist, who sees and treats patients personally. I possess skill and experience, acquired in such a way that no other can share, and should not be classed with medical companies. Experience is the safe standard by which judgment may be valued, and it is unwise and expensive to embrace the statements of medical companies. It is impossible for a medical company to attend college. Companies have no diploma or license to practice medicine in California or any other State. Medical companies usually are named after a doctor. A portrait, whose personality and identity are indefinite, is selected and published as the legitimate specialist of the office. Hired substitutes, ordinary doctors with questionable ability, give consultation, examination and treatment.

A thorough investigation should be made by every ailing person as to the specialist he consults. Duty and destiny to self and those who depend upon you demand the best medical attention. I have the ability and can give you this service. I have always charged a very reasonable fee, so that my services may be obtained by any man who sincerely desires to be cured. I make no misleading statements or unbusinesslike propositions; neither do I desire to be particularly independent, and I would like to have you for a patient, if you will come to me on a strictly professional basis, and the inducements that I offer, which are my ability and thirty years' successful experience. Time-saving treatment and guarantee of cure of certain diseases.

NO MONEY REQUIRED TO COMMENCE TREATMENT. Many patients have no confidence in their doctor, because he demands pay before a cure has been effected, and there are many who have been misinformed about their condition, or through unsuccessful treatment have become skeptical and think there is no cure for them. I want an opportunity to treat such cases. It makes no difference about the financial part, as I accept pay for my services as benefits are derived, when I am satisfied the patient is reliable. Health is capital at interest. I will prove my ability to cure you before asking pay for my services.

WRITTEN GUARANTEE.

Dr. Tillotson's written guarantee means a cure or no pay for services. I guarantee to cure certain diseases or refund every dollar you have paid me for my services. My services cost you nothing unless I cure your Varicose Veins, Hernia, Piles, Fissures, Ulcerations, or any disease I guarantee to cure. My terms are reasonable and no more than you are willing and able to pay.

Many Cases Cured Permanently in One TREATMENT. Most Time-Saving. Most Natural. Most Safe. No Detention from Occupation, Family or Home. A Radical and Permanent Cure. I Will Give $500 To Any Charity As a Guarantee That Every Statement in This Announcement Is True.

I cure rapidly, painlessly and at small expense. I will demonstrate actual results in your case. I will give conclusive evidence of my merit which is obtained and maintained by ability. I invite you to come to my office; I will explain my treatment for Hernia, Piles, Fistula, Varicose Veins, Pelvic, Nervous, Blood, Kidney, Bladder and Rectal Diseases. I will give you free a physical examination; if necessary a microscopical and chemical analysis of secretions to determine existing pathological and bacteriological conditions. Every person should take advantage of this opportunity to learn their true condition. Certainty of cure is what you want.

VARICOSE VEINS

In the cure of Varicose Veins, Rupture and Associate Diseases of the Pelvic Region, I am successful in bringing to bear the curative power of Nature's forces in such a manner as to supplant the old-time, wide-open surgical operations. Once it required several weeks to cure these conditions and the method which some still use is such as to endanger the life of the patient and require a long period of convalescence. Now an absolute cure can be accomplished in a few days and with perfect safety.

TRUSSES SELDOM CURE RUPTURE.

Disregard for existing Hernias has cost many lives. The smallest hernias are the most dangerous to life, because of the increased liability to strangulation. I am aware that a great deal of fraud has been practiced on the public in connection with the alleged cure of Rupture, and when I say positively that I cure Rupture, to stay cured, I do not expect any one to accept my statement without investigation of my professional work. My claim to your confidence is based on absolute facts, accomplished results. A personal consultation. I will make a free examination and can explain every detail of your Hernia and demonstrate to you the curative value of the method I have discovered. I invite the careful investigation of any person who sincerely desires to be cured. I cure Rupture, in selected cases, with perfect safety, and entail no suffering, and do not detain you from occupation under Written Guarantee. Many cases cured to stay cured by one treatment.

PILES, FISTULA, RECTAL DISEASES.

These diseases are very common; most frequently found in persons of middle or advanced age; are exceedingly annoying, often very painful, and sometimes very dangerous, and frequently unfit one for pleasure or occupation. My treatment and successes are the result of years of experience; my treatment is kindly applied. I cure Piles without cutting. Some cases are cured by one or more treatments. If I do not cure your Piles, Fistula and other Rectal Diseases, my treatment does not cost you anything. Gentleness in treatment comes from treating many cases, so I guarantee a cure of Piles, Fistula, Fissures, Ulcers and all curable Rectal Diseases.

LIFE'S BLOOD STREAM.

The great clearinghouse of a person's body is the blood stream. Your blood cells are your bank account. Your only defense against disease is by and through blood corpuscles. My blood-making, blood-purifying remedies have been tried and proven. My blood-cell remedies nourish, strengthen and increase the blood cells and nourish the nerve centers. I want to prove to you at my expense that my blood-making, blood-purifying remedies give power to weak brains and life to nerve centers.

KIDNEY AND BLADDER DISEASES.

With these diseases you may have more complications than are presented by any other diseased organs. By my searching illumination of the bladder I determine accurately the diseases and by my microscopical examination and urinalysis I make sure of the condition of the kidneys, thus laying foundations for scientific treatment.—[Announcement Copyrighted.]

Gather at Picnic Held at the Indian Village—Dance Given in the Rustic Hall

Former residents of Maine held a picnic at Indian Village yesterday. The day was rather too warm for much exertion, and those who did come were glad to keep within the shelter of the porch.

A basket dinner was in order of course, and, in view of the heat, there was no programme of races, as had been planned. Mrs. D. P. Hatch was in charge of the chief feature of amusement, which was an old-fashioned spelling match.

An informal dance was given later in the evening, in the rustic dance hall.

A LIVE ACREAGE SUBDIVISION.

RAMONA ACRES IS ENJOYING A WONDERFUL GROWTH.

Property Laid Off in Acres, Each With Every Convenience—Situation Ideal for Suburban Life—Recent Sales in Tract Reach High Money Aggregate.

Of the suburban subdivisions near Los Angeles, none is probably at the moment attracting greater attention than Ramona Acres, a tract just south of the corporation limits of Alhambra and exactly seven miles from the Courthouse in this city. In this property is to be found almost the last of the acreage for sale to the south of Pasadena and on the line of the Pacific Electric. The agents of the tract report total sales in the last two years of $265,000, and an unprecedented September demand.

The property is now in the condition Hollywood, South Pasadena and Oneonta Park were in when they were being sold as acreage a few years ago, with the added advantage of having these beautifully developed sections as environs to start with. A great amount has been expended in streeting, walks and tree-lined parkways, and gas and water, together with other conveniences are already in. The connection with Los Angeles is excellent, the cars being frequent and making good time.

The elevation is 500 feet above sea level and the view from all parts of the property is unsurpassed. To the north and east lie the Sierras and to the south the foothills. On all sides are developed orange groves. Altogether, the tract is one of the most beautifully situated in the San Gabriel Valley.

In recent months the growth of the property has been remarkable, numerous houses, ranging in cost from $2000 to $10,000, having been erected. The builders have many of them put in small crops and planted to various income-producing trees, while others have found chicken raising profitable, owing to the district's freedom from severe changes in temperature and from fogs. A great many have sought Ramona Acres merely as a convenient suburban place of residence. The future of the tract appears to be very promising.

FAME SPREADS OVER THE EAST.

COTTON PRODUCT EXPLOITED AT CONVENTION.

Its Quality Is Fine and the Quantity Will Be Great After This, the Experimental Season—Boll Weevil Report Is a Bit of Baseless Fiction. Chinese Try to Gain Admittance.

EL CENTRO, Sept. 17.—Imperial Valley cotton has been receiving boosts from various sources the past week. At the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers' semi-annual meeting held in Portsmouth, N. H., this week, Joseph R. Loftus of the American Nile Cotton Company, El Centro, addressed the gathering on Imperial Valley cotton, giving a history of the inception of this industry here and a résumé of present conditions and future outlook. The paper read by Mr. Loftus will have wide publicity, as it is to be printed in full in the reports of this meeting and in a large number of trade journals. In addition to this publicity, the capturing of a gold medal and special prize for Imperial county's exhibit of cotton at the California State Fair, and the distribution of thousands of cotton bolls to visitors at the fair has helped to spread the fame of the new California industry.

The present year's experience indicates that early planting of cotton is advisable, as cotton planted in April can be picked in August, and August cotton usually brings the highest prices. At present enough cotton is being picked to keep the El Centro gins busy a part of every day, but the height of the picking will not be reached for a month yet.

The El Centro City Trustees have authorized the City Engineer to proceed with the laying of a six-inch main from Fourth street to the industrial district, east of the Southern Pacific Railroad tracks, and to make other connections. A private line is to be laid by some of the industrial concerns and this will be attached to the city water system, coming under the rules of that department.

FIRST CARLOAD SHIPMENTS.

The first carload shipments over the new railroad extending westerly from El Centro to New River, and now operated by the Holton Interurban Railroad, were handled this week. W. H. Pool, a west side rancher, has the honor of being the first carload shipper over this line, which eventually is to be the valley connection of the San Diego & Arizona road. He sent out two carloads of barley.

NO BOLL WEEVIL.

From some unknown source the rumor has been current that boll weevil has been discovered in the Imperial Valley cotton fields. V. L. Wildermuth, an entomologist from the United States Bureau of Plant Industry, who has been studying insect life in Imperial Valley, has made a wide tour of inspection of the valley cotton fields, his trip covering fully seventy-five miles, and he states that there is absolutely no sign of the presence of boll weevil in Imperial Valley.

WILL IMPROVE PURCHASE.

C. E. Sprouse, who has just returned to El Centro, after a summer spent in Nebraska and Illinois, this week, has purchased four lots on the south side of State street, between Fifth and Sixth streets, and will improve them at once. The site is between the State-street Christian Church and the Carnegie library.

Three Chinese, disguised as Mexicans, were picked up by United States Immigration Officer Ames, just as they were crossing from Mexicali to Calexico, the first of this week, and they have been placed in the Imperial County Jail at El Centro, awaiting the orders of Federal officers at Los Angeles.

MISHAP VEILED IN MYSTERY.

WOMAN RUN DOWN BY MACHINE IS SPIRITED AWAY.

Physician Said to Have Attended Victim Denies All Knowledge of the Accident and Police Are Unable to Learn Particulars—Chief Orders a Thorough Investigation.

After being run down by an automobile delivery wagon of the American Dye Works, at the corner of Seventh and Valencia streets, yesterday afternoon at about 2:30 o'clock, a woman who has not been identified by the police was spirited away and no one has as yet been able to find out who she was nor how severely she was hurt.

Patrolman Craig was sent out from headquarters late in the afternoon by order of Chief Galloway, to ascertain where the blame lay for the accident. The officer was unable to find out more than that the woman, whoever she was, had been run down at the corner of West Seventh and Valencia streets by a delivery wagon of the American Dye Works, of which O. W. Thomas is the manager. After the accident the woman was taken to the Ansley Pharmacy, corner of Seventh and Valencia, where the manager said she was seen by Dr. Bayless of the Balboa Hotel. After that all movements of the woman and the automobile that ran her down were swallowed up in mystery.

"When the accident occurred," said Dr. H. Gordon Bayless, the only Dr. Bayless at the Balboa, so far as the employés knew, "I was at the Jonathan Club eating lunch, and I don't know a thing about any woman being hurt."

Dr. Bayless is the son-in-law of Detective C. C. Chapman of the Los Angeles police force, and this officer asked the doctor if he knew anything about the accident. Dr. Bayless solemnly declared he knew nothing of it.

From other persons in the neighborhood it was learned that the woman had been hurt about the face.

A man named Franklin told Patrolman Craig that the accident was caused by careless driving on the part of the auto driver.

O. W. Thomas, the manager of the American Dye Works, was not to be found yesterday afternoon, either at his home in Glendale or at the office of the American Dye Works. Despite the fact that on inquiry at his office, the men looking for him were referred to his home in Glendale, inquiries at the address given met with the statement that Thomas did not live there.

There is an ordinance which prescribes a heavy penalty for failing to report an accident, and Chief Galloway, when this was called to his attention yesterday evening, lost no time in giving orders that the mystery be solved without delay, and the guilty person, if any, brought to justice.

TEST RIGHTS OF THE PRESS.

Socialist Editor Is Charged With Criminal Libel.

Forced to Give Heavy Bonds by Arizona Court.

Alleges Untruths Against Territorial Officials.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

TUCSON (Ariz.) Sept. 12.—The fact that speech in Arizona is not entirely without limitation has been impressed upon F. H. Blighton, editor of a socialistic publication. The journal's pre-election issues have been remarkable in the scope of their consideration of public men, from Gov. Sloan down along the line, charging corruption in office where none had seen before any semblance of misconduct.

It may be remembered that, several months ago Col. Roosevelt enlarged the membership of the Ananias Club to include some enterprising journalists who made unwarranted comment upon the cordial relations between members of the Roosevelt household and James T. Williams, once a Civil Service Commissioner, but now editor of a Tucson newspaper. Blighton "went them one better" and charged that Williams had made his late eastern trip on a railroad pass. There was something tangible in this last statement, chagrin as it did an infraction of law. So Blighton was arrested and taken before Justice Richey on a charge of criminal libel.

He waived preliminary examination and was held to the grand jury on $1500 bonds, one of his bondsmen being Eugene S. Ives, attorney for the local Randolph railroad lines, and, incidentally, today defeated as a candidate for the Constitutional Convention. Blighton, not satisfied, then printed an article in which was stated that he was being railroaded to jail and that he expected no mercy from a grand jury drawn by Allan Jaynes, clerk of the District Court and business manager of the Citizen, or from a judge who had been appointed by President Taft, a friend of Williams. Then came five more complaints, on which he was arraigned in Justice Dufton's court, with $2500 added bonds.

MEXICANS ARE ABUSED.

City Policemen Roller and Hillman have been arrested and charged with assault with a deadly weapon upon D. C. Page and Lautero Cordero, two Spanish-speaking Republican voters, who appeared to have strayed from the straight path in being found in a room on Meyers street in which a disorderly Mexican Democratic meeting was being held. A point appears to be made over the Democratic bias of the officers. The victims are at the Rodgers Hospital in serious condition. Page was shot in the leg and was beaten over the head as though from the butt of a pistol. Cordero was shot through the right lung. Both officers claim innocence, and have evidence that their revolvers were not discharged during the melee. The affair created great excitement among the Mexicans, and there were threats of lynching.

Elias S. Junior, best known as "Black Jack," died a few days ago in Northern Arizona. He was a pioneer of the Southwest, coming to Tucson in 1863 and thereafter soon attaining fame as an Indian killer. He is known to have slain dozens of Apaches, but boasted that he had never shed the blood of a white man. He was a member of the famous King Woolsey party, which took part in the historic "Pinole treaty" at Bloody Tanks, near the present site of Miami, where, it is said, the whites poisoned the food of the Indians who had gathered by the hundreds to assassinate them. Though pursued with ferocity by a large part of the Apache nation, the party managed to make its way back to the safety of the Pima villages, leaving only a couple of men victims to Indian arrows in the narrow defile of Devil's Cañon.

The Pearson syndicate is doing much for Guaymas, Sonora, where old-time commercial conditions are vanishing with the expenditure of $3,000,000 of American capital, used in the building of docks and wharves and in dredging channels for deep-sea vessels. Heretofore most of the freight has been transferred by lighter between the shore and the ships, at large cost.

Dr. E. M. Grimes of Madison, Wis., has arrived in Tucson, to take the chair of mathematics in the Arizona Territorial University.

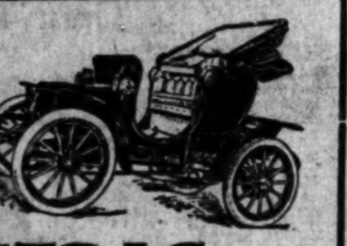
OHIO



ELECTRIC

"As the Palace Car is to the Day Coach, the Ohio is to Other Electrics"

Yes, the Ohio is the first SUCCESSFUL shaft-driven car, but this is only one of its many advantages.

Besides the Bevel Gear Shaft Drive, it has a full floating rear axle, the I-beam front axle, four brakes on rear wheels, none on transmission; fixed tube around steering column, permitting lubrication; ball bearings on steering knuckles; oil cups on spring bolts; extra large steering ball joints; foot accelerator.

These features are used on the best American and foreign gasoline cars, but the Ohio is the only electric embodying all of these features.

The Ohio Electric is constructed and intended for use on country roads as well as in city streets.

HARMON LAST OFF GROUND.

National Council President Takes Baldwin Along.

Drifter the First Bag to Leave in Flight.

Wonderful Race Expected in This Annual Event.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SPEEDWAY, INDIANAPOLIS (Ind.) Sept. 17.—The last balloon to start in this, the greatest balloon meet in history, was the New York, which left its moorings at 5:55, and drifted after the other twelve gas bags. Clifford B. Harmon was the pilot, and T. S. Baldwin aide.

Albert Holz, in the Drifter, from Cincinnati, was the first balloonist sent off in the free-for-all contest. The balloon left the ground at 3:58, and took a northeast course.

America II, the first starter in the American championship event, was turned loose at 4:52, with Allan H. Hawley, pilot, and August Post, aide, both of New York. The balloon rose slowly, and floated almost directly east.

Floating to the northeast, the direction taken by the Drifter, Miss Sophia, with William T. Assmann, pilot, and Paul McCullough, aide, rose at 5:01, the second balloon to start in the championship race. Miss Sophia skimmed the ground, and her crew was kept busy throwing out ballast until the speedway fence was reported.

STARTS ALONE.

Dr. L. E. Custer in the Luzerne of Dayton, entered in the free-for-all, started alone at 5:10, and reaching a greater height than any of his predecessors, started to the northeast.

The Million Population Club balloon was cheered loudly by the St. Louis delegation as it was sent up at 5:19, piloted by Louis Von Phul, assisted by Joseph O'Reilly. The balloon followed the others, going a little to the north.

The University City, piloted by Capt. John Berry of St. Louis, left the ground at 5:29 and floated to the northeast. On account of the leaky condition of the balloon, Berry entered the free-for-all event instead of the championship race. Capt. Berry won the last American championship race with the University City.

At 5:36 the Pennsylvania, in the championship event, piloted by Arthur T. Atherholt, assisted by Conyers B. Graham, both of Philadelphia, sailed off in the direction taken by most of the other balloons.

Owing to difficulties in inflating the thirteen gas bags, the order of racing was changed today. Many of the pilots did not have their baskets equipped at 4 o'clock, and three balloons were still limp from lack of gas.

FISH CAR IS HERE.

Nearly Million of Trout Brought from Sisson for Southern California

Deputy Fish and Game Warden H. I. Pritchard has received a shipment of 775,000 brook trout from the State hatchery at Sisson. The fry were shipped in a car especially designed for the transportation of fish.

In the shipment there are 115 cans of live fish. The trout are of three kinds—rainbow, lochleven and eastern brook. They are all game fighters, and should furnish a lot of sport to anglers in a couple of years.

The entire shipment will be planted in Southern California streams. One-fifth of the total number will be planted in the San Gabriel River.

The fish will not be planted until late in October, as the water is too hot at this time of the year for them to do well.

BREAKS SPEED RECORDS.

BORDEAUX (France) Sept. 17.—M. Auburn, the French aviator, flying in a Bleriot monoplane today, broke all speed records for 300 kilometers (186.3 miles) negotiating the distance in 3h. 33m. 7s.

Fake Horse Race.

SEATTLE, Sept. 17.—J. A. Enger, a young telegraph operator from Moapa, Nev., was fleeced out of $211 cash and a check for $4000 in a fake horse race game in this city yesterday. The two men who got Enger's money and check were arrested today, and gave the names of J. E. Owen and Charles Adams, the aliases of Treanor and McCormick being also found in Adams's effects. Payment on the check, issued on a Moapa bank, has been stopped. It is thought Owen and Adams followed Enger here from California, where he had been displaying his wealth, which he had intended to spend on a tour of the United States.

Women's Golf Match.

GLENCOE (Ill.) Sept. 16.—Mrs. Thurston Harris of the Westward Ho Golf Club won the eighth annual championship of the Women's Western Golf Association, at the Skokie Golf Club today, defeating Mrs. Harvey L. Pound of the Home club, 3 and 2 in the final hole.

Santa Ana Boy With Tacoma.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 16.—R. C. McFadden, '10, of Santa Ana, who played second base on the 'varsity nine last year and led the team in batting, with an unusually high average, is playing in the Northwestern League. He is holding down the shortstop position on the Tacoma team.

Balloons Are Sighted.

MUNCIE (Ind.) Sept. 17.—Six of the balloons that started in the race from the Indianapolis Speedway today had been reported at 9:30 p.m., as having passed over the towns near this city. They had covered about sixty miles and were slowly drifting northeast. None could be identified.

Record Race Proposed.

A 500-mile race for $30,000 in cash prizes open only to cars with a record of seventy miles an hour or better is being talked of for Indianapolis next year. Fred J. Wagner, starter, seems to think that the management would be spending too much money for a race of this kind. He is quoted as saying: "I would suggest that the race be not more than 350 miles in length and that $7500 or thereabouts be given for first place."

FASTEST BASEBALL GAME ON RECORD.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ATLANTA (Ga.) Sept. 17.—Mobile and Atlanta broke the world's time record for a baseball game here today when they played a full nine-inning game in 32m., Mobile winning 2 to 1.

This means that every inning was played in less than three and one-third minutes on the average, a marvelous feat.

BLUE AND GOLD HAS EASY TIME.

BIG TEAM BEATS BARBARIANS IN FAST CONTEST.

Freshmen Win from Affiliated Colleges in Ragged Game—Dills, Former Pomona High Player, Stars for the 'Varsity—Bailey of Long Beach Good.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERKELEY (Cal.) Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] A double victory for the Blue and Gold was the result of the two games of Rugby played this afternoon on California field. The 'varsity beat the Barbarians by a score of 32 to 5, while the freshmen defeated the affiliated colleges team to the tune of 24 to 0.

First-class Rugby was the style of play put up by the 'varsity and the one-sidedness of the score is not an indication of the game. The two Southern California men, Evans and Dills, were the biggest individual scoring factors for the 'varsity.

Elliott kicked off and after about five minutes of loose play in midfield Morris received the ball from the scrum, passed to Elliott, who passed to Stroud, thence to Peart who gave it to Dills, who went over the goal for the first try. Elliott converted handily.

After an exchange of kicks and a dribbling rush a scrum was called on the Barbarians' 25-yard line. In this the 'varsity was awarded a free kick for Barbarian offside play.

Elliott made an easy 35-yard place kick. The clubmen then took a spurt and kept the play in Blue and Gold territory for nearly ten minutes once trying a 35-yard line place kick after a fair catch. After a long dribbling rush over three-fourth of the length of the field a scrum was called on the 5-yard line from which Dills received the ball and went over for a try.

Half ended with the ball in midfield, and the score was 11 to 0.

In the second half after a few minutes to loose play Hallowe received the ball on the 20-yard line and planted it between the posts for a try which Elliott converted. On the kickoff the Barbarians got the ball and kicked to touch on the 'varsity 1-yard line.

Following a number of scrums, Allen got the ball and made a sensational forty-yard run, being downed in midfield. A scrum was called from which Evans taking the ball passed to Elliott thence to Baker of Santa Ana, who scored. Elliott converted.

The "Barbs" were forced to save and on the kickout a long dribbling rush brought the ball to the clubmen's fifteen-yard line, whence Doug Barnett scored a try, making the score twenty-four to nothing. Following an exchange of kicks Austin of Berkley High, playing with the Barbarians, got the ball on the California thirty-yard line and went over for their only try, which he later converted.

Allen cross kicked to Evans on the Barb's fifteen-yard line and another try was scored for California. Evans soon again received the ball in the loose play and scored the last try of the game, which he converted.

COURT CRAZE SEIZES HOLD OF MEN AND WOMEN.

It's a Real Game in Which Every One May Take Part—Chance for the Wife to Be Boss of the Realm. Secret of Spalding's High Run for the U. S. Senate

BY HARRY C. CARR.

Somehow or other, I have caught this fever myself. At first it seemed extremely ridiculous to see fat old fathers waddling around tennis courts. Snorting and grunting and sweating; galloping ponderously from one side of the court to the other, they always made me think of old bull elephants playing tag.

But now I've got it myself. Nothing else in this life seems to me of such real importance as that I should rise at unseemly hours of the morning and whale an innocent little rubber ball with a snowshoe with a handle on it, under the derisive eye of the milkman, who pauses on his rounds.

I am the official goat of the neighborhood.

Toddling children, broken-hearted over their defeats, are sent out by tactful mothers to play with me and find consolation. I rank next to the battered side of the old barn as an instrument to practice difficult strokes upon. I am the Jim Flynn of the tennis court. My record is unmarred by victory.

I never have beaten anybody yet; but I shall some day. Something tells me that I shall win. Some day a poor old paralytic will come along asking alms and I will hire him by the day to play tennis with me—and I'll beat him.

The fact that I have not yet worried Miss Sutton by my prospects is not entirely my fault. The darn court isn't made right. It's too wide. It's outrageous. I could play wonderfully if the balls didn't always come along on the other side of the court. Whichever side of the court you stand, the balls always come on the other side.

I also have a good deal of difficulty about the net. For the life of me I can't see any sense of having that net there. Some of my strokes would be simply wonderful if it weren't for the irritating fact they go into the net. I can't see that the net does anybody any good.

If I could play tennis on a bowling alley, I am sure you would see something with real class.

The best thing I do, at the present stage of my game, is to walk home from the court, with a racquet held under my arm in a most professional attitude; and I talk about loffords.

I don't know what a lofford is, except that I imagine it is some kind of a stroke; but to hear the easy, careless way I bring in the lofford—oh, la la la—Marvelous!

I have an awful suspicion that my experience is not an uncommon one. I am willing to swear that about nine-tenths of the population get up at daybreak and go forth to slam the ball for a while before going to work.

To my practiced eye, this city is inhabited by business men who go limping around with sore heels from the rub of tennis shoes and whose hands are raw and blistered from the racquet handle.

Nothing in years has taken such a grip as this tennis fad. They used to play tennis a great deal fifteen or twenty years ago, when Miss Eva Tufts and Miss May Carter were the stars. In those days the "tennis set" was the inner circle and if you didn't know a lofford by its first name you didn't belong.

Society then radiated about the old Santa Monica Casino. I don't know why, but tennis stagnated for years, and there were almost no courts in the city. Beginning with last winter, it began again to be very popular, and this summer it has been a veritable craze.

STANFORD WINS FROM OLYMPICS.

CARDINAL TEAM GAINS FORM AT END OF GAME.

Olympic Team, Strengthened by Former Palo Alto Players, Puts Up Hard Fight—Freshmen Beat San Jose High Badly—Southerners Star in the Play.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 17—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Stanford, 14; Olympic Club, 0.

The Cardinal Rugby 'varsity defeated the winged "O" fifteen this afternoon in the first game of the season on Stanford Field.

The Olympics gave the collegians a closer fight than was expected. The team included Reynolds and Roth of last season's 'varsity and several other former members of the Stanford and California fifteens.

The Cardinal 'varsity did not develop much team work in the first period, but in the second half several pretty passing rushes were executed that ran the Olympics off their feet. The seven man scrum was used.

The Stanford men had a hard time getting together during the first ten minutes of play but gradually they began to pick up and after thirteen minutes Tom Sanborn, '12, of Redlands, made a brilliant run of twenty yards and went across the Olympics' line for the try. Brown converted.

Brown's kicking to touch after eluding tacklers was spectacular.

The Olympics got near Stanford's goal near the end of the half when Schaupp fumbled a kick, but the Cardinel men put on more steam and quickly returned the ball to the center of the field.

At the beginning of the second half Brown was moved from fullback to center three quarters, Erb went to fullback and Louis Case of Los Angeles was put at halfback, Edwin Bly, '13, of Los Angeles, replaced Al Frank in the pack.

Stanford played a very aggressive game in second period scoring three tries. Patridge, Sundell and Thoburn made the points.

Good material was revealed by the game, although several of the new men will require much practice in order to gain 'varsity form. Erb was very clever in all situations, pulling off several fancy stunts that bewildered the Olympics.

The freshmen deefated San José High 33 to 0. Ted Geissler of Los Angeles scored five tries for the babes. He was easily the best player on the field. Phil Harrigan also loomed up and Reeves of San Bernardino and Weber of Pomona made several dodging runs that netted large gains.

TOO MUCH CLASS.

FOWNES BEAT WOOD HANDILY

Amateur Golf Title Won by a Score of Four and Three.

Poor Putting Contributes to Westerner's Defeat.

Winner Does Consistent Work All the Way.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BROOKLINE (Mass.) Sept. 17.—W. C. Fownes, Jr., of the Oakmont Club, Pittsburgh, won the national amateur golf championship at the Country Club today by defeating Warren K. Wood of the Homewood Club, Chicago, in the finals of the annual tournament, 4 up and 3 to play.

Poor putting and wild work with the irons put Wood four down at the end of the first round of 18 holes. Fownes went around the course in almost perfect figures. He was very steady, while Wood was erratic, especially on the green, and missed short putts were common.

Recalling yesterday's performance, however, when Wood was down to Tuckerman at the same stage of the match, the gallery of 500 or 600 enthusiasts which followed the contest did not believe that Wood's chance of winning the championship was entirely lost.

Both men were more or less erratic in their driving during the morning round, a stiff northeaster contributing to the difficulty of keeping on the course. After halving the first two holes, Fownes lost the third by the short approach, and was one down. He won it back on the next hole, however, despite a pulled drive, as Wood overapproached on the green. Wood sliced two drives out of bounds at the fifth tee, and trapped his third, then gave up the hole. Fownes, 1 up.

The sixth and seventh holes were halved, but on the eighth Wood sliced his drive, and sent his second into the woods, Fownes winning, and being 2 up. Wood's drives and brassie shots on the next hole were poor, and Fownes won, and had a lead of 3 at the turn.

Card:
Fownes, out, 40.
Wood, out, 46.

BOTH INTO TRAPS.

In the short tenth hole, Wood was trapped, and Fownes won another hole. The Pittsburgh man got into the trap from his drive, and into the sand pit on his next shot at the eleventh hole, and Wood won. Wood putted his second shot on the next hole, and although he laid Fownes a stymie on the green, the latter cleverly negotiated it, and was 4 up. Wood used his clubs badly again on the fourteenth hole, and was 5 down. Wood sliced his next drive, and made a poor second, and Fownes was 6 up when they reached the sixteenth tee. They halved this hole.

Fownes lost the seventeenth on account of slicing his drive, and also the eighteenth, in which both made poor second shots, but Wood ran down a 15-foot putt, and was 4 down at the end of the morning play.

The cards for the second nine holes follow:

Fownes, in 33—73.
Wood, in 37—83.

AFTERNOON PLAY.

Nineteenth hole, 420 yards: Starting off on the afternoon round, Fownes sliced his drive, while Wood drove straight and far. Both reached the green on the second, but Wood overran his putt and lost the hole. Fownes, 5 up.

Twentieth hole, 425 yards: Wood was trapped on his drive, but made a beautiful recovery, laying his second within twenty feet of the green, and as Fownes took three putts, Wood captured the hole. Fownes, 4 up.

Twenty-first hole, 404 yards: Both followed good drives by slicing to the left and just getting out on the third. The hole was halved. Fownes, 4 up.

Twenty-second hole, 300 yards: Fownes played remarkable golf on the twenty-second hole, but he pulled his drive. Wood was there in the second, laid his third twenty beyond the hole, and rolled it in on the fourth. Wood took three putts on the green and lost the hole. Fownes, 5 up.

Twenty-third hole, 415 yards: Both drive equally far. Wood laid a 170-yard approach within three feet of the hole, and won it. Fownes, 4 up.

Twenty-fourth hole, 280 yards: Wood topped his drive, and was in a deep trap in front of the green on his second. A minute later Fownes, trying to pitch for the green, also rolled into the trap. Both gathered all their strength, and whaled their balls on the green and in a cloud of sand. Fownes failed to run down a six-foot putt, while Wood holed out and reduced his opponent's lead to 3 up.

CHAMP WELL KNOWN.

WAS SEMI-FINALIST TWICE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 17.—W. C. Fownes, Jr., the new national amateur golf champion, is secretary of the Midland Steel Company and has been playing golf about ten years. He is governor of the Oakmont Country Club, and a holder of several sectional championships. Mr. Fownes won the Western Pennsylvania championship in 1909, and retained it by his success this year.

On two occasions he has reached the semi-finals of the national championship by putting out Walter J. Travis in 1905 and 1907, when Travis was at the zenith of his game.

PLENTY OF DUCKS.

Members of the Southern California gun clubs are enthusiastic over the prospects of the coming duck season. C. G. Stivers says that the lakes on the Sunset grounds, which are near Sunset Beach, are filled to overflowing and ducks of all the kinds that frequent the south are feedings on the club grounds in great numbers.

Cleveland's Big Draft

CINCINNATI, Sept. 17.—Nineteen players were drafted from the minor leagues by the major leagues during the two weeks, September 1 to September 15, the additional period allowed by the national agreement. Cleveland, with seven, and Boston Americans with six additional drafted players, head the list.

NEW HIGHWAY TO WHITTIER.

Another Link of Road-Chain Under Construction.

Inter-State Torpedo Travels Uncompleted Route.

Morrow, Loomis & Co. Party Finds Rough Going.

One of the finest highways in the world is being constructed between Los Angeles and Whittier. It is a art of the great good-roads system r which progressive citizens voted me two years ago to bond Los Anles county.

When the whole system is completed, os Angeles county is going to lead all e counties of the United States in e matter of good roads.

To ascertain the present condition of e Whittier road, as well as to see e various stages of highway conruction, Harry W. Doherty of Morw, Loomis & Company, guided a arty over the worst stretches of the ghway in an Inter-State torpedo riday. The party included Mrs. oherty and one of the firm partners, 7. H. Loomis.

An excellent opportunity was afrded of seeing a Los Angeles county ad in the making. The party also d a chance of traversing the, as yet completed, stretches of the course, see how deep California dust can be September, how it feels to run over succession of chuck-holes as big as ashtubs, and whether or not an Inr-State forty can climb back onto e road after descending into the pits ed in loading dirt wagons.

IMPROVEMENTS.

Several miles of the Whittier highay have already been completed, and the present time, when traffic is ght, on account of the bad stretches yond, afford an excellent automobile eedway. Beyond the boulevard gment there is a two-mile stretch partially completed road, where am-rollers are at work packing the p dressing. Still further from Los ageles gangs are at work preparing e old highway for its new surface, pairing bridges, deepening side tches, and cutting down grades.

The Whittier highway is practically extension of Stephenson avenue. aching Boyle Heights by way of ast Seventh street, one has only to ntinue on eastward into the country find the new stretch of road.

Until the Inter-State party left the mpleted speedway, the going was ooth. But where the rollers were work traffic was forced to the sides the highway, where the dust was ep, the going rough, and the side at times trying. For a change oherty ran the machine up onto the ushed rock in the center of the roaday, which has just received a coat of ude asphaltum in anticipation of the p dressing of sand.

Doherty sometimes names his auto onstrators according to their a smooth-running, sweet-dispositioned car, and has been called Angelica. Angelica's successor may be Beelsebub, or Saint Sebastian, or Maud, but Doherty has another list ready to choose from.

ALMOST A TURKISH.

After a few rods on the asphaltum, "Angelica" was headed back into the dust bath. Then the crude oil did its best. Morrow, Loomis & Company have in their employ a negro cleaner who answers to the appelation of "My son"—probably, Doherty says, because he does so little work. "My son," is due to spend some time on "Angelica" before she does any more stylish demonstrating.

Beyond Montebello is the deepest cut on the road. Gangs of laborers are lowering the roadway many feet, eliminating the heavy pitch that formerly descended to the edge of the San Gabriel lowlands. A novel method of excavating is employed.

A narrow cut is scraped in the center of the roadway, so deep that a mule team standing in it is below the upper surface. From a bridge built across the gulch dirt is loaded into the line of wagons that pass underneath.

As a "stunt" Doherty drove through the gulch, there was only an inch or two to spare on either side of the auto, with just clearance room under the bridge, but "Angelica" came through safely, climbing straight up out of the dust on the low without any hesitation.

Beyond the bridge over the Rio Honda lies a stretch of the old highway that has not yet been touched. Even repairs have been neglected, in view of the contemplated changes. Dust lies on it in some places a full foot in depth.

BRIDGE WASHED OUT.

Last winter the bridge beyond the cut, as well as the shorter viaduct further on over the San Gabriel main bed, were both washed out. The further structure is now being repaired, and with the approaches still incomplete furnishes one of the roughest bits of going on the entire road.

On the return trip, the demonstrator behaved as well as going out, taking the rough rise in the Montebello cut with no fuss. When the completed stretch of road was regained Doherty cut loose for a mile or so, and the way in which "Angelica" picked up a fifty-mile gait showed that the rough going had done nothing more than soil the exterior appearance of the car.

The machine is the second 1911 demonstrator Morrow, Loomis & Company have broken in, their policy being to turn over the firm machines almost as soon as they are thoroughly tuned up. The torpedo forty is an attractive foredoor model, that is comfortable as well as powerful. By her trip "Angelica" showed that she possesses high "sea-going" qualities, as well as class.

Doherty, who is a new comer in Los Angeles, expressed some surprise that the road construction for a permanent highway should be so light. Most of the macadams used in Eastern States have a deep foundation layer of larger rock than any of the crushed stone used in the Southern California construction. Western conditions, however, are of course entirely different from those in other parts of the country, the absence of frost permitting construction that would not endure the freezing and melting of an eastern winter. As far as the surface finishing is concerned, the Los Angeles county roads are to be surpassed by nothing in the world.

TIRE STATISTICS.

Compilation of Data Shows That Front Tubes Outlast Rear, as the Strain Is Less.

A table of the carrying capacity of tires supplied by one company illuminates somewhat the compared strain on front and rear tires. The ordinary computation of the life of a tire ignores whether it is front or rear, the adjustment being made on averages of large numbers of all sorts. The strain table, in inches, is:

Varnish Needs Light.

Complaint on the part of owners and users of automobiles painted in dark colors is widespread concerning the greening and discoloration of the varnish, thus destroying to a greater or less extent the natural attractiveness of the colors and combinations of colors employed. This is due, for the most part, to the too close confinement of the automobile in an insufficiently lighted room. A lack of light affects the varnish disastrously, and in greening and discoloring it the color over which it is used is likewise injured. This emphasizes the need of a great amount of light—really the more the better—for the garage in order to preserve the original and native quality of the finish.

Loose Bonnet Risky.

A broken hood clasp never should be neglected, nor should a car normally equipped with a bonnet strap be permitted to run for any distance minus that fastening. Although the risk may seem to be slight, the peril which follows the jumping off of a loose bonnet is too great to be risked for the sake of saving a few minutes' time or a small amount of expense.

CALIFORNIANS.

WESTERN WOMEN SECURE PRIZES.

HUDSON COMPANY EXPERIENCE RUN AWARDS ANNOUNCED.

Nearly Five Hundred Owners Participated in Novel Contest Run Off in July—Contenders Who Had Most Unique Trips Are Declared to Be Winners.

Five California ladies, Miss Florence H. Swaine of Whittier, Mrs. Lillian E. Yaeger of Fullerton, Mrs. Frank Van Leuven of Redlands, Mrs. S. F. Ruff of Stockton and Mrs. H. A. McCall of San Francisco were among the eighteen women to receive prizes awarded last week in the Hudson Motor Car Company's "Owner's Experience Contest."

More Californians won honors in the contest than representatives from any other State. In addition to the five women who came in for $25 awards, T. W. Brotherton, Jr., of Los Angeles, E. Hoon of Fresno and R. W. Peterson of Santa Rosa won $10 prizes. First priz was won by A. P. Pearson of Dorchester, Mass.

The contest was held in July. Prizes were distributed to owners whose stories and photographs showed that they had submitted their cars to the most unique tests. One of the conditions of the run was that no tools should be carried. Women who competed drove their own cars.

Trips that averaged 150 miles in length were completed successfully by 486 cars. All parts of the country were represented, but Southern California and the Pacific Coast secured the greatest number of prizes in the final awards.

Following is a list of the prize winners:

First prize, 150 A. P. Pearson, Dorchester, Mass.

Second prize, $100, R. W. Hyde, Duluth, Minn.

Third prize, $50, J. M. Heffner, Mason City, Iowa.

Fourth prize, $25, William Kemble, Kingston, N. Y.

Fifth prize, $20, A. P. Perry, McIntosh, Wash.

Sixth prize, $15, F. L. Jelks, Quitman, Ga.

Fourteen prizes of $10 each to H. Brewster Willis, New Brunswick, N. J.; W. B. Dobson, Alpena, Mich.; A. F. Boylan, Denison, Iowa; G. W. Schwartzwallder, Chichester, N. Y.; John Johnson, Chappell, Neb.; P. H. Combes, No. 3685 Olive street, St. Louis, Mo.; T. W. Brotherton, Jr., No. 4501 Finley avenue, Los Angeles, Cal.; E. Hoen, Fresno, Cal.; R. W. Peterson, No. 431 College avenue, Santa Rosa, Cal.; A. W. Wall, Walpole, Mass.; Donald McFadon, No. 511 Savage-Schofield building, Tacoma, Wash.; Dr. F. J. Harter, Herkimer, N. Y.; Thomas M. Purves, Anthon, Iowa; G. M. Jones, No. 423 Washington street, Augusta, Ga.

Women drivers who received $25 apiece: Miss Helene H. Underwood, No. 303 Seventy-second street, New York; Miss Florence H. Swain, Whittier, Cal.; Mrs. C. D. De Vere, No. 387 Forest avenue, Buffalo; Mrs. R. W. Hyde, Duluth, Minn.; Mrs. G. W. Schwarzwallder, Chichester, N. Y.; Mrs. W. H. Hoodless, Croswell, Mich.; Miss Marie Schulte, Chanute, Kan.; Mrs. H. HARD TO BEAT.

WESTERNERS TO ENTER CLASSIC.

Seven Los Angeles Drivers in Vanderbilt.

Contingent Has Already Won Wide Recognition.

Unprecedented Delegation from Single City.

Southern California is due to carry off big honors in the Vanderbilt Cup race, this year.

For the first time in the history of the "Long Island classic" a big representation of western drivers is entered. The Los Angeles delegation in point of numbers and average reputation heads the list.

After cleaning up the East in most other branches of sports and athletics, California is going to make a stab for top speedway honors. Nobody will be particularly surprised if Fred Thomson's success in the all-around athletic championship is followed by a Los Angeles victory in the great Vanderbilt race.

It might be mentioned in passing that one May Sutton hails from this vicinity, while such a trifle as a world's record relay team from the Los Angeles High School passes almost unnoticed.

When it comes to physical prowess requiring strength or nerve or skill, or a combination of all three, Los Angeles had the whole eastern part of the United States worried.

Seven big drivers who have already won national names for themselves are the men who first came to the front in the auto racing game as Los Angeles residents.

Bert Dingley, Al Livingstone, Harris M. Hanshue, "Wild Bill" Endicott, C. H. Bigelow, Hal Stone and Jack Fleming are all entered as pilots of powerful cars.

HIS REPUTATION.

Bert Dingley has the longest reputation of them all, though his showing has been hardly more brilliant than that of others of the seven. Twice before he has been entered in the Vanderbilt, once, in 1905, actually taking part with a Pope-Toledo. Last year a practice accident just prior to the date of the race kept him out of the running, Knipper being sent in with the big car as his substitute.

Last year Dingley won the Shettler cup in the Santa Monica road races, later carrying off first honors in the meet at Portland, Or. He took second in the big Fairmount race at Philadelphia, and third in the Lowell, Mass., road race. This string of successes won for him the distinction of being classed as one of the four greatest road race [illegible] of the year in this country.

In this year's Vanderbilt Dingley is to drive a Pope-Hartford entered by [illegible].

With Dingley is to be Jack Fleming, who is slated to drive the second of the big Pope-Hartford entries. Fleming's biggest win last year came [illegible] San Francisco, when he took the Portola road race against fierce competition.

[illegible] is to pilot an Apperson [illegible] model, entered by G. H. [illegible] of Apperson [illegible] at the Ko- [illegible] Hanshue's 1909 which he took part he managed to pull first place five times and second once. The contests, however, did not rank quite as prominent nationally as those in which Dingley figured, so that Hanshue has not yet received as wide a recognition as Dingley. The Santa Monica race furnished the most prominent of his firsts.

HANSHUE'S ESCAPE.

At the Motordrome last April Hanshue figured in a spectacular smash-up in which his car was demolished, though he himself escaped without serious injury.

"Wild Bill" Endicott, who is to drive a Cole thirty, has figured successfully with the light car at various western meets. In the Motordrome races last spring, as well as during the earlier competitions at Ascot Park, his showing has been high. His reputation for daring driving among his eastern competitors has made him one of the most feared of the Southern California delegation.

Hal Stone is another man who did some classy driving at the Motordrome opening events, winning a reputation for himself before the meet was over. He is the present holder of the Los Angeles to San Diego record, one of the most coveted marks in this section of the country. Stone set the present figures this year with a Great Western car.

C. H. Bigelow has a trans-continental trip to his credit that has never been duplicated. He is the only man who has ever piloted a car across the continent via the old Santa Fé trail. The long trip was made in a Mercer—the make of car which Bigelow is to guide around the Vanderbilt circuit.

TAKES HIS CHANCE.

Al Livingstone is to compete in a National car, entered by the National Motor Vehicle Company. Livingstone jumped into the racing limelight in 1909, when he won second place in the big Elgin road race in Illinois. At the same meet he took first in one of the smaller contests, winning the Illinois trophy.

James B. Ryall and Harry Michenor, who are now on the Pacific Slope, may possibly get East for the big races and swell the western contingent still further.

Next to the Pacific Coast comes the Middle West, with five races of national renown. These are Edward A. Hearne, Ray Harroun, Robert Burman, Joe Dawson and Jack Aitken.

The eastern sharks will certainly have to throw considerable dust to win their own big blue ribbon race.

CHALMERS MAN HERE.

Sales Manager for Well-Known Factory Has Good Word to Say for Southern California Trade.

W. C. Wood, general sales manager for the Chalmers Motor Company, was in Los Angeles the latter part of the week and left last night for San Francisco. He says the outlook for the coming season was never better for the ern Motor Car Company, local agents for the Chalmers lines. He was the guest of Earle C. Anthony, president of the company, at dinner last night and outlined his plans for the coming sales campaign.

Three weeks from now Wood expects to spend another week in this city. He says Southern California is one of the most important districts for his line of cars. He is particularly pleased, he says, with the prospects for the season and is satisfied that this is to be the banner year. He is backed up in this belief by Anthony, who had nearly two scores of advance orders to show the Chalmers man.

There are few men who are as well known in this locality as Wood. About a year ago he visited Los Angeles and at that time was special representative of the Chalmers factory. He has since been promoted to the responsible position and will devote a large amount of his time to the western territory. He expects to pass a week in San Francisco and then to visit Portland and Seattle.

ROAD SIGNS WRONG.

Motorists Touring Over Foothill Boulevard to San Bernardino Liable to Find Trouble

Between Glendora and Claremont work is being done on the Foothill boulevard, which closes it to auto traffic. The contractors in charge of the new construction have placed signs at the Glendora end of the stretch directing tourists to turn south and take the first road east. This leads to trouble.

Beyond Glendor lies the San Dimas wash—one of the roughest stretches of country in the Pomona Valley. If the contractor's directions are followed, the heart of the "wash" will be reached, where even a horse-drawn vehicle would find the going slow and difficult.

Motorists on the foothill road who wish to reach Claremont or points further east should turn south on Citrus avenue at Glendora, and keep going south until Covina is reached. Then the San Dimas lower road, connecting through Lordsburg with North Pomona and Claremont, can be followed. C. H. Hamilton of the Automobile Club of Southern California was one of those who got into difficulty by following the contractor's signs, and is emphatic in his warning to other motorists.

In several places the road signs of the Southern California Club are temporarily unreliable, owing to the widespread process of road construction. As far as possible, the club has changed the signs to fit conditions, but in many cases, where the work being done is only of a temporary nature, this has been inexpedient.

Leonard F. Block, superintendent of road signs of the club, says that signs for a new route to Venice have been put up while the old routes are for the most part closed. Parties traveling the new route need only go straight out West Pico street, and then follow the signs.

The present Redondo route runs via Vermont avenue, jogging to Florence, then turns sharp south past the cemetery, beyond that following the main-traveled road.

Tourists going further north than Santa Barbara are advised to travel by the San Marcus road rather than the Gaviota, as wood hauling has cut the latter route badly, and the recent rains have washed the adobe heavily.

Some complaints are being made by contractors in charge of the new road construction at various points concerning auto traffic on the uncompleted surfaces. In order to prevent bad cutting of the surface, traffic is kept from the roadways as far as possible until the asphalt coating has hardened.

ASK your contractor about the Hipolito Self-regulating Roller Screen and Reversible Window. Insist that he include it in his specifications. Hipolito Screen and Sash Co., 634 Maple avenue.

LAWS TO LEAVE SPORTS ALONE.

Fraud Alone Will Warrant Legal Interference.

Contestants by Entering Accept Conditions.

Justice Putnam Makes Fine Glidden Decision.

The opinion of Justice Putnam of the New York Supreme Court concerning the award of the 1910 Glidden Tour trophy is of far-reaching interest to all sportmen, as well as to those interested only in autos and automobile racing.

The decision is, in effect, that entrants in a sporting event tacitly agree by their entry to the rules and regulations governing the contest; that is, when they enter they accept the jurisdiction of the regular officials of the contest as final.

Fraud alone, according to Justice Putnam, can bring a sporting contest decision into the cognizance of law courts. Says the justice:

"It is a primary principle of all sporting contests that rules must be made by the bodies conducting them, and that those regularly appointed must decide who wins. The entrants in such competition, as a matter of fairness, agree to abide by the decisions of the umpires, referees or boards having jurisdiction, as the rules may provide. Especially is this true in a contest where the points of eligibility are highly technical, and the association is composed of experts who themselves are well fitted to judge. Before a dissatisfied entrant can ask the courts to interfere and set aside the rulings of a sporting governing body there must ordinarily be evidence of fraud, either by a competitor, or by the official making the decision. The track judges, umpires, referees, executive committees and governing boards of such associations are supreme within themselves when acting under their recognized authority. If they give the parties concerned a fair opportunity to be heard, and there is evidence on which their findings can be based, their decisions, in the absence of fraud, are not subject to judicial review. Thus, Judge Gildersleeve, delivering an opinion reversing a special term order which granted an injunction in favor of a disqualified contestant at a race track, said:

"'When the original contract was entered into . . . the owner of the said colt, in effect, subscribed to the defendant's rules, and they are binding upon his successor. Those rules named the tribunal to which any dispute that might arise out of the contract should be submitted. That tribunal was the Executive Committee of the defendant corporation. They had jurisdiction of the cause of action alleged in the complaint herein, and it was the duty of the plaintiff to submit to their decision.' (Corrigan vs. Coney Island Jockey Club, 48 N. Y. St. Rep. 582, 586.)

"These principles have been generally recognized. The fact that the Glidden trophy is of large value and that, although in the form of a sporting contest, the tour really affords a test of the endurance of a car, from which important financial consequences ensue, does not change the rule. Such consequences flow from many modern sporting contests, but these results do not give the court jurisdiction.

"In the present case the objections to the form of the appeal and to the proceedings before the contest board are largely technical. While in some respects informal, such proceedings do not appear to lack any substantial protection to all concerned. The high standing of the parties forbids the suggestion of fraud; in fact, upon the argument it was acknowledged that there was no fraud as to anyone involved. In the absence of fraud the question for the court is not whether, passing primarily upon the evidence, it would have reached the same conclusion as that of the contest board, or whether their conclusion was reasonable or unreasonable, but simply and wholly whether the case before them was so bare of evidence to sustain the decision that no honest mind could reach the same result. (People ex rel. Jackson vs. New York Produce Exchange, 149 N. Y. 401, 414.)"

COURT'S PLACE.

The decision is also illuminating concerning the difficulties that would arise if courts of law or equity should customarily interfere in such matters.

"The rule that courts of equity will interfere to secure the possession of valued objects having a sentimental interest to the owner comes under a different head of the jurisdiction. Plaintiff's proceeding, while nominally to gain possession of the trophy, is in reality to obtain a reversal of the present award, with a reinstatement of the Premier entry as the winner. Were jurisdiction entertained, proof would be naturally taken with respect to the equipment of the 1910 Premier cars from nearly all the large cities of the United States. On this motion, seventy-three affidavits from twenty-six cities have been submitted. Upon a hearing on the merits, even with the utmost diligence, such a mass of testimony from widely dispersed parties might require several months for its completion. After decision rendered thereon, appeals would naturally follow, so that the final judicial ascertainment of the result of the 1910 Glidden tour might not be reached until other Glidden tours had in the meantime taken place. Heretofore, the law has declined this jurisdiction not based on those property rights usually cognizable by courts. To change now and hear the loser in court would also imperil the spirit and interest in all such contests."

STOCK CARS.

The first part of the decision, after reciting briefly the immediate facts of the case, gives clear-cut definitions of stock cars and conditions surrounding the Glidden tour, of interest especially to motorists:

"The purpose of the Glidden tour is to try out and test the endurance of what manufacturers call a 'stock car,' that is, a car such as is regularly sold to purchasers, and not one specially equipped for a contest. In the rules for 1910, the entrant was required to file a stock car certificate of description, in which the details of the car were fully set forth. A technical committee was to make a preliminary inspection of the stock car to determine if it corresponded with the stock car certificate. Various provisions were made as to the examinations and report by this technical committee, as well as regulating the penalties in the contest after the cars should have entered upon the tour.

"Plaintiff was the entrant in the 1910 contest of a Premier car. In the certificate of description was mentioned a hand oil pump and oil tank. This [illegible] by the Technical Committee and declared to be eligible. During the tour, a protest was made, upon the claim that this hand pump to inject oil into the crankcase of the engine of the Premier car was not a part of the regular stock equipment. At the conclusion of the tour, in which plaintiff's car showed the best score, this protest was considered by the referee, who deferred action until he had received a special report from one of the Technical Committee who had visited the factory of the Premier Motor Manufacturing Company. Subsequently, the referee overruled the protest and declared the plaintiff's car the winner. The Chalmers Motor Company, who had entered a car in the name of the defendant, George W. Dunham, appealed from this decision to the Contest Board, which, after notification to the plaintiff, took up the appeal on July 21, and after receiving proofs by affidavit and hearing arguments, on July 22 sustained the appeal of the Chalmers Motor Company, on the ground that there was no sufficient evidence to prove that the auxiliary oil tank and pump equipment was stock equipment, so that the Premier company had failed to furnish evidence sufficient to establish the stock status of its cars entered in respect to this lubricating equipment, and for that reason the Premier cars were disqualified."

HISTORY.

EARLY CONTESTS INTERNATIONAL.

FIRST VANDERBILT CUP RACES BETWEEN BIG TEAMS.

For Three Years France, Germany, Italy and the United States Competed With Representative Squads, After Elimination Trials, and France Won.

This year's Vanderbilt cup race is to be the sixth of its kind. The Long Island annual event was established in 1904.

George Heath won the first of the contests, on October 8, 1904, driving a ninety-horse-power Panhard for the French team. Four teams took part, representing the United States, France, Germany and Italy. There were in all sixteen entries, divided among the quartette of teams.

The original grant of the cup by W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., stipulated that the race should be competed for by teams and not by individuals. The contest was to be not less than 250 nor more than 300 miles in length, over a road course. Since the first race various provisions governing the event have been changed from time to time to meet modern racing conditions.

Heath covered the 284 miles of the first race at an average speed of fifty-two miles an hour.

Tart, another member of the French team covered one lap at the rate of seventy-two miles an hour—at that time an unprecedented clip.

Herbert Lytle, driving a Pope-Toledo, won third place for the United States.

An elimination race was run off before the second Vanderbilt contest, for the purpose of selecting an American team. Bert Dingley won the trial. Teams of five men each represented the United States, France and Italy, while Germany had a four-man team.

Hemery, in a Darracq, won for France, making an average speed of sixty-one and one-half miles an hour. Heath was second and Tracy, in a Locomobile, third. Lancia, the great Italian pilot, drove a splendid race until his smash-up with Christie in the final miles of the contest.

In 1906, Wagner, of the French team, won the most sensational of all the Vanderbilts, in a Darracq, at a gait of sixty-three miles an hour for a total of 297 miles. Lancia finished first in a Fiat, but was a few seconds behind Wagner on elapsed time. Tracy, who had won the elimination contest for places on the American team, covered the fastest lap of the race in a Locomobile. Until close to the end of the race, Duray and Jenatzy seemed likely winners.

BROKE BARRIERS.

The excitement was so great that the crowd at the finish broke down the barriers and swarmed over the track before the winners got in. It was a wonder that no serious accidents occurred.

There was no Vanderbilt in 1907.

In 1908, conditions for the contest had been changed, so that the drivers competed as individuals, and not as teams. For the first time the trophy went officially to an American. George Robertson won the race in a ninety-horse-power Locomobile, after a close duel with Lytle in an Isotta. The winner's average pace was 64.3 miles an hour.

Harry F. Grant won the race last year at a speed of 62.8 miles an hour, from a field of fifteen starters. Parker took second in a Fiat. As in the preceding year, the pilots competed as individuals.

The Massanequa sweepstakes and Wheatly hills sweepstakes for cars of smaller dimensions were run off simultaneously with the Vanderbilt last year, Matson, in a Chalmers, winning the former event and Harroun in a Marmon the latter. The races were not started until 9 a.m., instead of at daybreak as in previous years.

This fall conditions are to be much the same as a year ago, with the exception of the starting time, which has been set back to the early hour. A longer entry list than ever before gives promise of one of the greatest races in the history of the cup.

Predictions of an average speed for the winner of seventy miles an hour can be frequently heard.

New York Auto Show.

The forthcoming show in Madison Square Garden, New York, will be divided into two parts, one of which will be devoted entirely to passenger or pleasure vehicles. This will be known as Part One, and will be held during the week of January 7 to 14. Commercial or freight-carrying vehicles, electric carriages and motorcycles will be exhibited during Part Two of the show during the period from January 16 to 21 inclusive. A comprehensive display of accessories will be exhibited at both periods. The members of the Show Committee have devised an elaborate plan of decoration which they expect will be finer than the setting for last winter's show.

Pre-Vanderbilt Race.

Dan S. Smith, who managed the Labor Day automobile races at Brighton Beach, is planning an all-star contest of from six to twelve hours as the drivers elect, for a date just before the Vanderbilt cup race. He has selected a race for stock cars as the chief fixture, provided he can obtain the entries of Louis Chevrolet, Hemery, George Robertson, Ralph Mulford, Eddie Hearne, Louis Disbrow, Lewis Strang and Al Poole. The winner will receive $2000, the second man $750 and the third $350. The duration of the race will be left to a vote of the contestants, who will decide whether they want a six or a twelve-hour trial.

Freakish Rubber.

An expert on construction says that tires made from the same batch of rubber under identical conditions and used under exactly like circumstances do not by any means give like results. For instance, two rear tires which conformed to the conditions named were put on a car and an observation made of their condition. One of them lasted more than 3000 miles; the other blew up before 400 miles had been covered. The tire makers do not pretend to explain this. They lay it solely to the nature of the rubber.

Steel Versus Rubber.

A preference is shown by the French army authorities for steel-shod wheels in place of solid rubber. The majority of manufacturers, however, believe that greatest economy is to be gained by employing solid rubber, the bandages being single for the front wheels and double for the rear.

For Co-operation.

September 26 to 29 are the new dates selected for the third annual national good roads convention, to be held this year at St. Louis. The change from October to September was brought about by the insistent desire on the part of the American Contracting Engineers to hold their annual meeting at the same time, and to work jointly with the National Good Roads Convention.

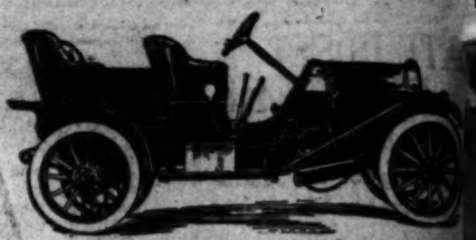
Model 45. 20 h. p.—4 cylinders—96-inch wheel base —$875. A Torpedo Roadster with same power sells for $950.



Model 49. 25 h. p.—4 cylinders—105-inch wheel $1200. Made with 5 styles of bodies, including delivery body.

8 per cent. Less Cost--Fore Doors Free

THE OVERLAND—the leader of motordom—announces 22 attractive models for 1911, a further saving of eight per cent. in cost and fore doors free

Twenty-two four-cylinder models from 20 to 35 horse power from $875 to $1825. All prices include magneto and full lamp equipment.

We start this new season with almost 20,000 Overlands in use—with a record of 12,326 cars delivered in the first seven months of this year—with deposits already in hand for more than 18,000 of the new models just coming out.

We start with five factories—with the finest machinery ever employed in making motor cars—a factory capacity of 140 cars daily.

And we start with a record of amazing success such as none ever approached in this industry.

Cost Reduced 8 Per Cent

We will continue to manufacture a line of five models, the same as produced in 1910; but, as a result of an investment of $3,000,000 in new equipment, these five models, as well as all new models, have been reduced in cost to the consumer an average of 8 per cent.—making 28 per cent. in two years.

We have made this reduction in spite of the advance in materials, the great jump in rubber, the increase in wage. We have done it while other makers of low-profit cars have been forced to advances, in one way or another.

Now the Overland gives the most for the money by a margin much greater than ever.

Fore Doors Included

The new Overlands are made with fore doors and without—your choice at one price. The fore door models for which most makers charge an extra price, sell the same as the open front.

We do this because fore doors will be the coming vogue. In Europe, where motor styles are set, 97 per cent. of this year's models are shown with fore doors.

Soon or late, every motor car maker must include fore doors at his standard price. So the Overland, in maintaining its lead, is doing just that this year.

22 Attractive Designs

The improvements of this year are mainly in refinements of designs. Overland mechanism can hardly be further perfected. It brought this car, in two short years, to the dominant place in this line.

Our master designers have this year created twenty-two attractive models, largely based on foreign trend. The best of them will take their place among the most attractive cars in the world. No cars are made at any price with better style, or lines, or finish.

Prices for 1911

The Overland prices for 1911 begin at $875 for 20 horse power—4 cylinders—and $950 for a Torpedo Roadster with 4 cylinders.

The 25 horse power Overlands sell at $1100 and according to style of transmission. The 30 horse Overlands sell at $1400. Cartercar The One Car That's Different

ALL REPAIRS FREE FOR ONE YEAR
WE CAN AFFORD IT. HERE'S WHY:

CARTERCARS are simple, powerful, strong, durable, non-trouble-giving machines, and WE KNOW IT. CARTERCAR friction transmission and its chain-in-oil drive are a next-to-invincible combination, and WE'LL PROVE IT—and WE BACK THEM WITH THIS UNPARALLELED GUARANTEE.

Read This Letter:

Woolwine Motor Car Company, Los Angeles.

Gentlemen:—I have found the Cartercar entirely satisfactory. It has stood up to hard work with most satisfactory results. That the friction drive is practical and thoroughly dependable has been demonstrated time and again. Experience has proven it far superior to any geared transmission ever put on the market.

I have sold up to the present time, and now actually have running, over 350 Cartercars, 175 in Buffalo and the other half in outlying territory about the city. In my three years as agent for the Cartercars, I haven't lost a customer, and I still have the first dissatisfied purchaser. In other words, every one who has ever bought a Cartercar is still running one, not a single one having changed to another make of machine, though I have taken over twenty-five different makes of geared type cars in exchange for Cartercars.

Just consider, 350 Cartercars running in and around the city, and I have but one mechanic in my employ, who looks after all Cartercar repairs. That alone will prove to all, who KNOW, that friction drive is the only practical and dependable drive for an automobile. Cartercars are easy-selling cars to all who really investigate as they should before spending their money. They have another advantage: Once you sell a man a Cartercar, you know that his next car will be the same, and every Cartercar owner is a Cartercar booster.

Yours very truly,
LOUIS ENGLE, JR., Buffalo, N. Y.

Cartercars deserve your thorough investigation.
We shall be very glad to demonstrate them for you.

DATE IS SET FOR BIG RUN.

Three Days in the Middle of October Chosen.

Food and Auto Supplies to Be Sold for Cost.

Beautiful Country and Big Things to Be Seen.

The Owens River automobile run planned by The Times is to be held from October 15 to 18.

Motor car owners in this city and throughout Southern California are anxious to learn the details of the tour to be made along the Owens River-Los Angeles Aqueduct during the four days' outing.

An invitation is extended by The Times to every owner of an automobile who is able to make the trip. An exceptional opportunity to witness the amount of work already done on the aqueduct will be afforded.

Gasoline and oil for the automobiles can be had at regular stations along the route and no exorbitant charges will be allowed.

For those who have recently made the journey through the Antelope Valley and have paid as high as 40 cents and 50 cents a gallon for gasoline, this news is of special interest. The trip should not cost more than a run through Riverside, Redlands and San Bernardino.

Another important item is provisions. These are to be secured at regular controls along the route at reasonable prices. There is to be plenty to eat, no matter how large an entry list is secured for the trip, which is to start in less than a month from in front of The Times office early in the morning of October 15.

GOOD TO LOOK ON.

The scenery along the Owens River is one of the most beautiful in Southern California. The cars are to be driven slowly and plenty of opportunity is to be afforded the tourists to examine the tunnels, inspect the open ditches and watch the men at work in the camps which the cars are to pass. Every opportunity possible is to be afforded the autoists to enjoy the tour which will take them to the headwaters of the long reservoir which is to bring the splendid water supply to this city.

Because of the opportunity afforded by the trip many scores of autoists have already arranged to make the run. Rules which are to govern the tour will allow of no speeding and the trip can be made by almost any driver who understands his car. Either high or low-powered machines can make the run, as plenty of time is to be given between the controls.

There is to be a special watch kept on every machine and every precaution possible is to be taken. Already a number of women drivers have expressed a desire to make the trip. These can endure the run as it will be supervised carefully. No effort is to be made to abide by reliability rules. The outing is to be conducted with an idea of giving every driver an opportunity to bring his car through without a mishap.

RECORD HOTEL 'BUS.

Pioneer Auto Company Turns Out Big Twenty-Passenger Car for Southern of Bakersfield.

One of the largest hotel busses ever turned out in the United States has been constructed by the Pioneer Commercial Auto Company of Los Angeles for the Southern Hotel at Bakersfield. The big machine is built to carry twenty passengers.

The body of the car is built on a Reliance two-ton chassis. Construction, painting, and lettering of the bus was entirely in the hands of the Beacon Auto Body Company of Los Angeles. The workmanship of the product shows that the West has nothing further to learn from the East at the present time in auto construction.

The motor used is two-cycle, two-cylinder, thirty horse power, with five and a half bore and five stroke. It is estimated that this will furnish sufficient energy to overcome any and all road conditions that the big vehicle will be apt to encounter.

Electric lights, plate glass windows, air-cushion type seats and backs, are features of the machine. The Pioneer Auto Company, as originators of the design, feel particularly proud of their success. They were given carte blanche by the Bakersfield hotel management, and turned out what they characterize as a perfect car.

The bus was delivered to the Southern at Bakersfield, last week, and is now being operated between the hotel and railroad station.

Fragments Ruin Cylinders.

If a valve or the porcelain in a spark plug breaks—fortunately both occurrences are now very rare—care should be taken to ascertain whether any of the pieces have gotten into the cylinder. If so, they should be removed before attempting to run the motor, as it does not take a piece of steel or a few chips of hard porcelain a very long time to cut into a clyinder so that it must be renewed.

TAKING THE CURVES.

MOTORCYCLE RACES TO STAR ON BICYCLE TRACK TODAY.

A FIVE-MILE motorcycle race between M. J. Graves and Al Ward is to be one of the big events on E. A. Pye's racing card at Fiesta Park this afternoon.

Pye received sanction yesterday from the Federation of American Motorcyclists to hold motor races here in connection with his bicycle races.

Whittler is now in town and will act as one of the pacemakers in today's racing and Pye expects to have De Rosier here if it is possible to get him to return to Los Angeles.

A good card has been arranged for this afternoon and some of the world's fastest bicycle riders will be seen here in races for the first time today.

In the motor-paced race each motor is to carry two men, which will afford better pace than when one man is on a machine. Pye is to ride against Ray Duer in this event and it should prove one of the best races on the card.

The two-mile-lap-handicap will furnish nine races, as the man who rides in the lead at the finish of any lap is to receive $1.

Following is the list of events:

Overland Club handicap, one-half mile—Eugene Rusner 5 yards, Joe Camanati 15 yards, Ashton Sodaberg 25 yards, Albert Brown 35 yards, Gres Persell 45 yards, Harold Frank 60 yards.

Second heat, Overland Club, second race—F. Hults scratch, Julian Fousley 10, Steven Oliver 25, Fred Green 30, Harold Sodaberg 40, L. Green 55, Ruthford Green 70.

Three-fifths mile, three-lap open professional—Iver Lawson, Salt Lake; Erne Pye, Australia; A. McNeil, Los Angeles; Gordon Walker, Australia; Fred Keefe, Australia; Ray Duer, Los Angeles; Red Brodbeck, Salt Lake City; Brownie Carleslake, Australia.

Fourth event, three-mile motor paced best two in five—Ernie Pye, Ray Duer.

Sixth event, one-mile handicap amateur—Frank Florentine scratch, F. Pearne scratch, Fred Jones 15 yards, Walter Brison 30 yards, Eugene Rusher 65 yards, Ashton Sodaberg 75 yards, Albert Brown 85 yards, Gus Persell 90 yards, Harold Frank 100 yards, Ruthford Green 125 yards.

Seventh event, second heat one-mile handicap amateur—James J. Huey scratch, George Smith 25 yards, F. Costella 40 yards, P. J. Bodkin 45 yards, Joe Camanati 85 yards, F. Hults 75 yards, F. Fousley 90 yards, Steven Oliver 100 yards, Fred Green 105 yards, Harold Sodaberg 100 yards, L. Green 120 yards, Ruthford Green 130 yards.

Eighth event, five-mile motor race—Al Ward, M. J. Graves.

Ninth event, second heat three-mile motor paced—E. A. Pye, Ray Duer.

Tenth event, final one-mile amateur.

Eleventh event, third heat motor paced.

Twelfth event, two-mile handicap lap professional—Iver Lawson, scratch; Gordon Walker 10 yards, Ernie Pye 20 yards, Red Brodbeck 85 yards, F. Keefe 110 yards, Ray Duer 120 yards, J. A. McNeil 140 yards.

GOOD MOVE.

THOMAS AND MERCER LINES MERGED IN NEW AUTO FIRM.

ANOTHER automobile firm is to start on South Olive street this coming month. The Thomas-Mercer Motor Comany is the new concern which is to have its headquarters in the garage formerly occupied by the Wilson and Buffington Company, agents for the Thomas. This concern has gone out of business and on October 1 the Thomas-Mercer Company is to take full charge of one of the largest garages and salesrooms in this city.

F. W. Force of the Mercer Auto Company and A. M. Young, formerly agent for the Columbia, have joined interests and formed the Thomas-Mercer Company. Force has determined to merge the Mercer agency with the Thomas line and Young has relinquished all claim to the Columbia agency, which has been merged with the Maxwell line under the control of the United Motor-Los Angeles Company.

Thoroughly familiar with the automobile industry, Force, who has made a success of the Mercer line, is ready to order seventy-five cars for the coming season. He is finishing a successful year and says he is satisfied the Mercer is established here. The line for 1911 is particularly interesting and can be shown to advantage in the big salesroom on Olive street near Ninth.

The Columbia agency was handled with success by Young, who is now secretary of the Automobile Dealers' Association. The attractiveness of the Thomas line for the coming year induced Young to close with the big Buffalo factory when he had a chance. The Thomas line includes more cars than ever before and should make a decided influence on the market this coming year as the cars are large, have powerful motors and are stylish, with a finish that places them in the front rank of the high-priced machines.

The new firm will be installed in the big garage by the beginning of the coming month. Young plans to remove this coming week from his present location on South Main street near Pico. He has been assisted by William F. Lloyd for two years and Lloyd will accompany him to the new location as he leans toward the Thomas line for the coming season.

The Mercer Auto Company, at Tenth and Olive streets, is to be removed the coming week also. Last year's line of cars are entirely sold out and Force is to have only the 1911 model Mercers on his floor. These are equipped with a powerful engine and have several minor changes which even add to the stylishness of what was one of the most attractive cars in the $2100 class the past season.

This change means a high and medium-priced line of cars in one of the most comfortable salesrooms in the city. The offices have been remodeled and under the present arrangement Young is to handle the Thomas line and Force the Mercer cars.

The Thomas factory is said to be planning to boost the Thomas cars here more than they have ever been before. The Thomas holds the San Francisco-Los Angeles automobile road record of 16h. 45m. This is one of the most coveted records in the history of the local industry.

GOSSIP ALONG GASOLINE ROW.

Harry A. Lord of the Lord Motor Car Company, handling E-M-F Thirty and Flanders Twenty cars, has just returned to Los Angeles after a trip to the automobile factories of the East. He is enthusiastic concerning the growth of the low-priced car business.

The Acme Electric Works and Labratory Company has leased the building at the junction of Main and Broadway. The move to the new quarters, which have been remodeled, was made last week.

The Shafer-Goode Motor Car Company has sold a special forty-five-horse-power, four-passenger Glide to L. W. Cleveland for delivery October 1. W. K. Dodworth, Bakersfield agent of the company, has booked two Kern county orders.

A shipment of 1911 Locomobiles was received last week by the Los Angeles Motor Car Company. The consignment consists of thirty-horse-power touring cars of the new fore-door type. A feature of the construction is the detachability of the fore doors.

Sales of Flanders cars to the following persons are reported by Lord Motor Car Company: H. Cameron May, George J. Stephenson, L. A. Ice & Cold Storage Company, M. M. Cobb, A. B. Bland, Joseph E. Chavis, R. P. Boyd.

The Golden State Garage has sold a Simplex touring car to C. A. Barnard of this city. The machine is a toy-tonneau model from a shipment that has just arrived. It is finished in a harmonious color scheme, the body being a dark tan, with light tan unholstery and natural wood color wheels.

The California Automobile Company reports sales for the past week as follows: B. F. Huise, city, Warren-Detroit; E. Grincano, city, Warren-Detroit; Twooney & Dillon, Pomona, Warren-Detroit; James F. Fulkuson, Ventura, Firestone-Columbus; John F. Fulkuson, Somis, Cal., Warren-Detroit; O. R. Cline, Long Beach Warren-Detroit; William R. Nelson city, Firestone-Columbus.

A. C. Robbins of the Greer-Robbins Company wired last week from the factory that the first shipment of 1911 Mitchell cars to Los Angeles was made Thursday and should reach this city within three weeks. All the 1911 Mitchell models are fore door. The first car of the shipment is to go to W. W. Woods of the Citizens' National Bank, who wishes particularly to have the machine in time for the Bankers' Convention.

Hereafter, the California Automobile Company is to handle electrics as well as gasoline cars. The company has secured the agency for the Columbus electric cars and expect their first carload inside of a week. George L. Taft, special Coast representative for the Columbus Buggy Company, will make his headquarters with the California Auto Company.

The Greer-Robbins Company has a general service car which has been run forty thousand miles. This car is a 1908 model and has been used for all kinds of service. It is fitted with a delivery box, and while not very good looking, has done the service.

"Scoot" Miller, a Los Angeles driver who has laid the beginning of a reputation piloting Warren-Detroit cars, has returned to this city for a stay of a couple of months. He will probably take part in the Coast races of the fall, driving a Warren-Detroit.

The following people have recently purchased E-M-F "30" touring cars: E. A. McCombs, H. A. Koll, R. H. Willard, J. L. Allen, George Werner, N. H. Hamilton, Mattie J. McKillip, H. F. Badger, Jr., Pauline P. McCreedy, Fagg & Dublin, G. A. Fielding, A. B. Bland, L. J. Dodge.

Ralph Hamlin has received a full line of new Franklin models for the coming season. He has them on exhibition in the large sales-room of the Franklin headquarters at Twelfth and Olive streets.

Announcement

Unless you have something interesting to say, don't advertise.

We believe the public is tired of the reckless and threadbare declarations of pre-eminent automobile excellence singularly available at all prices from $400.00 to $4000.00

There is no use in Announcing unless you have something to announce. The Garford Company really has something to announce besides a mere claim for excellence.

For the first time in the history of the business, The Garford Company is selling the highest quality of car at a price Based On Actual Cost of Car. For the first time in the history of the automobile industry, the buyer without sacrifice of quality gets the benefit of the economies of Production which every one of common sense knows have been going on for years.

In doing this the Company makes no particular claim of superior altruism or morality over its competitors. We believe nearly all of them are trying to do the square thing just as we are. The point is that we are not only willing to do it but we are able and have the opportunity and we are doing it.

Our opportunity comes with the termination of our selling arrangement with Studebaker. Our ability comes through the tremendous economy of our manufacturing organization. Our final action comes because we believe in a square deal.

The Garford Policy

The unique feature about our policy is that we are giving the customer the benefit of this situation, instead of pursuing the usual course of establishing a price in reference to prospective demand, and adjusting our design and quality to meet that price. We are the first high-grade car maker to fix the quality at the first and let the cost fall where it will, and to make a price based on that cost, which we believe anticipates any probable reduction for some years to come.

Our model is a development of the Garford Chassis that put Studebaker in the automobile business. It gave Studebaker the proud reputation of selling the best high-grade general service car ever built. Before that, the Garford Chassis put Rainier in the automobile business and made him leader in New York at the time. Before that there was hardly a car selling at $3000.00 or over that did not contain a Garford component part, because that was the Company's manufacturing business before it began on chassis. The independent selling career of Garford, therefore, begins under most favorable auspices, and it is a particular satisfaction to the Company that the regulation of its own affairs enables it to give the public such an exceptional opportunity with the goods and a policy consistent therewith.

The "Personal Element"

We have no patience with the threadbare subterfuge of the "Personal Element" in advertising, yet we feel that no institution rises above the individuality and the character of its owner. It is becoming more than ever important for a purchaser to know what kind of ability and integrity are back of his car. To those who are acquainted with National or Ohio politics, and industrial progress, A. L. Garford needs no introduction. He has been an industrial and political leader in his community for years. The public that deals with the Garford Company can expect a square deal just as certainly as it has been accorded for years to the people of Lorain County, Ohio.

THE CAR

One model known as G-8. In the line of development of all past Garford cars but a marked step in advance of even the last one. Motor—4¾ x 5½, four cylinders. You know it well, but you don't know its latest development. The last year's laboratory investigation of former models with the same engine has increased the horsepower to 45 normal and to a maximum of 47½ at 33% above normal speed. You never heard of such a thing, but there it is. This is our fourth model and third year's use of the Bosch magnetic-plug ignition. You never heard an argument against the low tension ignition except perhaps when mechanically actuated. The Bosch plug system eliminates even this flimsy objection. We do not advise you to do it, but we have often seen this engine run with a hose playing on the magneto. The ignition advantages of the low tension spark you well know, if you know your business. Why don't more people use this system? Because it adds about $150 to the cost of the car. This makes no difference to us because we start with quality and let the cost fall where it will. There is no use having a policy if you don't stick to it. We want you to bear in mind our carburetur. This and the magnetic plug are some of the reasons why we get such power from this size engine. You will find full description in preliminary circulation—send for it.

Clutch—The only type that nobody knocks—the cone with cork inserts and springs, the only type that gained materially in number over all others at the last Olympia Show—a good record after five or six years' trial everywhere of all three varieties. The Garford Clutch is one of the few in existence that can be lifted out, without disturbing any other unit, by simply removing a few screws.

Transmission—Selective type four speeds and reverse—direct drive on third, that is to say, direct drive on the gear reduction you use most of the time. A step up for ideal conditions, a step down for excessively bad ones. Nothing new in conception, but most makers cannot afford to finish and mesh their gears accurately enough. Again quality first—let the cost fall where it will.

Front Axle—steering connections entirely protected from road contact and collision. Centres arranged to prevent wabbling of wheels.

Rear Axle—full floating type, the only scientific form of rear-axle available. Too expensive for common cars. Again quality—let the cost fall where it will.

Axle assembled without brazing eliminates the necessity for momentary adjustment of bevel gears. These driving gears, therefore, always on pitch line no matter how often you take out and put back the balance gear—if you ever have to.

Tire Dimensions—36 x 4 front—36 x 4½ rear.

Brake System—contracting and expanding on both rear wheels. Centers situated to make brake adjustments independent of passenger load. Wheel base from 117 to 125—according to type of body.

Standard Bodies—7-Passenger Touring Car—Five Passenger Touring car and Limousine. Equipment—Five lamps, a horn and tire carriers.

For the First Time in History for Such a Car—

Touring Car, Standard Equipment - $3500.
Limousine - - - - - - - - - $4750.

New Maps and Tour-Books.

The bureau of tours of the Automobile Club of America has already started work on the preparation of the 1911 tour book and maps. The bureau is planning to have a complete new line of touring information ready for members of the club as early as next April. During the next few months many new southern routes will be mapped out and printed for the use of members who wish to tour to southern points. The bureau's sign-posting crews will be kept in the field until the winter drives them home and the bureau has asked members of the club for information regarding new roads that have not been sign-posted or old roads from which the A.C.A. signs have been removed.

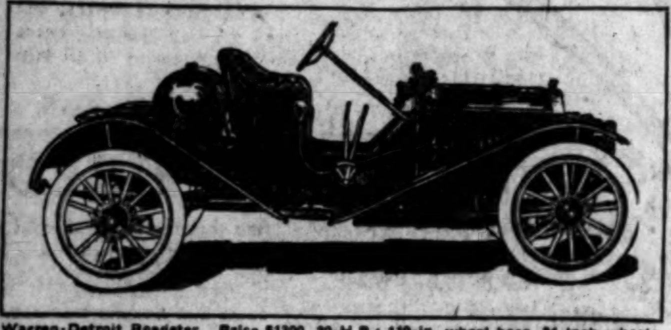
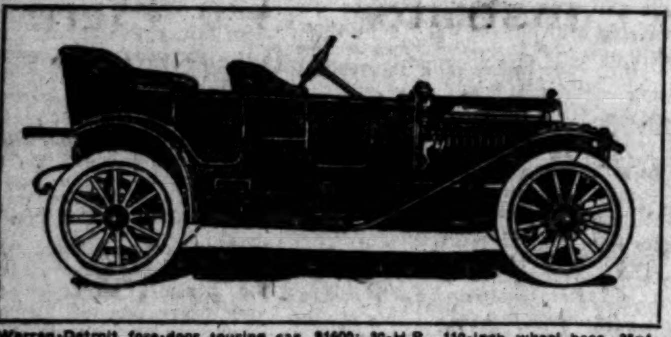
Warren-Detroit Firestone-Columbus

Columbus Electrics

We are pleased to announce that we have added to our line of 1911 the famous Columbus-Electric Cars. Famous because of their long mileage—by actual tests—ease of riding, light running, beauty in design, finish and dainty fittings. Every Columbus-Electric owner is a Columbus-Electric supporter.



Warren-Detroit Roadster. Price $1300, 30-H.P.; 110-in. wheel base, 34-inch wheels, equipped with 5 lamps, horn, generator, Bosch Magneto and 20-gallon tank in the rear. Top and glass front, $80 extra.



Warren-Detroit fore-door touring car, $1600; 30-H.P., 110-inch wheel base, 35x4-inch tires equipped with 5 lamps, horn, generator and Bosch Magneto; top and glass front $100 extra.

Your idea of a car is sure to be found in these three lines. If you want a moderate priced, powerful, dependable car, one of the many Warren-Detroit 30 h. p. models will suit you.

If you wish a better car in construction, finer in finish and more luxurious in appointments in a slightly larger car, the Firestone Columbus built by the old reliable Columbus Buggy Co., is not only attractive in appearance but in price. Or the Columbus Electric "The Ladies Favorite," always clean, always supreme. Both of these gasoline lines have a splendid record for economy, speed and durability and we are proud to show the 1910 official winnings on request.

The Warren-Detroit line embraces roadsters, demi-tonneaus, touring cars, torpedo and fore-door models selling from $1300 to $1600 f. o. b. Los Angeles.

The Firestone-Columbus line ranges from the mechanical Grayhound gentleman's roadster at $1650 to a big 40 h. p. touring car with fore-doors at $2200 that we honestly believe to be the easiest riding car in America today. All Firestone-Columbus prices are on cars fully equipped f.o.b. Los Angeles. The Columbus Electrics with their pleasing distinctive lines, stand supreme in electric vehicles. We will have a very complete line ranging from $1800 to $2300 f.o.b. Los Angeles.

Every car sold by us will be backed by our broad guarantee for one year and as experienced manufacturers we know how to take care of our customers and hold their friendship. COME IN MONDAY AND LET US SHOW YOU.

NO MORE WATCHES.

DOUBTFUL AUTO RECORDS TO STAND A.A.A. TRIALS.

THE contest board of the American Automobile Association has issued an official announcement covering he world's auto records for distances rom one-half to five miles.

The reason for the issuance of the ircular is given as the discussion hich has arisen of late concerning ew world's records. Many new arks which have not been made unler the conditions prescribed by the ontest board for official records are laimed from time to time, and in any instances are widely accepted as ew world's figures. It is to elimiate these non-official records that the fficial figures are reprinted.

Rule 78 of the 1910 contest regulaions of the American Automobile Asociation governs records. This rule rovides that the contest board of the A.A. need recognise no record as fficial which, in its opinion, would inure the sport.

No claim for a record of five miles or under will be accepted by the contest board unless the time is taken by an electric or mechanical timing device which has been given the approval of the board. No record will be recognized unless it is claimed within ten days of the event, unless made under conditions which, in the opinion of the board, warrant a greater delay. No claimed record will be considered unless the same is accompanied by the sworn statements of referee, chief timer and surveyor of the track or course.

No performances under five miles time by stop-watches only will be accepted by the contest board, or in any way recognised as official records.

This ruling is made on account of the personal equation of the individual who holds the stop-watch, which is considered too variable to permit the establishment of records carrying speed supremacy, where the dividing line between old and new records is a matter of fifths or even hundredths of a second.

Following are the official records given for distances up to five miles:

GREAT YEAR.

HARNESS HORSE RECORDS OF THE SEASON ARE MANY.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS DAY REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The records kept by the Jockey Club here show the trotters have done an unusual mount of record-breaking this year. hile among the pacers the breaking records has been confined to the rformance of Minor Heir, son of eir-at-Law.

Minor Heir first lowered Star Point's mark of 2:00½, to 2:00, at Galesrg, Ill., and at Indianapolis a week ter he paced the mile in 1:59. Yesrday at Indianapolis he brought his cord mark down to 1:58½.

The new world's records of the trotters are:

Uhland, 1:58 3-4.

Fastest stallion, The Harvester, from 2:02 1-4 to 2:02.

Fastest gelding, Uhlan, from 1:59 3-4 to 1:58 3-4.

Fastest 3-year-old colt, Colorado E., from 2:06 3-4 to 2:06½.

Fastest mile to wagon, Uhlan, from 2:03 3-4 to 2:01.

Fastest mile in a race for stallions, The Harvester, from 2:06 1-4 to 2:03 1-4.

Fastest three heats, The Harvester, from 2:04 3-4 to 2:02.

Fastest green stallion, Colorado E., from 2:07 1-2 to 2:06 1-2.

CRICKET NOTES.

Owing to the unavoidable absence many of the local cricketers the atch scheduled for yesterday after-on on the old Polo Grounds at San Monica had to be postponed, inead a practice at the nets was inlged in, each batsman having twen minutes with the bat.

This afternoon the Marylebones play e Wanderers at Vineyard station, the me will commence at two and stumps many of the Santa Monica cricketers are away the last of the series of cup games for the season which was scheduled to take place this afternoon at Vineyard station has been postponed till next week.

Turning Corners.

If the clutch is released when the car in turning a corner it not only relieves the differential gearing, but the tires of the driving strain. Furthermore, the slipping of the clutch in letting it in again would relieve the motor of much of the strain of

of the Los Angeles team, in a characteristic pose at bat.

Another Truck Contest.

Plans have been completed for a commercial vehicle contest in Boston on October 14 and 15. It will be similar to the contest recently held at Philadelphia. A sanction has been granted by the A.A.A. and officials of the Bay State A. A. will manage the contest. There will be four classes open to gasoline and electric vehicles. The first day the machines will go to Lowell, Lawrence, Haverhill and Newburyport. The next day they will return to Boston from Newburyport by way of Ipswich, Salem, Beverly, Lynn, Revere, Chelsea, Cambridge to the starting point. The total distance will be about 125 miles.

Automobile Tax Lists Grow.

Minneapolis will collect taxes next year on $1,425,300, representing the assessment of automobiles, according to the figures just completed by City Assessor Fort. There are 2630 machines on the tax lists this year, compared with 1525 last year. The average of without seeing a hundred girls with racquets. The college athletes are beginning to take it up instead of football. The increase in the sale of tennis goods has undoubtedly paid all the expense of Mr. Spalding's campaign for the United States Senate.

TENNIS BY BEGINNER.

I suppose that every time you give a particularly vicious thump to a ball you are giving Mr. Spalding just that much of a boost into the Senate.

It's a good game. I am not sure but that it is the best game.

Baseball isn't a game. Baseball is purely a theatrical performance. Amateur baseball is about as practicable and interesting as amateur theatricals. Baseball is not to be played. Baseball is to be looked at.

Football is as bad, only worse. Only a few can play it, and it is a bore to watch. In the old days football was mildly interesting as the am-

Park, on Coney Island. Now, since they have introduced Rugby, it is simply hopeless.

Cricket is very much like creeping paralysis, and about as exciting. Cricket is a mild diversion for old ladies' homes. Cricket is as dull as a summer sermon on apostolic succession.

Tennis is a real game that people can play. Anybody can play. It is one of the few games that men and women can play together.

This feature, by the way, is not an unmixed advantage. You can't come home and be an oracle when the lady of the house has trimmed you in two love sets, and the heir of the household inquires, after deep reflection, "Say, why don't you ever hit the ball?"

Of course, you can play golf with women; but golf is not a game. Golf is a stunt. Golf is exactly like showing off in a shooting gallery. I used to play shinney, and that was some game; but golf is shinney after the other side has gone home. Golf is like playing baseball without any opposing side.

Tennis is fast and lively and full of zip. It is a game that particularly appeals to Americans because it is quick and tricky. It requires quick brain work. Since Americans have taken up the game you will see it begin to acquire tricks and wiles and instantaneous strategy. I am afraid it will soon become very difficult. Americans never take up a game without making it difficult. They take games that suit placid old men, like cricket, and turn them into baseball, which has only been mastered by a few hundred men out of the millions who have tried.

One great difficulty about tennis is the ground required.

You can play cricket on nearly any open field, but tennis necessitates a big patch of carefully-prepared and carefully-tended ground.

This is one reason for its immense popularity in Los Angeles. There is more vacant land here than in the cities of the East. They can only play in the East in parks. Vacant lots are seldom available and even then, one eastern lot is too small. In the East, vacant lots are cut twenty-five feet wide. The average lot here is forty to fifty. Even if you could get hold of a vacant lot in the East you couldn't play on it. You would have to have a folding court. Only those who can afford to join country clubs get a crack at the game.

My friends who have built tennis courts say, however, that it isn't such a cinch.

As fast as you build tennis courts, people inconsiderately build houses on top of them.

I know a young man who has wasted about $200 building tennis courts on vacant lots in Los Angeles.

He says he can go into a neighborhood that has long been abandoned to decay and desolation and start a building boom immediately. He says if he had started to build a tennis court in Goldsmith's "Deserted Village" they would come rushing back to "Sweet Auburn" and put up a skyscraper on his court.

He swears that the capitalists have wagons loaded with lumber and lime and bricks and totems every morning and start out gangs of workmen to find a tennis court and build a house on it.

This is one more argument for socialism. In the beautiful days of socialism, there won't be anything to do but play tennis. In those days no inequalities of any kind will be permitted. If a fellow plays tennis too well, he will have a couple of fingers lopped off and have his heel tendon cut. So I guess I will have a chance then to win once in awhile.

E-M-F "30" and Flanders "20"
AUTOMOBILES
Guaranteed for One Year

This guarantee is backed by the E-M-F Company, a firm whose financial standing is unquestioned.

There is no high finance connected with the E-M-F Company; it is backed by Studebaker's and the J. P. Morgan Company.

It is not a question of whether they will be doing business a year from now—you know they will.

In comparison with this, consider the tottering condition of many of the prominent manufacturers and agents, who are offering new cars for sale at pretty nearly any old price to get rid of them. What are these machines going to be worth a year from now as second-hand cars? What kind of service can an owner expect from a concern in this uncertain condition?

When you buy an E-M-F "30" or a FLANDERS "20" you know just what you are going to pay for it, and you know just what your neighbor would have to pay for the same car. There is but ONE PRICE to every one, and this is one of the many reasons why E-M-F "30's" and Flanders "20's" sell as second-hand cars at a greater percentage of their original price than any other automobile.

AKS CRUMBLE IN THE PINCH.

Back Up When Criger Looks Them in the Eye.

Both Castleton and Nelson Removed from Game.

Hallinan Put Out for Count by Batted Ball.

Los Angeles, 5; Oakland, 3.

With the game apparently safely tucked away by a score of 3 to 2, Willis went wrong in the lucky seventh yesterday and the locals scored three runs, two of these being sent in by a timely hit by Murphy made with men on third and second and later Frank scored through a daring steal to third, and a sacrifice. Criger was pitching for the Angels at this time and that meant that the Oaks could not make any runs.

Umpire McGreevy yesterday received a telegram from President Graham of the league that Wolverton and Cameron had been suspended indefinitely pending an investigation, and both men were ordered off the field. The Oaks evidently felt the loss of these two men and played in a listless, half-hearted way, but after Criger got to pitching in the sixth inning he made them behave and they had no opportunity to show what they could do.

Castleton began to pitch for the Angels but he was so wild and woolly that Dillon removed him when he had walked the first man in the sixth. He had given seven bases on balls in the previous innings and had been hit for two triples and naturally Dillon did not desire to take any more chances. Orendorff helped the wildness by poor throws to second base and when the fans began to yell loudly to have Waring put in to catch the change was made in the seventh inning.

FIFTH INNING.

The game was a slow and lifeless one without any startling features except the scare the fans got in the fifth inning when Hallinan was knocked silly by a batted ball. With two out Hallinan singled to right and a moment later Delmas hit to right. When the ball was hit Hallinan started to second base and as luck would have it the pill hit him on the left cheek.

He staggered on ten feet to second base and fell, but after several applications of cold water by the players who collected around him, he revived and pluckily returned to his position at third base, to the music of the cheers of the fans. As it turned out he was merely stunned.

Nelson was the first heaver offered as a sacrifice to the Angels and he was so wobbly that he was taken out at the end of the third inning. He was hit for a double, a single and a sacrifice in the first inning and made a wild pitch, all of which netted the locals an easy run. He got through the second in good shape but in the third Howard walked and stole second and a moment later Hallinan hit to right, scoring Howard.

Willis took Nelson's place in the fourth and got along all right until the seventh when he began by hitting Bernard. Howard popped a Texas leaguer to left and Dillon sacrificed. Then Murphy banged the ball through the pitcher's box to center and Bernard and Howard scored. Murphy went to second on the throw-in of the ball, stole third when Mitze threw the ball to catch him off second and scored on Hallinan's squeeze play.

WILLIS'S TRIPLE.

For the Oaks with one out in the fourth Castleton walked Carroll and Mitze, and Willis, batting for Nelson tripled over first base, scoring the two runners. In the fifth Hogan tripled to right and scored on Pfyl's single to right, Pfyl being thrown out at second trying to stretch his hit.

Many of the fans had an idea that if Cameron was taken off first base that the Oaks would crumble to pieces but there seemed to be an improvement there with Pfyl on the bag. He is faster than Cameron and can hit just as well if not better. He had eleven outs, one assist and an error which he got for muffing a foul back of first base. He should be given a chance on first as he looks to be the goods.

The only two fielding features worthy of mention were Carroll's long running catch of Bernard's short fly back of second base and Hallinan's beautiful assist to first base of Wares's grounder to third in the ninth.

BEAT SENATORS TWICE.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 17.—Portland took two games from Sacramento this afternoon, winning the first battle, which went ten innings, 6 to 4, and the second game, 4 to 1. Whalen opened for the Senators, and was pounded for six hits, which netted four runs, in the first inning. He was taken out with two men down, and Bryam, who relieved him, held the Ducks runless up to the tenth, when two more runs were scored by the northerners. The Senators fought a sturdy uphill fight, and batted the Portland pitchers freely.

In the second game, with the score tied, Ryan knocked the leather over the right-field fence for a home run in the third inning, bringing in Rapps and Gregg, who occupied bases. The second game was called in the fifth inning on account of the time limit.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

FOUR HOME RUNS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

DETROIT, Sept. 17.—Summers got two home runs today, one bounding into the right field stand and the other into the left. Barry and Collins also hit for four bases. Detroit pounded Grause and won, 10 to 3. Score:

Philadelphia, 3; hits, 9; errors, 3.
Detroit, 10; hits, 14; errors, 3.
Batteries: Krause and Livingston; Summers and Stanage.

GROOME BUMPED AGAIN.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CLEVELAND, Sept. 17.—Cleveland made it three straight from Washington today, knocking Groome from the box in the eighth. The batting and fielding of Lajoie and the Cleveland outfielders were the features. Score:

Cleveland, 7; hits, 15; errors, 1.
Washington, 2; hits, 8; errors, 0.
Batteries: Kaler and Land; Groome, Reisling and Street.

EASY FOR HIGHLANDERS.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17.—New York defeated St. Louis, 5 to 1, here today. Ford held the local team to six hits, and but for Austin's error would have had a shut-out. Knight's work featured a listless contest. Score:

New York, 5; hits, 10; errors, 3.
St. Louis, 1; hits, 6; errors, 4.
Batteries: Ford and Sweeney, Mitchell; Malloy and Killifer.

WON IN FIRST.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—Scott and Karger fought a pretty slab duel here today, but the locals, by bunching two hits, two errors, as many passes and a triple steal, scored four runs in the first inning, enough to take the second straight from Boston, 4 to 3. Score:

Chicago, 4; hits, 3; errors, 3.
Boston, 3; hits, 6; errors, 3.
Batteries: Scott and Payne; Sullivan; Karger and Carrigan.

SHOWER OF BOTTLES.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BROOKLYN, Sept. 17.—Brooklyn and Chicago split even in a hotly-contested double-header that nearly ended in a riot today. The visitors came up from behind in the first game with the score of 3 to 0, and batted out a victory in the seventh, the final count being 5 to 3.

The second game was tied up in the tenth when, with Wheat and Hummell on third and second, Coulsen hit to Cole, who fumbled slightly but recovered, and threw to the plate. Umpire Klem called the runner out on a close decision. Manager Dahlen and Burch were ordered to the clubhouse for objecting.

A shower of bottles was directed at the umpire, but the police stopped the trouble. When play was resumed McElveen made an infield hit to Tinker, who juggled the ball, allowing Hummell to score the winning run. Score:

First game—
Chicago, 5; hits, 12; errors, 2.
Brooklyn, 3; hits, 6; errors, 1.
Batteries: Reulbach, Brown and Kling; Barger and Bergen, Miller.
Second game—
Chicago, 2; hits, 8; errors, 1.
Brooklyn, 3; hits, 8; errors, 1.
Batteries: Cole and Kling; Scanlon, Rucker and Miller.

GIANTS GET TWO.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—New York moved into second place today by taking two games from St. Louis, 1 to 0 and 11 to 3, while Boston was defeating Pittsburgh. Twenty-nine players participated in the second game. Score:

First game—
New York, 1; hits, 5; errors, 0.
St. Louis, 0; hits, 4; errors, 0.
Batteries: Wiltse and Myers; Hearn and Phelps.
Second game—
St. Louis, 3; hits, 7; errors, 5.
New York, 11; hits, 12; errors, 2.
Batteries: Golden, Alberts and Phelps, Bliss; Ames, Drucke, Marquard, Hendricks and Schlei, Myers.

PIRATES HELD UP.

[ASSOCIATED PRESS NIGHT REPORT.]

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—Boston defeated Pittsburgh today, 5 to 4. Camnitz was batted hard and White, who succeeded him, was wild. Infielder Abbattachio was released unconditionally by Boston today. The score:

Boston, 5; hits, 11; errors, 0.
Pittsburgh, 4; hits, 8; errors, 0.
Batteries: Ferguson and Rariden; Camnitz, White and Gibson.

OLD DAYS RECALLED.

REILLY IS REMINISCENT.

Charley Reilly, former third baseman for the Los Angeles team in the season of 1903 was at the game yesterday at Chutes Park and of all the eighteen men in both teams Dillon is the only one that played in either the San Francisco or Los Angeles teams of seven years ago.

Jim Morley was the manager at that time. After the 1906 earthquake made him quit baseball he went into autobiles, managed a locomotive explosion at Agricultural Park, conducted skating rinks and bowling alleys; was at the ship hotel at Venice several years and is now at Arcadia conducting some kind of a resort, so it is said. This shows how some baseball managers can change their stripes in seven years.

The team that Jim had in Los Angeles at that time consisted of the following players: Dillon, first base; Heine Reitz, second base; Charley Reilly, third base; Jimmy Toman, shortstop; Heine Spies and Mike Roach, catchers; Pat Dougherty, Jimmy Jackson and Charley Atherton, outfielders; Oscar Jones, McPartland and Nick Altrock, pitchers.

Dillon is still playing first base for the team. Reitz is in Chicago and it is said that about a year ago he was sweeping out saloons for while he was playing ball here he was a fearful and wonderful man to punish booze. Charley Reilly made four figures of money in a real estate deal here some months ago; owns a linen supply house and has a bank book that would make a ball player drop dead to look into. Jimmy Toman is now umpiring in the Cactus League or was a short time ago and was in the Coast League last year.

Heine Spies, who was about the best catcher in the country on foul flies, is a building contractor here and making money, while Mike Roach is managing a team in the New York State League. Jones is pitching bush ball in the central part of the State; McPartland is a politician in New York City and Nick Altrock is pitching good ball for the Minneapolis team in the American Association.

Charley Atherton, the old right fielder who came here from the Buffalo team is a pipe organist in New York and drawing a big salary for little work. Pat Dougherty belongs to the White Sox and little Jimmy Jackson is now in the Eastern League. How times have changed! Reilly is about the only one of the old bunch that does not look a day older for he has made things come easily for himself.

Hopkins Occidental's gritty little end who played such star ball last year has not returned to school yet. He is due to arrive some time in the early part of the week, and he will don his pads at once and get into the game.

Manager Thomson of Occidental is putting the track at Baer Park into fine condition for the A.A.U. meet to be held there October 1. He has had men working on it all last week and it is rounding into shape. It will be very fast when he has finished with it and the men who enter the meet ought to have no trouble with the track. Fred Thomson says that the track is 5 seconds faster to the lap than the track was in Chicago.

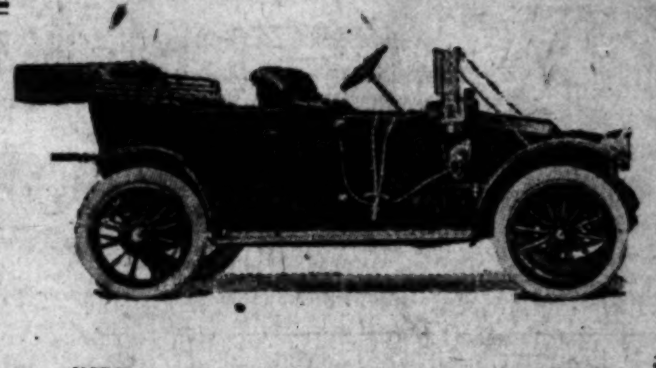
FRANKLIN

THE CAR BEAUTIFUL

PERFECT TO THE SMALLEST DETAIL



MODEL M, FITTED WITH 5-PASSENGER OPEN BODY

No prospective automobile buyer should select a car until he has examined carefully the 1911 Franklin line. My word for it, in no other car will be found the rich distinctiveness and completeness of detail which place the Franklin in a class by itself, superior to all others. There are new features also, that will interest every automobile user.

See the cars—that's all I ask. They will do the rest. RALPH C. HAMLIN.

NEW FEATURES SUMMARIZED

Doors to front seats; flush-sided, sloping-hood bodies; lower seats and lower effect generally, new oiling system, overcoming smoking; quiet valve action; engine air jacket arranged to give complete accessibility; more room between dash and front seat and a greater rake to steering column; deeper and more luxurious upholstering; still larger tires; all motors accurately balanced.

These Demonstrators Are Here

MODEL D, larger than last year: 38-H.P. six-cylinder, double TORPEDO-PHAETON body, including top and electric lights. Price $3650 f.o.b. Los Angeles.
MODEL M, a new 5-passenger car, 25-H.P. 4-cylinder. Price $2850 f.o.b. Los Angeles.
MODEL G—Larger wheel base and roomier than last year; 4 cylinder 18 H.P. "The only high-grade small car built in America." Price $2100 f.o.b. Los Angeles.

TOUGH SEASON.

STANFORD HAS SCRAPS AHEAD.

Football Schedule Includes Hard Games.

U. S. C. Law School Team Is on the List.

Vancouver to Play Twice on Cardinal Field.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 16.—The Stanford 'Varsity football team is to play nine games this season, one of which will be with the U.S.C. law school on Stanford Field, October 29. The schedule was completed by Manager Burbank yesterday, when arrangements were made for two games with the crack Vancouver team on the local campus.

The 'varsity is not to play in Los Angeles this season. Instead of making the trip south, the team will journey to Reno for one contest with the fifteen of the University of Nevada. This will be the only trip away from the campus until November 12, when the intercollegiate match is to be played at Berkeley. The Nevadans wanted a return game at Stanford, but Burbank preferred to give the only open date to the U.S.C. law school than to the Reno team. The southern lawyers are expected to give the 'varsity a close fight, and for that reason were not given a date early in the season.

The games with the Vancouver team are being counted on to give the Cardinal team the best training for the intercollegiate match. The Canucks have played here several times before, and have always made the 'varsity work hard. The schedule is not as long as that of the University of California, but every match should prove interesting.

COMPLETE SCHEDULE.

The complete schedule follows: September 24, Barbarians at Stanford; October 1, Olympic Club, at Stanford; October 8, Barbarians, at Stanford; October 22, University of Nevada, at Reno; October 29, U.S.C. Law School, at Stanford; November 2, Vancouver, at Stanford; November 5, Vancouver, at Stanford; November 12, University of California, at Berkeley.

It is probable that the seven-men scrum will be used in the intercollegiate game by both teams, instead of the eight-men formation, which was used last year. The seven-men scrum, with a wing forward, proved the more successful in Australia and New Zealand, where it is used exclusively. Coach Presley has been experimenting considerably with the seven-men formation. If one team uses it, it is practically certain that the other will, for if one does and the other does not, the half-back on the fifteen using the eight-men formation would be constantly exposed to the attack of the opposing wing forward, and would have great difficulty in feeding the ball to the backs after it is heeled out. The eight-men scrum was used at California for the first time this season, the early part of this week, Coach Schaffer having been using seven men in the pack during the previous training.

Coach Presley has not yet separated the 'varsity material into first and second teams. Every man will get a thorough try-out in the position for which he is best suited, before final choices are made. Former 'varsity men will not be sure of their places until they have proved that they are better than the other aspirants. Doron, '12, of Corona, is a promising candidate for wing forward in case the seven-men scrum is adopted. He was a substitute forward last year. Tom Gore, '11, of Redlands, who transferred here from Pomona College last year, is showing up well in the back field. He was ineligible last year.

PROBABLE CHANGES.

It is not improbable that Erb, '12, who played half-back two years ago, and Brown, '11, full-back, will be placed in the three-quarter line to fill vacancies that were made by the graduation of Holman and Brown. If this change is made it is likely that Louis Cass, '13, of Los Angeles, will again play half-back.

Williams, formerly of U.S.C., is an addition to the team, who, it is believed, may prove of 'varsity caliber. The Smith brothers of the University of Pacific, and Donovan, a former back of Santa Clara College and of the Olympic Club, also will be available.

The nine players who made the Australian trip have joined the squad after a brief rest. Strict training rules have gone into effect, and until the intercollegiate game, hard, systematic work will be carried on.

The freshman team is rapidly rounding into good form. The coach is handling the bid squad in a systematic manner, and men who will form the proteam that will meet the California "babies" already is beginning to stand out from the bunch. Reeves and Kaufman, full-backs on the high school teams of San Bernardino and Pomona, respectively, last year, are doing excellent work. Ted Geissler has carried off premier honors in the games in which the freshmen have engaged. Phil Harrigan has been handicapped with an injured leg.

Yesterday afternoon the freshmen defeated the seniors in a short struggle, 6 to 3.

NEW FOOTBALL LEADER.

John Malcolm Chosen Captain of U.S.C. Squad—Has Played on the 'Varsity Team.

The football monogram men at the University of Southern California have elected John Malcolm of the junior class captain to take the place of Sidney Ickes who did not return to school this fall.

Malcolm has played on the 'varsity both years that he has been in school, holding down a tackle position. He made the All-Southern California intercollegiate team last season and is considered one of the strongest players in the South.

Manager Bovard has announced that football practice will begin Monday and judging from the number of freshmen candidates who have signified their intention of coming out the squad will be unusually large.

The work for the first two weeks will consist mostly in developing a strong freshman team to meet the Occidental freshies two weeks from yesterday. The annual freshman-sophomore game will be played on Wednesday of next week.

PASSING OUT.

NO WORK FOR QUARTERBACK.

NEW FOOTBALL RULES RENDER HIM USELESS.

Old Pivot Man Would Not Be Forced to Run Five Yards in This Season's Games — Pennsylvania Tried the Scheme Last Year—Forward Pass Will Increase in Favor.

Where will the quarterback be played?

There is not a football coach who is not giving this question deep thought. One of the many clauses that the rules committee saw fit to insert in the 1910 code is responsible for this new worry. This clause says that the man receiving the ball from the center may advance forward. Naturally the checker-board gridiron has passed. There is no need for it. The quarterback does not have to run five yards on either side of the center before crossing the line of scrimmage.

Certainly this does away with the quarterback. He would be a hindrance. Last year he was the most important man on the field. He opened the lever of the football machine and directed it forward. Of course, a man will have to call signals; but there the quarterback function ends. The quarterback that the game has known since its inception in this country is no more.

A place has to be found for him behind the line. Incidentally, there will be four big, fast men behind the line this autumn instead of three, and a little quarterback, as has been the case. How will these four men be played? Will they be lined across the field or stand in a tandem on the line? The question is a hard one.

FORWARD PASS WILL DEVELOP.

A rule provides that a man to make a forward pass or onside kick must stand five yards behind the line. The forward pass and onside kick promise to attain high development this year. These plays will be used very frequently. This means that a man will have to be kept on that five-yard mark. This may be the berth for the despised quarterback. At any rate, coaches will play probably one or two men five yards behind the line. The amputation of the quarterback means a saving in speed that might counterbalance the added distance the men would have to take behind the line. At present it is all a gamble. The coaches will not know how to play their hands until the middle of October.

The idea of playing one or two backs five yards or more behind the line, with the others near, is not a new one. Pennsylvania used such an attack in the Cornell game last year. Hutchinson was needed in the quarterback position to run the team. He was also needed in the fullback's position for runs off tackle and around ends. So they taught the players special formations for that game. The four backs were abreast. They could end-run, forward-pass or kick. This year it will be the same; but the new clause will let the formation hit the line, too.

Section 4, rule 20, of the football code, reads:

"A player of the side which put the ball in play being offside is put onside when a legally kicked ball touches the ground in the field of play twenty yards in advance of the spot where the ball was put in play. No player of either side may further kick or kick at such a ball while on the ground or bounding."

Section 6 of this same rule says:

"A kick other than a kickoff, kick-out or a free kick must be made from a point at least five yards behind the line of scrimmage."

Just how much these actions will choke the play cannot be appreciated until the teams start active practice. In the case of section 6 the very fect that the ball has to go twenty yards makes it absurd. How many successful onside kicks have been made in the past few years that went twenty yards? True, there have been such cases, but they are few and far between. It makes the players on the attacking side run too far for the ball and gives the defense so much more advantage. Of what avail is your quick kick if the secondary defense men can have time to collect themselves before the ball ends its twenty-yard flight?

The onside kick has never been as popular as the forward pass. Few teams last season were able to use it effectively. The reasons were many. Kickers who could place a ball with the nicety required for the play could be counted on the fingers of one hand. Then there was the element of uncertainty about it. There is not a player living who can tell the way a twisting football is going to bound. Intercepted onside kicks generally mean touchdowns. With these same conditions prevailing this autumn and add the twenty-yard bugaboo and you have a fine chance to play the onside kick.

AMATEUR NOTES.

Drury Wieman, the star half back of the Tigers, pulled into town yesterday from Bakersfield, where he has been spending the summer working in the oil fields. He looks hard as nails and is prepared to play the game of his life.

J. B. Franklin, secretary of the South Pacific branch of the A.A.U., has received from J. E. Sullivan a beautiful bronze plaque which the National A.A.U. is sending out to the various branches as a perpetual trophy, to be contended for every year in a field and track meet, and the college or club winning the meet any year has the right to keep the trophy for that year and to have its name engraved upon one of the bars that are on the trophy for that purpose. This trophy will be contested for the first time at the A.A.U. meet to be held at Occidental College, October 1. The school or club which wins this meet will be permitted to hold the trophy until the next meet.

The annual game between the freshmen teams of Pomona and Occidental has been called off this year. Pomona starts so much later than the other colleges that it will not have time to put babies in the field, as it will need them on the 'varsity squad at once. The "youngsters" of Occidental and U.S.C. may get together, if present plans are carried through.

Now that the football season has really opened the managers of the various college teams are expected to get together and arrange to have some competent officials appointed to officiate at the conference games. The new rules are going to make hard work for the officials this season. The conference games demand men who know the rules and who have the ability to enforce them. Last season there were some who acted as officials who did not possess these qualities and as a result some of the games were poorly officiated. The most notable example was the game between Occidental and U.S.C. Rader, who officiated at this game, was not competent and his incompetency nearly caused an all-round fight on the field at the close of the game.

One of the most interesting events of the A.A.U. meet to be held at Occidental College, October 1, will be the 100-yard dash. Two old rivals will be seen running together for the first time in several years. Throop of U.S.C., who has equaled the Southern California record of 9 4-5 seconds in the century event, and Coover, who has covered the distance in 10 seconds, flat, will try to out-distance each other in this event. Their rivalry dates back to the time when they were students at Polytechnic High School. While students of this institution they often ran together and Coover was generally able to break the tape ahead of Throop. But since he has entered U.S.C. and been trained by Cromwell Throop has made a name for himself as one of the fastest men that ever wore "spikes" in the south. His performance in the conference meet held at Pomona last year rates him as one of the best sprinters in this country. His fame has spread so far that he will be given transportation by the National A.A.U. to attend its meet to be held in New Orleans October 15. Since graduating from High School Coover has been working in a bank and has not had the opportunity to train like his old running mate, but he has not lost his speed and can still get out and run the century event in fast time. Both men have entered the event.

Thomson who goes after the world's all-aound record in this meet, is training every day and is rounding into great shape. Thursday afternoon he took a lap in the half mile walk, and covered the distance in the fast time of 1m. 34s. If he had kept up for the other lap it would have given him the record-breaking time of 3m. 8s. for the event. His record made at Chicago for the half mile walk is 3m. 44s. Every second he is able to take off his mark in the half mile, helps him to increase his score for the all-around. So far only one outside man has entered against him in the walk. This man is R. Hunt of Occidental College. It is not known as yet what he can do in the event. Entries for this meet must be in the hands of Watson Burt not later than September 24. Several men have signified their intention of competing in the meet but have not sent in their entries as yet.

Buick

THERE are some articles which you buy the very name of which represents the highest standard in its class. You ask for it knowing exactly what you are getting; that there is nothing better anywhere at any price. It sets the standard.

The Buick is in this class, and is sold on this basis. The buyer knows just what he is getting. He does not have to experiment to find out whether his car is the real goods or not.

So the Buick sets the standard; and when it comes to setting the pace the Buick is right on the job with full equipment. The Buick wins more races than all other makes put together. And racing is the severest test of an automobile—the test that makes the car most valuable for everyday use.

No matter what State you're from, come in. We'll show you.

PROPHECY FULFILLED.

MAN'S MASTERY OF THE AIR.

Remarkable Prophecy by Hudson Maxim Two Years Ago and the Rapidity With Which His Vision Is Coming True—May Tour Siberian Sky and Arctic Waste and Chase the Mirage.

BY HUDSON MAXIM.

HUDSON MAXIM, scientist, author, inventor of high power explosives, and president of the Aëronautic Society of America, is a seer and sane. The combination is infrequent. Usually, alas, the man of visions is none too sound of mind. Mr. Maxim, on the contrary, has a masterly ratiocinative faculty, which he employs steadfastly and exactly, even when imagination wings its loftiest flights.

It is well to bear in mind this characteristic of the man if we would gauge accurately the importance of certain among his utterances.

In a magazine article entitled "Man's Machine Made Millennium," written by Mr. Maxim in the fall of 1908, appeared the following paragraph:

"Now, with the advent of the flying machine, we shall soon be able to leave the earth road and go coursing the unobstructed skyway. We shall soon have our automobiles of the air and shall then be able to tour the Siberian sky, the arctic waste and chase the mirage over arid Saharas as commonly as we now tour an adjacent state."

Again, in a description of the coming city, the author concluded the interpretation of his vision with these words:

"At night, when the millions of lights emblazon the sky and throw their united fire far into the outer dark, the city will resemble an enormous torch about which fast fleeting flying machines will flit and plunge like giant moths about a giant flame. The night sky of the suburban dweller of that millennial time will be made meteoric with luminescent cloud-piercing craft, whose radiance will dim the stars and shame the envious moon."

At the time when this prophecy was made it seemed almost incredible that it should ever be realized. Few men [illegible] the attainment would have risked their reputations for sagacity on a vaticination at once so precise and so fantastic, seemingly so chimerical. Yet today we see the vision growing from the tenuous fabric of a dream into the substance of actuality around about us.

Two years have passed since the prophecy was made—two years filled with wonders which have crept upon us so stealthily through the daily newspaper page that their cumulative significance may be appreciated only in the perspective. Mr. Maxim, always busy with today and unborn tomorrow at his beautiful fortress-like home on the shore of Lake Hopatcong, N. J., has little time for retrospect, but the other day, reminded of his prophecy, he was moved to turn back the pages of dead yesterday and review the strides that man has made in two years toward his prophesied machine-made millenium.

MARVIN DANA.

BY HUDSON MAXIM.

(President of Aëronautic Society of America.)

It is only within our own generation that man has reached forth with the tentacles of his brain to clutch and take into himself the most mysterious and mighty powers; it is only within two years that his dominion over the sky has had its beginning. The men of old time longed for the bird's flight, but moved not beyond the futile desire. They had no ingenuity toward its accomplishment. Daedalus and Icarus of the hinged wax wings were the most capable aviators that antiquity could devise, and they were merely agreeable myths. In all history until our day there is hardly an incident of significance concerning man's attempts to fly, if we except the contrivances of certain skilled mechanicians who constructed automata of marvelous powers, the chief of which were birds that flew in orderly, sustained flight for considerable distances. Until just now balloons were both the first and the final flying machines—puppets of the eddying rivers of the air.

There came a hint of what might be shown in the future when in 1890, 1891 and 1897 Clement Ader tore himself free of earth for a few seconds in his steam-driven, bat-shaped monoplanes. In 1894 Sir Hiram S. Maxim's giant machine, also steam driven, apparently lifted itself clear of the rails. These were the first clumsy hoppings of the artificial bird. But the callow chick finds its wings cumbersome at the outset and when it would fly does but fall to the ground. So these pioneer aeroplanes, although they demonstrated in a measure the possibilities of flight by heavier-than-air machines, were not under control; therefore they failed vitally despite their accomplishment.

BRINGS BOON OF WINGS.

It was the gasoline engine that brought to humanity the boon of wings. The vast economy in weight secured by the new motive force rendered the problem of aviation comparatively simple after what earlier investigators had laboriously and courageously discovered under conditions so adverse. At Kitty Hawk, N. C., on December 17, 1903, Wilbur Wright flew for twelve seconds, and later on the same day Orville Wright maintained a flight through the air for fifty-nine seconds. These flyings were controlled by the operators, and for that reason they marked supreme achievement in the mastery of the air. Then slowly the duration of the flights increased. One hour two minutes and fifteen seconds was the record made by Orville Wright at Fort Myer, Va., on September 9, 1908.

Forthwith the progress went by leaps and bounds. Prior to 1908 there had been no flight of an hour in length, but in that year there were eleven of an hour or more in duration, and in 1909 there were fifty-six. January 1, 1909, the record stood that only five men in all the world had made flights exceeding ten minutes free from earth. January 1, 1910, only thirty-four had accomplished the feat of remaining aloft more than thirty minutes. These figures show both the slowness and the rapidity with which the scientific art advanced. Even at the slowest the progress was amazing. Bleriot crossed the channel from France to England on July 25, 1909—a flight perhaps, for romance of sentiment, the most picturesque of all.

It was in the same year, on November 3, that Farman established a record by maintaining a sustained flight for a period of four hours, which was the record for the year. Hamilton voyaged from [illegible] into Mexico and back, January 24, 1910. On April 28 Paulhan made his great journey from London to Manchester to win a prize of $30,000 offered by the London Daily Mail. The channel was again crossed on May 21 [illegible] London, while Curtiss made the flight from Albany to New York for a prize offered by the New York World on May 29. On June 2 C. S. Rolls, [illegible] aviation's roll of martyrs, [illegible] the channel without alighting. On June 13 of this year Hamilton flew from New York to Philadelphia and returned in one day, [illegible] $10,000 offered by the New York Times and the Philadelphia Ledger.

BROOKIN'S REMARKABLE FEAT.

The record flight of another sort has just been achieved by Brookins, who on July 9 ascended 6175 feet up into the sky. There is something staggering to think on—this soaring aloft more than a mile above that earth which through countless ages had held the feet of man mercilessly chained to its surface. Down in Mexico it takes something like six hours to toil up the cone of the crater of Popocatpetl. Then one squats on a leather blanket and blithely slides down the ashy mount. It takes six minutes to cover the distance that in the ascent required as many hours. The venture of landing in the scrub at the foot of the cone is hazardous, but despite the peril of scratches and bruises, the long, swift glide is a splendid thing. Yet is becomes less than nothing when compared with the celestial chutes. Brookins tobogganed from heaven to earth in just seven minutes, and he alighted as gently as a gull dropping to rest upon the bosom of the sea.

The next aëroplane triumph in the United States will be the journey between New York and Chicago. Already a prize of $25,000 has been offered by the New York Times and the Chicago Evening Post, and entries are being received. Who can doubt, in the light of recent events, that the flight will be accomplished?

AND THEN THE ATLANTIC.

Then will come the crossing of the Atlantic, and then—but we are dealing with the present, and the aircraft is a fact of the present. It will be a colossal factor in the future with which we must speedily take reckoning. It is no longer a chimera, a toy—it is a tremendous dynamic factor of the forthcoming civilization.

Already flying machines are freely offered for sale both in this country and abroad, under the auspices of firms that are not swayed by any philanthropic impulse, but are investing capital in plants and publicity for excellent commercial reasons. They expect to make money, just as the builders of automobiles have done. The first purchasers must be the military authorities and those who are desirous of giving exhibition flights. After these are coming quickly the lovers of sport, who will tour the celestial arch for the sheer joy of it, winging their way at will where always hitherto has been the realm of only birds and angels. And presently, after all the others, will come the practical uses of peace, the aërial journeyings of men to and from their business pursuits, the employment of the heavenly highway for the exigencies of commercial operations.

The trend of progress is illustrated by the multitudinous aviation meets that are now being held throughout the civilized world. Hitherto the professionals have been in the ascendant; today the presence of the expert amateur marks the evolution of the art. Within the year there have been successful meets at Le Mans, Pau, Rome, Rheims, Brescia, Berlin, Washington, Chicago, New York, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Mineola, Atlantic City, Asbury Park, Budapest and elsewhere. At least one royal personage, the Bulgarian ruler, has accompanied an aviator in "spurning the lower places," and a number of women have adventured in brief flights.

It was at Heliopolis, in Egypt, that the mystical bird of the hierophants was wont to rise in new and magnificent life from the ashes of its own funeral pyre. And there at that ages-old city the other day the Khedive beheld the upsoaring of another bird, more mighty and more marvelous than aught fabled—the darting plane, with the brain of a man and the speed of a wild swan in its migration.

Already a new literature has arisen. There are novels, periodicals, treatises devoted to the flying machine. There are advertisements, too, many of them of a sort to make our forbears uneasy in their graves.

FEARS FOR THE DIRIGIBLE.

Thus far the greater triumphs have been for the plane crafts, but the dirigible balloons have not been without startling successes as well as fearful, tragical failures. Zeppelin's enormous structure achieved magnificent results ere in the end it suffered appalling disaster. There is now a shrewd suspicion in the minds of most investigaters that the difficulties offered by the dirigible are insuperable. It is believed by many that the vast bulk of the ship renders it uncontrollable in the fiercer winds. Certainly the catastrophes in Germany, where the interest has been in the dirigible almost wholly to the exclusion of the heavier-than-air machines, seem to indicate that there is no method whereby the huge balloons can be so moored as to fulfill the requirements of safety when the tempest rushes to the assault.

Nevertheless such disaster and such peril have hitherto assailed many things that afterward mounted to conquest over all the difficulties in the way. To me it seems that the failures thus far do but point the way for renewed endeavor toward success. A means must be procured whereby external variations of temperature shall not affect the gas within its envelope. When that means is found there will remain but a single problem to be solved: the tethering of the unwieldy bulk to earth so securely that not even the ragings of a hurricane can set it adrift. That will be difficult—it seems, indeed, almost impossible—but I believe that a way will be contrived and soon.

In the meantime the dirigible is eminently practical under favorable weather conditions. During the maneuvers at Paris this month there were four military dirigibles going through their evolutions in the air over the capital at the same time. And it was a dirigible that visited Broadway the other night—the first of the nocturnal fleet to shine upon the metropolis of our nation.

Although my prophecy of the giant moths hovering over the giant city has not yet been fulfilled literally, the truth if it has already been proved. Here is the reproduction of a news dispatch that appeared in the World, dated Paris, July 15:

"Transcending all else in interest was the wonderful battle in the skies on Wednesday between aëroplanes of two army forces known as the Red and the Blue. Two planes belonging to the Red force had been reported as on their way from Rheims to carry destruction to the capital. At once a Farman biplane was dispatched, carrying two lieutenants, to meet and thwart the enemy. Flying at a height of 1000 feet, the Blue aërial force, with one man piloting and the other armed with a rifle, went at full speed in the direction it was expected the enemy would take.

THE BATTLE OF THE PLANES.

"In a little while the Red monoplane was met, flying at a slightly lower altitude. Rising still higher, the Blue biplane circled above the enemy, which forced the monoplanist to elevate his forward controls and thus prevented him from using his right hand. The armed lieutenant in the Blue plane, with his opponent thus at a disadvantage, fired five shots which certainly would have placed the enemy hors du combat if it had been real war.

"Scarcely had this enemy been disposed of when a Red biplane was sighted, flying about 700 feet higher than the Blue machine. There was no time now to rise above the enemy, who by clever maneuvering escaped. The Blue lieutenants at once alighted near the aviation camp, and Labouchere, who made such a splendid record at Rheims, was sent after the Red biplane in his fast Antoinette and caught up with it and captured it."

That account reads like the imaginative scheming of a sensational novelist, yet it is the sober narration of an actual aërial campaign waged by a government in its efforts to understand the best manner of practical warfare.

In some such manner, doubtless, the air craft will prove valuable for military uses. They will serve for scouting—for attack, even, in some instances. But I am sure that they will do little in the way of dropping bombs to the destruction of cities and armies and battleships. The point of attack is exceedingly small for a bomb dropped in a line approaching the vertical, and the difficulties in the way of accuracy are well-nigh insuperable.

LESSON OF JAPANESE WAR.

At the siege of Port Arthur the Japanese sank the Russian fleet, as they supposed, by their rain of high angled projectiles, which fell on the vessels almost vertically. Afterward on examination the victors found that in every instance the Russians themselves had opened the sea cocks, thereby allowing the ships to fill and sink. In the majority of cases the first impact of the shells against a wooden upper deck, a stanchion or a companionway, had caused the bursting of the missile, so that the damage—of a comparatively trifling sort—had been limited to this particular portion of the deck space. It was very rarely that a shell had penetrated the protective deck of steel, and serious injury was done to a vital part only in a single instance. And it must be remembered that these shells weighed 500 pounds each and that they fell almost vertically from a height of about two miles.

There is surely ample reason to doubt the peril from tiny bombs falling from hardly one-tenth the height and with far less than a tenth of the accuracy that characterized the Japanese fire. The shell would not drop vertically, but on a curved resultant line made up of the forward velocity imparted to the shell by the moving aëroplane and the vertical velocity due to the acceleration of gravity. At a predetermined distance from the object of attack the bomb must be delivered with a precision based on the aviator's knowledge of the height above the object, the forward velocity of the aëroplane, the velocity and direction of progress of the ship below, and, as well, the velocity and direction of the wind currents.

Finally, he must also know whether or not he is traveling in the horizontal direction in which the ship is proceeding and coincident with it. If not another elaborate calculation becomes necessary by reason of this angle of divergence. As a writer in the Scientific American has pointed out, the problem would prove sufficiently difficult if undertaken in the quiet of one's study, with ample time for the exacting demands of the task. How, then, shall the answer be reached in a second under conditions infinitely varying?

WILL BE MIGHTY IN WAR.

None the less the air craft will be mighty in war. Already the sentry has a new duty. Of old time he looked to right and to left and all about, ceaselessly vigilant against the coming of the foe. Now he must, most of all, look upward, staring persistently for the glimpse of some faint shadow, of some tiny speck remote within the heavens, which shall loom to him as a sign of the enemy's advance.

An enterprising New York firm has prepared the plans for an enormous structure in that city of which the top shall serve as a commodious landing station for aëroplanes. Whither this company leads others must soon follow. Thus come the giant towers, about which will hover the giant moths of man's machine-made millennium. Hotels and country clubs throughout the land are meditating on the expediency of offering to their patrons the advantages of flying machine stages and garages for the craft. Within a few years there will be ample provision for the needs of aviators in and about the principal cities, and, too, there will be aërial lanes, running over land areas reserved and equipped with landing stages at frequent intervals.

Surely today has brought us the last, the supreme magical gift. I could weep in pity for those who are dead, having known nothing of this modern miracle. I am moved to a reverent rapture toward that infinite intelligence which manifests itself only in veiled adumbrations through the minds of men, yet shines forth so gloriously in the patient research, in the exhaustless resource, in the mighty endeavor of the human brain, which now at last has crowned all its triumphs by its mastery of the air.

NEW COMPANY FORMED.

Agency to Handle Buffalo Trucks Organized With I. G. Lewis as Manager.

The Buffalo Motor Truck Company of Los Angeles has been formed to handle the lines of the Atterbury Motor Car Company, the widely-known manufacturers of Buffalo trucks.

I. G. Lewis, formerly connected with the Lozier agency, has been selected as manager of the new organization. The Buffalo Company has already opened offices in the San Fernando building.

Although various matters connected with the process of organization have not yet been finally settled, the new company is already prepared to handle trade in some lines. Deliveries can be made of ordinary light delivery wagons, as well as of two-ton trucks. By October 1 all models of the line will be on hand.

The firm comes into existence through the dissolution of the Wilson and Buffington Company, from which the agency was purchased. Arizona is to be included in the territory of the Buffalo company, as well as all of Southern California south of and including Kern county.

Dampness Injurious.

It is important that a garage should be free from moisture. Dampness, by causing metallic parts, both ornamental and mechanical, to corrode, greatly increases the labor necessary to keep the car in good condition, also tending to cause deterioration in such parts as are not subject to frequent attention.

New Jersey Signs.

More than 300 road signs have been erected by the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club within the past few weeks. Before the end of this month it is expected that nearly every road in Northern and Central New Jersey will have been thoroughly sign-posted and danger signals erected, and the work will then be continued into Southern New Jersey.

LOOK 'EM OVER.

CHANGES IN FOOTBALL PLAY SHOWN BY COMPARING RULES.

1909.

(1.) Mass play was unrestricted and the backbone of the attack of all the leading teams.

(2.) No restriction as to the point from which the pass should be made. The ball had to cross the line of scrimmage at least five yards from the point at which it was put in play, but could be caught at any point, no matter how far in advance. There was no restriction as to interference with the man catching the ball and the most common method was body checking, which resulted in many serious injuries. The penalty was one down and a loss of fifteen yards on first and second downs, and loss of the ball on the third.

(3.) No restriction as to the position of the kicker. His teammates were onside as soon as the ball hit the ground at a point beyond the line of scrimmage.

(4.) No restriction as to tackling and many were hurt by the head-on flying tackle.

(5.) The team in possession of the ball must have at least six men on the line of scrimmage.

(6.) A game consisted of two halves of thirty-five minutes each.

(7.) The man receiving the ball from the snapback was required to cross the line of scrimmage at least five yards from the point where the ball was put in play.

(8.) A man who had once left the game was never permitted to return.

1910.

(1.) Mass play made impossible by the rule providing that there shall be no pushing or pulling of the man with the ball.

(2.) The forward pass must be made at a point at least five yards beaind the line of scrimmage. It may cross the line at any point, but cannot be legally caught at a point more than twenty yards in advance of that line. The players on the defense may not interfere with the man about to catch the ball in any way except in a bona fide attempt to catch the ball. The penalty for an incompleted pass is one down, the ball being brought back to the point at which the pass was made.

(3.) The kicker must be at least five yards behind his line of scrimmage. His teammates are not onside till the ball has hit the ground at least twenty yards in advance of the point at which it was put in play.

(4.) A tackler must have at least one foot on the ground when he strikes his opponent. This rules out the flying tackle.

(5.) The team in possession of the ball must have at least seven men on the line of scrimmage.

(6.) A game consists of four periods of fifteen minutes each. Between the second and third periods there shall be an intermission of fifteen minutes, and between the first and second and the third and fourth, an intermission of three minutes.

(7.) The man receiving the ball from the snapback may advance it at any point.

(8.) A player taken from the game for any cause save disqualification may return once in any succeeding period.

SPREADING OUT.

STANFORD MEN BOOST SOCCER.

HUNDRED MEN TURN OUT FOR LEAGUE TEAM.

Cardinal Aggregation Will Compete for State Championship in Long Schedule of Games—Contests Will Be Played Off Campus Until After Intercollegiate Struggle.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 9.—Stanford is preparing to put a strong soccer team in the field this year, and will make a strenuous effort to annex the State championship. While nearly 200 Rugby candidates are practicing daily on the supplementary football field, more than 100 soccer candidates are practicing three times a week on the field near Encina gymnasium, under the direction of Physical Director Maloney, formerly of the Pasadena Y.M.C.A.

The Cardinal team is a member of includes the strongest aggregations in the North. Last year the students played outside soccer games, but were not eligible for championship honors on account of not being in the league.

Each team in the league is to play fifteen games. Stanford will play its first game October 1, in San Francisco. The schedule is to be arranged early next week. No games will be played on Stanford Field until after the intercollegiate Rugby game with California in November, as all football interest is to be centered on the big struggle. All league games up to that time are to be played in San Francisco. On the day of the intercollegiate contest and also the freshman game between Stanford and California, the schedule is to be left open by all the league teams so as in no way to interfere with Rugby.

The teams that Stanford will meet in the Soccer League are the Olympics, Vampires, Thistles, Barbarians, Pastime Club and Alliance Club.

Fifty amateur cards have been obtained from the league by Stanford and after the first team is picked other elevens will be formed to play for the championship of the university. The Cardinal eleven is to be known as the Stanford gymnasium soccer team, and its uniforms will include gray sweaters and stockings and white trunks.

The schedule of games will extend through the present semester and the

"BABE" CRAWFORD TO COACH.

Cardinal Football Star Will Train Football Squad of University of Pacific.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 16.—"Babe" Crawford, '09, captain of the Cardinal 'varsity football team in 1909 and one of the greatest forwards that Rugby has produced on the Coast, is coaching the team of the University of Pacific this fall. Crawford had previously accepted the position of coach at the University of Kansas, but the university decided not to abandon the old game in favor of Rugby and Crawford had to make new plans.

The Methodist squad turned out yesterday and Crawford undoubtedly will develop a stronger aggregation than ever represented the University of Pacific, as the squad is unusually large and contains much good material. The Stanford schedule does not include a game with the Methodist fifteen, as only nine contests are to be played by the Cardinal team and they are to be with stronger teams than it is expected the University of Pacific will put on the field this year.

TRACK TRAINING BEGINS.

Stanford Cinder Path Men Sign Up for Work Under Direction of Trainer Moulton.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 17.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Fall track training was formally started at a rally tonight, and next week all the cinder-path men, who are not in the football squad, are to turn out, under the direction of Trainer Moulton and S. H. Bellah, '10, for light work.

The fall season has had an important part in the development of winning teams in the past, as "Dad" is able at that time to give personal attention to every one of the novices, which, in the spring, is out of the question on account of the great number of candidates that require instruction.

"Dad" is a strong advocate of fall training. He says that every bit of practice a man gets at this time of the year counts for him in the following spring.

Complete Repair Kit.

Two pairs of pliers should be carried—one, a small pair of watchmaker's pliers, for electrical work, and other light jobs; the other, a good-sized pair of parallel-action pliers with wire cutter, for general use. The tire repair outfit should include prepared patches of various sizes, sheet rubber, ditto backed with thin canvas, rubber solution, solutioned canvas, French chalk, three tire levers, two or three security bolts, with nuts, spare valve rubbers, an indelible ink pencil and a pair of scissors. In addition, one should carry spare tins of solution and French chalk. The tubular wrench is a very handy instrument for turning awkwardly-placed nuts. The ends of the tube are made hexagonal, so as to slide onto the nut from the top, and holes are pierced in the tube to receive a cross bar, by which it and the nut

AFTER THE WORM.

EARLY START FOR OARSMEN.

STANFORD MEN TO HAVE LONG TRAINING PERIOD.

Fall Work Will Begin This Month. Many Veterans Again Will Be Candidates for 'Varsity Boat—Southern Athletes Are Prominent Among the Best Material.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Sept. 16.—Cardinal oarsmen are preparing for a strenuous period of fall training in preparation for the rowing season next semester. The veterans are to train in fours on Lagunita Lake, if it is thought advisable to fill the pond this semester, and if not they will row in eights on the bay at Redwood City. The freshmen will engage in cross-country running, rowing machine work and dumbbell exercises, but they will not be called out until after the intercollegiate freshmen rugby contest, as many of the men who intend to try for the crew are in the football squad.

Nine former 'varsity crew men, beside one who rowed in the race with the University of Washington last spring, have registered at the university, and J. C. Huston, '10, captain of last year's crew, which defeated the California eight, is expected back at the beginning of the spring term. The former 'varsity oarsmen who are at the university are C. L. Schaupp, '12, captain-elect; J. W. Fitting, '10, of San Bernardino; K. L. Dole, '11, of Riverside; K. C. Chamberlain, '11, of Los Angeles; J. C. Partridge, '12, and R. H. Seward, '12, of Los Angeles; R. R. Halls, '12, of Santa Barbara; R. R. Gilmore, '12, L. Hofer, '13, and R. F. Duryea, '13. Duryea was not in the boat that defeated California, but rowed against the eight of the University of Washington, and was a member of the freshman four.

FRESHMAN CREW INTACT.

The other freshmen representatives also returned to the university. They are: C. H. Beal, R. Olmstead of Los Angeles and J. S. Grepe of Highland. Four experienced coxswains will be available. J. W. Roberts, '10, of Redlands, and F. L. Guerena, '11, are 'varsity men, and J. W. Howell, '12, of Los Angeles, and L. H. Marks, '13, piloted their respective freshman crews to victory over California.

It is probable that the sport will continue to be conducted by the Laguna Club, which promoted rowing last year after the student body dropped it as an intercollegiate sport. Although the intercollegiate race was not conducted by the student body, the oarsmen in the Cardinal boat received 'varsity emblems.

The local club is awaiting the perfection of rowing plans at California before it concludes any agreements or sets the date of the intercollegiate regatta. It has been definitely decided, however, that there will be a freshman eight-oared race instead of a four-oared event similar to that of last year. The course on which last year's races were held was the best that ever has been selected, and it is probable that this season's contests will be held over the same stretch, which is on the Oakland estuary and extends for a mile and a half above and below the California bathhouse. Although rough at times, the water in the estuary is ordinarily more calm and free from short, choppy waves than other courses that have been selected in and around San Francisco Bay.

Good Roads Prizes.

The Reading Pa., Automobile Club has decided to offer prizes of $175 to the Supervisors of townships in Berks county who are successful in keeping up the best roads in their districts. The prizes will be $100 to the Township Supervisors having the best roads, $50 to the second, and $25 to the third. Lancaster county, a neighbor of Berks, recently adopted this plan.

Mexico Market Growing.

It is stated by automobile dealers in Mexico City that the demand for the machines is increasing rapidly all over Mexico, and that much difficulty is being experienced in getting prompt deliveries from American manufacturers. The usefulness of the automobile as a means of transportation, particularly in the great central plateau region of the republic, where there is a lack of railroads, is coming to be recognized more and more all the time, and orders for machines are being placed by ranchmen, planters and the

ST. LOUIS CONVENTION PROGRAMME SLATED.

All Phases of Highway Construction to Be Discoursed Upon at Coming Missouri Conclave—Prominent Men to Read Papers—Last Speech by Californian.

Arrangements for the third annual Good Roads Convention, to be held at St. Louis, have been completed. The full programme for the three days has been arranged.

By a special provision all papers of technical nature are to be printed and circulated before the convention opens, so that delegates will be prepared for a full discussion of the subjects involved.

The programme is as follows:

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28.

Morning session, 10 a.m.—Convention called to order at the Coliseum by Chairman George C. Diehl of the National Convention Committee.

Opening address, Lewis R. Speare, president American Automobile Association.

"Welcome to Missouri," Hon. Herbert S. Hadley, Governor of Missouri.

Address of welcome, Hon. Frederick Kreismann, Mayor of St. Louis.

"Good Roads and Railroads," presented by executive officers of one or more western railroads.

Afternoon session, 2 p.m.—Presentation of discussion of scientific papers.

"High Altitude Roads," F. L. Bartlett, Denver, Colo.

"Roads for Modern Traffic in the South," J. T. Bullen, engineer, Montgomery, Ala.

"Paved Roads," A. N. Johnson, State engineer, Springfield, Ill.

"Modern Road Construction in the United States," Walter Wilson Crosby, chief engineer, Maryland Geological Survey, Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md.

"Continuous and Systematic Road Maintenance," S. Percy Hooker, chairman New York State Highway Commission, Albany, N. Y.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 29.

Morning session, 10 a.m.—"Farmers' Interest in Improved Highways," Hon. J. Bachelder, Master of National Grange, Patrons of Husbandry.

"Across Missouri," Hon. Curtiss Hill, Highway Commissioner of Missouri.

"City Streets and Boulevards," Hon. C. Travilla, Street Commissioner of St. Louis.

"Modern Surface Treatment of Various Roads," Charles W. Ross, City Street Commissioner, Newton, Mass.

"Town and Lateral Roads," Frank D. [illegible], Department Highway Commissioner of New York State.

Afternoon, 2:30 p.m.—Boat ride on Mississippi River, inspecting bridge and government work. Refreshments served on board.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 30.

Morning session, 10 a.m.—"State Roads to Meet Modern Traffic Conditions," Harold Parker, chairman Massachusetts Highway Commission.

"Highway Laws for Missouri," Hon. D. Capen, president Automobile Club of St. Louis.

Hon. George K. Humphreys, State Senator and Speaker pro tem. of [illegible], Mo.

C. O. Raine, Master of State Grange of Missouri.

"When the Roads Question was Young," Abbot Bassett, secretary-treasurer League of American Wheelmen.

Afternoon session, 2 p.m.—"Dustless Roads of Europe," Arthur Blanchard, department of civil engineering Brown University, Providence, R. I.

"The International Roads Congress," Logan Waller Page, director United States Office of Public Roads, Washington, D. C.

"Park Roads," John R. Rablin, engineer, Metropolitan Park Commission, Boston, Mass.

"Dustless Roads of California," Austin B. Fletcher, chief engineer, San Diego county, San Diego, Cal.

Trolley ride at 3:30 p.m., "Seeing St. Louis" and inspection of famous streets.

CHICAGO CLUB BUILDS HILL.

YOUNG MOUNTAIN ERECTED FOR CLIMBING CONTESTS.

Windy City Motorists Get Tired of Squabbling With County Officials Over Use of Road and Construct Private Eminence of Their Own. First of Its Kind.

The Chicago Motor Club has built a hill.

In order to have its own course for hill-climbing contest, the club has constructed a young mountain 214 feet high, with a double turn road leading to the top. Both turns on the road are heavily banked.

This is the first hill ever built for a motor car contest. It is to be given its initial trial next Friday, when standing and flying start competitions are to be run off. Algonquin Hill, as the new mountain has been named, is to be honored with the flying start contest, while a near-by eminence, Phillips Hill, is to have the standing start race. Originally the new hill was given the standing start event, but when completed proved to be more difficult than had at first been anticipated, and so was slated for the harder climb.

The total length of the new climb is about half a mile, with an average grade of 12 per cent. Below the first turn the grade is low, but between the turns it is about 20 per cent. The width of the roadway, which is to be well banked, is twenty feet.

At Worcester, Mass., and at Minneapolis, Minn., there has been some talk in the past of constructing such a climb as the new Algonquin climb, but the plans were never materialized. So Chicago is the first to actually come through with the new departure.

Algonquin Hill is situated near the town of the same name, about fifty miles from the heart of the Windy City.

The hill was built as a direct result of unfriendliness toward motorists displayed by an adjoining county, in which Phillips Hill, formerly used by the Chicago club for its contests, was situated.

OAKLAND MAKES RECORD.

Eleven to Date and King Is Returning from Factory With News of Coming Season Triumphs.

[illegible] King of the Hawley-King Company, agents for the Oakland, is returning today from Pontiac, Mich., where he spent a month at the factory. In a letter received by Jerry Woodill yesterday King is enthusiastic over the prospects for the Oakland line this coming season. The prices are to be lower, and this should mean much to the local agency. King spent some time in Detroit.

The record of the Hawley-King Company for the past six months is good. The fifty-seventh Oakland was sold yesterday. Woodill expects to excell this mark by twenty cars this coming season. The Oakland agency is to be removed to Olive street.

Here are the recent sales: Dr. Donald W. Skeel, Oakland thirty-horse-power roadster; J. L. Miller, Oakland touring car; M. R. Armstrong, Riverside thirty-horse-power touring car; C. H. Coffman, forty-horse-power Oakland; Trustin Clark, Pomona, forty-horse-power Oakland and thirty-horse-power cars to A. E. Engtrum and J. D. Boley.

STRENUOUS NEVERTHELESS.

CLASS RUSH DEVELOPS INTO CAMPUS ATHLETIC CONTEST.

WITH the opening of the universities and colleges over the country the season for class rushes and organized fights between the lower classmen is going on. It seems that all freshmen enter college with more or less of a grudge against the men of the class that preceded them, not because the sophomores have ever harmed them, but just on general principles, a sort of inherited bad feeling.

All upper classmen and especially the second-year men have a certain contempt for the new class that enters each year and this mutual disrespect has to find some way of venting itself.

There was a time when no effort was made to put any restraint upon the interclass fights except as the parties involved trespassed upon the sacred rights of the faculty or passed the bounds of reason in their war upon each other.

The result was that the opening days of school in all the larger institutions meant much needless destroying of property and considerable spilling of bad blood. At the present time nearly all schools of any size have some organized manner in which the lower classmen may vent their grudge against each other. Usually these contests are under the direct supervision of the two upper classes and anything in the form of rowdyism or viciousness is prevented.

The rush at the University of Southern California on Friday was a fair example of the organized contest as it is pulled off in most of the schools. The field where the rush was held was well covered with upper classmen and at no time were any of the contestants openly allowed to be brutal. The presence of the upper classmen was not responsible for this so much as the fact that the men entered the contest with a thorough understanding of what they were up against and while every fellow fought until he was ready to drop, he did it with as much of a grin as he had the strength to muster.

Every fellow put in his best licks and took his medicine like a true sport, because he knew that a display of temper would call down the wrath of his own classmen as well as the others.

The opening of 'varsity football season necessarily means the end of class feuds in all institutions and while naturally some class feeling runs throughout the year, the organized rush decides supremacy and means an end to open war.

FRICTION-DRIVE VICTORY.

CARTERCAR WINS HARD FOUR DAYS RELIABILITY CONTEST.

NEWS of the victory of the Cartercar in the automobile reliability contest, which ended in Buffalo yesterday, was received in a dispatch last night by the Woolwine Motor Car Company. The Model L Cartercar finished the 800-mile run with a perfect score, according to the dispatch, after fording several rivers and encountering the roughest of roads. The telegram is signed by Louis Engel of Buffalo and gives a glowing account of the car he handled.

The welcome tidings came to Woods R. Woolwine, president of the local Cartercar agency, yesterday, after four days of suspense, during which the contesting car was toiling against the severest of difficulties. He kept track of the machine, as it continued to keep its perfect score, and was particularly pleased when the run ended as it did yesterday, with some of the higher-priced cars entirely out of the running.

The new line for this year is interesting. The friction-driven car is to be finished in a larger number of models than last season. It has made good in the Glidden tour, as well as the [illegible] has placed an order for 100 cars for the year that is opening.

"The Cartercar has made good in every contest in which it has been entered this year," said Woolwine, yesterday. "Because of this fact, I have determined to place a large order for cars for the coming season. I know what the new year means for the car and I am satisfied that we must have a larger number of machines than ever to supply the demand. I am ready to do stunts here, as I know what the Cartercar will perform. This season is going to be the best the Cartercar has ever known in Southern California."

This means that the Cartercar is to be a contestant in reliability tours held in Los Angeles and vicinity. The news of the eastern victory has persuaded Woolwine that his car can be depended on in the severest test. He says he knows what the friction-driven motor will do in circumstances which will test it to the utmost.

A large entry list for an endurance run in Southern California is practically assured. There are a number of other dealers, more than a score, who agree with Woolwine and who also are anxious to enter a reliability con-

Great Sailing Yacht.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The largest sailing yacht in the world is to be the property of Robert E. Todd, commodore of the Atlantic Yacht Club, who has just signed contracts here for the building of the boat—a three-masted steel schooner-yacht, "The Karina," to cost, when completed, about $200,000. The Karina is to be 198 feet 6 inches over all, thirty-eight-foot beam, twenty-six feet deep and will have a draft of seventeen feet. Commodore Todd was owner of the two-masted schooner-yacht Thistle, which he sold six months ago to a French Count.

Motor Boat Races.

Two ten-mile motorboat races will be contested in the outer harbor at San Pedro this afternoon.

Boats floating the colors of any recognized yachting club may be entered in either event. The first race is to be under the rules of the American Power Boat Association, and the second under arbitrary regulations. Prizes will be given for the first three places in each race. A swimming contest is to be held in connection with the boating events.

World's Series Dates.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—According to Garry Herrmann, president of the National Commission, the meeting to decide the details of the world's series between the Chicago Nationals and the Philadelphia Americans will not be held for two weeks at least. It is said, however, that the opening day will be Sunday, October 16, and the West Side grounds in Chicago, the battlefield for the series opener.

Nashville Oiling Streets.

Nashville, Tenn., is now oiling all new streets that are built and all old ones that are repaired, expecting in this way to ultimately get most of the streets of the city oiled, excepting uptown paved streets. Rock is abundant at Nashville and all of the streets are well built, but unfortunately the rock is soft limestone, wears rapidly and makes a tremendous amount of fine dust, so much so that it is necessary to sprinkle all of the streets of the city daily.

Limits of Monster Trout in Trinity and Mad.

Dogs Fight Big Bear Which Climbs High Tree.

Seven bear, six deer, two lynx, a half-dozen wild cats, with rainbow trout by the bushel, is the record of the MacFarland brothers for a month's hunting trip in the northern part of the State.

The party, Arthur, "Wen" and Don MacFarland left Los Angeles about August 1, and have just returned from what they claim is the greatest hunting ground on earth. It lies in Humbolt and Trinity counties, between the Mad and Trinity rivers. The boys claim that the rugged beauty of the country is not surpassed in California.

The men with their guide, Walter Goe, who has lived in the game country for the last twenty years, camped on the Trinity River at the mouth of its north fork. Arthur MacFarland claims that the stream has the largest trout that are caught in the country. He says that the members of the party caught rainbow trout that averaged eighteen inches in length. Limits of the "monsters" were caught in one hour's time.

Arthur MacFarland, who tells the story of the trip, says that there is as much difference landing one of the big fish and the average trout caught in Southern California as there is between landing a yellowtail and a tuna.

The party counted more than 100 deer and each man got his limit before they were on the hunting ground two weeks. The deer were so tame that several times the pack train was close enough to them that pictures were taken.

WEIGH HEAVILY.

Of the six deer that were killed two of them were four-pointers and none of them weighed less than 125 pounds. The boys claim that not more than one shot was needed in bagging any of the game killed and that two of the deer bagged were jumped at the same time and killed by shots that were fired by Arthur and Don, while standing together. One of the bucks ran about twenty-five yards after he was hit, but did not have enough life in him to quiver when the boys reached him.

The brothers claim that the big sport of the trip was the bear hunting. There were only two of the seven killed that weighed less than 300 pounds. Four of the number were black and the other three were of the brown variety.

The largest one killed, which weighed about 375 pounds, put up a fight that almost made him the victor of the scrap with the dogs. The latter followed his trail for about five miles before they came upon him, and when reached by the lead dog he showed no disposition to run for cover, but immediately picked out a good place on the side of the mountain to put up a fight. He held his ground until the rest of the dogs came to the rescue, but when they had arrived, to the number of seven, and were making it rather uncomfortable for him, he stopped the combat for a second when the first of the hunters appeared, and with a desperate leap caught one of the young and inexperienced hounds between his front paws. This caused the other dogs to enter the fight with more zest and forced the big fellow to make for a tree.

SLIDE, KELLY!

After he was up ninety feet from the ground, he seemed to have renewed his courage, or else the dogs looked much smaller to him from his high perch, as, after he had rested a moment, he slid to the bottom of the tree, coming down fifteen feet at each slide in such a manner as to give the appearance that he was falling. He had no sooner touched the ground than the dogs were on him again.

He put up another fight for a few minutes and then repeated his tree stunt. After he had gone through the maneuver several times and the dogs had become tired, he bolted up the mountain at full speed and likely would have made good his retreat had it not been that he ran afoul of one of the other hunters who was coming to the scene, and was dispatched with a bullet through the shoulders.

The brothers say that in some of the glades of the forest, that are very heavy in most of the cañons, they came upon coveys of grouse that numbered twenty-five and thirty. Mountain quail are also plentiful and are so tame that they make little effort to get into the brush when the hunters approached.

Two lynx were killed and are good specimens, the fur being exceptionally fine.

SUCCESS AT LAST.

FIVE TRIALS FOR DEER.

Al Crosby and Tom Brant returned yesterday from the Brant ranch, beyond the Malibu, with a fine 150-pound fork-horned buck.

The boys have made six trips to the ranch this season, and have hunted from one day to five, but this has been the only time that their effort has been crowned with success, and it was their shortest trip. The boys left early in the morning, and were back in town with their kill before 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Five bucks were seen during the morning, but only the one was within range. The boys refuse to tell which one of them got in the fatal shot, but say they were walking together when the buck was jumped. The shot entered the animal's head just below the horn and tore the top of the skull bone and the horns from the head.

The father of Harry Eshelman, the eleven-year-old lad who with his little brother, aged 9, bagged a buck last week, came to town yesterday with the head of a 160-pound buck that he killed during the week in the same vicinity thta his boys brought down their game.

Three different parties left for the Malibu country yesterday. Two of them have gone for deer, and the other for a fishing trip.

Jimmy Decker and Lee Parsons are going after deer, and expect to be in the city with a buck each some time today. F. R. Jacks, G. A. Stocks and George Vejar will hunt deer also, and expect to stay in the district until each has a good-sized pair of horns to bring back.

Jack Nast, C. Tranton and V. L. Walker, all of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, will spend Saturday and Sunday on the coast, below the Malibu, for which place they left in an automobile yesterday afternoon. The boys are going after rock bass, which they claim are being caught in great numbers in the vicinity to which they have gone.

[illegible] Stivers is to leave next Wednesday for a hunting trip in the Bitter Root Mountains of Montana. Dr. Stivers will go directly to Butte, where he is to be joined by his brother, Capt. Degay Stivers, who will accompany him on the trip.

ILLEGAL KILLERS.

DISREGARD THE GAME LAWS.

Deputy Fish and Game Commissioner H. I. Pritchard has received a warrant for the arrest of two prominent business men of this city who are charged with shooting quail out of season in Ventura county. The warrants were sent down by Deputy Kuhlman of Ventura county. Pritchard is after his men.

It has grown to be quite a fashion to disregard the game laws, and the game wardens of Southern California have been kept quite busy this summer arresting offenders and securing convictions. At the present time Deputy Kuhlman has a warrant out for a hunter who killed a fawn in Ventura county. He has the evidence to convict him, in the skin which was taken from the animal. He also has two witnesses who say they will swear that they saw the killing.

Since September 3 there have been twelve cases before the courts of Southern California of men who have broken the game laws. Seven of these offenders were charged with killing does. W. L. Harrison, who was arrested by Deputy Fred W. Grosse for killing a doe near Newhall, was fined $50 by Judge Powell. The other six cases are still pending.

Deputy J. A. Bordner arrested F. S. Marshall for killing snipe. He was fined $25 by Judge Klamouth of Pasadena. Deputy Tom Webb of San Diego arrested James Brown for shooting without a license. Brown was fined $10. G. Martin suffered the same fate for a similar breach of the law. James J. Brown was fined $25 for shooting quail and P. D. Crothers paid $15 for killing a meadow lark.

HOPEFUL EASTERNERS.

BEST MEN FOR NEW ORLEANS.

SOUTH ATLANTIC ATHLETES TO TRY FOR PRIZES.

King of Washington Is Likely Winner in Broad Jump for He Has Shown Twenty-three Feet—Southern City Has Promised Big Sum Toward Expenses of Meet.

Various stories are going the rounds in the Baltimore and other South Atlantic papers about athletes who may be sent to New Orleans, but tne candidates will have to show real class before they make the trip next month.

Charley King of Washington, D. C., Grove Athletic Association, who has done twenty-three feet in the broad jump, is about the only athlete in the South Atlantic Association who is sure of representing the association at the national championships of tne A.A.U. in New Orleans.

Royal Gill of Baltimore, a good 100-yard man, who has been mentioned as a possible New Orleans candidate, is not in shape, and will hardly go.

A Washington man who may get a chance is Earle Smithson, also of the Washington Grove Association, who who has done the 440-yard run in 50 1-5s., and has the distinction of having forced out Carpenter at such a fast pace that Carpenter broke the South Atlantic record just before he went to the Olympic games in London.

Smithson's 50 1-5 for the distance gives him a good look-in if he shows his best form between now and the time for selecting the representatives, which will be in the middle of September.

Martin McDonagh of Baltimore is credited with having done the 220-low hurdles in 26 flat, which is pretty good stuff, and of having done the 120-yard hurdles in 16s. flat, another fine bit of running, but McDonagh will have to demonstrate that he is there with the goods and is not flashing.

The New Orleans people have put up $5000 to help pay the expenses of athletes competing in the games, and have left tne selection to the Championship Committee of the A.A.U., which will see that the different associations pay half and New Orleans half. Dr. D. Elmer Wiber of Washington, president of the South Atlantic, has been appointed by the A.A.U. to pick representatives from his district.

BRIGHT SPARKS OF MOTORDOM.

Five new police cars have been put in commission in Detroit.

It is estimated that Massachusetts will receive $200,000 more in automobile fees this year than in 1909.

Milwaukee's Common Council has appropriated $3500 for the purchase of a motor ambulance truck.

The number of automobiles in use in St. Louis has doubled within eight months.

Churubusco, Ind., business men are organizing a company to transport freight between Fort Wayne, Churubusco, Wolf Lake and Wawasee.

A broad highway sixty miles long betwen Toledo and Detroit, traversing one of the most beautiful regions in the world, now seems a probability.

An automobile used to convey dirt in Paris carries two five-ton hoppers on a platform, which may be dumped separately on either side.

The total amount of prizes offered for the Atlanta, Ga., meet, November 3rd, 4th and 5th, is $11,750 covering three days of racing.

A telephone company at Louisville, Ky., is now using a motor car to transport linemen and officials of its construction department.

A New York official estimates that the use of the motor car had increased the capacity of city streets sixfold over that of horse-drawn vehicles.

The latest enterprise among English country girls is opening tea rooms for automobilists who journey through villages far from railroads.

A total of 1,275,000 square feet floor space is represented by the six largest motor car and accessory plants now in course of erection in Detroit, some of which are nearing completion.

Glenn H. Curtiss, the noted aviator, although completely absorbed in his work in which he has become a leader, recently purchased a runabout in Pittsburgh.

The city of Alameda, Cal., has put in commission a combined police patrol and ambulance. It is a fifty horsepower machine and will accommodate twelve persons.

That there will be a good market for popular-priced automobiles in the Hawaiian Islands next year is the opinion of H. A. Wilder, a motor enthusiast at Honolulu.

The third annual good roads convention of the National Grange, Farmers' Union, American Road Builders' Association of Automobile Manufacturers and other organizations will be held October 6th to 8th, at St. Louis.

Ralph Mulford, winner of the Elgin National trophy for the 1910 national stock chassis championship, will be a competitor in the Vanderbilt cup race to be run on Long Island on Saturday, October 1st.

Amateur and professional automobile men of Texas, elated with the success which attended the recent meet on Galveston Beach, are beginning already to formulate plans for a more extensive meet next year.

The city of Pittsburgh will shortly build a model garage for housing its vehicles. It will hold the downtown fuel wagon of the fire department, the motorcycles of the police bureau and the city detectives' automobiles, and will cost $9000.

A step tending toward the improvement of local roads has been taken by the Mankato (Minn.) Automobile Club, which has decided to see to it that eighty miles of road in the vicinity of the city, including nine principal highways to a distance of ten miles are dragged throughout the season.

The management of the New Jersey State Fair, which is to be held at Olympic Park the first week in October, has set aside Friday of that week as Automobile Day, and a special feature is an automobile parade through the principal streets of Newark.

The Motor Contest Association has decided to indefinitely postpone the Catskill reliability contest and hill climb because many of the New York dealers have failed to get delivery of the 1911 models, which they intended to use in the tour and hill climb.

Why We Will Continue To Handle The Hudso

The Story of a Year's Experience

For twelve months we have handled the Hudson.

It has been an interesting year. So interesting that we will continue to handle it.

We feel that it is only fair to narrate this experience to the public—to let every prospective purchaser of an automobile—whether he is buying his first, his second or his third car—know what has been our experience with the Hudson.

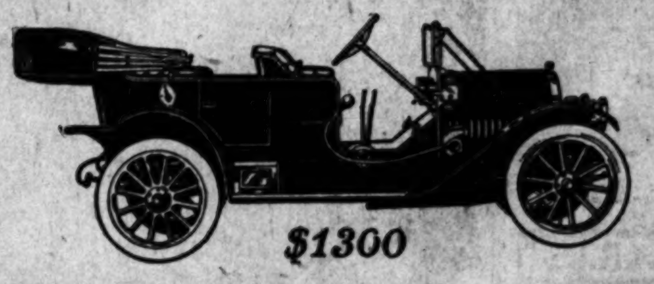
When we signed up with the Hudson Company a year ago to handle their cars, we were just a bit uneasy. Many companies were starting at the time. All that was needed, it seemed, were letterheads and stationery. But who was going to sell all these cars? Where were they all going? What was to become of the cars we had been handling?

But we weren't skeptical of the Hudson Motor Car Company.

We knew the men behind the Hudson. They were not novices. They had been in the automobile business from the beginning. First with the Olds Motor Works, when that organization achieved its first success. Then they started and established the Thomas-Detroit Company. Later they were large factors in the success of the Chalmers-Detroit Company. It was an organization that never had had a failure or a bad year.

And the man is wise who looks first to the men behind an automobile concern. In buying first-class jewelry you do not go to a little place around the corner that sprung into existence over night. Why should you buy a car from men who never made one before?

So we had one point settled firmly in our minds—that the men behind the Hudson were absolutely unsurpassed in their line.



$1300

The Most Widely Copied Car in America--The Hudson

There are many cars, selling at about $1300, and even high-priced cars, which contain many of the features found in the Hudson Touring Car.

Still there is nothing radical, new or experimental about these Hudson features. This car is not ahead of the times in innovations that have not been standardized.

It is simply Hudson engineering. The men who designed this car had many years of experience. They were able to simplify the mechanism—to lessen the chance for trouble—to increase the efficiency. They combined with this engineering skill a touch of beauty in the lines and grace of the car.

Thus the Hudson appealed strongly and immediately to motor car engineers and the public alike. It soon became the most widely copied car in America.

Having graceful lines, high power, speed, simplicity and quietness, the touring car meets every requirement. It travels successfully over roads other cars found impassable.

Its low price, its small up-keep cost, makes it serve every need of persons who must travel quickly and cheaply, under all road conditions.

4200 owners are satisfied. That is a great compliment.

But it is greater compliment when other manufacturers, less fortunate in their designs, copy the Hudson Touring Car.

Now the next point that we had to consider was this—the car itself. Was it genuinely good? Would it stand up? Could the car make good all the claims?

We saw a photograph of this car. We read the specifications. They were great.

We jumped on a train and went to Detroit to the Hudson factory.

Well—we signed up for a many Hudsons.

When we got home (we a we pondered a little. Were we going to sell all these cars?

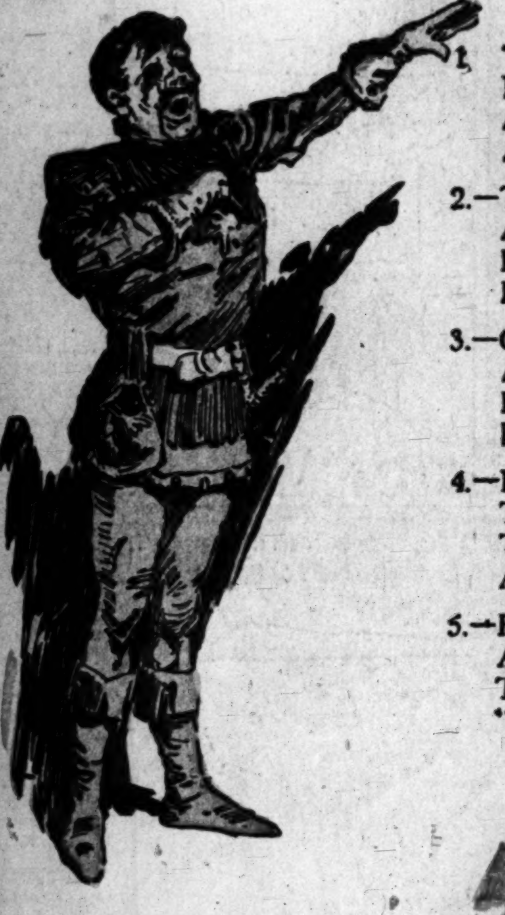
THE WIDOW WISE

Verses by Paul West ▾ Drawings by W. H. Loomis



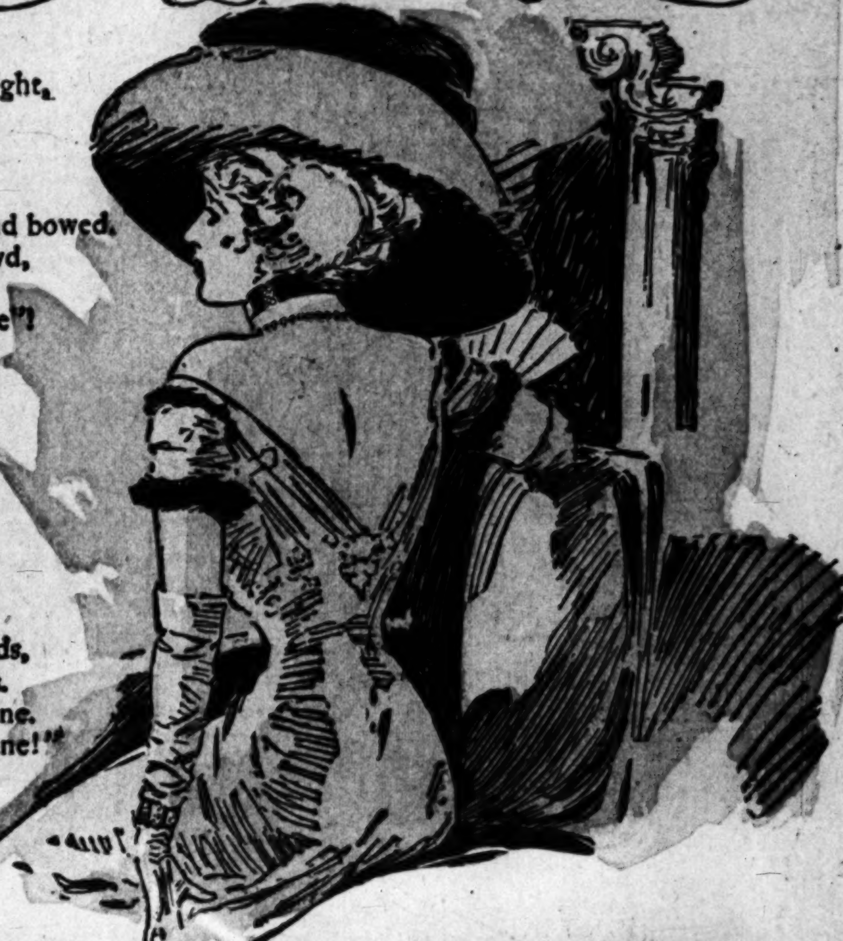
1. The Opera House was crowded. 'Twas a gay and gorgeous sight,
Because the great Falsetti made his grand debut that night;
And, in a box, in gems arrayed as brilliant as her eyes,
Applauding to the echo, sat the charming Widow Wise.

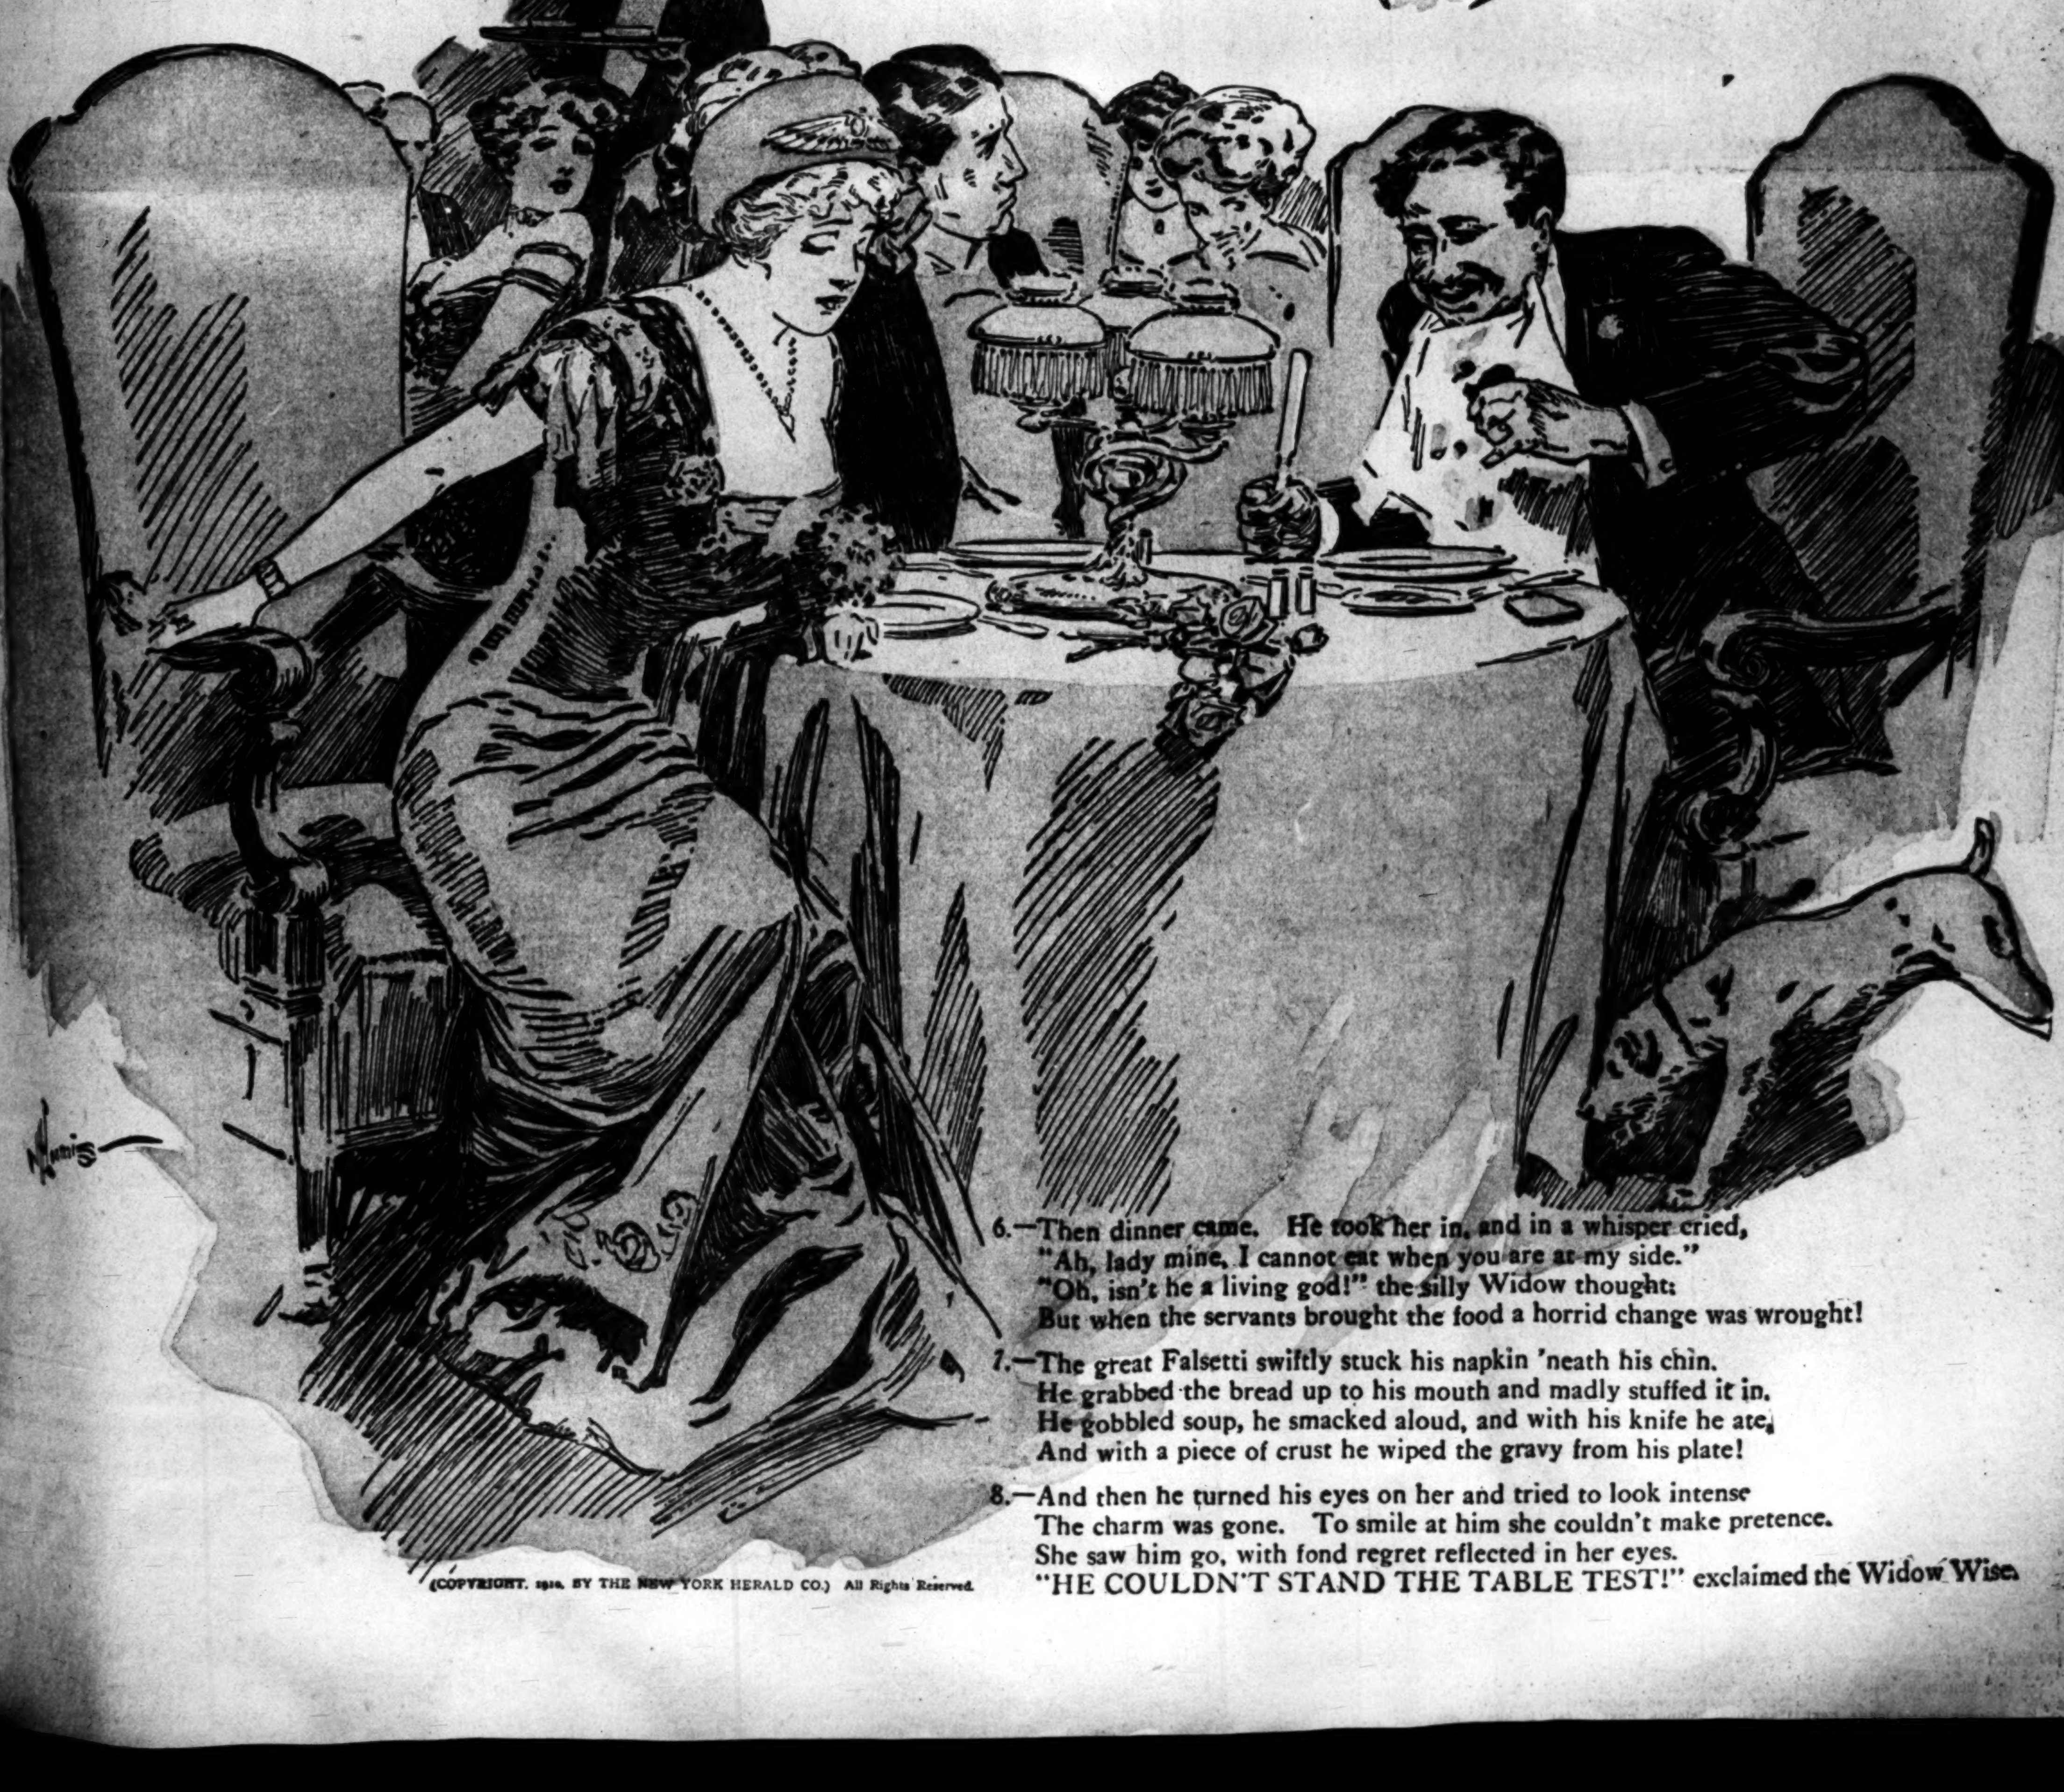
2.—The great Falsetti's triumph came. He blushed and smiled and bowed.
And, as he glanced with beaming face about that splendid crowd,
His eyes fell on the Widow fair. A flush suffused her face—
Love's message flashed between them—and it was another "case"!

3.—Of course this wondrous singer soon became the season's fad,
And invitations by the score from every source he had.
He spurned them all; but when he got a little card one night
For a dinner at the Widow's, he accepted with delight.

4.—It was the season's one event. The finest folk were there;
The Widow never looked so sweet, so radiant and so fair.
The great Falsetti's eyes grew dim, his head felt very light,
As in his tenor voice he cried, "I'll speak my love to-night!"

5.—He sang. It was a song of love, of flowers, and moon, and birds,
And toward the pretty Widow he inclined his tones and words.
That golden voice! Its every sound breathed love for her divine.
"Ah," thought the Widow, "I am his, and he—oh, joy!—is mine!"





6.—Then dinner came. He took her in, and in a whisper cried,
"Ah, lady mine, I cannot eat when you are at my side."
"Oh, isn't he a living god!" the silly Widow thought;
But when the servants brought the food a horrid change was wrought!

7.—The great Falsetti swiftly stuck his napkin 'neath his chin.
He grabbed the bread up to his mouth and madly stuffed it in.
He gobbled soup, he smacked aloud, and with his knife he ate,
And with a piece of crust he wiped the gravy from his plate!

8.—And then he turned his eyes on her and tried to look intense
The charm was gone. To smile at him she couldn't make pretence.
She saw him go, with fond regret reflected in her eyes.
"HE COULDN'T STAND THE TABLE TEST!" exclaimed the Widow Wise.

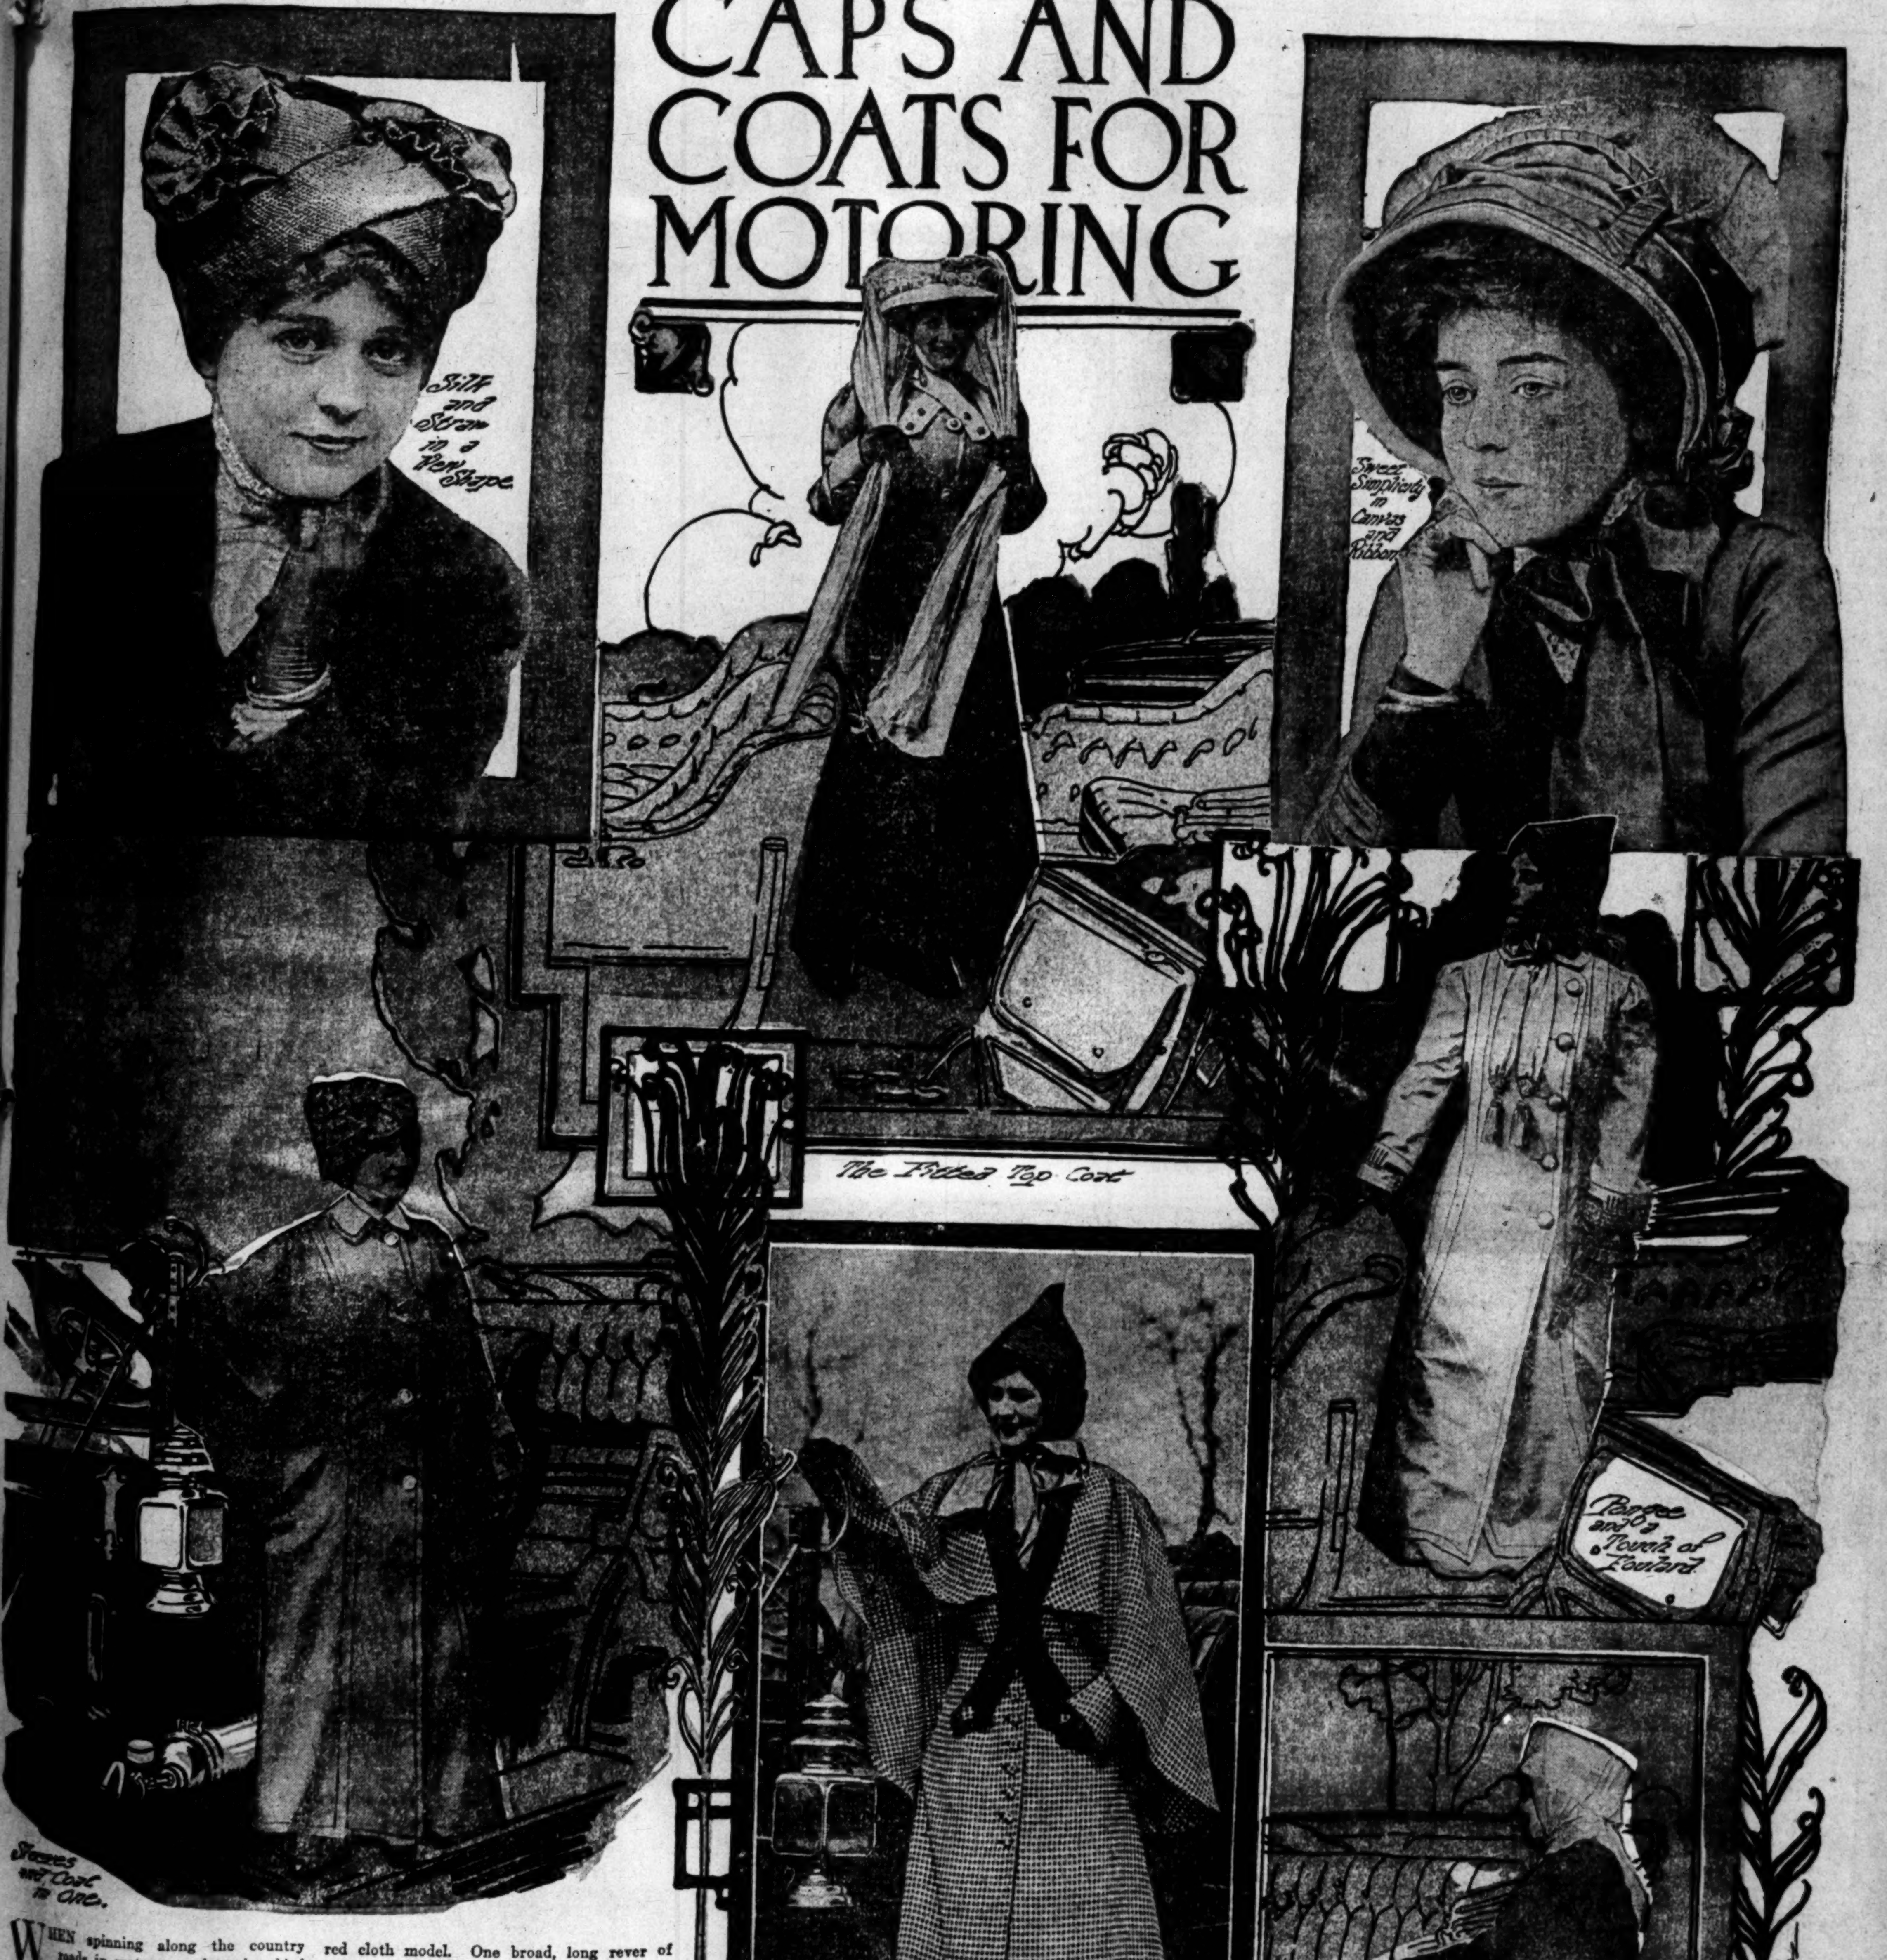
CAPS AND COATS FOR MOTORING



Silk and Straw in a New Shape

Sweet Simplicity in Canvas and Ribbon

The Fitted Top Coat

Pongee and a Touch of Foulard

Sleeves and Coat in One.

A Cape Coat of Shepherd's Plaid

Red Cloth Trimmed with Black.

WHEN spinning along the country roads in motorcars, there is added pleasure in the knowledge that the correct garb is being worn. Motor fashions, of necessity, reflect the changes of the seasons, and the fact should be hailed with joy that this year there is a possibility of stepping from an automobile and retaining a well-dressed appearance on the veranda or street.

Shepherd's plaid is used for the capecoat that displays several new lines. In the first place, the ample cape is cut so that the black straps hold down the front edges, while the lower portion of the front is shortened so that there is no interference with arm movement if the wearer is at the wheel. Buttons of the material hold the crossed bands of satin. The monk's hood of supple straw is a new hat that is appropriate with this costume. Both cap and coat are simple in design, and can be copied at home.

Sleeves and coat in one give roomy and comfortable warmth. Of blue serge is this model, and the pattern is cut so that the sleeves and the side gores are in one piece. A broad band is used as a facing for the edges of the sleeves. Tan broadcloth forms a double collar. This blue coat has a red foulard lining, one of the points, by the way, of the season.

Dashing in its red and black contrast is the red cloth model. One broad, long rever of black velvet sweeps from the collar to waist; black velvet cuffs and a row of velvet buttons on each side seam are sufficient for toning down the scarlet color. When open, this coat displays a white foulard lining with immense coin spots of black.

The fitted topcoat of tan diagonal serge is built upon more tailored lines. Huge buttons hold the front and side seams. A crossed cravat of tapestry cloth gives a bright touch at the throat. This is decidedly the type of coat for a woman who must consider motorcoat and topcoat as one.

Pongee will ever be a favorite for lightweight wear. The good lines of this coat are a decided departure from the loose-fitting and awkward wraps of a season ago. Here the ample sleeves are edged with turned-back cuffs of foulard, trimmed with braid and buttons. Huge buttons of pongee, and, therefore, unobtrusive, drop at the side opening. A tie edged with braid and tassels falls down the front.

It is not surprising that the bonnets for motoring have undergone a change. Straw has been sewn in bands about two inches wide, and with blue silk forms a new shape that is tight-fitting and becoming. The crossed bands at the front are worthy of notice, ending under rosettes of straw. This, by the way, has provision for a comfortable adjustment of the veil, for the dust-defying chiffon is attached on the under surface of the brim, enveloping the face in secure folds.

Reflecting the simplicity of the colonial times, and incidentally making it copyable by the amateur, is the bonnet of canvas cloth and ribbon. The loose, pleated crown is held in under scarlet ribbon and a ribbon buckle, and the soft silk ties under the chin in a large bow. Two rosettes are placed at the lower edge, and the effect is all that can be desired.

Changes there undoubtedly have been made, and what woman can deny that they have been for the better?

A LESSON IN SOUP MAKING

Crack the Bones in Half a Dozen Places

Cut with a Knife the Meat and Vegetables into Cubes

THE cardinal principle in soup-making is to extract all the nourishment from the meat or bones, which are the "stock," otherwise the basis of the dish.

To the failure to do this is to be attributed much of the disrelish for this excellent article of food for which Americans are proverbial. A witty epicure once called a dinner party that did not begin with soup of any kind, "an acephalous feast." It lacked a head in his eyes.

If we knew how to make better soups and practiced what we knew, they would soon become as essential a part of our daily fare as they are in other civilized countries. So much of what passes in private houses and in country hotels as soup is little better than seasoned dishwater that the aforesaid disrelish is abundantly explained. How well we recollect the wretched travesties of the real thing, and how rebellious is the educated diaphragm in the memory! Watery, mottled with big globules of grease, with a thin residuum of rice or barley, or, perchance, of peas and cubes of carrots, that give it a local habitation and a name among edibles, what wonder if those whose acquaintance with the soup tribe is based upon the "dishwater" decline further association?

A burly, well-to-do farmer who sat opposite to me at a mountain hotel some years ago voiced the sentiments of his class upon this subject:

"Soup, sir?" said the glib waitress in his ear. "Mutton, tomato or chicken soup?"

"Nyther, if you please!" uttered the independent citizen with deliberate emphasis. "When I eat I want something that has some substance into it!"

So say we all of us! The initial step in our lesson is to learn how to put the "substance into" the soup.

A good soup stock is made by cutting into small cubes a pound of lean beef and the same quantity of lean veal, adding to these a beef bone full of marrow and well cracked, that the "substance" may be extracted from the heart of the bone.

"I could never do much with bones," the matron of a boarding home for working women remarked carelessly to me, explanatory of a heap of raw and cooked bones the cook was tossing into the garbage pail. "When the meat is off they are just offal—nothing else."

Yet she had a pet dog that would gnaw greedily and happily for an hour upon a discarded bone and fattened upon the juices he got therefrom. She had heard a hundred times and quoted as often the saying: "The nearer the bone the sweeter the meat," without ever asking why it had gained a place among the world's truisms.

Crack the bone into half a dozen pieces, then cut, not chop, the meat. If minced it has a tendency to clog in cooking, forming masses that are seared on the outside and underdone in the middle. Prepare at the same time half a cupful of carrots, cut into squares; a turnip, likewise cut into small bits; an onion minced fine and a stalk of celery, cut into half-inch lengths. Lay these in cold water for an hour and then drain. Put into a pot of boiling water and cook one minute to take away the rank earthy taste that clings to raw vegetables which have grown underground. The flavor of the "stock" will be far more delicate for the brief parboiling. Drain the chopped vegetables; add them to the meat and bones, cover deep with cold water and put over the fire. A gallon of water is none too much for the quantities of meat and bones of which I have spoken. Cover the pot closely and set where it will not reach the boiling point under an hour, yet will be heating steadily. After it begins to simmer and sing hold the heat steady, still, for another hour. Increase then until the simmer is the gentlest of bubblings. To boil soup stock fast and hard is to ruin it. The practiced ear of the cook who understands her business detects in an instant the accelerated motion of the bubblings and arrests it.

Here, I pause to say, is the prime advantage of the fireless cooker in soup-making. After the stock has boiled for twenty minutes the pot, covered by a closely fitting lid, is set within the cooker and the upper lid is sealed fast. At the end of six, seven or ten hours the contents will be piping hot still and cooked to perfection. In the summer it is safest to season the soup before it goes into the cooker. Lift the cover for a moment; stir in enough salt and pepper to keep it from spoiling if left in the cooker overnight; bring again to the boil (with the cover clamped fast) and set in the cooker.

Stock that is cooked over the fire is better left unseasoned until you are ready to take it from the range. Add then plenty of salt and pepper, and do not forget two teaspoonfuls of kitchen bouquet. Set away, covered, to cool. When perfectly cold the fat will be formed upon the surface in a solid cake. Take this off, breaking as little as possible. Not a particle of fat should be left upon a well-made soup. It is a culinary solecism that approximates a crime.

Strain the skimmed stock through a colander, pressing hard to get all the nourishment out of the materials. You have now a mass of really worthless stuff, which may go into the garbage pail without arousing a twinge in the most enlightened conscience. The pampered dog would not leave his succulent bone for the mess of pottage turned out of the colander.

What you should have left to you is a rich jelly, holding all the nutritious elements of meat and vegetables and capable of numberless variations under many names. "Stock" is the generic name. Should you wish to have a clear soup, dip out a pint or so of the jellied stock and bring it quickly to a boil. Strain through a cheesecloth and return to the fire. As soon as it boils up again add the beaten white of an egg; cook slowly five minutes and strain out the albumen, which will take with it all the impurities of the liquid. Strain this time without squeezing. Add a glass of sherry and the juice of half a lemon, with a tablespoonful of caramel to deepen the color and mellow the flavor. Serve as a "company soup."

At the risk of losing ground in the respect of epicure and Philistine, I confess frankly to a preference for broths and family thick soups and purees above what are characterized as I have called them just now—"company soups." That is, such as are to be served at dinner parties and high days in general. Jellied bouillon is en regle at state luncheons in warm weather, and is undeniably refreshing and palatable if properly made and cunningly seasoned. For my own eating, I affect the thick broth, founded upon the clouded portions of "stock" and further enriched by tapioca, sago, tomatoes, split or green peas, mashed potatoes, vegetable marrow; in fact, with any really good left-overs that are utilized in this form by the skillful cook.

To bind any of these into a creamy compound, learn to make a "roux," white or brown. An English gourmet criticised his national cuisine for the "trick of thickening gravies and broths with uncooked flour. The practice," he affirms, "is slovenly and disgusting."

When I eat drawn butter and gravies or soups (so-called) in which the taste of raw flour overcomes other flavors, I incline to his opinion. After divers unsuccessful attempts to drill a cook in the simple art of making Scotch broth, taking as a base the liquor in which mutton had been cooked, I took advantage of her temporary indisposition one day to finish the preparation of our favorite "potage." She had it all ready, except the final thickening and boil-up. I put a good tablespoonful of butter into a frying pan, stirred into it as it heated the like quantity of flour, and when they were a smooth, bubbling paste, poured in a cupful of hot milk. A tablespoonful of minced parsley and a teaspoonful of onion juice went in next. All boiled up once, the spoon at work all the time, and the result was mixed with the soup awaiting the final touches.

The broth was eaten delightedly by the family, who had known it in the old country.

"The genuine article!" was the verdict.

"However did you make it so different?" asked the invalid, to whom the waitress carried a plate of the broth.

From that day she entered into the secret of the cooked and blended flour. If the reader doubts the probability that so slight a variation in the treatment of raw materials can make so much difference, let her try it.

The Roux

Have the frying pan perfectly clean and put into it a great spoonful of butter. As soon as it begins to smoke stir in carefully a scant spoonful of sifted flour and keep stirring until you have a heaving mass of creamy white, as light as a meringue. The soup or gravy should be ready to receive it.

For brown ragouts or gravies, the flour should be browned before it goes into the hot butter.

Mock Turtle Soup

Esteemed by some good judges as the "king of soups," this naturally has a calf's head as a "motif." It is savory, unctuous and goodly to behold. I am not the only critic of its merits who rates it as far more delicious than the green turtle which it "mocks." It is incomparably less expensive.

The head is boiled steadily until the meat slips easily from the bones. Season the liquor with salt and pepper and leave the head in it until next day. Then remove it, skin off the fat and take out the bones. Put the jellied stock left in the pot over the fire with the bones, the ears (chopped fine), a grated carrot and a sliced onion—both of which have been scalded for a few minutes—a bunch of soup herbs minced, a teaspoonful of allspice, a saltspoonful of paprika and salt to taste. Cook, covered, for an hour. Take from the fire; run through your soup strainer; thicken with a brown "roux" (see recipe) and return to the fire. Drop into the boiling soup the tongue cut into cubes and parts of the cheeks, also cut into square bits. Boil for five minutes. Stir in two teaspoonfuls of kitchen bouquet; add a glass of brown sherry and the juice of a small lemon, and pour upon forcemeat balls in the tureen.

Forcemeat Balls for This Soup

Boil the brains of the calf; rub them to a paste with the yolk of a hard-boiled egg, a little browned flour and the yolk of a raw egg. Roll in browned flour and set in the oven until incrusted with the flour, but not until they bake hard.

These balls should not be larger than marbles, as they are meant to simulate the eggs of the (mock) turtle.

What would be called in an art catalog "a copy of a copy" is

Mock Turtle Bean Soup

Soak three cupfuls of the black or mock turtle soup beans in lukewarm water for eight hours. Drain and cover them with hot water. Leave them in this for an hour. Drain this off, cover deep with boiling water and boil tender. Rub them, with the last water in which they were boiled, through a sieve and return to the fire. Add a quart of stock or the liquor in which corned beef has been cooked. If this be too salt, mix in other stock or hot water. Boil for an hour longer; stir in a brown roux, and a minute later a glass of brown sherry with a teaspoonful of kitchen bouquet.

Have ready in the heated tureen balls of hard-boiled egg yolks rubbed to a paste with a little butter and bound with raw yolk and slices of peeled lemon as thin as wafers.

The imitation of the first imitation is wonderfully good.

I wish I had time and room in which to do justice to a class of soups comparatively little known to our native cooks. I refer to "soupes maigres," as the French name them. That is, without meat. They may be palatable and excellent in every way, or they m mere pap, insipid and uns depends upon the ability of to obey a trustworthy recipe.

One of the best of these, which is so easily compounded is amazed by the frequent fa before us, is

Tomato Bisque

Cut up a quart and a pi peeled tomatoes and stew quart. Season with pepper a heaping teaspoonful of ready a quart of scalding mi add a teaspoonful of baking into this three tablespoonfuls add a small cupful of rolled cracker dust, boil up once and the tomatoes. Serve at once. fervescence of the soda with the tomatoes will make the liqu and foamy.

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

IMPORTANT NOTICE

BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the Exchange, I must ask contributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except in cases of formulas or recipes which require greater space. I want all my correspondents to have a showing in the Corner, and if my request in this respect is complied with, it will be possible to print many more letters.

To Remove Stains From White Goods

PLEASE tell me what will take tarweed stains out of a white lawn.

A SUBSCRIBER (San Jose, Cal.).

No stain in a white garment is ineradicable. You may extract this with chlorinated soda, washing within ten minutes, then laying in the sun.

Or you may wet the spots, rubbing into them all the cream of tartar that they will take up and holding the stains taut in the steam of a fast boiling kettle. Do this three minutes, rinse and lay in the sun all day, wetting hourly with cream of tartar dissolved in hot water. Soak overnight in loppered milk, if you have it. Rinse in the morning and lay in the hot sun, wetting hourly with lemon juice.

Any one of these methods will extract the stains.

Lady Baltimore Cake

There is not the shadow of a doubt as to where the delicacy belongs with which we will deal next. A correspondent asked us some weeks ago to reprint the formula for Lady Baltimore cake. As I had parted with the number of the Exchange in which we had published the genuine recipe, obtained—not without some trouble—from a Charlestonian, who vouched for its authenticity, I confessed that it had gone from my keeping and intimated the possibility that some more prudent woman might have preserved it. The appeal has been met gloriously! I cannot content myself with a tamer word in surveying the mountain of papers labeled "Lady Baltimore" that lie upon my desk. Twelve members hand in the identical recipe that came out in my "talk" upon "Lady Baltimore and Other Famous Cakes." Twelve favor us with different editions of the celebrated composition. The result of my distressed appeal to our Family touches me in a tender spot. It proves that our members are faithful in reading our messages of loving helpfulness, and that our housemothers carry the rules of law and order into the compilation of domestic "scrapbooks." If some have the habit of mislaying valuable recipes, they are far outnumbered by those who, knowing a good thing when they see it, take care to secure it as a permanent possession.

It is neither practicable nor desirable to publish all—or one-fourth—of the recipes for Lady Baltimore we have in hand. But I thank each and every one who has honored my request so promptly and cheerfully as to heighten my regard and excite lively gratitude.

(No. 1)

I cut out and paste in my scrapbook many of the recipes from the Exchange. Among these is that asked for in a late issue. I take pleasure in forwarding it to you just as you printed it:

Lady Baltimore Cake

One cupful of butter, 2 cupfuls of sugar, 3½ cupfuls of flour, 1 cupful of sweet milk, the whites of 6 eggs, 2 level teaspoonfuls of baking powder and 1 teaspoonful of rosewater. Mix in the usual way and bake in three layers.

Filling

Dissolve 3 cupfuls of sugar in a cupful of boiling water; cook until it spins a thread, take it off and pour it upon a cupful of blanched and chopped almonds and stir to a white cream. Let it get cold before putting it in and upon the cake.

I hope "Mrs. G. F. D." (a California housemother) will write again and tell us how she manages to feed a family of ten on $39.50 per month. That is $3.95 each. Many of us would be glad to know what she had each day and at each meal and how the meals were prepared.

Mrs. E. B. M. (Carrollton, Ga.).

I own, on my part, to a consuming curiosity upon the same subject. If "Mrs. G. F. D." will accede to our Georgia member's petition, I engage to make room for her menus in the Corner.

(No. 2)

"Dixie" or Lady Baltimore Cake

One cupful of butter, 2 cupfuls of sugar, 3½ cupfuls of flour, 1 cupful of rich milk, 6 eggs (the whites only); 2 teaspoonfuls of baking powder, 3 teaspoonfuls of lemon extract. Cream butter and sugar, adding the sugar gradually, and beating continuously; add milk and flavoring; then the flour, into which the baking powder has been sifted; finally, fold in the whites of the eggs. Bake in three layers in a rather hot oven.

The Filling

Dissolve 3 cupfuls of granulated sugar in 1 of boiling water and cook until it threads. Then pour gradually over the stiffened whites of 3 eggs. Finally, add 1 teaspoonful of lemon extract.

Icing for "Dixie"

Add to a portion of the above filling 1 cupful of chopped raisins, a cupful of chopped nutmeats and 5 figs cut into dainty little strips. Mix thoroughly and cover the top and sides of the cake with it.

ELIZABETH R. (Louisville, Ky.).

(No. 3)

I don't know whether or not this is the recipe for Lady Baltimore cake that "M. J. H." (Riverside, Cal.) asked for, but it is said to be the original formula.

This is the preamble to a delightful letter from Mrs. Hertha P. (Roxborough, Philadelphia), which I am selfish enough to keep for my own reading. The recipe inclosed differs little from those we have just read. It is substantially the same. One variation in method, not in material or quantity, directs: "Fold in the whites of six eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Do not stir, but fold, with a rotary motion, so as not to break the air bubbles in the eggs." The flavoring preferred by her is rosewater, not lemon or vanilla.

By now the merest tyro among our readers and pupils should be able to make the far-famed cake, and the most careless of those who pretend to preserve recipes must be convinced that we ought not, in reason, to be expected to repeat the recipe for three years to come.

Cottage Cheese Pie

In reply to "A Constant Reader" (Atlanta, Ga.), I take pleasure in contributing my tried and true recipe for the pie requested:

Bake the crust first. Then rub well into a bowl of cottage cheese (smearcase) about 2 cups of it, a heaping tablespoonful of flour and half a cupful of sugar. (Or, sweeten to your taste. Now work in a cupful of milk or, if you have it, cream. Next, beat in the whipped yolks of 4 eggs. Beat the whites stiff and fold in last of all. Flavor with vanilla, and sprinkle cinnamon on top of the mixture after it is poured into the crust. Bake quickly. There is no top crust.

HOUSEWIFE (San Jose, Cal.).

This recipe is so unlike those which appeared in the Exchange last week that I do not apologize for inserting it.

For a like reason I make room for still one more formula (the fourth, I believe) for—

Buttermilk Soup

One quart of buttermilk will make 4 large plates of soup; soak a cup of sago in water until soft, then put on to cook in cold water and bring almost to the boiling point. Stir in, then, the buttermilk gradually. Add a pinch of salt, 2 tablespoonfuls of sugar, the rind of a lemon, shaved thin as paper, and a stick of cinnamon.

Should sago be used instead of tapioca—and it is preferred by some—the buttermilk must come to a boil and the soaked sago be stirred in slowly.

Keep stirring until the sago or tapioca is pearly.

Another way is to cook the buttermilk with the flavoring above mentioned and stir in dried fruits, such as prunes, pears, etc. Some people make dumplings and cook them in the buttermilk.

Mrs. C. S. (Oakland, Cal.).

But—can this compound of milk, sugar, lemon peel and tapioca be rightly classed among soups? Is it not, rather, a semisweet, to be eaten as a later course than that in which a broth would naturally be brought in? It would seem to me that it belongs to the family of loppered milk and junket. I wish some of the half dozen who have responded to the call for buttermilk soup (or pop) would enlighten us on this head. Does the "soup" precede or follow the meat at the family meal?

Zimmet Kuchen

"Mrs. E. B. L." of Philadelphia, asks for a recipe for zimmet kuchen that will make the sugar stick to the top.

I beat up a raw egg and spread upon the coffee cake, then shake fine sugar and cinnamon over it, dotting it with butter. Bake in the usual way. When eggs are scarce and high in winter, I use cream or milk in place of eggs. That makes the sugar stick as well, I think.

Mrs. E. Z. (Chicago).

Scrapple

In one issue of the Exchange a correspondent speaks of "Ponn-hoss." We pronounce it as she spells it, too, and we made it at butchering time. May I tell you how?

Paen Haas, or Scrapple

Boil cleaned hogs' head with the hearts and tongues until very tender. Lift out the meat from the pot; remove bone and gristle; grind the meat fine and return to the liquor in which it was boiled. Season with salt and pepper; thicken with cornmeal, as you would mush. Pour into a pan or into molds to form. When it is cold, slice and fry. A little white flour added to the cornmeal before thickening the mixture makes it brown better.

If city housewives wish to make "scrapple," they may buy sausage and thicken with cornmeal.

I sympathize with you in having my pet theory regarding dough mixed with baking powder demolished. I, likewise, supposed the dough or batter should be baked immediately. A friend of mine insists that her cook lets her baking powder biscuits stand half an hour before baking, with the result that they are just as light and tender as mine, which must go into the oven the second after they are shaped. I have learned lately that some of the finest cake bakers allow their batter to stand overnight.

Verily, there are ways and ways!

Allow one word about the much-discussed "mullein oil."

It may be bought from any leading druggist, and comes in small bottles. It was prescribed in old times as a cure for deafness. I tried it once, though not thoroughly, as I am afraid to put anything into my ears. There were no results from the experiment, either good or bad.

Mrs. P. R. W. (Vermont, Ill.)

What you say of letting batter and dough raised with effervescent powders stand for hours before baking is a stunning blow to my preconceived ideas of the proper course to be pursued in such circumstances.

Nor am I convinced that the new way is better than the old. I should as soon think of setting aside a foaming seidlitz powder to settle for an hour, or not drinking a glass of soda water until the bubbles ceased to rise. It is the chemical action of the bicarbonate of soda upon the tartaric acid that makes the dough "rise." If the baking be delayed until the effervescence has ceased, and the air bubbles have escaped through the batter or dough into the air, culinary common sense combines with chemical knowledge in declaring that a non-elastic paste must remain in the mixing bowl or upon the kneading board.

I appeal to housewives and to our practical chemists for elucidation of the mystery.

Canning Pineapples Without Heat

Mrs. G. W. P. (Chicago) gave a recipe for canning pineapples without heating, and you "wonder if they will sour."

I answer, decidedly, "No!" I have done pineapple without cooking, and kept it for years. I could have kept it longer—if it had not been eaten up!

I prepare them as for the table, putting no water with them. The fruit will make juice enough to can them. Let them stand for twenty-four hours and can them. If your cans are airtight they will keep well and long. If rubbers, tops or cans are defective they will ferment. So it is well to watch them. Should they show signs of "working," empty the cans and give the pineapple a "boil up"; return to the cans after you have scalded them, and seal hot.

Mine keep well without cooking, and they are as good as when fresh. Care should be taken not to let them stand in a warm place and not too long before they go into cans.

Mrs. W. L. G. (Lebanon, Pa.).

My query was based upon the memory of an unsuccessful attempt on the part of a friend to preserve pineapple in the sun after sugaring it, or, as you say, preparing it for the table. It worked furiously in three days, and was as sour as vinegar. Nor do I yet comprehend why your fruit, put up cold, does not ferment. Of course, you must fill the cans to overflowing, that the air may not get in.

The story is interesting and suggestive. For if pineapple may be canned raw and without symptom of heat, why not all manner of fruits and vegetables?

A Cure for Catarrh

A correspondent incloses a clipping relative to a cure for catarrh, in which occurs this sentence:

> I can put her in touch with literature and directions for curing catarrh at home through the proper selection and combination of food, plus water and fresh air.

Our present correspondent comments upon this:

> Being afflicted with catarrh myself, I should be glad to get the literature of which "J. L. D." (Philadelphia) speaks. It would be highly appreciated.
> Mrs. C. T. S. (Buffalo, N. Y.).

As you do not inclose a stamp, the rules of the office do not allow me to forward the address of her who offers the "literature." I take the only method left to me of putting you into communication with our Philadelphia member. Should she see your note she will probably let me know her wishes in the matter.

A Hay Fever Remedy

In reply to a request for a remedy for hay fever, I offer the following, which has been tried and found helpful:

Attenuated doses of chloride of sodium, prepared in sugar of milk, and taken in small doses four times daily.

This is the same as "natrum multicatum" (salt). Avoid eating salt entirely until relieved. Keep the skin in a healthy condition by frequent baths, and the alimentary canal clean and free by means of tepid water. Breathe deeply of pure air for an hour each day.

Mrs. J. W. S. (Chicago).

I append a postscript: Breathe deeply all day long, and the purest air you can get anywhere. And always through the nostrils—not through the mouth.

FAMILY MEAL FOR A WEEK

SUNDAY

BREAKFAST

Sliced pineapple, cereal and cream, barbecued ham, oatmeal scones, coffee.

LUNCHEON

Galantine, toasted oatmeal over), Virginia potato salad, clubhouse cheese, homemade tea.

DINNER

LUNCHEON

Hamburg steak with tato balls (a left-over), wiches, fruit, tea.

DINNER

French onion soup, Jerusalem artichokes, cumbers, rhubarb black coffee.

For the INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

By ADELAIDE BYRD

A Brambleberry Centerpiece

HERE is one-third of a large centerpiece for your table, and I am glad to suggest that there is quite a little space in the center for a bowl of flowers or a fern dish, with no possibility of covering up some previous work.

I advise heavy linen for this work, with a medium-weight embroidery cotton. The inner ring that winds into the stem of the design you will do in stem stitch, while the larger central ring that resembles the outer edge, you will do well to work with buttonhole stitch, the purling on the lower edge.

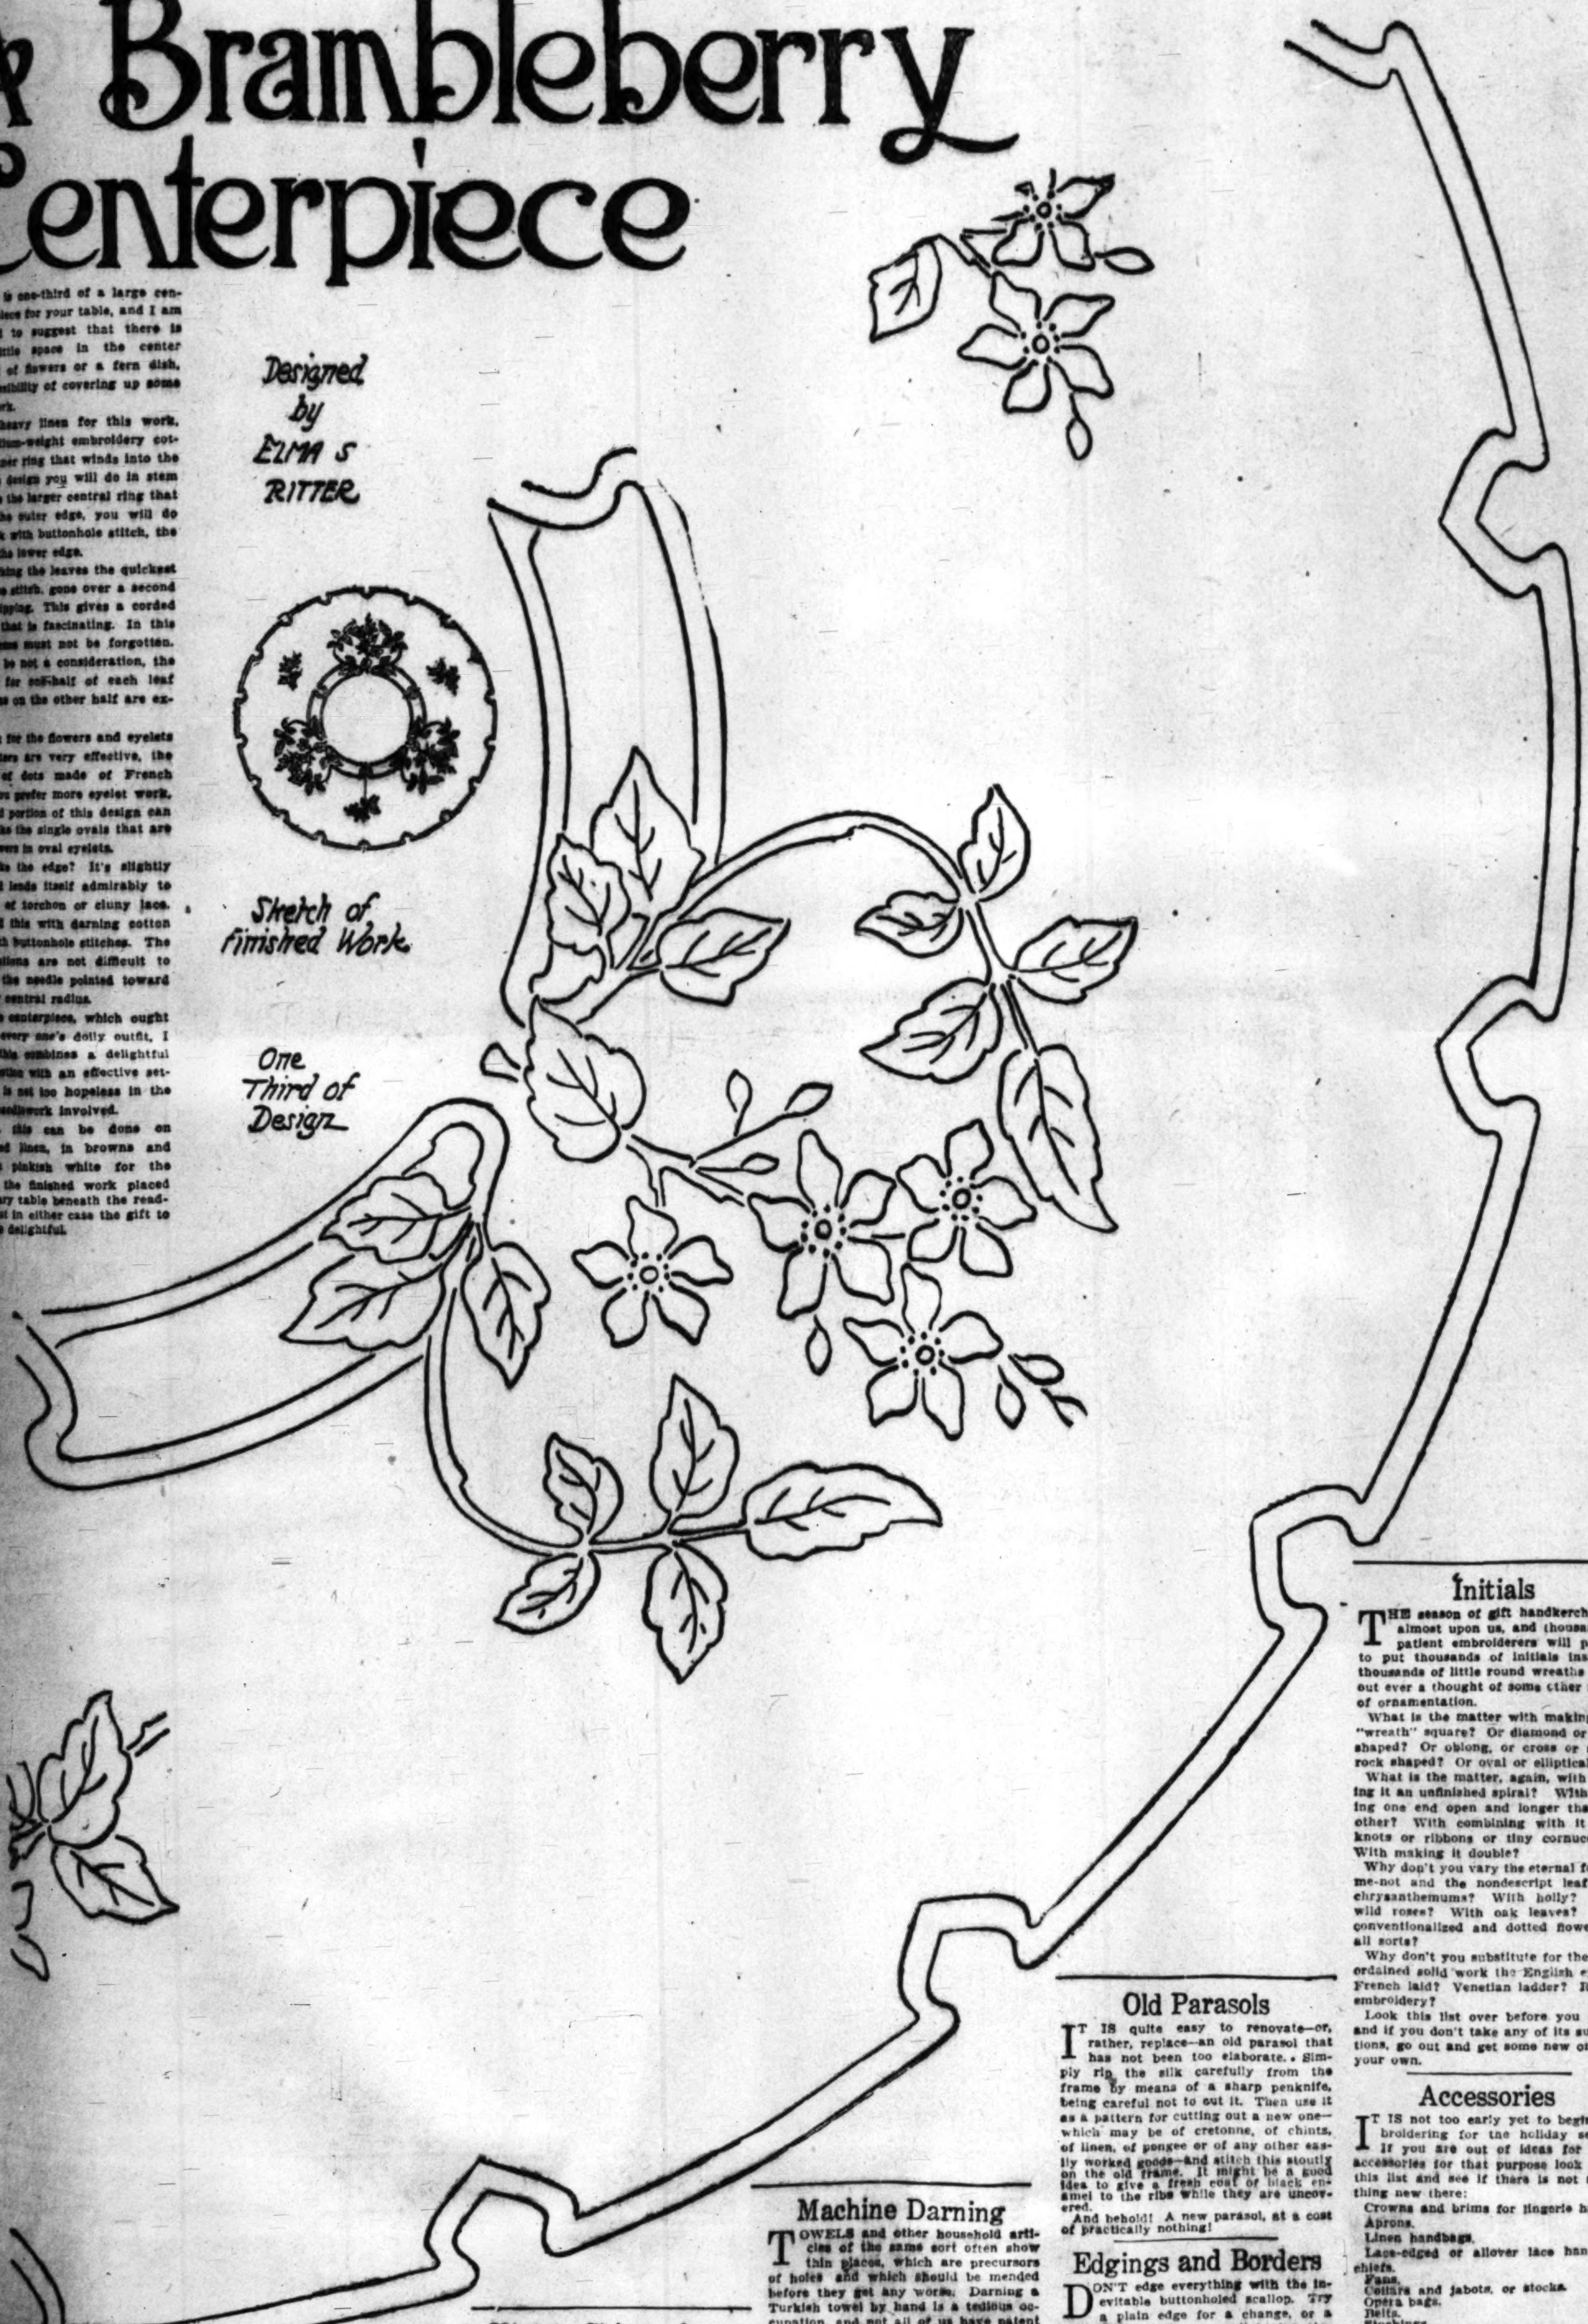
When working the leaves the quickest is the outline stitch, gone over a second time by whipping. This gives a corded appearance that is fascinating. In this case the stems must not be forgotten. But if time be not a consideration, the solid stitch for one-half of each leaf and the veins on the other half are excellent.

Solid work for the flowers and eyelets for the centers are very effective, the tiny rings of dots made of French knots. If you prefer more eyelet work, and the solid portion of this design can stand it, make the single ovals that are near the flowers in oval eyelets.

Do you like the edge? It's slightly different and lends itself admirably to the addition of torchon or cluny lace. You will pad this with darning cotton and work with buttonhole stitches. The little indentations are not difficult to work. Keep the needle pointed toward an imaginary central radius.

For a large centerpiece, which ought to figure in every one's doily outfit, I think that this combines a delightful flower suggestion with an effective setting, and it is not too hopeless in the amount of needlework involved.

Of course, this can be done on natural-colored linen, in browns and greens, with pinkish white for the flowers, and the finished work placed upon the library table beneath the reading lamp. But in either case the gift to my relative is delightful.



Sofa Pillows

THE sofa pillow, for gift or personal use, is always with the industrious needlewoman. It need not always be embroidered, however; it can also be stenciled or drawn.

Embroidered, it may range from the lingerie pillow to the knockabout college one. This has on it the seal or emblem of the owner's college or school.

The lingerie pillow, at the other extreme, is of sheer white goods over silk, and is embroidered in fine flower patterns, sometimes with lace insertions.

All sorts of flower patterns are common for colored embroidery on sofa pillows. Some designs not quite so usual are peacock feathers in the natural colors, dragons, butterflies, bamboo shoots and basket weave and arts and crafts patterns.

Among new stitches adapted to this kind of work may be mentioned lazy-dazy, broderie villette, hemstitching, Biedermeier and Richelieu.

Then there are ribbon work, plain and German applique, braiding and shadow work.

Edges may be plain or may be corded, ruffled, laced with ribbon or leather, beaded or trimmed with lace.

As to materials, there is space to mention only silk, burlap, linen, canvas, sacking, gingham and leather.

Stitching may be done in silk, vegetable floss, raffia or mercerized or plain cotton. As said before, baby ribbon may also be used to form patterns.

Then there is always the plain cushion, of some substantial material, unornamented, and used for hammock and porch chairs.

Whenever possible, have your pillow slip washable. If the pillow is a gift, the recipient will thank you doubly for this care later.

If the pillow is washable, stitch one side lightly, so that it can be easily ripped and sewed up again after laundering. If there is a pillow edge, such as cording, take account of that, too, in stitching this side.

The best filling for sofa pillows is feathers. A feather pillow of the correct sofa-pillow size may be purchased for $2 or $3, or a little less if the feathers are of second grade.

Among other fillers may be mentioned pine needles, grass, clover leaves, cotton batting, newspapers and cotton waste, which can often be obtained at a weaving mill.

In size the pillow may range from the big, heavy settle-back or morris-chair seat to the tiny baby pillow or head rest. A graduated set of plain pillows, neat and washable, makes the finest of Christmas presents — for Christmas is not so far off, after all.

I have not yet spoken of the many pillow tops stamped in various designs, mottoes, pictures, etc., and to be worked in outline stitch. Sometimes these have colored designs, the stitching to be of the same shade. Or narrow silk cord may be used instead.

As to colors, try to harmonize. Do not give a lilac pillow to your friend when you know her drawing room is finished in salmon, or put a cherry pillow on your own sky-blue sofa. If you are afraid of clashing colors, stick to neutral shades, such as tan, gray, white and the darker tones of green and blue.

Denim Catch-All

THOSE of us who board or live in flats—and those of us who don't, for that matter—know how important is the condensing of space. Anything that will economize space where there is too little of it in any case is doubly welcome.

It is for this purpose that a clever flat-dweller has designed the denim catch-all, consisting of thirteen bags in one, and which can be conveniently hung behind a closet door, well out of the way. The completed bag is in seven layers of strong but not too thick denim, every pocket being stoutly bound with white tape. The backing is in envelope shape, 16 inches wide, 22 inches from the point of the flap to the bottom and 15 inches from the bottom of the flap to the same point.

Another piece the same size is stitched with this on three sides, thus forming a receptacle large enough for soiled clothes. The next layer reaches only to the bottom of the flap, and is stitched in two by a vertical line down the middle. Each of the four other layers is about three inches shorter than the last, dividing, in all, by stitching to the layer in back into thirteen bags, the bottom row small enough to hold clean handkerchiefs or stockings.

Brass rings to hang the bag up complete this useful article, which can be employed to hold everything from shoes to whiskbroom.

Paints and Dyeing

IF YOUR dress accessories do not quite match your gown, or you wish that gown itself a slightly different shade, try painting with oil colors and gasoline. The effect is marvelous and the slight odor soon goes off. Kid slippers can thus be made to match exactly any costume.

A spot on linen can be painted with watercolors to match the clean material, as the paint sinks into the linen without changing its texture. It rubs off, however, and must be renewed every five or six months.

Church Embroidery

I HAVE been asked sometimes what can be embroidered for ecclesiastical use besides the conventional altar cloth. Among the articles that may be thus embroidered and presented are palls, chalice veils, corporals, paten veils, surplices, stoles, Bible markers, purificators, credences and table covers. You of course know which of these are in use in your own church.

Embroidery of this sort should be heavy, and special colors are often necessary.

Initials

THE season of gift handkerchiefs is almost upon us, and thousands of patient embroiderers will proceed to put thousands of initials inside of thousands of little round wreaths without ever a thought of some other means of ornamentation.

What is the matter with making that "wreath" square? Or diamond or heart shaped? Or oblong, or cross or shamrock shaped? Or oval or elliptical?

What is the matter, again, with making it an unfinished spiral? With leaving one end open and longer than the other? With combining with it bowknots or ribbons or tiny cornucopias? With making it double?

Why don't you vary the eternal forget-me-not and the nondescript leaf with chrysanthemums? With holly? With wild roses? With oak leaves? With conventionalized and dotted flowers of all sorts?

Why don't you substitute for the foreordained solid work the English eyelet? French laid? Venetian ladder? Ribbon embroidery?

Look this list over before you start; and if you don't take any of its suggestions, go out and get some new ones of your own.

Accessories

IT IS not too early yet to begin embroidering for the holiday season. If you are out of ideas for dress accessories for that purpose look down this list and see if there is not something new there:

Crowns and brims for lingerie hats.
Aprons.
Linen handbags.
Lace-edged or allover lace handkerchiefs.
Fans.
Collars and jabots, or stocks.
Opera bags.
Belts.
Stockings.
Lingerie and shirtwaists.
Card cases.
Handkerchiefs and laundry bags; also workbags.
Gloves.

These may be worked in shadow, French eyelet, solid, etc. Patterns for their making can be purchased in almost any known flower or can be drawn by the clever worker. All of them make most acceptable gifts.

Old Parasols

IT IS quite easy to renovate—or, rather, replace—an old parasol that has not been too elaborate. Simply rip the silk carefully from the frame by means of a sharp penknife, being careful not to cut it. Then use it as a pattern for cutting out a new one—which may be of cretonne, of chintz, of linen, of pongee or of any other easily worked goods—and stitch this stoutly on the old frame. It might be a good idea to give a fresh coat of black enamel to the ribs while they are uncovered.

And behold! A new parasol, at a cost of practically nothing!

Edgings and Borders

DON'T edge everything with the inevitable buttonholed scallop. Try a plain edge for a change, or a wall-of-troy design, or a lightning zigzag. Then there are the scroll, the double and triple scallop, the paneled flouncing, the scalloped scroll. Then come the vertical and horizontal spirals and the two combined.

The lily border is another variation; also the wreath, basket weave and intertwined edges; the dotted, the bowknot, the eyelet, the featherstitch.

Here, then, is plenty of variety; make use of it.

Machine Darning

TOWELS and other household articles of the same sort often show thin places, which are precursors of holes and which should be mended before they get any worse. Darning a Turkish towel by hand is a tedious occupation, and not all of us have patent darners on our sewing machines. Here is one woman's way out of the dilemma:

She removes the presser foot of her machine and darns the place by moving the towel backward and forward, holding it smooth by means of a small embroidery hoop. Of course, holding it with fingers will do just as well. This is a plan which will work also with other household fabrics, and is certainly a darn in time that saves nine.

Hint to Skirtmakers

IF YOU are making or altering a skirt, remember the advice from Paris that the shackled skirt is going out. The new skirts are fuller than before, and are free at the hem.

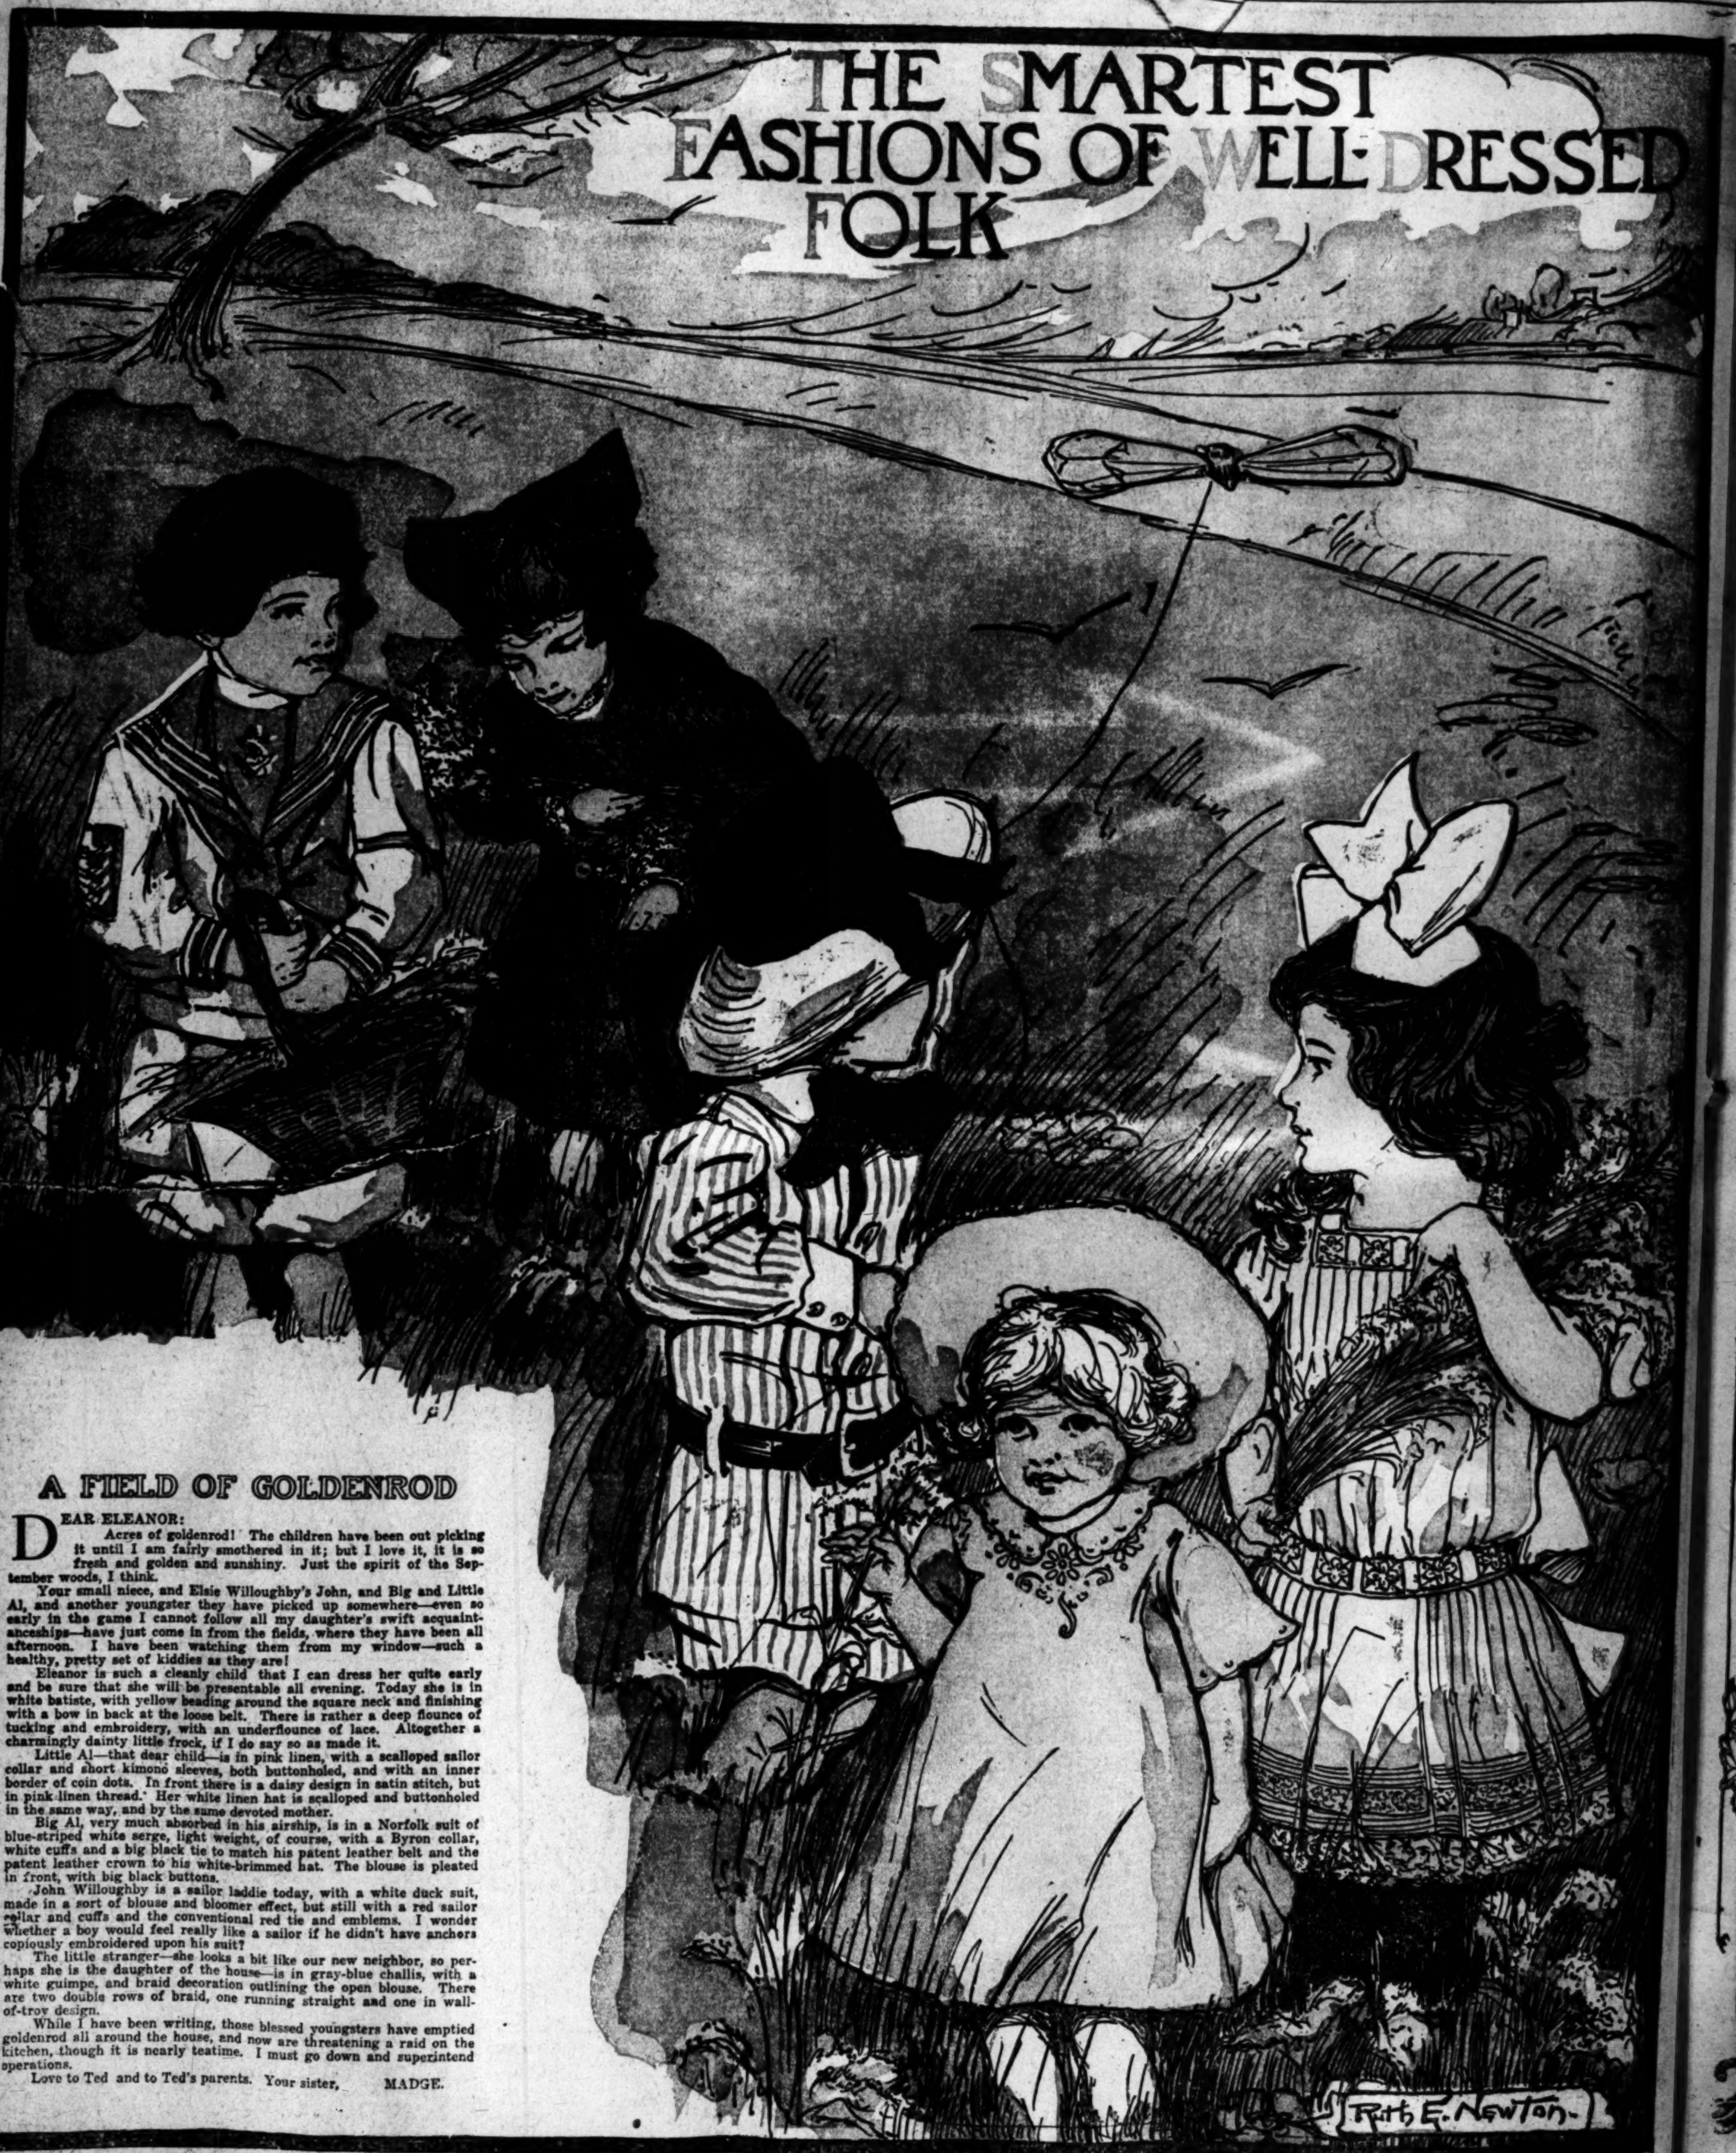
They have, besides, narrow flounces of wide lace, quilling, tucks, puffs and cordings.

For Drawstrings

[illegible] from pulling [illegible] always an an- [illegible] occurs just [illegible] to each end of the tape a brass embroidery ring slightly larger than the opening in the casing, sewing it on after the tape has been inserted. Buttonhole over the ring in the color of the tape.

Use this method and your drawstring will never slip.

THE SMARTEST FASHIONS OF WELL-DRESSED FOLK



A FIELD OF GOLDENROD

DEAR ELEANOR:

Acres of goldenrod! The children have been out picking it until I am fairly smothered in it; but I love it, it is so fresh and golden and sunshiny. Just the spirit of the September woods, I think.

Your small niece, and Elsie Willoughby's John, and Big and Little Al, and another youngster they have picked up somewhere—even so early in the game I cannot follow all my daughter's swift acquaintanceships—have just come in from the fields, where they have been all afternoon. I have been watching them from my window—such a healthy, pretty set of kiddies as they are!

Eleanor is such a cleanly child that I can dress her quite early and be sure that she will be presentable all evening. Today she is in white batiste, with yellow beading around the square neck and finishing with a bow in back at the loose belt. There is rather a deep flounce of tucking and embroidery, with an underflounce of lace. Altogether a charmingly dainty little frock, if I do say so as made it.

Little Al—that dear child—is in pink linen, with a scalloped sailor collar and short kimono sleeves, both buttonholed, and with an inner border of coin dots. In front there is a daisy design in satin stitch, but in pink linen thread. Her white linen hat is scalloped and buttonholed in the same way, and by the same devoted mother.

Big Al, very much absorbed in his airship, is in a Norfolk suit of blue-striped white serge, light weight, of course, with a Byron collar, white cuffs and a big black tie to match his patent leather belt and the patent leather crown to his white-brimmed hat. The blouse is pleated in front, with big black buttons.

John Willoughby is a sailor laddie today, with a white duck suit, made in a sort of blouse and bloomer effect, but still with a red sailor collar and cuffs and the conventional red tie and emblems. I wonder whether a boy would feel really like a sailor if he didn't have anchors copiously embroidered upon his suit?

The little stranger—she looks a bit like our new neighbor, so perhaps she is the daughter of the house—is in gray-blue challis, with a white guimpe, and braid decoration outlining the open blouse. There are two double rows of braid, one running straight and one in wall-of-troy design.

While I have been writing, those blessed youngsters have emptied goldenrod all around the house, and now are threatening a raid on the kitchen, though it is nearly teatime. I must go down and superintend operations.

Love to Ted and to Ted's parents. Your sister, MADGE.

"COLUMN FORWARD."

MEN can utilize the tides of ocean and cause them to grind corn and fill storage batteries, but they cannot control the times of their incoming and outgoing. The command of King Canute to the waves: "Thus far shalt thou go and no further," was obeyed, greatly to the awe of his inland subjects, and the upbuilding of his authority over them, because the cunning monarch when he issued his ipse dixit drew his scepter along the sands at high-water mark. Any old fisherman could have built up a reputation as a wave commander in the same way.

The philosophy inculcated by the fable concerning King Canute finds illustration in these later days in many ways. The almanac tells the fisherman when the sea will advance and when it will recede, so that he need not dig for clams when the tide is high, or try to catch flounders or sand dabs when it is low. The foam-crested surf will give a swift and exhilarating voyage to those boat riders who paddle upon the leaping waters when the tide is coming in, but it will give a jolly good ducking to the obstinate tourists who attempt to oppose its course. Terrapin and dry Mumm at the Waldorf Astoria reward those sagacious Wall-street operators who watch the course of the market and go with it, while those who buck against it are usually obliged to content themselves with hash and Croton water at an Ann-street restaurant.

Los Angeles has had her tides. The first flood tide was a little one. It came thirty-eight years ago, when somebody was "going to build" a railroad to Independence. It was a tide laboriously pushed forward by promises made by an Ananias and Sapphira syndicate. The cheerful liars who backed it, obtained franchises and rights of way and depot grounds and stock subscriptions by their promises.

Yet this premature boom was not without its uses. It waked up the inhabitants of Sleepy Hollow. It made the cattle ranchers believe that there was something more of value to a bull than his hide and tallow and roar. It made them concede that a cow might be milked without lassoing and throwing her, and then employing the services of four men—one to hold her hind legs apart, two to sit upon her and one to milk her. It turned the attention of far-sighted men to the possibilities of a great commercial city being developed here. It was a sort of John the Baptist to the real boom which came years later. After the first boom died and its corpse had been interred amid the cordial curses of the mourners, the town went back to bed and snored for a few years.

Then the tide turned again. In a few years it changed a town of 12,000 people into a city of 50,000, then 100,000, then 200,000, now 300,000, who are pushing forward to the half-million mark. Everybody who invested in real estate during the nap of Los Angeles, and who held on, made what the ungodly habitues of the poolroom call a "hundred-to-one shot."

A fifty-foot front lot on Spring street, which was offered in 1884 for $1500 sold recently for $150,000. Electric lights and tramways, three railroads to San Francisco, three overland roads, one road to San Diego and the Mexican line were constructed. Paved streets, concrete sidewalks, public buildings, great business blocks and thousands of palatial homes and pretty homes came with the boom, and seaside cities were built all the way from Santa Monica to Long Beach and beyond.

The boom brought banks which actually had money in them, money that could be borrowed by other people than their directors. It changed cattle ranches into suburban towns. It stuffed bank notes and gold into the butternut breeches of old settlers, who had held on to their land, because they had never before been able to find either a purchaser or a mortgage. It caused reservoirs and flumes to be built and vineyards and orchards to be planted. It developed manufacturing and mining and commercial enterprises, and Los Angeleños walked along snuffing the stars and pitying the people of all other cities.

The years of worry have become only a memory, and years of even greater plenty are coming. They are coming in trains alive with eager emigrants. They are coming in the mail bags freighted with queries. They show in the growing bank balances and in the busy streets. Old projects are being revived. Land values are continuing to advance. The trumpet which shall never sound a retreat is at the lips of Progress.

What has Los Angeles to offer to the newcomer? She has her original stock of sunny days, of starlit nights, of winter roses, of orange blossoms, and of life-giving ozone perfumed with the breath of the sweet salt sea. The fabled fountain of Ponce de Leon promised no more of life to those who drank of its waters than can be obtained in this city. Climate is as saleable as wheat or beef, but it cannot be bottled or boxed or tied up in a bundle and carried away. Only "Johnny on the spot" can get the benefit of it, and Johnny knows it, and he is coming with his sisters and his cousins and his aunts, to see it, and smell it, and drink it, and bathe in its delights.

The climate extends upward as far as an aëroplane can mount, and westward to the sea, but the land which it covers and embraces, the land on which one must live to enjoy the climate is limited in area, and the limit can never be enlarged. As the United States grow in wealth and population the number of people able to buy or build homes in the country that dwells under the smile of God, will increase yearly, but the quantity of land will never increase, and, as a consequence, town lots and farms will yearly grow in value as surely as a painting by Rubens or a Stradivarius violin, the value of which is enhanced by the fact that both Rubens and Stradivarius are thoroughly dead and their astrals can neither paint nor sing in this sphere.

The commercial growth and greatness of Los Angeles does not altogether depend upon sale of climate or building of homes. There are other factors such as the Panama Canal and the Owens River aqueduct. From San Pedro Harbor to Panama, thence through the Gulf of Mexico and up the Mississippi River to New Orleans, great freight steamers will sail to New Orleans in two weeks. These steamers will carry the citrus crop of Southern California to the Gulf and Middle West States, and bring return cargoes of merchandise and of Central American hardwoods to Los Angeles. Refrigerator cars, and side tracking, and car famines, and discriminating between shippers and playing hell generally with the solvency of the owners of orange and lemon orchards, are now things of the past. Los Angeles will be the shipping point, and New Orleans the distributing point for the golden fruit of this new Hesperides; for travel gravitates to the cheapest lines of transportation, and what orange grower will pay a dollar per hundred pounds to have his crop carried to New Orleans in eight days with the chance of its freezing en route, when the fruit can be transported in fourteen days by steamer for 50 cents per hundred pounds, with no chance of freezing?

And then the Owens River aqueduct. Pure mountain water enough for a city of a million people and for a hundred thousand acres of orchards, with 90,000-horse power of electrical energy with which to run hundreds of factories, and never a whiff of coal or coal-oil smoke to darken or "ensmell" the air.

Thrice blessed city of Los Angeles! There is none other like you, and you can never have a rival. Knockers to the rear—boosters to the front—column forward!

The Strangers

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

For he said: "I have been a stranger in a strange land.—[Exodus ii, 22.

All day the human current beats;
  Men hurry up and down,
Cross and recross familiar streets
  In their familiar town.
A thousand men go on this way
  And pass a thousand more,
Yet none will know another day
  He saw these men before.
(And over the mountain and over the sea
A-many and many strange lands there be.)

Men walk; they wait, they sail, and ride
  Together everywhere;
They stand unknowing side by side,
  Together on they fare;
Each day they meet and pass the same,
  Each ignorant of each,
And no man knows another's name
  Or hears another's speech.
(Yet over the mountains and seas afar
A-many and many strange lands there are.)

And none of all these understands
  He has no need to roam;
That strangest of all stranger lands
  Is this that he calls home—
Is this where go a thousand men
  And meet a thousand more,
And know not when they meet again
  That they have met before.
(But over the seas and the mountains high
A-many and many strange lands there lie.)

Penny-in-the-Slot Street Lights.

Why should sober-minded citizens who are in their homes and safe in bed by 10 o'clock at night pay lighting taxes for others who, being of a jovial turn of mind, prefer to stay in cafés, clubs, or bars until midnight and do not return home until the early hours of the morning?

Manifestly it is unfair, but in Germany this question has now been answered in a way which will please the earnest taxpayers, and probably prove a terror to the late night birds. To the village of Zarkau, near Glogau, in Silesia, must be given the honor of installing a system of automatic electric lighting for the streets. The electric lights burn every night from the outskirts of Glogau through the village of Zarkau, a distance of about a kilometer, until 10 o'clock at a mutual cost to the community in general. Then they are switched out.

At each end of this kilometer stretch, on an iron pillar, stands a small iron cupboard lighted by a tiny electric light. Those persons who are out after 10 o'clock wishing to have their way lighted must insert a ten-pfennig piece into a slot in the side of the iron cupboard. Then the lamps placed along this stretch burst forth into a twelve-minute life, thus enabling the passenger to find his way in lightness to his or her house.

The scheme is working in a satisfactory way, and it seems quite probable that other German villages and towns will follow the example of Zarkau and install the automatic-lighting system to be put into operation after 10 o'clock.—[Pall Mall Gazette.

The Secret.

I built myself an icy citadel
When, from the heavens like brass, the pitiless sun
Poured down its rays, and shelter there was none,
Nor breeze, nor flowing stream, nor bubbling well—
And there I sat in cool, green depths of peace,
And you, who languish for a like release,
Shall know whence came the ice wherewith I wrought:
It came from out the glaciers of my thought.

I built myself a citadel of flowers,
When all the world seemed gray, and cold, and dead,
Bereft of all its hope-engendering powers,
Its very faith in resurrection fled—
And there I sat in rosy, scented joy,
And you, who languish for a like employ,
Shall know whence came the blooms wherewith wrought:
They came from out the gardens of my thought.

The Khedive of Egypt. By Frank G. Carpenter.

INTERVIEWED.

MR. CARPENTER HAS A TALK WITH HIS HIGHNESS.

From Our Own Correspondent.

CAIRO.—I have just had an audience with His Royal Highness, the Khedive of Egypt. The meeting was arranged by the diplomatic agent of the United States, and it took some time to bring it about. The Khedive is the Mohammedan ruler of these 10,000,000 Egyptians, and the many tribes of the Soudan bow down to him as their chief. Although the country is really ruled by the English, the Khedive holds the place of king in the minds of the people. He lives in great state and appreciates the dignity of his position. It was only through letters of introduction which I have from Washington that I was able to enter his presence. My appointment came from the grand master of ceremonies of the Abdine Palace. The letter was written in French, and it informed me that His Royal Highness would receive me Tuesday afternoon.

When I arrived at the palace I found a regiment of soldiers drilling in front of it and a company of fierce-looking Arabs on guard at the door. These men presented arms as I entered. I first came into a hall where other dark-faced guards in full uniforms stood, and I passed between these to the foot of the grand staircase, where one of the Cabinet ministers met me. With him I walked up to the second floor of the palace, and was taken into a great parlor where I waited until the exact moment for my interview came.

As I looked about this room, I recognized it as the audience chamber in which the father of this Khedive, Tewfik Pasha, had received me when he was ruler of the country now more than twenty-one years ago. At that time I had a most remarkable interview with him, and as I looked about me the man and his words came to my mind. The room is the same as it was then, all of the furniture being European notwithstanding Egypt is a land of the Orient. The sofas and chairs are of carved woodwork painted white and plated with gold. They are upholstered in white brocaded satin, decorated with flowers and the carpet of European make is woven in one piece. At one end of the room is a great brocaded sofa, as wide as a Turkish divan. It was upon that sofa that His Highness Tewfik sat as he chatted with me about himself and his country. He spoke English well, and talked freely about the then condition of Egypt and its future. He was not averse to speaking of religion and his Mohammedan subjects, and he spoke a little concerning himself.

Tewfik Versus Abbas.

Since then, great changes have taken place in Egypt. The present Khedive's father was always afraid of assassination, and when he suddenly died it was supposed that he was carried off by poison. I asked him how he liked the life of a Khedive. He replied:

"I don't like it. I am told that many people envy me and think that my lot must be a pleasant one. They do not understand the troubles that surround me. I have seen many a time when I should have been glad to have laid down all the honors I have for rest and peace. My ten years of reign have been equal to forty years of worry, and if life were a matter of pleasure I would be a fool to remain on the throne. I believe, however, that God put man into the world for a purpose other than pleasure. It is duty that is man's chief end. I am trying to do what I can for my country and people, and I am happiest when I am [illegible] the hardest!"

These words were uttered after the English [illegible] hold of the Egyptian situation. As you will [illegible] they came in at the end of Araba Pasha's [illegible] after they had put down the revolution of the [illegible] Tewfik was ground between the upper and [illegible] stones of the rebels and the English, and his [illegible] never one of roses.

It is different with the present Khedive. [illegible] practically nothing to do with the actual [illegible] and the English relieve him from most of the [illegible] of the ordinary ruler.

Mohammedan Rulers.

Both Tewfik and Abbas have upheld the [illegible] of Mohammedanism. During my talk with [illegible]

Monsieur l'Agent Diplomatique,

J'ai l'honneur de vous informer que Son Altesse le Khédive aura le plaisir de vous recevoir demain jeudi à 2 h. 45 de l'après-midi, au palais d'Abdine pour lui présenter Monsieur F. G. Carpenter.

Veuillez agréer, Monsieur l'Agent Diplomatique, l'expression de ma haute considération cigarettes were brought in and I was offered [illegible] Observing that His Highness did not take [illegible] I refused, and a moment later I asked the [illegible] he did not smoke. He replied that he neither [illegible] nor drank, and that he did not drink because [illegible] against the laws of life as laid down in the [illegible] understand that the present Khedive never [illegible] bacco or intoxicating liquors, and that he is [illegible] good a Mussulman as was his father. He has [illegible] gained great favor with his subjects, not only in [illegible] but in the Soudan, by making a pilgrimage to [illegible] and the fact that he has increased the size of his [illegible] will probably be another point in his favor.

Monsieur Iddings,

As to Tewfik Pasha, he told me that he could [illegible] the Koran backward from beginning to end. He [illegible] the whole book by heart, and could commence at [illegible] place and recite back and forth. He said [illegible] thought every man should be faithful to the [illegible] his fathers, and that he was in favor of religious [illegible] ation. He went to mosque regularly, and [illegible] pushing of the Mohammedan religion. Abbas is [illegible] regular in his mosque attendance, but I doubt [illegible] he is doing anything outside that and his [illegible]

The Khedive of 1910.

As I was thinking of these things a stately [illegible] dark clothes and red fez cap entered and told [illegible] Highness was ready to see me. He then led me [illegible] the room and across the hall into another parlor, [illegible] was equally large. As we entered, a straight, [illegible] young man, with a fair face and blond mustache [illegible] forward and offered me his hand. It was the [illegible] Khedive, whom I had met when I was in Egypt [illegible] years ago. He greeted me with a welcome [illegible] Egypt, saying that he considered it a compliment [illegible] his country that the Americans who come [illegible] returned. His Highness led the way to a sofa [illegible] window, and motioned me to a chair at his side. [illegible] he sat down himself he put one foot under him [illegible] sat upon that. I remembered that his father had [illegible] the same way. The Khedive maintained this [illegible] during the half-hour of our audience.

As we talked I had an excellent opportunity [illegible] the man. His Highness is about five feet eight [illegible] and he weighs perhaps 170 pounds. He is as [illegible] as an arrow, and the red fez cap which he [illegible] wears makes him look taller.

Many Americans think all of the people of the [illegible] of the world have dark complexions. That of the [illegible] dive is fair, and his bronze cheeks are rosy. [illegible] today a black frock suit, a fashionable [illegible] with the exception of his fez, his costume would not have been out of place in any American club. Our conversation was carried on in English, which His Highness speaks with a slight German accent, probably from the German professors who taught him that language. He was, you know, educated in Vienna, and it is said that he speaks French, German, English, Turkish and Arabic with great fluency, while he is conversant with several other languages.

A Talk About Farming.

Before going to the palace I had been warned that His Highness would not discuss politics, and I therefore turned the conversation to farming. The Khedive is one of the largest farmers of the Nile Valley. He has stock ranches, cotton plantations and grain fields galore. He is a successful developer of real-estate propositions. He takes up cheap lands, and by means of irrigation and drainage makes them double and treble in value. He says that drainage is quite as important for Egypt as irrigation, and that there are vast territories here which proper drainage might bring into use. This is so of some lakes near Alexandria. There is just as much danger from an over-supply as from an undersupply of the Nile waters. The floods contain a certain amount of salts of one kind or another, which are injurious to the crops if the water lies too long upon the land, and this has to be remedied.

During my talk with His Highness I asked him as to his farming and whether he really gave it his personal attention. He replied that he did so, and that he was in telephonic connection with each of his estates and received daily reports from all of them.

We talked of the fertilization of the Nile Valley. The Khedive said that the land was exceedingly rich, but that it could be improved by adding phosphates and other artificial manures. He told me that farming was improving throughout Egypt, and that the agricultural department is teaching the people the value of good seed and of intensive cultivation.

I asked him what would be the effect of the raising of the dam at Assouan. He answered that it would double the quantity of water that is now being held back, and that it would add millions of acres to cultivated Egypt. He says that the government has other schemes under way which will materially increase the farming possibilities of his country.

The Khedive's Big Farms.

During his conversation His Highness spoke at length as to some of his farms, suggesting that I might find it interesting to visit them. He has redeemed over 2000 acres not far from Cairo. The land was poor and swampy, and some of it was desert. His Highness drained and irrigated it, and it now brings in an enormous revenue.

He has another big farm near Alexandria and another at Koubbeh. The latter estate is a model plantation of 300 acres. It is equipped with the most scientific machinery and implements, and its buildings comprise a model village, with which is connected a school club, a mosque and an up-to-date fire station. The Khedive has breeding establishments there, and he imports the finest cattle and poultry. He is noted as a horse lover, and has recently inaugurated a company to improve the blood of the Egyptian horse. His position is such that he can get the finest of the Arabian sires, and the best pure-blooded stallions from Nejid Arabia are sent to him by the Bedouin sheiks. He is also interested in camel and mule breeding, and he has some of the swiftest of dromedaries. Some of his camels can travel seventy-five miles a day, and are worth as much as the finest horse. His Highness exhibits at many of the agricultural shows, and is often among the prize winners there.

His Daily Life.

During our talk I asked the Khedive as to his daily life. He replied that he had all he could do from daylight to dark, but that he believed in hard work and thrived upon it. In addition to his official duties, which are many, he has the management of his own estates and various enterprises. He said that many of his days from 9 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock at night were taken up at the palace.

From other sources I learned that the Khedive is almost as strenuous as Theodore Roosevelt. He rises at 5 o'clock in the morning, and, after dressing and attending prayers at a mosque, he takes a long drive in a carriage or motor car through one of his farms. Sometimes he goes on parade and attends a review of troops. He is usually back for breakfast at 7:30, or rather for his cup of coffee, for he takes little else. After this he looks over his official papers until noon, when he has lunch, or breakfast, as it is called here. After breakfast he chats with his visitors and gives receptions of one kind or another, and then reads or works away until sunset, when he again goes to his farms. At 7 or 8 o'clock he is back in the palace for dinner, and his evenings are spent with his family.

The Khedive is a sportsman. He rides well and shoots straight, and, like our own strenuous ex-President, can wear out almost any man of his suite.

The Palaces of the Khedive.

The Khedive has a half-dozen palaces. The Abdine Palace, where I was received, is his chief official residence. It is a straggling pink-and-white building with a grand staircase, enormous rooms and gorgeous furniture. It is lighted with electric lights and carpeted with rugs mostly from Europe. The furniture is European.

The Khedive's bedroom has a marble bathroom attached, with special arrangements for shower and douche, but there is no Turkish bath, as in the homes of most oriental rulers. His study looks like a workroom. It has a big library table in the center, and His Highness has a telephone always at hand. The ballroom of this palace is large, and it is especially gay every winter on the occasion of the Khedive's annual ball, to which 1500 guests are invited. Connected with this room high up is a lattice work, through which the veiled ladies of the royal harem can peep down and watch the dancers while they listen to the strains of the band.

Another official palace is that of Ras-el-Teen, at Alexandria. This lies right on the harbor, with a beautiful outlook over the Mediterranean Sea. His favorite residence near Alexandria is at Montaza, which is within a mile of Aboukir Bay, made famous by Nelson's victory over the French fleet there about a century ago. This latter estate was reclaimed from the desert only a few years since. It has now forests of quick-growing trees and parks which have been stocked with game from Europe. The Khedive has a camel corps on the farm, and he starts out from there with Bedouin riders to make long excursions into the desert. The place lies right on the sea, and the Khedive's yacht is often seen there at anchor.

His Royal Highness has a turbine yacht which is said to be one of the finest on the Mediterranean. It was originally a two-funneled paddle steamer of about eleven knots, built forty or fifty years ago. This was sent back to Glasgow and rearranged throughout. The ship has now Parson turbines and three screws. It can make seventeen knots an hour, and has averaged seventeen and three-fourths knots for a long distance. The yacht is beautifully furnished in European stylé, and its appointments are those of a millionaire.

A Rich Ruler.

As to the wealth of the Khedive, he has, I doubt not, millions and to spare. He is a money-maker as well as a money-saver, and the English government allows him out of the revenues of the country $500,000 a year. He has single estates which will, I venture, approximate a million dollars each in actual value, and stocks and bonds in many of the best institutions of Egypt. He owns apartment-houses in Cairo, cotton plantations in the delta, and much land which would sell at auction for from $500 to $1000 per acre.

His Highness has good business judgment, and everything he touches seems to turn into money. His subjects often criticise the simplicity of his living, and say it would be better for the country if he spent, as his old grandfather Ismail did, tens of thousands of dollars a month on entertainments of one kind or other.

The Khedive was married years ago, and has five children, all by that wife. According to the Koran, he has the right to four wives and any number of concubines; and a story is current that he has increased his harem within the past few months. It is not polite to ask a Mohammedan as to the ladies of his family, and practically nothing is known of what goes on in the royal harem. The Khedive's children consist of four girls and a boy, the latter being the heir to the throne. In addition to these he has a brother, the Prince Mohammed Ali; two uncles and an aunt, all of whom are prominent features of this city of Cairo.

The Lotophagi.

Here are no traffic places where men sell,
No streets, no high-uplifted citadel,
No craggy temple, and no harbor quay,
But a fair land more level than the sea,
Where is no blemish in the fruit, nor spot
Nor autumn: in that place decay is not,
Nor among whirling woods do winds arise
To shake to discord all our songs and cries,
Nor the moon minishes, but all is far
From hail and cloud, or soft unsteady star
Of frost, or any portent in the skies.

Now we, above all other men, were wise
To make that saffron-colored fruit our stay,
And so, forgetful of our homeward way,
In the sea-scented sands we laid us low;
Our hands are numb with ease, our heartbeats slow,
Seeing the long-oared ship, the glittering sail,
And all our toil in the dark world, a tale;
Our eyelids darken down, our voices fail
As though the wind had borne them from the dead,
And our words lose their meaning, often said.

We do not fear the westering Kids, nor break
Into that long, straight road the sunsets make
Like to a brazen pillar fallen low;
Nor like a hopeful seed that new winds blow
From place to place, are carried to and fro.
On the long beach we hear the uncrested sea
Murmur, like the far humming of a bee,
The cataract falls as soft as smoke; for we Dwell in a place apart, and hidden from sight,
Like the soft, buried moon's diffused light,
Sucked back into the soul of all. We have
The sound and stir of the light-bearing wave,
Dens of divine sleep, refuges of clear
Unintermitted thoughts that feed us here,
Till they are lost and in that vision furled
That in its white ring folds the dreaming world;
For to who taste of that strange fruit, the deep
Of Time is not as water sour with brine,
But goeth ever onward like best wine
Gliding through the lips of them that are asleep.

A Question of Value.

Hogan was playing nurse to the twins on the front porch. The twins were annoyed because each wanted exclusive possession of a solitary kitten and they were yelling.

A neighbor paused at the gate. "Well, Hogan," he asked, "what would you take for them children of yourn?"

Hogan shifted in his chair. "All the money in the wurruld couldn't buy them," he declared. "But," he added, "I wouldn't give tin cints apiece for any more like thim."—[Metropolitan.

"Lak Caruso."

STRANGE ADVENTURE THAT BEFELL A NOVELIST.

By a Special Contributor.

CAMDEN strolled slowly along the sidewalk. Here carefully stepping over a small, dirty-faced bundle of humanity; there describing a circle around some none too amiable-looking cur. Verily the pedestrian in Little Italy who wishes to hurry must take to the street. But Camden was in no hurry, one seldom is, when one has no fixed place to hurry to.

"SHAVE 5c."

The stroller rubbed his chin reflectively as he regarded the above sign. He needed a shave, decidedly, but this shop had not a particularly prepossessing look; still—Camden was a novelist, which, to his friends, accounted for many things. "Everything," was his oft-repeated advice to young writers, "everything is material, and to an author, material is everything. Lose no chance to acquire it."

"Señor perhaps would be shaved?" The soft intonations roused Camden from his reverie. In the doorway of the barber shop, before which the American had unconsciously remained standing, a tall, white-jacketed Italian smiled and bowed, motioning to the empty chair within. Your Italian is usually polite and graceful. Antonio—his name was painted on the window—was both to a degree.

"Si." Camden discovered himself bowing unconsciously in return. Stepping into the shop he fixed himself comfortably in the worn plush chair.

Antonio deftly removed the collar and tie from his customer's neck, slipped a towel in their place, and began whipping his razor carefully along the leather.

"The señor ees a singer, perhaps?" asked the Italian, as he continued to work with the razor. "Lak da great Caruso?" he added.

"No, can't sing a note," answered Camden.

"Ah!" The smile Antonio bestowed upon the occupant of his chair was more amiable than ever. "But do not jump, señor," as the American jerked his head away from the razor edge, which, touching his face had left an ugly cut.

"Don't you know that you can't shave without soap?" the novelist demanded angrily. "Put some lather on my face, and be careful."

"So," ejaculated the Italian. But he made no move to prepare the lather. He did, in fact, something startlingly different. Snatching a long strap from a peg on the wall he slipped it first about the arms, then about the ankles of the American, binding him tightly to the chair. Camden struggled to free himself, and another strap was added, and laced so securely about him that it was difficult to breathe, much less to move. He glared impotently at the barber.

"Now, señor, I introduce. I am Antonio Fillipe, ze most wonderful doctor in ze world." The speaker bowed almost to the floor.

"You had better get these straps off me, or you'll be the most wonderful doctor in jail," returned Camden, though in none too firm a voice. When one is dealing with a fanatic who holds an exquisitely sharp razor, it is best not to be too harsh. Besides, Camden had never been noted especially for courage, and the situation, it must be admitted, was trying.

"No, the señor I would not hurt ze little bit. Only would I make him to sing lak ze great Caruso. But wait." The razor, in a quick movement, was laid against Camden's neck, immediately followed by a sharp pain. Large drops of blood stained the towel.

"Uh-h-h," gasped the American, then an awful horror seized him. He could not speak, his tongue flapped loosely in his mouth without effecting any sound. His teeth snapped open and shut, while the lips writhed in agony, but not the tiniest squeak resulted. Camden, though a moment before in possession of all his faculties, was now as dumb as any mute who breathed.

Antonio Fillipe watched these unsuccessful efforts on the part of his impressed subject with delight. "It ees butiful, butiful," he murmured in ecstasy.

"Now, señor, I explain ze operation to you. First, I have remove your voice. So much, good, nex' I must perform ze small cut upon ze windpipe. Such." He illustrated with one long, brown forefinger, upon his own throat. Camden closed his eyes tightly to shut out the horror. The frenzied Italian was illustrating the complete severing of the jugular vein.

Stepping to the back of the shop Antonio now poked about for a moment among a multitude of little boxes. Settling quickly upon what he wanted, he returned with a dirty china bowl, in which he mixed some peculiar light red syrup.

"It ees ze butiful voice which I make, so that ze señor may be lak ze great Caruso," he explained. "Now, ze señor will please hold very still." Antonio had again picked up his razor. He moved it slowly through the air, bringing it closer, closer, to the quivering throat of the American, then—all was pitchy black.

"Would señor lak also ze hair cut or perhaps ze shampoo," the soft, purring tones of the Italian reached Camden through what seemed a Siberia of space. He sat up with a start, and fingered his throat gingerly.

"No, not the shampoo, Antonio, but for the shave, a quarter." Getting shakily from his chair the American began to put on his collar and tie.

"Señor, he have ze butiful nap," murmured the Italian. But the comment was voiced into space; Camden had bolted.

ENOUGH TO MAKE A LINE OVER 11,000 MILES LONG.

By a Special Contributor.

ELEVEN thousand miles of American students in line this fall! Eleven thousand miles, and more, of boys and girls, young men and young women, on their way to school and college on Monday morning! Twenty million—would you believe it?—is the number to be at their desks by the third Monday of the month.

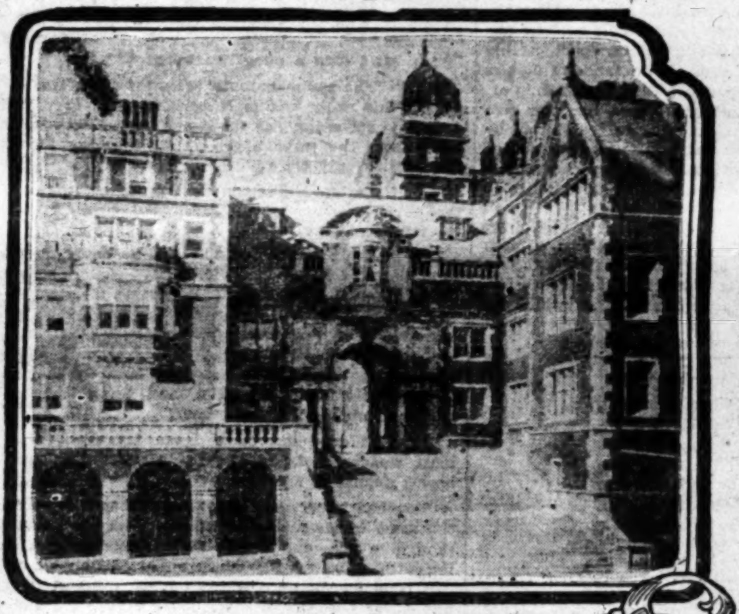
Vassar College.



Dormitories, University of Pennsylvania.

Inner "Quad," Stan

A fraternity building, Cornell.

Old Nassau Hall, Princeton.

Line them up, single line, with only a yard of step room from nose to nose, and the procession measures—to be exact—11,364 miles, which means that it would stretch all the way from the spot where Peary nailed the flag to the tip top of earth down to the interior of the antarctic continent, which Shackleton penetrated on his south-poleward journey.

Or arrange them three abreast, with this same distance between the files, and the triple line reaches across the continent from New York to San Francisco. Even then there are enough left over to stretch a single file over three-quarters of the distance.

Could Make Another Span.

All of the dinners eaten today in the whole of New England would satisfy but a third of them. Herd them all together and you have a metropolis five times as populous as New York, or a nation far bigger in numbers than that of the dons of Spain. Take only a nickel apiece from them and you are a millionaire! And yet they represent only two-thirds of the young Americans of school age who should be at their desks this year!

Divide them now into divisions, brigades, regiments. First come the pupils of the elementary schools, 18,000,000 strong, occupying nine-tenths of the entire procession. There are enough of them to found a junior republic as populous as great Brazil. And these are merely the boys and girls of the grammar and primary grades.

Only one-eighteenth as long is the line of "secondary" students—those going to the high schools and academies, but they are a million strong—sufficient to populate two Pittsburghs, two San Franciscos. And the boys and girls from the night schools come next—360,000 of them, a Clevelandful.

Arm all of the 266,000 college boys and girls in line, and you have a fighting force more than three times as strong, numerically, as the entire army of the United States, while the 155,000 business college students, ranking next, could set up a juvenile Omaha of their own. Behind them are 72,000 normal school pupils—mostly girls—who will learn the trade of bending the twig as should the tree incline. They could establish a suffragette heaven as populous as Peoria or Mobile. And you will not stand agape at their numbers when you stop to consider that half a million teachers—three-fourths of them marms—will be needed to mold the young American idea in our common schools alone.

The relative popularity of the professions we can measure by the brigades following: Twenty-six thousand student nurses, 23,000 medical students, 18,000 pupils of law schools, 10,000 theological students, 5500 would-be dentists, 5500 pupils going to schools of pharmacy."

Our 71,000 College Girls.

Our army of college girls now numbers 71,000—a force of Amazons about half again as great in numbers as the personnel of our navy. Their sex now constitutes more than a third (36 per cent.) of the entire college enrollment of the country, and the north central States contribute 40,000, whereas all the other States put together give only 31,000. Illinois has 7700 of them; Ohio, 6700; Iowa, 5000; Kansas, 5100; New York, 4400; Pennsylvania, 3700; California, 3000; Massachusetts only 600. In Kansas colleges there are five girls for every seven boys; Iowa, two girls for every three boys; Ohio, seven girls for each eleven boys. And compare with these figures those of New York, where there is only one college girl for each five college boys, and, most surprising of all, those of Massachusetts, where there are sixteen boys to every girl in college. There are eleven times as many college girls in Ohio as in Massachusetts.

About one in every fifty of our girls and one in each twenty of our boys of college age will be in college this fall.

What College Costs Today.

Out of the entire list of 464 colleges, universities and schools of technology, only eleven charge as high as $200, and only four of these as much as $250 a year for tuition. At forty of them, mostly State and theological, tuition is free to all students, this list including Leland Stanford University, in California. At the majority of them these fees are around $50 a year, while some charge as low as $16, $12 and even $5. Harvard charges $150; Yale, $155 up; Princeton, $150 to $100; Johns Hopkins, $150 to $200 for tuition alone.

The living expenses of college students vary. Thus boys going to Harvard must be prepared to spend for board, lodgings, laundry, etc., from $362 to $1039 per year; those going to Princeton, $165 to $475 per year; Pennsylvania, $365 to $565; Leland Stanford, $300 to $450, and so on. At Yale the average cost is $325, and none of these figures includes the millionaire college colonies. Tuition and living expenses, however, do not include every necessary cost at college. Additional expenses for necessary fees, books, etc., run up as high as $150 and even $250 in some cases, but are generally under $50. At Yale and Pennsylvania they average $45, and Harvard states them at "$25 up."

Expenses at Girls' Colleges.

The big girls' colleges differ quite as widely as those of their brothers in these respects. Thus at Vassar tuition is $150 and other living expenses $350, while at Smith these costs are respectively $100 and "$300 up." At Bryn Mawr, Miss Helen Taft and her college mates pay $125 to $200 a year for tuition, $100 to $200 a year for living expenses, and $10 a year for fees, books, etc., or a total of from $226 to $410 a year for all necessary expenses, not including clothes and spending money, of course. At Yale the President's son, Robert, lived according to the standards of the average student. His total necessary expenses were from $525 up, while the next young Roosevelt to go through Harvard will cost the colonel anywhere from $537 to $1400 a year for necessities.

Near 300,000 Frat Members.

Thousands of our college students live at the houses of the fraternities, of which there are now seventy-five—thirty-three composed of college boys, seventeen of college girls, eighteen of medical and seven of law students.

There are now 1083 fraternity houses in the country where students live, generally by a scheme of coöperative stewardship reducing their expenses. There are 2222 American fraternity chapters, 1756 of which are active.

Our living fraternity members total this year, over 294,000 undergraduates and alumni—a number greater than the population of Louisville or Seattle. Among these men and women is a spirit of brotherhood as binding as that of freemasonry.

The men at the tiptop of our government under the present and past administrations all owe their political temperaments to fraternity training—Taft, Sherman and Knox, Roosevelt, Fairbanks and Root; and then again Sereno Payne and Champ Clark, the leaders of the two great parties on the floor of the House; William P. Frye, the president pro tem. of the Senate, and the late Chief Justice Fuller of the Supreme Court. And among others may be mentioned William J. Bryan, Gov. Hughes, George B. Cortelyou, Joseph W. Folk, and Chauncey Depew, all master politicians.

Some Interesting Prexies.

The presidency of a big college is now rated as high an office as can be offered to a great man. While many regard it as below the dignity of Col. Roosevelt to enter the Senate, all citizens were agreed that he might become president of Harvard without lowering himself a jot from his exalted position. Jefferson became president of the University of Virginia in his later life.

Two sons of Presidents of the United States now hold presidencies in our colleges—Dr. Lyon Tyler of William and Mary, and Dr. Harry A. Garfield of Williams. Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton, is now frequently spoken of as a candidate for the Presidency of the United States, and President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard might now be Ambassador to London if he had wished to accept. Champ Clark of Missouri, who will be the next Speaker if the Democrats carry the House in this fall's election, prides himself on having been the youngest college president ever chosen in this country. He was at the head of Marshall College when only 22. The richest college president in the country is Abbott L. Lowell of Harvard, who is a millionaire.

The largest college membership in the country last year was that of Columbia, with 5887 students (all men,) and next ranked Valparaiso University with 5527 men and women; Harvard, 5109 men; Cornell, 4859 men and women, and the University of Wisconsin, 4500 men and women. The greatest college libraires in the country are Harvard, 850,278; Yale, 575,000, and Chicago, 471,000 volumes.

Our oldest college is Harvard, founded in 1636, and next rank William and Mary, 1693; Yale, 1700; Princeton, 1746; Pennsylvania, 1753; Columbia, 1754. The most ancient college in the world is Oxford, founded by King Alfred in 872.

The oldest living college graduates in America are Dr. William Rankin of Newark, N.J., who was graduated from Williams in 1831, and Mr. Addison May of West Chester, Pa., who got his sheepskin at Washington and Jefferson the same year. It has been over seventy-nine years since these centenarians turned from the doors of their alma maters to begin life, and a year later, 1832, Dr. James C. Hepburn, now living at East Orange, N. J., received his degree at Princeton. There are fourteen other living Americans who were graduated from our colleges over seventy years ago.

The oldest American woman graduate is Mrs. W. S. Curtis of Chicago, Holyoke, '39.

Slightly Homesick.

WHY ROBINSON CRUSOE FAVORS A DESERT ISLE.

By Irvin S. Cobb.

"DO you know," said Mr. Crusoe as he drew up the legs of his carefully-creased goatskin trousers to prevent their bagging at the knees, "sometimes I get to wishing I could be back there again."

"Not back on your Desert Island?" I asked in surprise.

"Surest thing you know," he said relapsing for the nonce into the vernacular. "I get plenty good and tired of things around here, believe me. This Dead Ones' Club isn't the liveliest place in the world sometimes. What with Darius Green going around knocking the Wright brothers and Rameses the Third, the one who carved his own name on his predecessors' tombs, you know—bursting into bitter tears of disappointed envy and weeping into his highball every time he hears what Teddy Roosevelt's doing next, and over in the colored department Toussaint l'Overture and Crispus Attucks quarreling over which one looks the most like Jack Johnson, and a line of veteran deceased clubmen from New York sitting on their rear collar buttons in the front windows, the same as they would be doing if they were back on Fifth avenue again, with cigars drooping all at the same angle from their mouths and having about one consecutive thought every two or three weeks—well, it's a pretty middling gloomy place for a person who's traveled as much as I have and seen as much of the world."

"But your island must have been such a lonely, lonesome place," I put in, "and there was so little happening."

"Exactly the things that make me long to be back there," said Mr. Crusoe. "After Man Friday came along and I'd got him broken into light housekeeping, thus settling the servant problem, you've no idea what a quiet, restful place that island was to a man who'd been married as long as I had and had a growing family. Think it over yourself. Haven't there been times in your experience when you longed for a spot about nine million miles from anybody else with not a sound to disturb the calm and nothing to do but engage in contemplation?"

I told him that there had been certain mornings following certain evenings when the desire for solitude in which to indulge in retrospection had been very strong within me, coupled with hiccoughs; but that almost always the world had seemed a brighter, cheerier place as the day wore on, so that along about dusk I had been able to contemplate the prospect of continued existence almost with pleasure.

"But," I went on, "I never saw the time when I could get worked up over the thought of residing alone on a lonely isle with nobody for company except goats and parrots and after awhile a colored person who didn't speak my language. Goats, it seems to me, have their drawbacks as intimate companions, especially in a warm, close, tropical climate—I'd as soon almost live in a steam-heated flat with a pet civet cat or a wife who favored French perfumery. As for parrots I have found them as a rule dull and uninteresting conversatoinalists, their remarks being mainly confined to crackers and the popular swear words of the hour. And a black-face entertainer who couldn't play the banjo or sing any of Bert Williams's songs wouldn't appeal to me, particularly if he was hanging around for months and months on a stretch. Besides there'rd be no theaters to go to and no new books to read and no modern trend of events to keep abreast of."

"I'm afraid you don't get my point of view at all," said Mr. Crusoe. "Those last you named were some of the very things I had in mind. Suppose you were away off somewhere on an undiscovered reef in an uncharted sea where nobody could make you buy a best seller written by Harold McGrath some afternoon while he had nothing particular to do or a 60,000-word novel that E. Phillips Oppenheim dashed off one morning after breakfast. Wouldn't that seem a delightful prospect indeed? Just think it over a minute. And there'd be no magazines full of stuff for red-blooded people exclusively coming to you every month with long articles muckraking the iniquities of the trust which controls the manufacture of bath tubs for down-trodden canary birds or spirited attacks on the cruel combine which by trick and device and corrupt legislation has advanced the price of rubber thumb stalls for busted thumbs to so high a point that only a rich man or the son of a rich man can afford a busted thumb any more. And no daily papers, full of what T. R. is going to do next and what Taft, following his usual custom, isn't going to do next. And no weeklies with a high mission and a low run of advertising or a low mission and a high run of advertising. And no current literature of any sort. Nothing to do when you felt the need of a little mental relaxation except to go forth upon the coral strand and swap suitable repartee with a double yellow-headed green parrot with red tail feathers and a profane turn of mind!

"Also as you very truthfully remarked just now, there were no theaters to go to on my island. And I only wish I could find another deserted island that was also off the booking route of the syndicate. You'll wish so, too, if you'll only stop to reflect for a minute. On a properly-conducted desert island you don't have to climb into your burial clothes when you come home of an evening all tired out and go to a musical show—book by nobody, lyrics by anybody, music by everybody—or to a problem play, the main problem being how in thunder do they get anybody to cough up $2 for a seat, or to a farce comedy on an idea founded by the late Charley Hoyt and foundered by everybody else who stole it. You don't have to contemplate a chorus of merry merries who quit being Mary Annes only a few minutes ago, or laugh at a comedian with a stock in trade consisting of a pair of gifted eyebrows and a line of stuff that was discarded as unsuitable for a progressive generation by the late Luke Schoolcraft the year Lee surrendered. You don't have to listen to the vocal meanderings of a young lyric tenor who comes out in a pair of white pants and stands in a strip of stage moonlight and sings, and looks like a Gates Ajar, especially if he has slightly-bowed legs, which he generally does. You don't have to do any of those things on a desert island. And you don't get the playwriting bug yourself and turn out a dramatic masterpiece which is stung to death on its first night by a lot of enormous gila monsters with blue gums and poison sacs and fourteen rattles and a button apiece, called dramatic critics. On a desert island none of these things occur. When night falls, you go to bed with the chickens or, in the absence of the chickens, go to bed without them. I never understood why a person wanted to go to bed with the chickens anyhow unless he could rest comfortably on a perch and was used to his bed-fellows having cold feet. But at any rate you go to bed.

"On a desert island if you chance to have a supply of household remedies by you, you can get a slight list to starboard on without outlet or hindrance. Should you return to your residential cave loaded to the Plimsolla and carroling merrily to the stars that you're a care-free gipsy lad, you're a Romany Rye, there is no lady wife waiting up for you to state in an acid tone of voice that while there may be some doubt about the gipsy part there is none whatever about the Rummy and the Rye, because she can plainly see one and detect and odor of the other.

"You do not get all stirred up over elections on a desert island, there being no elections. Religious controversies do not vex your soul. The cost of living remains unchanged, year in and year out. If you have been a commuter where you came from, you no longer have to take a train for town which starts so early that sometimes even the crew can't catch it. If you have been a city dweller you do not have to go home to your cosy single-breasted flat at eventide on the same street car that all the other inhabitants of your populous community are trying to ride on. You are already there, in the center of things, right where everything happens, only nothing ever happens. In order to acquire a proper finish to your education, you do not have to bo abroad and travel through moldy cathedrals that were built 500 years ago and haven't been cleaned since, or walk through 9,000,000 miles of art galleries, when what you really want is some place to sit down and rest your poor tired feet. You have no worries about rent and club dues and grocery bills. There are no regular hours to be kept. You can stay out till the cows come home, for there are no cows to come home, only goats, and goats have no home. A goat's home is where his heart is. You don't need to sit and wonder what's going to occur tomorrow or the day after or this time next week, thus freeing you from the vice of idle curiosity. In more populous communities when a man bites into a piece of mince pie and finds half a cockroach, he's liable to start speculating on what's become of the other half—whether it's still in the pie or whether he has it himself, which does him no good, because no matter which way he decides, his appetite for pie is taken away temporarily, at least, which is what I would call idle curiosity. And on a desert island, as I was just saying, there is no such thing.

"Life flows along in a smooth, unbroken spell. There are no Pichot-Ballinger rows, no Cannon-Murdock fueds, no Roosevelt-Lorimer incidents, no quarrels between Senator Aldrich and Senator——"

"Are you sure?" I asked, getting up, and reaching for my hat.

"Yes, sure," said Mr. Crusoe, "but what's your hurry?"

"You've got me going with your line of descriptions," I said; "I'm going to look for a deserted island now before all the desirable ones are taken."

Rural Wit.

"That ole hen down thar by th' hog pen," remarked the farm hand, "air one uv them suffragettes, I reckon."

"Why do you think so?" queried the summer boarder.

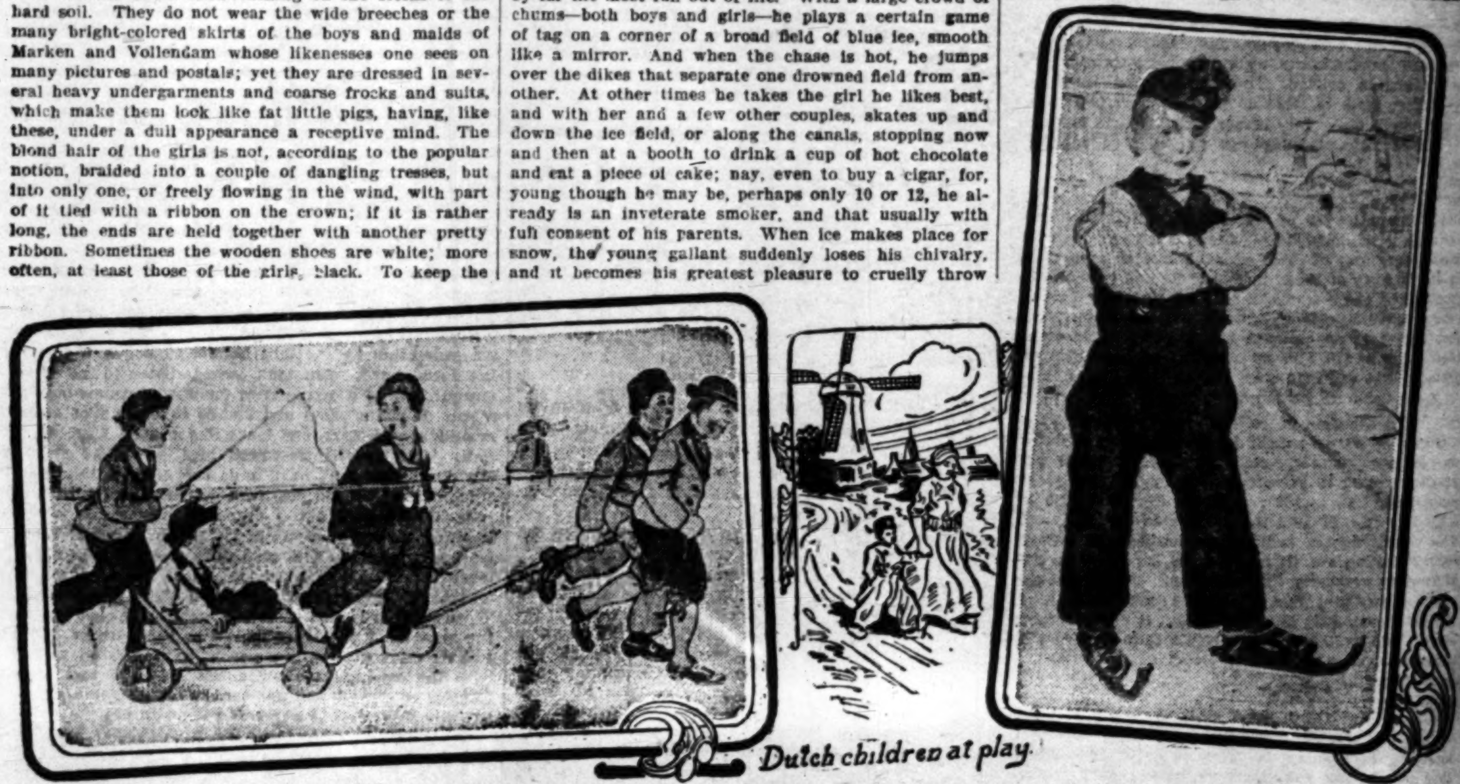
"'Cause she air learnin' t' crow, by grass!" rejoined the ruralite.—[Chicago News.

Education in Holland.

DUTCH VILLAGE CHILDREN AND THEIR TEACHER.

By a Special Contributor.

IT is a lovely July morning in Holland. One hears the melodious calling of the cuckoo flying from tree to tree, the sad cooing of the doves on the barntop, and the gleeful singing of the meadow lark and the lapwing high up in the air. Along the paved highway and in the shadow of trees, or crossing sweet-smelling meadows, walk farmers' children on their way to school, their wooden shoes click-clacking on the bricks or the hard soil. They do not wear the wide breeches or the many bright-colored skirts of the boys and maids of Marken and Vollendam whose likenesses one sees on many pictures and postals; yet they are dressed in several heavy undergarments and coarse frocks and suits, which make them look like fat little pigs, having, like these, under a dull appearance a receptive mind. The blond hair of the girls is not, according to the popular notion, braided into a couple of dangling tresses, but into only one, or freely flowing in the wind, with part of it tied with a ribbon on the crown; if it is rather long, the ends are held together with another pretty ribbon. Sometimes the wooden shoes are white; more often, at least those of the girls, black. To keep the tender toes and ankles from getting bruised, the feet are hidden in a pair of coarse woolen stockings and a still heavier pair of socks.



Dutch children at play.

In a few minutes the children have reached a number of one-storied houses covered with red or blue tiled roofs, and standing close together in rows along a couple of narrow, paved streets. In their midst arises, high above them, the thousand-year-old church and steeple, surrounded by the graveyard. Near by is the schoolhouse, and children play in its graveled grounds or in the village streets. Dutch village children lack the grace and suppleness of kittens; they, like the pigs, are good at running and romping, and not easily bruised or hurt. In the wildest games, which are several variations of "tag," boys and girls join together, and such yells and screams are then rending the quiet Dutch air! Surely, in the heat of the game, with wide-open, sometimes sparkling eyes, and with arms and legs beating the air, these children, vociferating like college boys, hardly do credit to their reputation of being phlegmatic and emotionless.

Of course they have also quiet games. They play with marbles, hazelnuts, walnut shells and buckeyes. Boys amuse themselves with hoops, kites, tops, bows and arrows and stilts, girls with jacks, rubber balls, ropes and dolls. The coaster is unknown to them, probably because of there being no hills to slide down. They have several pretty little plays at which they sing and dance in a circle or act in pantomime. Children adopt games that suit the condition and climate of the country, and each season brings along its own fun. Of most games I knew in Holland I have found in America those closely resembling them; but I do believe that the little Hollanders know and play by far the greater number.

As soon as the ice and the snow have departed, in the spring, and the water in the ditches and canals is high, covering even many a field, the time for "leaping" has arrived. Boys, and even some girls, lay across their shoulders their green, red or blue painted poles and make for a wide ditch, a canal or a farmer's moat, to vie with each other in the art of far-distance leaping. If one of them, less clever or somewhat unfortunate, "catches a fish," as they call it, the dripping boy is escorted home by his singing and fun-poking comrades, there to receive a sound spanking from an angry parent. On their tramps through the fields, jumping across the ditches from one meadow into another, they hunt for the eggs of wild ducks, larks and lapwings. Fortunately for the birds, they are seldom successful in finding many, being too deeply engrossed in the sport of leaping; and when the month of May comes, the far-reaching arm of the law makes them leave the nests of the feathered singers undisturbed.

Then there is the winter with its ice and its snow. The Netherlands are usually sparingly blessed with either. However, there may be many days when the thickness of the ice crust carries the quick step of a light youngster, and yet be too thin for a party of skaters. That is the time the child enjoys himself immensely, and the mother lives through a thousand fears. He crosses and recrosses the wide ditches, and each time the ice cracks or breaks, the danger of falling through, of slipping or of making a misstep makes the blood rush through his veins and his cheeks glow. Sometimes, when the ice is too thick to be easily broken, as is the case when after a severe frost of many days a sudden thaw has made skating impossible, then he takes an ax, and cuts the ice into squares of a few feet, and crosses the ditch in its length and width, stepping swiftly from one piece upon another. If he wavers one second, or if his wooden shoe, better suited for this game than a leather one, slips but ever so little, down he goes with the ice and slides beneath the other squares. There is where the danger comes in.

But when the ice is strong on inundated fields and broad canals, and the sun shines cold out of a clear sky, then is the time that the child, like his elders, gets by far the most fun out of life. With a large crowd of chums—both boys and girls—he plays a certain game of tag on a corner of a broad field of blue ice, smooth like a mirror. And when the chase is hot, he jumps over the dikes that separate one drowned field from another. At other times he takes the girl he likes best, and with her and a few other couples, skates up and down the ice field, or along the canals, stopping now and then at a booth to drink a cup of hot chocolate and eat a piece of cake; nay, even to buy a cigar, for, young though he may be, perhaps only 10 or 12, he already is an inveterate smoker, and that usually with full consent of his parents. When ice makes place for snow, the young gallant suddenly loses his chivalry, and it becomes his greatest pleasure to cruelly throw hard snowballs at the same little girl so recently escorted on the ice, when skating right in front of her to keep her out of the sharp wind, as is the custom. Now he throws terror into her heart, and she hides behind fences and walls to escape the icy bullets. Thanks to many a strong-willed school teacher who rules his little folk with iron hand, both in and outside the school, the boys are forbidden to use their chums' sisters and skating friends as targets. So they turn their attention to the brick chimneys above the tiled roofs. I remember when a boy of 12 threw a snowball through the chimney into the uncovered pot with porridge on the stove of a choleric woman, a disliker of children. Thereupon, she appeared in the door scolding and raging, and with a poker in her hand. She instigated her henpecked husband, who was sawing wood, to give the rascally boy a licking, and a wild chase followed through streets and gardens, over fences and through hedges, across ditches and over bridges, of a clumsy, long-legged man with a saw, and a lean little fellow on socks; for somewhere in a garden he had kicked off his wooden shoes to increase his speed, and terror gave him the wings of Mercury, so that he escaped the threatened licking.

There is little vacation for the Dutch village child; only two or three weeks in midsummer, one at Christmas, and one in the spring, and a few days during the annual fair. Vacation time is looked forward to impatiently, and because of its short duration is immensely appreciated by the child, but as a rule dreaded by the mother of a large family. Often she manages to have them spend part of that time with their grandparents or aunts and uncles, that these may enjoy their loving companionship and their mischievous pranks.

The child enters the school at the beginning of the new term following his sixth birthday, when with tears in his eyes he bids the kindergarten teacher farewell. How many happy hours has he spent in her garden! Now he enters the "big" school; life becomes serious. Should he stay away a day or part of it, just because he happens to feel like playing hookey or go with his mother to the market town, then his parents or guardians are straightway fined. Unless he be really ill, he has to be in class six days of the week, both in the fore and afternoon, except on Wednesdays and Saturdays, when he does not return after his dinner. Knowledge is not thrown in heaps and lumps into his brains; but he keeps at it steadily, and by the time he has reached the age of 12 or 13 he is fairly well up in arithmetic, has mastered most of the many tiresome rules of the Dutch grammar, knows the principal facts of his country's history by heart, and also its geography, with a smattering of that of other countries; and he has learned to sing simple songs and to read music. Usually he knows something about natural history, botany, and a little about physics. There are some studies a teacher has to teach, but if besides those he can crowd others into the curriculum, without thereby neglecting the principal ones, he may freely do so. In fact, he is given much liberty to do as he likes. Of course, there is the school commission, which corresponds with the American board of education, and there is the inspector, who makes the rounds a few times a year, and of whom he stands very much in awe. But he may choose his own text-books, readers, books for the school library, prizes and other necessaries, provided he keeps within the limit of the yearly allowance.

Village school children do not have to spend their evenings in working examples, writing compositions or studying grammar. The most they do at home is memorizing poems and historical dates.

They do not have to pay for books, pens and slate pencils, slates or paper. Everything necessary is lent or given them gratuitously by the school. This is not the case with most of the city schools. Formerly all tuition in the village schools was free, but in late years a small sum is paid by those parents who are supposed to be able to do so. No pupil's school days are ended until he has been graduated, at which time the ordinary child is about 12 or 13. If, after that, his parents want him to visit the school another year or two, he may do so until he is 16, and the teacher puts him in a class by himself. Notwithstanding the uniform education, among youths with brains of about equal lucidity, after a couple of years one has retained much more than the other. In fact, some have forgotten a great deal in a short time, and others have augmented. Unless self-improvement is kept up after school days, much early education is of comparatively little use.

One hour a day is set apart for girls to knit, sew, darn, crochet, etc. Even to this date, knitting is considered an important part of their education. They spend many hours in making stockings, underclothing, extremely heavy worsted, petticoats, and a certain kind of white cap of thin cotton yarn their mothers wear. Besides, they make in the shape of a strip of several yards a large collection of patterns of fancy knitting.

In the village schools there is a teacher for every forty pupils or fraction thereof. That is to say, for forty children one teacher is appointed; for forty-one to eighty, two are needed. As the country is thickly populated, and the villages and towns close together, very few children on the outlying farms have to walk more than half an hour to reach school. The principal is invariably a man, usually the son of a teacher, sometimes of a farmer or a tradesman. Having more learning than nearly every one of his fellow-villagers; having, perhaps, traveled more, yet having arisen from their midst, he is seldom free from pedantry and conceit, and a people with such profound respect for knowledge as the Dutch look up to him more or less, and come to him for advice in wordly and business matters. Yet he shares, and often leads, in their recreations, pleasures and social entertainments; but his wife, unless she, too, is a woman of culture and education, is not looked up to so highly by any means; nay, many well-to-do farmers' wives do not even recognize her socially. The teachers of the lower grades are mostly women.

In every good-sized town is a normal school. At the age of 14 or older, the prospective teacher is admitted, and at 18 or older, but never younger, he obtains his diploma for teacher of primary instruction and often that of teacher of calisthenics; in case of a girl, also the diploma of teacher of needlework. Or perhaps he has been fortunate enough to attend one of the few "kweekscholen," a superior normal school. Only the cleverest young people are admitted to these, and most of them receive scholarships from the state. Those for girls have dormitories.

While still at the normal school, the pupil receives practical instruction in teaching, and when once graduated, soon obtains a position at about $280 a year; that is a fair salary, taking into consideration the buying value of the money in that country. It now depends on his ambition and industry whether or not he'll make a success. It is the average young man's purpose to become a principal. So he takes private lessons and spends his many leisure hours in studying. In a few years he may successfully pass the head teacher's examination, and eventually be appointed head of a village school, or, perhaps, teacher of one of the higher grades in a city school. If still full of the fire of ambition, he improves his knowledge of French. He learned its rudiments at the normal school. After devoting a couple of years or more to its study, he is graduated and receives the state's diploma. Not content with this, he takes up German and English, and acquires also the diplomas of those languages. But few have the natural ability, the ambition and the perseverance to reach this point, which, indeed, is not easily gained, owing to the severe examinations. For each new diploma he receives $24 a year extra, although in the village schools no foreign languages are taught, and in the large towns and cities only in those public schools where a certain amount of tuition is paid the municipality. Of course, the teacher graduated in foreign languages has always the right and the opportunity to give private lessons in these to the children of the wealthy, while none but those who are graduated may do so and charge for their services. Many of the women teachers do not go beyond the diplomas of teacher in primary instruction, calisthenics, needlework and fancy work, either through lack of ambition or because they change their name and position in life in a few years.

There are also private schools; they usually belong to convents or to churches of dissenting sects. The latter are called "schools with the Bible." But they are nevertheless under strict surveyance of the State, and their teachers must have passed the state's examinations. Even governesses and governors and private teachers come under this law. A certain farmer's wife in Holland, who before her marriage had been a teacher, was permitted to keep her children home from school and teach them herself. But she became subject to the authority of the inspector, who now and then called on her to watch the progress of her children.

CORNELIA DE GROOT.

Army Horses as Swimmers.

Horses are "enlisted" in the British cavalry regiments on reaching their third year, but it is generally two years more before they are taken for the first swimming lesson. This branch of their education receives a good deal of attention at the Aldershot training camp. The veterinary officer and riding master of the regiment supervise the work, and only experienced men are allowed to assist.

The great thing is not to force or alarm the horse during his training, but rather to lead him by easy stages to enter the water quickly, fearlessly and as noiselessly as possible. If terrified at the start, the horse would be likely to fight shy of deep water ever after. So on the first day the man who has charge of the horse walks his pupil about on the edge of the water, just permitting him to wet his hoofs and fetlocks. The next day the horse is gradually taken farther and farther and starts swimming quite naturally, the man in charge swimming by his side to give him further confidence.

Then the horse is taught to swim in company with others, beside a boat, by way of training him to cross rivers with his regiment en masse. The horses are divested of all saddlery but head collars and head ropes. The men of each troops get into a boat, and by means of the head ropes bring their horses into the water alongside. Then the boat is hauled across the river by a rope manned from the opposite side, and the horses necessarily follow.

At times the horses are exercised in bearing their riders across on their backs. The horse wears only the the head collar and bridoon, and the rider strips himself, and throws his legs up along the horse's flanks so as not to impede the animal's movements. As the horse naturally swims low in the water, the rider's weight pushes him down until only his head is above the surface. But the animal soon gets over the uneasiness this causes him at first. Then the horse's tuition is complete, and he is classed in his regiment as "proficient." He has, in fact, passed his "exam." as much as any cadet.—[Detroit Free Press.

Remarkable New Thermometer.

A new thermometer is coming into use in England and on the continent for special technical purposes. It is a simple instrument, both in construction and principle, and has the unique advantage that the temperature of the cellar can be read from a gauge in the attic, or of the hold of a ship on the bridge or in the captain's cabin. It consists of a metallic bulb filled with liquid, a pressure gauge graduated in degrees of temperature and a fine copper pipe connecting the two. The pipe may be of any length and can be twisted into any shape, so long as its airtightness is not destroyed.

The operation of this instrument (known as the Fournier thermometer) as a temperature recorder is simple in the extreme. When the bulb is heated its contained liquid expands, and the higher the heat the greater the expansion. The air in the tubing is compressed, transmits the pressure to the pressure gauge, and this, previously graduated in degrees, records the pressure as so many degrees centigrade. The heated bulb translates the heat into pressure, the capillary tubing carries it to the gauge at the other end of the line, and there it is translated back into heat again on the gauge face.

The possible commercial uses of such a thermometer are numerous. The various inaccessible places on a loaded steamer could be kept under constant observation as to temperature by gauges in the captain's quarters. Coal bunkers, the hold and on battleships, the powder magazines could be watched from hour to hou,r and prompt attention given any indication of dangerous overheating. In a refrigerating plant such indicators in the office would show at a glance the conditions in each cold-storage room. This type of thermometer is already used by the French and other railway companies for showing the temperature of superheated steam.—[New York Press.

Birds of Catalina.

OBSERVATIONS OF BIRD LOVER ON THE ISLAND IN AUGUST.

By Harriet Williams Myers.

THE bird student going to Catalina Island for bird study, alone, and hoping to see many species, new or old, will be doomed to disappointment, for though this favored place abounds in all kinds of amusements, and there is a continued round of activities, there are not many birds.

It would seem as if in a place having so many wooded cañons and hillsides, the birds might be plentiful. There are, also, so many berry-bearing shrubs—lemonade berries of two varieties, holly, elder, and wild cherry—in which so many birds delight.

Still, the real bird lover is easily satisfied, the finding of one new species fully repaying many days of research. One of the birds which one sees only as a migrant on the mainland, but which is a resident of Catalina Island, and seen abundantly there, is the tiny Allen humming-bird.

I first saw him sipping honeysuckle about the Country Clubhouse, and later in the Banning gardens several of these midgets amused a companion and myself as they darted about in the trees and flowers before us. Sometimes they flew at each other viciously, and at other times it seemed as if it might be a game of tag. They paid no attention to us, coming only a few feet away and sipping, unconcernedly, from the flowers. They had a queer way of tilting the tail up at right angles to the body when they held themselves poised before a flower, the broad round tail with its rufous coloring, tipped with white and banded with black, showing to splendid advantage.

The most of the birds seen were females, or young males who resembled them. Only once did I see a gorgeous male. Evidently this species differs in its habits not materially from other humming-birds, whose males leave the building of the nest, the brooding, and rearing of the young entirely to the females. Just what becomes of the male at this time no one seems to know.

These little Alien humming-birds differ from the Anna, the common resident hummer of the mainland, in having little of the bronzy-green coloring, but rather a light brown, or rufous sides, is found on back, head, and tail. The male has a brilliant orange-red gorget. He resembles the rufous hummer, but is not so beautiful.

One morning we took a walk in back of the clubhouse, going down into the cañon and following the stream bed until we came to water. We found a place where the stream trickled over steep rocks, which must make a beautiful waterfall in the rainy season. At this time the water came over in the very smallest stream, being about a foot wide and barely wetting the rock. Seating ourselves just below this fall before a patch of red monkey flowers, we awaited developments. We had not long to wait for the hummers, who came in abundance to the red flowers. They darted and whizzed about, making a most peculiar noise as they flew. Sometimes it was very loud and reminded us of the tearing of cloth more than anything else. All of their notes were different from those of other humming-birds studied.

While we watched we were treated to a most interesting sight—a humming-bird bathing. One of the midgets flew down close to the water as it came over the rock, stretching out his tiny feet and touching them in the stream, his wings keeping him in air. Then he flew a little higher up the incline and stood in the thread of water letting it trickle through his tail. Leaning forward, he barely touched his breast three or four times, then flew to a bare twig where he went through elaborate preening, scratching the side of his head with his tiny claw, and with his needle-like bill cleaning and adjusting each feather. We saw several hummers bathe in this way. It was a wonderfully pretty sight. Other ways that I have seen hummers take baths is in a leaf of water, or by flying through a spray when some one is sprinkling.

As I watched the Alien hummers I heard in the distance the wheezy song of the Anna. Presently one of these birds came and sat on a stalk, as if for our inspection. Several times after this I saw one of these birds. I saw no other species of humming-birds during my two weeks' stay.

There were other kinds of birds that were taking advantage of the waterfall for bathing purposes. It seemed queer that the larger birds should use it, since there were larger pools below where the footing was surer. However, we saw linnets and goldfinches who were trying to bathe in this perpendicular bath tub. The big, clumsy linnet rested much as the hummer had in the stream, and in order to get his head wet, he turned it and laid it in the water, first one side, then the other. Surely necessity was the mother of invention in his case. We also saw an Arkansas goldfinch undertaking to take a bath in this queer place. He did not rub his head in the water as did the linnet, but simply squatted down and tried to splash.

These two finches, the lennets and Arkansas goldfinches, seemed to be the commonest birds of Avalon. They were abundant about the tents and eucalyptus trees of the canvas city, and were, in fact, about the only birds seen here. There were willow goldfinches in the cañons.

In the hills about the clubhouse the Brewer sparrows were seen abundantly. They were also in most of the cañons. Near the golf links two black phoebes were seen, the only ones noticed. Mocking-birds were quite abundant in this locality as well as in the cañons. They were not singing, but kept up their usual noisy calls. Butcher birds were seen, though not abundantly. Among the elder bushes I saw a few Traill flycatchers, which may have nested there or been migrants only. Hutton's vireos were also about, and I doubt not that in the spring time many migrants might be seen resting on this island from their long journey. Once I saw a cañon wren, a dear little fellow who came and foraged industriously through an elderberry bush which was filled with many cobwebs and no doubt contained juicy tidbits. I wish that I might once again have heard the marvelous song of this wren. It is indescribable in its loud, rich ring as it peals through the cañons. I have heard these birds in the Sierra Madre Mountains, and I know nothing more pleasing.

Spurred towhees were fairly common among the hillsides. Many of them were immature young birds, and were duller in coloring than those we had watched at home. It seemed very odd not to see the common brown towhee about. These birds of the dooryard are not only very common and tame, but so widely distributed that this island is, I believe, the only place where I have not seen them. The jovial little song sparrow was another common bird that we missed.

Two meadow larks were seen, one at the clubhouse and one at the isthmus. At the latter place I also saw several marsh sparrows.

One day at the little park on the hill I saw a small flock of swallows circling about the tiny lake. Tree swallows I took them to be. As they were about for only a short time and were not seen again, it is likely that they were passing migrants.

In our walks about the cañons and mesas we saw many mourning doves. They were very tame, being seen a few times in the streets of Avalon, where they walked about unconcernedly. It did, indeed, seem good to see these doves given protection at this their open season. Twenty-three States of the Union, realizing that they were not rightfully game birds, have taken them from the game list and given them protection at all times, while California still permits them to be shot while they are raising their young. In consequence, many young yearly starve to death in the nest, and the noxious weed seeds that they would have destroyed had they been permitted to live, thrive to the detriment of beneficial ones. It is to be hoped that if these birds cannot be given entire protection, the season for shooting them can be so altered that they may raise their young.

Valley quail we also found to be abundant and quite tame. While we were sitting by the little stream, many of them came to drink. We also had other visitors who wanted to drink, but did not always dare. It was amusing to see them, the island sheep, come to this place and to hear their snort of disgust, and perhaps alarm, at finding human beings usurping their rights. Stolidly they would stand and stare at us, and then with a snort turn and walk away, sometimes going around us and reaching water higher up the stream, sometimes going without it.

Three times we saw a bald-headed eagle, his white head, neck, and tail, and black body and wings making him striking and noticeable. We were shown the peak where these big birds have a nest, and were told that fish hawks were often seen in the same neighborhood. No doubt the eagles, unable to fish for themselves, made good use of the smaller birds' ability to do so. We are told that the bald-headed eagle has a way of harassing the fish hawk when the latter is trying to carry a fish to his young, until the hawk is obliged to drop the fish, which the eagle manages to catch before it strikes the water. With this ill-gotten food his nestlings are fed.

One bird which was quite abundant and new to me was the American raven. These big birds flew over our tent early in the morning uttering their harsh croak. We saw them along the rocky cliffs above the water, clinging to the steep sides, also on the beach walking just above the water line, or soaring high in the air like buzzards. Mrs. Irene Grosvenor Wheelock says of the nesting habits of these birds:

"Two hundred or 300 feet above the valley, and from thirty to forty feet below the top of the cliff, on a narrow ledge of rock, sheltered by the overhanging mass, is the place he has chosen to build his nest and rear his young. More inaccessible than an eagle's eyrie, few care to investigate it. Thus secure from human interference year after year, the pair return to it when the winter rains have given way to spring sunshine and all birds of the air are seeking their mates. But the raven, having chosen once, remains mated for life; and the nest once built, serves for all his broods. A few more sticks to strengthen it, a little fresh wool or hair to line it, some strong new rootlets to keep the inner cup in shape, and the cradle is ready. In it are laid five, six or seven large eggs, greenish, mottled, with shades of brown, purple, and pinkish; and both the birds brood alternately until, in twenty-one days, the nestlings emerge from the shells."

One morning while we were watching two of these birds on the beach, another large black bird flew over accompanied by a snowy white bird. Though they were out of sight behind a hill, I feel sure that the white bird was an albino raven.

One sparrow hawk and two of a larger species were seen circling near Avalon. These complete the list of land birds seen. There were pelicans, cormorants, sandpipers, blue herons, and gulls seen over, or near, the water, but even water birds were scarce. However, it must be remembered that these observations were made in August, probably the worst month for bird study because many birds are moulting and in consequence keeping out of sight and not singing. Then, too, the summer visitants have finished their nesting duties and, in many cases started on their migratory flights south. Perhaps at another time of year Catalina Island may have many more birds. The springtime, before the influx of summer visitors arrive, would, I am sure, be a more satisfactory time.

Berlin American Colony.

EVERY ONE WHO BELONGS THERE HAS SOMETHING TO DO.

From a Special Correspondent.

BERLIN, Aug. 30.—Genuine American "strenuousness" is a quality which characterizes Berlin's American colony—"Little Columbia," as it is often called—just as it characterizes the Columbia across the water. Berlin's American colony is dominated by its working spirit. There is, of course, here as elsewhere, a time-squandering upper stratum of society devotees. But these are distinctly in the minority. From the humblest American student in Berlin to the most prominent representative of American commercial interests, it may almost be said that every American in Berlin has come here to do something, and does it. The colony is essentially a community of workers.

All told, there are about 2000 permanent American residents in Berlin, besides what may be called the "fringe" of the colony, the ever-flowing stream of transitory Americans who, especially in the summer, pass through the Prussian capital, staying only a day or a week before taking train or motor car elsewhere. With these the settled colony concerns itself little, unless the ephemeral visitor happens to rank among America's "great men," as in the case of Theodore Roosevelt recently. Then, literally and metaphorically, all flags go up to honor him, and he may be sure of a welcome of unexcelled heartiness from his exiled fellow-countrymen in Berlin.

Musical opportunities, commercial interests and university courses are the chief factors responsible for attracting Americans to Berlin. American men of business are living here who have represented American mercantile firms so long in Germany that they might almost be excused for becoming more German than American. But Americanism dies hard, and even the German-Americans retain their nationality to the last, responding unfailingly to the patriotic call when national holidays come round. American university students continue to study in goodly numbers in Berlin. An American university students' club was called into life recently, while another institution representing American students' interests is the flourishing Harvard Club. Last but not least, in an analysis of the American colony, must be mentioned the great body of American music students and music lovers, drawn as by a magnet to Berlin, the hub of the musical world, with its Royal Opera, its multitudinous good concerts, its eminent teachers and, finally, its world-famed musical atmosphere.

The social life of the American colony is of a friendly and informal character. The Berlin colony is noted for its hospitality and for the warmth and cordiality with which it welcomes all newcomers, from the latest American exchange professor, feted by court and university alike, down to the humblest budding American artist, who has yet to become known in Berlin.

Nuclei of the colony's life in Berlin are the American Embassy, the American Church, the Consulate-General and the American Woman's Club. The American Embassy is, according to time-honored custom, thrown open to all Americans in Berlin on at least two great fête days of the year—New Year's Day and Washington's Birthday. It remains for each Ambassador, according to his personal inclinations, to decide whether his hospitality toward the colony shall or shall not take on a wider scope. Ambassador and Mrs. Hill, genial, democratic and hospitable to a degree, have decided emphatically in the affirmative. Few national holidays have passed since their advent in Berlin which have not been utilized as the occasion for some appropriate special ceremony at the embassy, to which the colony as a whole receives an open invitation. Formality, stiffness and class-distinction are conspicuous by their absence at these embassy gatherings, which are conducted in a spirit of pure American patriotism and warm-hearted, democratic hospitality.

One of the centers which hums most busily with American colony life is the office of the American Consulate-General, in the heart of Berlin, at the corner of Friedrich and Leipzigerstrassen. Besides its dryer duties as commercial go-between connecting America and Germany, the Consulate is bound to deal with a hundred tasks bringing it into close personal touch with the colony. It is asked to perform an astonishing variety of offices, from settling formalities connected with the transport to America of the casket holding the ashes of a cremated American to making search, perhaps, for a missing American girl-student who has disappeared for weeks since landing at Hamburg or Bremen. An important and delicate feature of the Consulate's minor duties lies in calming the wrath of indignant Americans who resent the curiosity and autocratic manner of the ubiquitous Berlin police.

The American Church, a primary social center and meeting place for Americans in Berlin, holds, besides its regular services on Sunday mornings, an afternoon lecture-room service for young people—informal, sociable, attended by scores of university and music students. After the service there is a general adjournment to the church library and vestibule, where, during an hour and a half of sociability, tea and home-made American cake hold the day. In the evening comes the social institution which so strongly appealed to the benevolent heart of the Kaiserin on her recent visit to the church. Some thirty to forty young men and girl students make their way upstairs on Sunday evenings to the diminutive but pretty dwelling at the top of the church, in which Mrs. MacDunnoungh, the church matron, lives. Here, in delightful contrast to the regulation German "abendbrot" (evening meal) they are regaled with an appetizing if simple American supper, winding up with buns and jam, cake and tea. The Kaiserin did not hesitate for a moment to mount the steep stairs to the top of the church to inspect the scene of these Sunday student revels. From parlor to kitchen she thoroughly examined every portion of the church matron's small, low-ceilinged home, in which she laughingly observed she would herself be quite delighted to take up residence.

Attached to the American Church is another institution which plays a useful part, especially in the life of the student colony. This is the library and reading-room, the largest American library in Europe! Founded in 1904 with 250 books for the use of students, it has gone on growing and developing until it has reached its present proud status.

"May this library, which, with its 250 volumes, has as modest a beginning as Harvard, have as great usefulness and as noble a future," said Charlemagne Tower, former Ambassador to Germany, at its formal opening. It now has 3250 volumes, and 3000 visitors annually. The "Louise Dickie Library" is the name now beginning to be commonly bestowed upon it, in memory of its generous founder and patroness, Mrs. J. F. Dickie, wife of the former American pastor under whom the church was built.

An institution founded especially to meet the needs of the American girl-student in Berlin, is the American Woman's Club, called into life in 1894 by the wife of Ambassador Andrew D. White. The club was founded with the intention of mitigating the homesickness, and even the hardships and temptations, of the lonely American girl-student living in Berlin; and incidentally to correct the tendency toward Bohemianism, which life in a foreign city is apt to encourage, when not counteracted by American influence. The attractive, home-like clubrooms, elegant though simple, with excellent library attached, are used continually throughout the winter for lectures and musicales. Many young musicians and composers gladly take this opportunity of making a social debut before running the gauntlet of professional and public criticism in the dreaded Berlin concert hall.

Turning from students to commerce—the number of American firms doing business here has steadily increased, until now there are upward of 100 actively and prosperously engaged in Berlin. Organization was early found desirable by these enterprising American business men. In 1902 the various firms banded together to form a Chamber of Commerce for the promotion of their interests. Under its protection many American business firms have flourished like the proverbial "green bay tree." Working always hand in hand with the Consulate, the organization has accomplished an immense amount of good in the interests of German as well as American business firms, while, under its later name, "The American Association of Commerce and Trade," it has increased so greatly in scope and influence as to represent a really important factor in the field of American and German trade exchange.

Half a dozen other institutions must be reckoned as important component parts of the colony in Berlin, which, as it increases in size and significance, feels the constant need of organization of its different elements. An American Benevolent Fund, for example, was organized five years ago by the Rev. J. F. Dickie, F. W. Wile, a leading American journalist from Chicago, and George S. Atwood, secretary of the American Association of Commerce and Trade. The fund has splendidly fulfilled the purpose for which it was intended, viz., to systematize the charity of the colony, so that no undeserving subject might prey on its benevolences, and that no worthy case should fail of the help characteristic of the generous American.

Cat Riding Hobo Fashion.

A maltese cat of the ordinary variety safely made the trip hobo fashion from Cincinnati to this city, a distance of 100 miles, on the trucks of the Pennsylvania's fast Cincinnati-Chicago train.

When the train reached this city the conductor went to the rear and looked underneath the Pullman car. Then he motioned to bystanders and showed them the pussy snugly curled up on the trucks under the car. The cat was there when the train left Cincinnati and was evidently well pleased with its ride. The trainmen were solicitous that the cat get through to Chicago, looking on her company as an omen of good luck. Pussy was still on the trucks when the train left the city.—[Newcastle Correspondence Indianapolis News.

On Valdez Glacier.

A California Woman's Terrible Experience in 1898.

By a Special Contributor.

FOR seven long days and seven long nights the snow had fallen steadily, blinding the eyes with its whiteness and hiding from sight all that had been visible a week before. Forty-eight feet of snow now hid the dazzling, vari-colored ice of the Valdez Glacier and still there were no visible signs that the blizzard would soon cease.

And what a blizzard it was—with the wind shrieking and rushing furiously along, piling the snow high up into mountains of white and then whistling in startling blasts as it passed on over the steep, icy wall toward the summit of the ice river to the forests far beyond.

And of the would-be prospectors, lying in their tents, all snugly warm in sleeping sacks or blankets, some were reading, others smoking and many sleeping; one and all trying to bear with patience the long imprisonment enforced upon them by the Storm King, who now reigned supreme. What queer pictures they made with only their heads, hands and chests protruding above the heavy blankets and sacks of wool and canvas, the heads covered with heavy woolen caps, the hands enlarged by mittens and the mackinaw suits just visible, buttoned tightly around the necks. The strangest thing of all was, that lying thus, all bore a remarkable resemblance to one another.

All looked somewhat haggard from the effects of hardships, though they were really in very good health, but the real cause of the striking likeness each to the other, was the long, unkempt beards that grew and flourished uncared for and almost unthought of, spreading over all of the lower face and over the exposed part of the neck. Of course there were black beards and blonde beards, but of the shades between there were none. For the sun, shining down with its pitiless heat at noonday, had bleached the beards of brown and red into a peculiar whitish tint, which made the appearance of the wearers even more grotesque. In addition must be mentioned the horrible sores that the wind and melted snow combined had caused to appear on the lips, making them protrude under the heavy mustaches and causing much discomfort. All this combined with the swollen eyelids, dimly seen through dark glasses, caused even the handsome man who left the steamer at Valdez a month before to be anything but attractive.

Unfamiliar With Hardships.

After toiling harder than Italian laborers, these men, most of whom were the petted aristocrats of the drawing-rooms at home, were snowblind, footsore and homesick. For books and dreams could not occupy all the long hours, and visions of home, of cosy sitting-rooms, of luxurious drawing-rooms and faces of loved ones, would rise before the weary eyes.

The tents, which seven days before had appeared cream-white as they rested on the blue-white snow, now were buried deep, only the tops being visible. In the early morning, when the silence was oppressive and weird, many of the smaller tents, whose peaks the night before had been above the snow, were nowhere to be seen. The snowflakes had quietly spread over them a soft, white coverlet. But, as the morning advanced, out of the smooth whiteness, a movement as of a small volcano, could be observed, and presently a shovel would be seen, throwing snow to right and left. Later a head enveloped in a woolen cap appeared in the opening thus formed and gradually the figure of a man, drawing himself onto the level, while keeping on hands and knees, began to dig the snow away from the roof of his temporary home.

Often, after finishing his own labors, he proceeded to find his neighbor's tent peak and, in a land where all were brothers, aid him by digging from above the night's accumulation of snow.

Unable long to combat with the heavy wind and stinging snowflakes, soon the camp again lay buried and silence prevailed, where silence had reigned so many centuries, only broken by the avalanches and cracking ice in the spring; the songs of birds overhead and the rushing rivers far below in summer.

The Long Procession.

In the winter all was still. But now, since the whisper of gold had spread to civilization and gained in brightness by exaggeration, on sunny days and on days when the storms were less severe, when traveling was possible, long files of men, with here and there a woman, could be seen passing in line drawing sleds heavily laden with provisions and camping outfits, winding along the glacier, between the high towering mountains. Men harnessed with ropes and doing the work of horses; men with heavy packs strapped on their tired shoulders and women pulling their smaller loads or harnessed like a tandem team with husband or brother. All during the days and nights the procession moved along, slowly winding through the ice pass to the far-famed gold diggings on the Copper and sister rivers.

In the night and early morning and when again the shadowy chill of evening pierced the heavy clothing and penetrated to the tender flesh, one and all were wrapped like Eskimos from head to foot in furs, mackinaw or corduroy, combined with leather. But, as the sun crept higher in the heavens, caps were raised from all the faces, coats were strapped upon the sleds and in sweaters or blue flannel the procession moved along, mopping, even then, the perspiration from the brows. Faces and necks were soon scarlet with sunburn and smarting from the wind that never ceased cutting into the flesh so mercilessly.

But now, after a month of hard marching and counter-marching to and fro, from caché to caché, the foremost adventurers had reached only the foot of the summit of the glacier, a distance of thirty miles from the coast, at an elevation of over 3000 feet, and had still sixteen miles to journey before reaching timber land. The Copper River was still a dream over 145 miles away.

Besides the provisions, supposed to last two years, the camping outfit and clothing, all the wood chopped by themselves—had been hauled by them on sleds thirty miles, not on a level by any means, but many times up the icy sides of miniature mountains, when each man was obliged to wear spikes in his heavy boots in order to get a footing.

Like slaves they worked, with a gleam of gold miles ahead for an incentive; to most it proved but a delusive dream, to others it was a ray of hope before death, to still others it was ruin.

The seventh day and night of the blizzard passed and the eighth day, the 30th of April, 1898, was ushered in during the still raging storm.

A Different Costume.

After the usual maneuvers, of the mornings that had passed were over, the camp was not wrapped in its usual silence, for three men might be seen busily working with shovels, in an endeavor to dig out a small 7x7 tent at the time quite buried from sight. An hour previous a figure in a yellow mackinaw suit, dressed like and yet unlike the men, might have been seen climbing up the ice steps from the level of the tent, until the head appeared above the vast field of snow and then the figure, falling on hands and knees, crawled across the short stretch of snow to the peak of the tent appearing on the right and gradually disappeared from sight, down the snow steps, leading into this neighboring tent.

It was a woman.

The men continued their arduous task and at last, toward noon, were rewarded by seeing the tent, limp and shapeless, lying upon the snow, crossed by the supporting poles.

One by one the men entered the tent, into which the woman had preceded them, and a couple of hours went by.

Again, in single file, the same men came forth, armed with shovels, and dug away the loose snow that had settled over the prostrate tent.

For an hour or more they worked, and then the tent rested high upon the top of a huge, wide drift above the camp. Again a female figure crawled into sight and passed into the newly-erected tent.

The men did not follow, but again set to work, and toward 8 o'clock that evening the other tent had changed its place, the two tents standing back to back, tied together tightly.

Tired, but rejoicing in success, the men separated, the oldest and the youngest passing into the largest tent, and the other man entering the tent in which the woman awaited him—her husband.

A tiny stray dog, that had ventured out into the storm, dashed in before the man and wagging his stubby tail, ran to the woman, as she lay reading, cuddled down in her sleeping sack, and licking her face, snuggled down upon her breast.

In half an hour the dog had been sent to find his owner, the flaps of the tent, forming the door, had been tied down, and husband and wife lay sleeping. After their prayers were said, the man had called a cheery "good-night" to his brother and the old miner, in the tent so close to their own, and they had sunk into slumber and dreamland, feeling safer and more secure than during all the nights that the blizzard had raged.

A Fearful Realization.

But was it a dream—a terrible nightmare—that terrific roar that chilled the blood in their veins and caused their hearts to throb so quickly? Were they dreaming of flying through the air and being struck and pounded by heavy weights? Did they dream of the awful silence, when with agonizing fears they tried to move and realized that they were crushed under a weight too heavy for any effort of theirs to stir? Ah, no, too soon they knew the awful maddening truth—they were buried alive. And that oppressive stillness might mean that all had perished instantly but them; that no human being was left to come to their rescue, and then a lingering, horrible death, one seeing the other die and then, with the loved corpse in his or her arms, to die alone. The agonized prayers to God, the despairing shrieks for human aid, the mad efforts to stir a single muscle, met with no success. All was silent beyond that tomb of snow.

The moments crept slowly by, and then the hours. At last the calm prayer and the kiss that said "good-by;" resignation to a fate that seemed so cruel.

But it is hard to die, and the wife, thinking of loved ones, who would never know their fate perhaps, gave one last shriek for help and, gasping for breath in the suffocating atmosphere, turned her eyes toward her husband, as he whispered: "We will die together, my darling."

But they were not to die, for that last shriek had saved more than fifty lives, as it afterward proved, and a voice, seemingly afar off, replied: "Have courage, we're coming!"

The joy that ascended to heaven in the "Thank God" which rose from the husband's lips and the prayer that it would still not be too late, then the seeming hours that passed before a shovel struck the man's shoulder, can never be imagined or realized by any one but the victims of the frightful avalanche.

Rescued!

It was after midnight, and Sunday morning had dawned, when the rescuers dug out, from the depths of twenty feet of snow, those first to be rescued. About half of the sleeping camp had been buried under that sliding snow. The other half, awakened by the deafening roar, had hastened out into the night and, seeing the devastation, rushed to the rescue of those less fortunate than themselves. It was 9 o'clock, and for a couple of hours eager hands worked with little hope of success, for all was silent. No sound guided the rescuing party.

Every man's first thought was for the only woman in that camp, and eager steps hurried toward the spot where her tent had stood. Owing to the changed aspect of the place and the fact that the avalanche had carried all with it for some distance, this was difficult to ascertain. In all directions men dug for that woman.

At last a few men heard a woman's shriek, and hastening toward the muffled sound, began to dig.

Their efforts were at last rewarded, and for months the man who first stretched a helping hand to that woman held his head high and felt proud of his achievement. But as he dug and finally helped husband and wife out into the storm once more, another helper placed his hand anxiously over two silent forms at their feet and found that all help for them was over—a young man and an older man lay dead.

A Notable Sabbath.

Throughout the early hours of morning, with the hissing blizzard whirling the snow into huge drifts and smaller avalanches roaring down the mountainsides, far and near, the work of rescue went on. It was a Sabbath morning, and one which to the world was a memorable one, the day on which Dewey's great victory in Manila was won. But, far away from the noise and the echo of battle, this little band knew not of the glory that was shedding its light o'er the nation and thrilling the hearts of all.

To them, in the blinding storm, searching for comrades who the night before were sleeping, as themselves, without thought of danger, was the fear of finding them crushed and lifeless. Yet they worked with intense energy to reach them before the spark of life had flickered out, never again to be relighted on earth.

As the gray and hazy light crept gradually over the scene, the rescued and the rescuers, rested in the tents about, drinking hot coffee prepared by willing hands, and talking excitedly of the unlooked-for disaster. Over all faces a shadow rested, for none knew how many had perished in the night, and perhaps even now some were struggling in the grasp of death.

Each party eagerly sought their comrades to count and find if all were there. Had it not been for the venturesome ones who constantly dared the bitter storms and with staff and compass tramped on, resting but a night in one place and trusting to luck to buy provisions over the range, all might have been accounted for at once. But many such men had been seen at nightfall, asking a supper here or there, for which they paid liberally. Whether they started on over the summit afterward no one knew, and their fate was uncertain.

Dead and Unknown.

Only two of these wanderers were found at that time; the two who were found dead at the feet of the woman had lodged that night in a near-by tent. Who they were no one knew until days had passed and a relief party came from the camp below, seven miles distant. Both faces were calm now and side by side, on sleds, they lay, with heavy blankets hiding and yet outlining the still forms.

A mother's heart in far-off Minnesota ached and broke months later when she heard her only son lay buried in the Copper River Valley; and a wife and children in Wisconsin shed bitter tears when the letter and trinkets came to tell them how the husband and father had died in his search for gold for them.

During the ninth day of storm the camp's silence was broken and all who were able were at work, digging again, this time for lifeless bodies, but none were found.

But when two summers' thaws had melted the deep snows, two bodies were seen by a traveler passing that way, lying in the ice, which had held them hidden so long. And missing ones who never reached the Copper River or home again, are believed to be lying somewhere stark and cold, in the path of that snowslide. The young man and the old miner, who had worked so hard to move their tent and had tied it to the smaller one, were found alive but crushed, and the younger man unconscious. As they gently lifted the latter, a small Bible, with a sweet woman's face within, fell from beneath his head to the snow. Reverently a comrade leaned down and picked it up, while tears gathered in his eyes. All hearts were softened and tender toward each other during the three days of hardship and suffering that followed.

Many had lost their health and strength forever, others had no food and only the frozen clothes on their backs. But the kindness that characterized one and all was wonderful. Those who still had provisions and clothing shared their all with those who had nothing—gladly, cheerfully.

A Queen in Camp.

The woman reigned a queen among all those men. One brought her a warm sweater, another a thick coat, and still another an oilskin jacket to keep the under coat dry. Invitations came from every tent for her to bring her husband and party to eat of the best they had. And two brothers gave up their tent to her. For all she and her party had was buried under twenty feet of snow.

As the slides of snow kept coming faster, a sentinel was necessary to stand and listen while the men dug and to give warning at the first sound of the muffled roar of an approaching avalanche. Runways had been dug—paths that led to the center of the glacier, a distance of about three miles. There one was safe. At

The Colonel and the Corn Remedy.

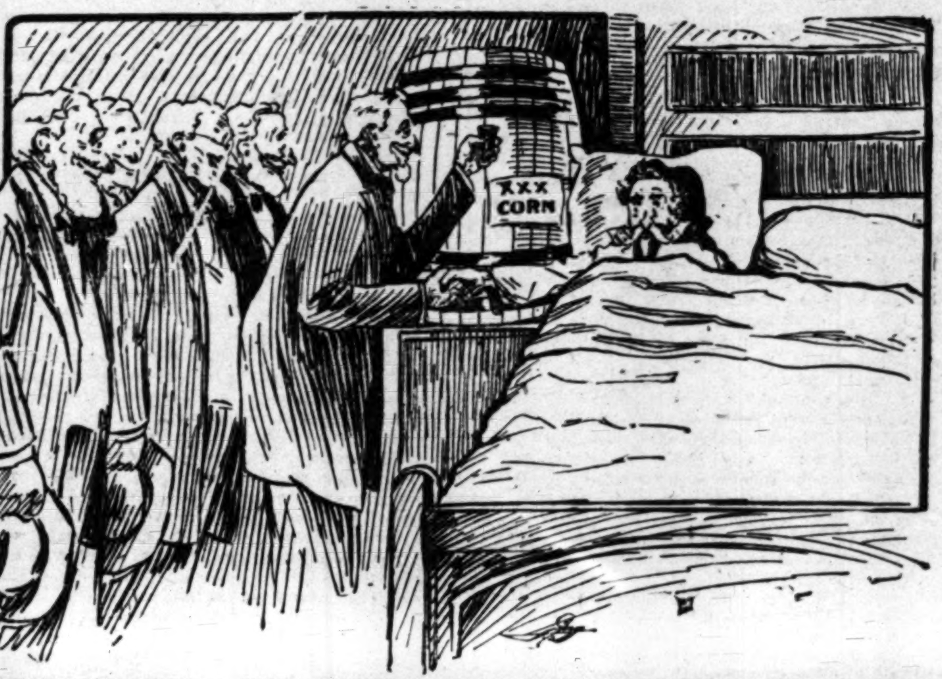
THE Billville Banner has the following story of the troubles of a leading colonel:

"The Colonel contracted a bad cold Wednesday night and his doctor prescribed hot corn toddies, taken sweet and strong at bedtime.

"On Thursday night the Colonel fell out of the bed and sprained his left foot, and the doctor prescribed a double quantity of corn whisky for the easing of his pain.

"Recovering rapidly, he soon fell downstairs and broke his left leg, whereupon the doctor ordered a whole barrel of corn whisky as the only means of keeping the Colonel steadily in bed.

"Sympathizing friends call every day, and communicate with the barrel and the Colonel."



"SYMPATHIZING FRIENDS CALL EVERY DAY AND COMMUNICATE WITH THE BARREL AND THE COLONEL."

A Song of Indian Summer.

WEATHER always suits me when valley, hill and stream
Are like the peaceful pictures you are seeing in a dream.
When the tired world seems restin'—when the quiet is so deep
You hear the light a-breaking where the day has gone to sleep.
It's the quiet that we're needing who have toiled the summer long
Till we heard the reapers singing where the harvest makes the song.
It's then the kindly heaven on the old world seems to smile,
Soft-whispering in the sunlight and the shadows,
"Rest a while!"
Indian Summer suits me—soft night and dreamy day,
And I could just keep dreaming till I dream my soul away
From the world's rude noise and riot, in the daisies and the dew,
To the everlasting quiet where the sweetest dreams come true!

His Crime.

THE FRENCH SETTLER IS TRIED BY JUDGE MACCLOUD.

By a Special Contributor.

FOLLOWING the organization of Moccasinville as a settlement the pioneers put up a whipping post so that the wayward might know there was a law in the land, and tremble. According to the ordinances runaway slaves, fortune tellers and witches, infidels, sellers of charms, horse stealers and destroyers of property could be haled before the board, tried and, if found guilty, punished with from five to fifty lashes. It was, the pioneers decided, better and cheaper than building a jail, and you didn't have to bother with court books which were hard to read, and a deal harder to understand.

Squire Jeremiah MacCloud was a great, big, long-whiskered patriarch, a good judge of horses, an Indian fighter, flint-lock musketeer, a successful expounder of the gospel, a born leader of men and events. He was the unanimous choice for the bench, and gravely accepted it as a responsibility involving the construction of the national constitution. Life and death were in his hands.

When the dwellers of the lowlands along the Blue Run were enjoying their annual visitation of chills and ague, Judge MacCloud issued orders to all the sawmill engineers in the forest to sound a warning blast at proper intervals for the administration of quinine. Clocks and watches were scarce articles, but two or three old timepieces were fished up for the use of the engineers during those trying times.

A church organization once submitted to the judge what was in that day a most vexed question—the ordinance of feet washing. Committees from the rival factions awaited the answer.

"Feet washing is right," said the Judge; "the oftener the better."

One day Miss Sarah Dartmouth brought startling information to the settlement. On her way she had heard cries issuing from the cabin of Jacques Lacroix, French settler down on the creek bottoms, and knew that he was beating his wife. She dared not venture in, because the savage foreigner might have killed her, too, in his frenzy. More: Miss Sarah deposed that a few days before she had rode along the trail and had observed Jacques, "with a sullen scowl upon his face, leaning against a tree, and he did not speak, although he could have seen me easily." The Frenchman's wife, Miss Sarah said, was a delicate little woman, and she knew it to be a fact that she had not been well of late; all the more reason why her husband should be considerate, instead of "whipping her like a dog," concluded the informer, with flashing eyes.

Miss Sarah had long been an institution of the neighborhood; her opinion of things carried nearly as great weight as did the decision of Judge MacCloud. Had she been a man, chances are she would have given the Judge a close race for his honors. She could ride a wild horse, handle a rifle or shuck corn with the best man in the valley. Therefore it was no idle tale of some nervous maiden that had been brought to Moccasinville.

Judge MacCloud promptly convened court in the "big room" of his log cabin. It was not necessary to summon the leading advisers—they were already there. So was everybody else. Miss Sarah repeated her narrative, with additional detail. There were the sounds of feet across the cabin floor, like the noise of a struggle. She waited no further, but hastened along that swift justice might be meted out to the miscreant, and impending murder prevented.

The assembled graybeards nodded approvingly. Judge MacCloud appointed David Jones and Sandy Williams to proceed forthwith and fetch the culprit in, dead or alive. Meanwhile Jake Liverson was made special executioner to get the whipping post in readiness; to get cords for the culprit, and to rope off a square so the crowd would not press too closely upon the engine of punishment.

Though far in advance of the telephone, the whole country had learned somehow of the serious business on foot in Moccasinville, and farmers came in with their families and lunch baskets, intent upon a pleasant holiday.

"Citizens," said Judge MacCloud, his back to the hearth and his tall form nearly reaching to the ceiling, "we have sent for the criminal, and after the usual question as to whether or not he has anything to say in extenuation of his horrible crime, sentence will be pronounced. I had hoped we would never be called upon to consider such an atrocious case as this, but we can thank fortune that the villain is not an American. I understand some of these foreigners think their wives are their slaves, whom they can flout as they please. If this is so, I know of one foreigner at least whose mind will speedily be set right on that delusion. People—way for the prisoner. Let him be brought into court."

Jacques wasn't a very fierce-looking criminal. As he was shoved to the front between the two big deputies he looked strangely small and boyish. His big black eyes wandered from face to face in terror, and he was trembling as if in the presence of death. It takes a coward to be a wife beater, you know, and his fright but sealed his guilt. Miss Sarah, the stern prosecuting witness, stood well to the front, eyeing the villain severely.

"Is there anybody here who can speak French?" inquired Judge MacCloud.

An old man in coonskin cap and fringed trousers, a hunter from up the creek, arose from an unobstrusive corner where he had been squatting down, and shuffled to the front.

"You talk French all right, Jules," said the judge; "I know you. Tell him what Miss Sarah said."

The old hunter fired a broadside at the defendant, who listened intently and then nodded affirmatively.

"Tell him," said Judge MacCloud, "that he has been tried and found guilty, and that I am about to pass sentence of so many lashes at the whipping post."

As this information was conveyed to the prisoner his face became ghastly white and his legs shook so the deputies had to hold him up. Judge MacCloud, unmoved, proceeded sternly with the formula of the law:

"Ask him if there is any reason why sentence should not be passed upon him?"

After the brief question was put by the interpreter, the prisoner replied with great volubility. There was a grim smile on the interpreter's face as he caught the drift of the villain's explanation.

"He say he haf a new babee at his home," translated the hunter, "but if it's against the law it won't happen again. The babee—it scream."

Lady May's Dilemma.

THE LITTLE STORY OF A GILT-EDGED INVESTMENT.

By a Special Contributor.

WHEN Alfred Marsdon first met Helen Wilmot there was nothing to indicate that the meeting would result seriously for either. Of course, Helen was comely and clever, but Alfred, good-looking, and a rising young stockbroker, was constantly coming in contact with clever, comely girls. Within a month, however, Marsdon had become convinced that he could never be happy again until Helen had promised to be his wife. He even wondered how he had ever found life worth living before he made her acquaintance.

Seated at his desk one morning, staring moodily at his blotter, he was reviewing his conversation with Helen the evening before. In impassioned terms he had declared his love and begged her to become his wife. Her reply, kindly but hesitating, had carried bitter disappointment to the ardent young man.

"It cannot be," she said firmly. "I am sorry, very sorry, for really, Alfred, I—I like you very much, but I cannot marry you."

"Don't—don't say that," he pleaded.

"I must," was the reply. "Marriage would interfere with my literary work, perhaps put an end to it altogether. I cannot take such a step at present. I am confident that I can make a name in the literary world, and for some time to come my every effort must be exerted to that end. You would best forget me and marry some other girl."

"Never! never!" he cried, impetuous as a boy, "I could never love any other woman as I love you." Then, gloomily, "How long will it take you to win success?"

"I wish I knew," with an indulgent smile. "Perhaps months; very likely years."

Alfred groaned; then his face brightened.

"But there's 'Lady May's Dilemma,'" hopefull.y

"That is only a manuscript as yet," was the answer. "It will not be finished for some time, and even then, if published, may not be a success."

"But if it is—if it is; will you marry me then?" he persisted, grasping at a straw.

"Well—if it is a success," Helen assented with some reluctance; then added earnestly: "But do not stake your hopes too high on such a chance. You are very likely to be disappointed."

So Alfred frowned at his blotter in a far from happy mood. He thought of stories he had heard of the struggles of young authors.

"And I must look on, helpless, while all the time able and eager to surround her with every comfort!"

Suddenly he sat bolt upright; his eyes widened and stared fixedly. A full minute he sat motionless, then brought his fist down with a thump.

"She's going to send that story to Stevens!" he cried. "Stevens will do it—I know he will! What a fool I've been!" He had sprung to his feet, snatched down his hat, jammed it upon his head and was already halfway down the corridor.

Arrived at the elevator shaft, he jabbed the button marked "Down," impatiently, and could hardly wait for the boy to open the door before bolting in.

"Ground floor—quick!" he urged, handing "Buttons" a dollar, and like a shot they dropped past several floors with groups of people waiting to descend. A few minutes later he hurried through a doorway where a big sign read: "F. Stevens & Co., Publishers." At a ground-glass door marked "President" he brushed an office boy aside impatiently and walked directly into the august presence.

"Hullo, Al!" was the cordial greeting he received. "Why this unseemly haste? Sit down—sit down."

Mr. Stevens, perhaps 50 years of age and carefully groomed, was far from the lean, cadaverous creature pictured by the popular imagination as a typical editor. His gray eyes squinted humorously through gold-rimmed eyeglasses; his round, smooth face seemed ever on the edge of a smile. Having many friends in common, the publisher and the young broker had been thrown much together, and a strong attachment had resulted.

"Mr. Stevens," Marsdon began, "I've come to see you on somewhat delicate business."

"Now, Al, I hope you haven't turned author," in a warning tone.

"Oh, no," was the reply, "but a friend of mine has, and I've come to see—that is, I'd like to arrange—well, listen—I'll tell you the whole story."

It was a half-hour later that Alfred emerged from the office with a satisfied smile upon his face.

"Of course it is very irregular," Mr. Stevens had said as he opened the door for his friend; "it is, in fact, quite a unique procedure, but you have my entire sympathy, and I think we can arrange it as you wish."

One evening, some six months later, when Marsdon called for his weekly visit, Helen met him at the door with a radiant face.

"It's a success!" she cried, evidently quite out of her usual self-possession. "'Lady May's Dilemma' is a grand success. Mr. Stevens tells me that nearly the entire edition is sold already!"

"And now, about that promise," said Alfred as, a few minutes later, they sat before the glowing hearth.

"What promise?" Helen asked innocently, poking the coals.

"Your promise that you'd marry me if your book was a success," was the half-indulgent reply.

"I believe there was some such agreement," still poking the fire. Then with a playful air of resignation: "Well, I suppose I must keep my promise—that is," mischievously, "if you still want me."

Alfred's reply, though not conveyed in words, was both convincing and satisfactory.

It was late that night when Marsdon returned to his apartments; still he seemed in no hurry to retire. Flinging his hat and coat upon a couch he began pacing back and forth, chin sunk and hands clasped behind him.

"It's a beastly shame!" he burst out at last, "and yet what could I do? It WAS a heroic measure, but it was the only way."

He unlocked the door of an inner room and stood with folded arms gazing down at several large packing cases that were ranged within.

"I never realized until this evening how mean a deceit it is," he muttered.

Again he began pacing the floor in silence. At last, as though reaching a decision, he exclaimed: "I'll do it, by Jove! I'll tell her all about it and throw myself on her mercy!" Then his mood changed, and with a despairing gesture he cried: "I can't do it! She'd never forgive me! never!"

The small hours of morning had arrived before he, at last, wearily sought his couch.

When Mr. Stevens reached his office, next morning, he found Marsdon awaiting him.

"Hullo, Al," he greeted the young broker in his usual hearty manner. "You're abroad early this morning. Nothing wrong, I hope," noticing the young man's sober mood.

"I've come to see you about Miss Wilmont's book. I've decided to go to her tonight and confess everything."

"What!" the publisher exclaimed, wheeling about in his chair. "After all these months, and just as everything is working right into your hands! What's your idea now?"

"Well, Stephens, I'll tell you," Alfred answered. "I called on Miss Wilmont last night, and when I saw how elated she was over the supposed success of her book, it came home to me how mean a trick I had played her. I believe the only course open to me as an honorable man is to confess everything and take the consequences."

For some time, Mr. Stevens looked at his friend in silence. At last, in an impersonal manner as though talking to himself, he said quizzically:

"I wonder how, with that tender conscience, he ever came to be a stock broker?" Then to Alfred: "Young man, you're too conscientious, altogether. Why, look: you come to me with a brilliant idea; we carry it out; everything works beautifully; and now, with success in sight, you say you're going to back down! Al, you're a quitter! You don't deserve that girl if you can't play a little trick like this to get her."

"But it seems to me this 'little trick' borders close upon dishonesty," protested Alfred, on the defensive, but beginning to weaken.

"Bosh!" was the curt rejoinder. "Don't you remember what they say about love and war? This is a case where the end justifies the means. You'd better marry the girl now while you can get her and confess afterward. She won't take it to heart after she has found that married life doesn't interfere with her work. Take my advice, young man, marry the girl now and confess afterward," leaning forward and tapping the other impressively on the kne.

For a short space Alfred sat in silence; then he sprang abruptly to his feet. "I'm going to take your advice," he said, seizing his hat and starting for the door.

"And say, Al!" his friend called after him, "it might be well to get married as soon as possible—before you have time to change your mind again," and he turned to his desk with a chuckle.

. . . .

It was the third anniversary of their wedding day, and Alfred Marsdon and his wife, an author of some note, sat at breakfast.

"My dear," it was Alfred speaking, "I have a confession to make. I have heard you say, many times, that your first book, 'Lady May's Dilemma,' did not deserve the success it achieved."

"Yes," with a smile.

"Well, the reason was, I bought the entire edition."

At first his only answer was a laugh. Then: "Oh, I know all about it," she informed him smilingly. "You see, I used to have a friend who was employed at Stevens's."

For a full minute Alfred sat in dumb astonishment. Then:

"How long have you known it?" he asked.

"Oh, since the day the books were delivered to you," and the room rang with her laughter.

It was some time before Alfred could adjust his thoughts to this new and bewildering turn of affairs. At last he rose, stepped quickly to his wife's side and kissed her.

"Well, it was the best investment I ever made," said he.

ROBERT SPEED.

Dollars and Sense.

STORY OF AN ENGLISH FORTUNE-SEEKER IN CALIFORNIA.

By Capt. Leslie T. Peacocke.

"SAY, what's the matter with Ethel?" queried Charlie Babler, stretching his long legs in the Morris chair and conning with approval the cut and fit of his new polo boots. "She doesn't think of throwing herself away on that Englishman, does she?"

"I should hope not," said John Buxton, grappling with the collar band of a clean, stiff shirt. "She's got better sense than that, I guess."

"Well, she danced with him the best part of last night, and they went in to supper together. I'm not the only one that remarked it."

Buxton turned to the mirror to hide his annoyance. "Oh, I suppose she is flattered at being run after by a fellow every one is making so much of," he mumbled, selecting a dress collar from the large assortment in the drawer. "He plays a good game of polo, and there is nothing against him, so far as I know."

"Yes, I dare say he's all right," agreed Babler. "They say he's no end of a swell and of course he belongs to a crack English regiment, but all the same I don't like him."

"Why not?"

"Oh, I don't know. He puts on such a lot of 'side' for one thing, and he is always talking about his brother, Lord Somebody or Other. I hate fellows like that."

"Yes, he is a bit of a snob," agreed Buxton. But so many Englishmen are like that, though, and of course it only makes them ridiculous to us. He plays a dandy game of polo, all the same."

"Oh, yes, he's the best man they've got, and he won the game for them today, but I don't like to see a girl like Ethel Wadsworth making a fool of herself over him. It makes me tired."

"I don't think it's quite as bad as that, Charlie," objected Buxton, nettled. "Ethel isn't a fool by any means, and there's not much chance of her falling in love with the fellow. He isn't her sort."

"I shouldn't think so," agreed his friend. "But you can never tell, you know. I've always thought that you and Ethel were pretty thick, and I'd hate like mad to see her throwing herself away. He may be after her money, for all we know."

"Very likely," said Buxton, pulling savagely into place and utterly spoiling an evening tie. "He looks that sort of a fellow, but if he is, you may bet your life that Ethel will find him out. She has the greatest contempt for heiress hunters. You'd better hurry up and dress for dinner, old man. It's nearly dinner time."

Babler rose, and stretching his frame with a yawn, moved to the door. "Guess it is," he agreed. "I wish you played polo, John. With all your money you'd be able to keep a dandy string of ponies. Why don't you take it up?"

"Too much like work," acknowledged the wealthy young broker. "Tennis is good enough for me, and since I got that French car I simply hate the sight of a horse. No; I like watching the game, and I'll be tickled to death if you can keep those Englishmen from winning the cup."

"They're a pretty tough proposition," admitted Babler. "You see, they've been playing together as a team and know each other's play. You may bet your boots we'll do our best tomorrow, though." And adding some further remark anent the lateness of the hour, he ran off to dress for dinner.

John Buxton pondered deeply over his friend's remarks, and acknowledged to himself that Ethel Wadsworth's obvious pleasure at the Englishman's attentions was causing him considerable annoyance. Capt. Semphill was a fine-looking man, he had to admit, and was undoubtedly a brilliant polo player and an admirable dancer; that is, if one can accept the quick, hoppy waltz step, as affected by the English smart set, as the poetry of motion; but with all that there was something about the man that warned a reader of deep insight into character—as John Buxton was—that underlying the veneer and air of breeding which he obviously possessed, was a baser metal, which a properly-applied test would in time reveal.

To apply that test John Buxton determined, satisfied that the worthy captain would crumple up badly in the process, and so restore to Ethel Wadsworth her practical common sense.

He finished his dressing and, descending to the palm-dotted dining-room, selected a vacant chair at one of the big round tables reserved for the polo players and the Furlingham Club contingent, of which Pacific Coast institution he was a prominent member, and found himself directly facing the fair Ethel and the English captain of dragoons so lately under discussion.

The big hotel at Coronado Beach was crowded to overflowing, the polo tournament having drawn the elite from all the prominent towns on the Pacific Slope, and the country clubs of Los Angeles, Riverside, Santa Barbara, Pasadena and the famous Furlingham, or "Flingham," as the members elected to call it, under the misconceived idea that it sounded more "English," had each sent a team to compete for the valuable cup and cash prize offered by the admirers of the game at Coronado, and to meet the formidable British military team which had crossed the seas and continent, confidently hopeful of carrying off the coveted trophy.

The English team had won the first two matches, and were to meet the redoubtable "Flinghams" for the final test on the morrow; so excitement ran high, and money was being freely wagered on the result, the Englishmen taking all that was offered at even odds and bidding fair to glean a tidy harvest if successful in the bout.

"Whom are you backing, Mr. Buxton?" cried Ethel Wadsworth across the table to her long-time admirer, who was holding strangely aloof from the heated discussion. "You ought to bet on Capt. Semphill's team if you want to be on the safe side." John Buxton's jaws stiffened.

"I guess you think I'm too slow and sure to take any risks," he replied, with a forced smile. "Well, I'm not. I'll lay Capt. Semphill an even thousand dollars, if he likes?"

"Done with you!" cried the soldier with alacrity, whipping out his pocket-book and recording the bet. "Buxton, isn't it?"

"Yes, John Buxton," Ethel volunteered, wondering at the temerity of her faithful admirer. "That's a really exciting bet. I don't know which side I hope will win, now. I don't like to think of either of you losing so much money." Charlie Babler chuckled.

"That's a good one!" he cried, extending his empty champagne glass to an obsequious waiter. "What's a thousand dollars to John Buxton! Why, he cleaned up sixty thousand in oil last week; didn't you, John? The paper said so."

Buxton mumbled a reply that was understood to be in the affirmative, and begged his friend not to talk shop; Capt. Semphill, glancing with interest at his rival, to whom the juggling with immense wealth was apparently a daily occurrence.

To him the successful American business man was a revelation, and he could not understand how a man so astute as the other undoubtedly was could espouse the cause of the weaker polo team, as he hopefully judged the "Flingham" four to be, and, what was more to the point, back his opinion with his money.

"Make it a couple of thousand if you like?" he challenged, dampening his pencil with his lips, eager to record a further wager. "Make it an even $2000, what?"

Buxton nodded gravely. "All right," he agreed, drawing a check book and fountain pen from the breast pocket of his tuxedo. "I guess Charlie Babler can hold the stakes."

"Eh?" queried the Englishman, with a startled stare, unaccustomed to American business methods as applied to a wager. "How do you mean, hold the stakes?"

"Hold the amount of the bet until it has been won and lost, of course," explained Buxton, filling in his check. "It's the most business-like way of recording a bet, except you know of any other?" The Englishman looked for guidance at his brother officers.

"I have always treated a bet as an affair of honor," he declared. "Between gentlemen, I should think one's mere word should be sufficient."

"I know," said Buxton, detaching the check from his book. "I know, that's the English way; but I'm a business man, and I believe in th egood old American expression, 'Money talks.' Here's my check, and if you want to cover it, well and good; but you can call it off if you like?"

"No, by Jove!" interposed Maj. Pelham, the senior of the English team, glaring at Buxton through his monocle. "It's all right, Semphill; you give him your check after dinner. If he wants to make a commercial transaction of it, you can't object. I suppose you are satisfied to take my friend's check, sir?" he added in a query to Buxton, his monocle and bristling mustache challenging with a studied insolence.

"Perfectly," said the broker, admirably restraining his temper. "Mr. Babler can hold it until after the match. Here's mine, Charlie," he continued, tossing the slip of paper to his friend. "When Capt. Semphill covers it you may consider it a bet," and ignoring the angry glances of the English team and the reproachful gaze with which he intuitively felt that Ethel Wadsworth was favoring him, he renewed his attention to his dinner.

The conversation lagged and became somewhat forced at the big round table, and it was with feelings of relief that the party faced the warm January night on the piazza, some wandering down to the white sanded beach to the Tent City, and all waiting for the orchestra to strike up in the ballroom and set them once more swaying in the maze of the dreamy waltz.

It was with an apparent air of reluctance that Ethel Wadsworth permitted John Buxton to inscribe his name on her dance programme, on which that of Capt. Semphill, he noticed, figured considerably, but, well as he knew her, he refrained from offering any comment on the circumstance, trusting to time and subsequent events to disillusion her of this, to him, misplaced infatuation.

By mutual consent they sought the piazza when he claimed her for his dance, and avoiding the glare of the arc lights, sank into two chairs, so placed as to form a cosy corner.

He carefully avoided the subject nearest his heart, but try as he would, the conversation drifted to the coming polo match and the English team.

"None of us could understand it," she argued, having broached the subject of the wager made at the dinner table. "We all think that you tried to throw doubt on Capt. Semphill's ability to pay his debts if he loses, and that hurt us all very much. Why did you do it?"

John Buxton weighed his words carefully. "I'll tell you why," he cried, bending forward and fixing her earnestly with his steady eyes. "We don't know anything about this Capt. Semphill. He may be a very nice fellow, and he is a good polo player, but it is my honest opinion that he is living by his wits, and I am as sure as my name is John Buxton that he hasn't got $2000 in the bank, and that that check that Charlie Babler holds is not worth the paper it is written on. No, don't go!" he urged, as she half-rose in protest. "Time will prove I am right, if he loses, and you will find that he will try to get some rich girl to marry him and pay his debts. I can read the fellow like a book."

"But you don't know who he is!" expostulated Ethel, indignant at the evident allusion to herself. "He is a brother of the Earl of Blackport!"

"I don't care if he was a brother of the man in the moon," grumbled Buxton, with whom titles weighed little. "I'm a pretty good judge of men, and I don't care what country they come from or who their connections are so long as they are really men of honor. Now the other three men in that team are thoroughly decent fellows, and I would trust them anywhere, but this chap, Semphill, that you think so much of, I'd trust about as far as I would a southerner with a mint julep."

"You have simply taken a dislike to him because I like him," argued Ethel, bravely defending her absent admirer. "And it isn't right for us to discuss him anyway. I am sure there is nothing in his appearance to warrant your disliking him so. He is very good-looking."

John Buxton sniffed.

"Oh, he looks like a fashion plate, all right, but his eyes are too close together to suit me. Now, I know, Ethel, that you think I am jealous of him; and maybe I am," he went on impressively. "There is no doubt I should be jealous of any man you showed a preference for, but I'm not the kind of fellow to 'knock' any other man without being sure of my ground, and I hate to see you making a fool of yourself and——"

"Thank you!" cried Ethel, rising, her cheeks aflame. "We won't discuss the matter any further. You can have your own opinion about people, but there isn't a single soul in the place that doesn't think the world and all of Capt. Semphill," and having voiced her sentiments, she gathered her skirts majestically and sailed back, alone, to the ballroom.

Many argued that over-indulgence in the festivities of the night before, and others that the unwonted strain laid upon their ponies was responsible for the English team's downfall on the polo field next day, but whatever it was, the fact remained that the coveted trophy was borne off by the triumphant "Flinghams," after a fast and furious game, with five goals to their credit, as against their opponents' three, and great was the rejoicing in "Country Clubland" throughout the Pacific Coast, and numerous were the checks the Englishmen had to draw to liquidate their debts of honor.

Charlie Babler handed over the English dragoon's slip of indorsed paper after the match, and as John Buxton placed it in his pocket, he scrutinized it closely. "On Cox's Bank, London," he muttered. "That's the English army bank, and it's pretty solid. I wonder if the check's any good?"

"Of course it is," asserted Charlie, amazed at his friend's continued doubt. "He daren't give it if he didn't have the funds to meet it. It'd be as much as his commission is worth. They're all coming up to my place at Santa Cruz tomorrow, and I'm counting on you, too. Harry Simpson is sending down his steam yacht, and we'll have no end of a time!"

"Whom do you mean by 'all?'" queried Buxton cautiously.

"Oh, the four Englishmen and the Robarts girls and Mrs. Lester. About twelve altogether, and Ethel Wadsworth and her mother, of course."

"I see," said Buxton, pondering. "Well, all right. Thanks, old man, I'll go. I never thought our fellows would win the match; did you?"

"Well, I was a bit surprised," admitted Babler. "And we wouldn't have if Semphill had played his usual game. I never saw a fellow so nervous. He overrode the ball every time, and all his shots at goal went wild. He was over-anxious, I guess, and I heard that he had two Scotch highballs just before they started to play, and that Maj. Pelham gave him a terrible calling down after the game was over. I won a thousand from the major," added Charlie, with a satisfied chuckle.

Nothing daunted by his experience of the night before, John Buxton craved a dance from the girl he loved on this, the last night of their stay at Coronado, and urged her, for probably the twentieth time, to be his wife.

Ethel was much moved by his earnest pleading, but her romantic nature had been deeply touched by the homage and flattery of the Earl of Blackport's brother, who spoke to her familiarly and grandiloquently of European courts and ancestral homes, to such good purpose as to render her dissatisfied with her life and surroundings and instill her with a craving to taste the delight of a sphere hitherto considered unattainable.

She begged the young broker not to press her for an answer, although her heart responded warmly to his ardent wooing, so he had to reluctantly relinquish her to Semphill, who was impatiently claiming her for the next dance, and who monopolized the greater part of her attention for the rest of the evening, and ultimately bade her good-night, Buxton noticed, with an air at once impressive and as of one in prospective possession.

Wending his way to the billiard-room, he sought to console himself with a highball before retiring for the night, when the captain of Dragoons entered and begged the pleasure of a glass in unison, leading the way, when served, to the lounging recess just off the billiard-room.

"I am going to ask you an extraordinary favor, Mr. Buxton," he began, seating himself beside a wicker table and placing his glass to his lips with a nervous hand. "I don't know any one else I can ask it of, and I would hesitate about asking you, only that you already hold a check of mine for a—er—rather large amount, and—er—I know—er—of course—er—that you are a very wealthy man."

John Buxton's eyes contracted, and to screen a smile of satisfaction he gravely inclined his head.

"Yes, I've got money," he admitted, but in no boastful tone. "Want me to lend you some, I suppose?"

"Well, I—er—I would feel awfully obliged if you would—er—just for a few weeks, you know. It's—er—deuced unpleasant being so far from home, don't y' know."

The Admirable Toby.

WHY HE WENT TO THE RESCUE OF EMILY DUMPER.

From Pearson's Weekly

TOBIAS SMALLFIELD was a good-natured little man, 30 years of age, and a bachelor by choice. He earned a respectable income as a foreman cooper at "Bullivant's," the celebrated tub and barrel manufacturers, besides which he drew half-yearly the income on some house property bequeathed him by an indulgent and admiring aunt, so that from the ladies' point of view he was decidedly eligible. Yet, despite his many virtues and almost total absence of vices, he survived thirty years of existence as a single man.

Toby was one of the most sociable of men, and if he had a failing it must be confessed that it consisted in a touch of vanity; he liked people to think of him as a man to be envied, and he enjoyed the reputation of being eligible and yet able to withstand the shafts of Cupid.

Like many men who are supposed to be "old" bachelors, he was on good terms with members of the opposite sex, and was often permitted to receive their confidences and administer sensible advice.

One evening, at a social gathering, where the company seemed to be pretty evenly paired, Toby found himself as the odd man thrown very much into the company of a Miss Emily Dumper, who seemed to be the "odd" lady. Luckily this young woman proved to be something of a conversationalist, and Mr. Smallfield revelled in the discourse, which, somehow, managed to flatter his own dignity and vast knowledge.

"It is really a treat to talk to a gentleman who has read something," remarked the lady; "you must study a lot, Mr. Smallfield."

"Um—yes," admitted Toby, stroking his smooth chin meditatively; "perhaps I do. You see, I hold if a subject is worth looking into at all it's worth understanding right down to—to the ground," he added. "Won't you have something—some refreshment?" he asked in an outburst of pleasure.

The lady blushed. "Thank you, I should very much like—I mean, no, I—I am afraid it wouldn't be wise. Some of the folks here aren't above mischief-making."

Mr. Smallfield opened his mouth in astonishment; this was suggesting a clur on his unspotted reputation.

"I'm engaged—practically engaged—to Jack Gripper," explained Miss Dumper. "I know two or three here who'd just like to set the ball rolling. Oh, you don't know the trouble some girls delight to make, Mr. Smallfield."

Toby was all sympathy now. He racked his brain for a piece of advice to fit the occasion.

"But your young—er—intended would surely think more of you than to believe——"

"He's shockingly jealous," interrupted the lady—"terrible! One of the best fellows in the world until he's roused, and then——" She flung up her hands in an attitude of horror at the possibilities of Jack Gripper's wrath.

"He's so far away, too," continued Miss Dumper, "a petty officer in the Mediterranean squadron. I daren't even be seen speaking to you like this now if he were in the room. Horrible thing, jealousy, isn't it, Mr. Smallfield?"

"A most deplorable state of things," replied Toby; "and you'll pardon me, I hope—to be tied for life to a man with such a weakness would be——"

"Of course I pamper him a lot; I take good care he doesn't get occasion to be jealous of me. It's worth while; he's such a good fellow otherwise. Besides, I've no doubt in time——"

"But is it wise?" asked Mr. Smallfield.

"I don't know; I've given my promise—see, they're taking partners for the 'Lancers.'"

Toby fancied he detected a note of despair, and a desire to change the subject in Miss Dumper's remark. He thought much and deeply over the matter during the ensuing weeks, and, although his sympathetic heart went out to the lady in her trouble, he nevertheless experienced a feeling of elation at the prospect of a gentleman betrothed to a lady being disturbed because that lady showed an inclination to favor his intellectual conversation.

The socials were monthly fixtures, and Toby attended the next one with the idea of discovering whether the relations between Miss Dumper and her sweetheart were still smooth.

To his surprise the young lady seemed to avoid him on this occasion. Toby went out of his way to get near her, but she brushed past him hurriedly in a state of obvious agitation. This was too much for the susceptible Mr. Smallfield; he waited until Miss Dumper was seated next to a vacant chair and promptly seated himself beside her.

"Miss—er—Dumper," he began awkwardly, "may I have the pleasure of a dance—if your programme has a vacant line?"

The lady gave a nervous start and glanced around suspiciously to see if she was being observed by any of the company.

"Excuse my apparent rudeness to you tonight, Mr. Smallfield," she exclaimed hurriedly. "I mustn't be seen speaking to you; there's mischief afoot; I go about in fear of my life almost."

Mr. Smallfield gave utterance to a gasp of indignation.

"What!" he exclaimed. "You mean to say——"

"Some one has been writing things to Jack; I had a letter from him this morning. He accuses me of—oh, go away, please!"

Chivalrous Toby Smallfield did nothing of the sort; instead, in the excitement of the moment, he grasped the lady's wrist with his own trembling fingers.

"Miss—er—Dumper! Calm yourself! You really must," he blurted out. "You need advice; I feel it my duty to get to the bottom of this conspiracy. Take my arm; you look as though you were on the verge of fainting. We will go outside for a bit, and you shall tell me all about this fine fellow and his slanderous tricks."

Miss Dumper suffered herself to be led into the garden attached to the hall, where, after Toby had procured her a chair and a borrowed bottle of smelling salts, she soon declared that she felt "ever so much better," and expressed her willingness to answer her companion's anxious inquiries.

"Some one has been writing things to Jack," she whispered in an injured tone.

"About what?" asked Mr. Smallfield.

Emily Dumper glanced down at the toe caps of her patent-leather dancing shoes with an assumption of bashfulness.

"About—about you," she replied hesitantly.

"Well, what about me?" queried Toby pleasantly. His self-righteousness told him that anything written about him could only redound to his credit—if founded on fact.

"I don't know what was written, or who wrote it," replied the distressed damsel, "but Jack has written me a most awful letter, in which he accuses me of playing fast and loose with his heart. He says that—that I have picked up with some—some little whippersnapper of a——"

"Eh!" ejaculated Toby. "This is a matter for a solicitor. Have you got that letter?"

"I threw it on the fire; I was so disgusted with him," said Miss Dumper. "Oh, if I only knew the mischief-making hussy who has dared to——"

"Sure it's a woman?" broke in Toby.

"No man could descend to such meanness!" retorted the lady.

"True," mused Toby; "very true."

"He says he is coming home," added Emily Dumper apprehensively.

"When he does, bring him straight to me; I'll give him a piece of my mind coupled with some sound, sensible advice," suggested Mr. Smallfield in his "grand" manner.

"I tremble to think of what may happen," said the lady with an involuntary shudder. "I've a good mind to get a situation away in the country somewhere."

"You mustn't do any such thing; there's your reputation to be cleared—and my character to be vindicated."

"One reads such awful things in the papers, and people nearly always blame the poor girl."

Toby scratched his head perplexedly. "Let me know the next developments; I'll give you my address," he added after a few moments' deliberation. "Depend on me; I won't fail you in the hour of trouble."

"How can I ever thank you?" said Miss Dumper, smiling through her tears.

"Tut-tut! Don't mention such a trifle!" said Toby loftily.

. . . .

A fortnight elapsed, and Mr. Smallfield had heard nothing further of Miss Dumper and her jealous young man, then one morning he received a post card scribbled in obvious haste:

"Can you meet me tonight 8 p.m. Climax pending.—E. D.," he read. Picturing himself as one of the brave knights of old sallying forth to succor a female in distress, Toby decided to forego his chance of shining at the debating class that evening, and kept the appointment instead.

"Well?" he asked, when Miss Dumper arrived at the place of rendezvous half an hour late; "the climax is——"

"That Jack has purchased his discharge and is coming home at the end of the month."

"To claim you?" queried Toby.

"To murder me more likely!" replied Emily in a scared whisper.

"You are frightening yourself unnecessarily; this is England, not Malta, Mr. Jack Gripper must bear in mind," said Toby. "Have you written to him at all since he—since he took these mad fancies into his head?"

"I wrote explaining my position; I told him his jealous fears are baseless and that if he is not satisfied and thinks to frighten me, I have a very good friend to stand by me."

"Ah, that should make him sit up," smiled Toby. "What does he say to that?"

"His letter—the one I received this morning—says that what I told him only confirms what he has already been told. He wants to know what right YOU have to interfere in his affairs."

"He does, does he? I think you told me that you are not formally engaged to this young fire eater?"

Miss Dumper glanced at the finger sacred to engagement—and wedding rings.

"I haven't an engagement ring yet," she replied.

A brilliant idea struck Toby. "Supposing he came back to find that some one really had a right to protect you—eh? Bit of a slap in the face for Jack Gripper, wouldn't it be?"

Emily professed not to understand. "When he comes I hope you won't meet him," she said. "I think it better, after all, for me to go away to a situation as a——"

"We must fight it out!" interrupted Toby. "He has attacked my character as well as yours. You are not legally engaged to any man; very well, you shall be, that is, if—if——"

Miss Dumper blushed, and waited for the finish of the sentence.

"You don't care for this blackguard after his disgraceful conduct?" queried Mr. Smallfield softly.

The lady shook her head slowly.

"Would you care for me instead?" asked Toby. "Apart from wishing to help you, I assure you I have grown to love——"

Toby never finished the sentence. He had no need to; Emily's head was resting on his shoulder; one of her arms was encircling his neck.

. . . .

Mr. Smallfield was returning home from his work one evening when a tall, bronzed, burly young man accosted him.

"Halt a minute, young fellow-me-lad!" demanded the stranger, laying a heavy detaining hand on Toby's shoulder. "Does your name happen to be Mister Tobias Smallfield?"

"I'd like to know what business that is of yours?" retorted Toby. The stranger smelt of drink, and appeared to be of an argumentative turn of mind.

"Ho-ho, my lad! My name's John Gripper. Just examine your log, and see if you can't trace an entry."

"My name IS Smallfield," admitted Toby.

"Good!" replied Mr. Gripper cheerily. "And when you have an 'affair' with a gentleman, as they say on the continent, what weapons do you generally fight with, pistols or——"

"Let me pass; I have no wish to talk to you!" interrupted Toby excitedly.

"But I have an account to settle with you!" retorted Mr. Gripper. "What do you mean by prejudicing—that's a big word, ain't it?—by coming between a sailor man and his wife that is to be, eh, you land lubber?"

"I did no such thing, and I may tell you that Miss Dumper is engaged to me if you wish to know."

This was evidently a knockout blow for the bold sailor.

"She's engaged to—you?"

Toby nodded.

"But what about me? I've bought myself out on purpose to thrash you and marry her myself. What about me, I say?"

"The best thing you can do is to sell yourself in again," replied Toby, at a loss for a better suggestion.

"Will you swear you are engaged to marry her and that she is false to me?"

"You may take it that that is what it amounts to," replied Toby, delighted at finding that Mr. Gripper's murderous intentions were evaporating in view of his being so completely "cut out."

"Then I'm off to Canada! I'm done with women—they're a fickle, false, empty lot!" exclaimed Mr. Gripper emphatically. "I'm off to—no, I ain't; I forgot. I bought myself out, so I ain't got the passage money, have I?"

"If that is the only difficulty, and as perhaps I am the innocent cause of your return," suggested Mr. Smallfield, in an outburst of magnanimity, "perhaps you would accept a small present from me to cover your expenses. A ten-pound note—eh?"

"Shipmate," said the sailor warmly, "you're a gentleman; you'd make her a good husband—a better one than myself, maybe."

"There's not much doubt about that," muttered Toby as he led his late rival into his lodgings, where a few minutes later he handed over one of the ten-pound notes which made up the half-yearly income from his house property.

. . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Smallfield were in the railway carriage bound for Hastings on their honeymoon trip. The bride rested her fair tresses on her husband's shoulder and smiled shyly into his admiring eyes.

"You do really love me, Tobias?" she asked for the fifteenth time that morning.

"Of course I do, darling!" replied the happy man.

"Nothing would ever make you love me even the weeniest little bit less?"

"Nothing in the world."

A kiss emphasized this statement.

"Even if I had to confess something about Jack Gripper?"

"Even that," replied Toby with a chuckle. "By the way, my love, I have to make a confession about that gentleman. I didn't tell you I met him and got rid of him effectually. I've sent the beggar off to Canada—best place for the like of him. It's a wonder to me what you ever saw in the fellow to—hallo! What's the matter, my darling?"

Mrs. Smallfield was gazing at Toby with an alarmed expression.

"Nothing, dear. I mean it's—it's the heat and the excitement, I suppose."

"What was your little confession about Jack Gripper?" asked the husband half an hour later when Emily had quite recovered from her attack of faintness.

"It—it wouldn't make any difference now, would it?" asked the bride.

"Not an iota; what about the rascal?"

"Only that—that there never was such a person."

"Eh—what!" blurted out Toby. "I tell you I met him and spoke to him, and——"

"You couldn't have done because I invented him. You were always so indifferent to me until you thought there was some one else in the field. I never told a soul except my brother Ted about my little deception. You do love me, don't you, Tobias?"

Toby kissed her—after a thoughtful pause.

. . . .

"What is the matter, Tobias? I believe you really are cross with me."

"No—no, my love; I was only—only thinking about something. What sort of a fellow is your brother Ted? I fancy I've—I've met him somewhere."

GEORGE BRYAN.

As He Would Have It.

"Life," remarked the clerical-looking passenger, "is made up of trials."

"Yes," rejoined the man with the prosperous air, just across the aisle, "and I'm glad of it."

"Indeed!" exclaimed the c.-l.-p. in surprise. "Why are you glad?"

"Because," explained the other, "I'm a lawyer."—[Chicago News.

Revenue Cutter Service.

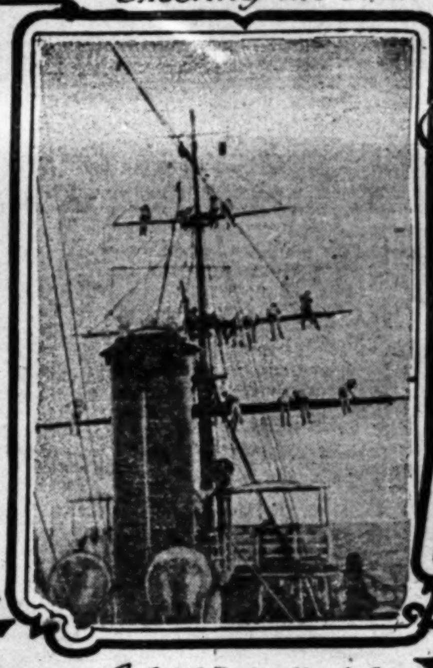
THE TRAINING THAT MAKES EXPERT GENTLEMEN SAILORS.

By a Special Contributor.

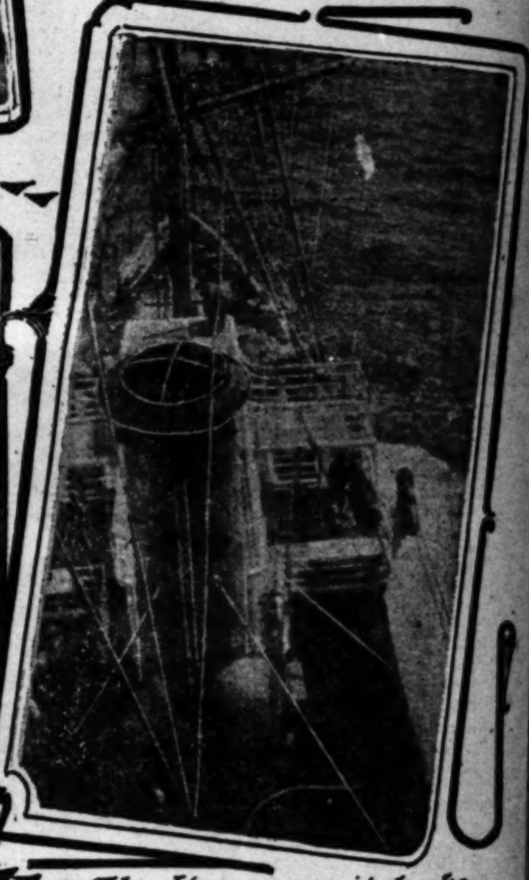
TO gain the education that comes only with wide travel beyond the seas, to obtain a perfect schooling in seamanship and navigation such as can be gained only by actual association with Old Neptune in all his moods, to maintain abroad the social standard set at home, to broaden the ideas of youthful minds—these are the purposes which the officials of the revenue cutter service seek to accomplish when they send the cadets abroad each year for their annual cruise. And they do not fall far short. Somewhere out on the Atlantic today there are sixty-six cadets of the service on board the practice cruiser Itasca returning from a three-months cruise to northern European ports. They are returning with brains widened and made elastic by the experiences and scenes through which they have passed, freshened and ambitious and ready for the next winter's term of hard study.

The sextent class, shooting the sun.

Getting his sealegs.



A little drill aloft



The Itasca as it looks from aloft.

This is the fourth cruise of its kind since their inauguration by the revenue cutter service. It was impossible to overlook the navy department's demonstration of the benefits of such work in the training of future officers, and the revenue cutter service, comparatively young in its present organization though old in years, adopted the system as soon as Congress granted it a suitable ship. The officials sent their young students first to southern Europe, then to the northern countries, and these routes have been alternated each year since.

Ten years ago the revenue cutter service held open for the young men who desired to follow a seafaring career but little more advantage than the ordinary coasting steamship lines of the present day. The young men who entered the service prior to that time did so solely because of their love for nautical work. There were a number of vacancies occasionally, which were not always filled at once. The education proved not so attractive as to always entice young men who were capable of passing the entrance examinations.

Today the service offers this and more. The cadet enters the service as a high-school graduate; when he completes his studies he is educated to the same standard as that set by the leading colleges for their graduates. And since 1900 there has been an average of twenty-five applicants for every vacancy.

But it is no disparagement to the older officers to compare them with the new. Those men, practically self-educated by hard experience, were directly responsible for the present high standard. Prior to 1900 the service was looked upon as merely a marine police force. There was military organization and discipline, but there was lack of power and command outside their immediate corps. There was no recognition of relative rank, and with any combined work with the army or navy the rank of an individual officer of the revenue cutter service was given no more attention than if he were an officer of a merchant marine vessel.

It was this condition that caused the friction during the naval campaign at Manila Bay, that caused, in fact, the climax which started the movement to reorganize the service. Although the cutter McCulloch did excellent service as a dispatch boat in that battle her officers were officially snubbed. The situation stung, and the officers at once started the movement which resulted in an entire reorganization. Since July, 1900, therefore, the standard of education has increased, the highest rank of the service now holds the same standing as a commander in the navy or a lieutenant-colonel in the army, the older officers retire at the age of 64 years, thus providing a more rapid means of promotion for the younger men, and the social status of the service at official functions has become indisputable.

All this has resulted in a corresponding change in the preparation of a cadet for a commission in the service, for the needs of the service have likewise changed. Added work has provided a means for creating new systems and schemes, and while the older officers have good reputations to maintain the younger men have a greater chance to create new records.

The original training of a revenue service cadet began in 1877 with the establishment of a school at Pensacola, Fla. A young man entering the service in those early days, though rated officially as a cadet, was no more in fact than the merchant marine apprentice of modern times. He was first sent to the school, supplied with sailor clothes, and given a six months' course of study in navigation, a small amount of drilling with ordnance, and a training in navigation laws, the service regulations, and the civil government. After that, he spent a year and a half on board some one of the cutters where, by coaching from the executive officer and the boatswain and through hard experience, he was supposed to have gained an expert knowledge in seamanship. He was, in fact, simply made a practical seaman with sufficient knowledge of the laws of his country to enable him to police the coast and pounce upon the offender.

In the intervening years prior to 1900 a few studies were added, including mathematics, physics and engineering. At the completion of these he became eligible for appointment as a third lieutenant, but the commission came only when a vacancy occurred; it might be a year, or two years, or even three, after his graduation.

Almost every young man desiring to follow a nautical career knows of the change which has occurred for the cadet's betterment since the reorganization. The retirement of the older officers creates a certain number of vacancies each year. Each year, therefore, a new class is appointed, and each year an alluring career is offered the young man ambitious to combine a higher education with the seafarer's life, for he will secure that training and the consequent social standing, and though he will not have the opportunities with which he might meet in civil life for amassing any great quantity of wealth, he will be amply protected by the government in his old age.

One of the cadets of the present second-year class said just before the present cruise began: "My ambition, after graduating from the high school of my home town, was to secure a nautical training. But I also wanted a higher education. Neither the school-ships nor the merchant marine offered this, and Annapolis was out of my reach. I tried for the revenue cutter service and won out. I am getting all that I had hoped for."

The new academy is located at Arundel Cove, a few miles south of Baltimore, Md., on the Chesapeake Bay. There are four buildings on shore used as classrooms and laboratories. The headquarters and dormitories are on board the receiving ship Oriole. This, also, is the home of the practice vessels Chase and Itasca.

The course consists of three years of study. In these three years eleven subjects are studied, graded according to each year. The general studies include discipline, seamanship, navigation, ordnance and gunnery, mathematics, engineering, law, chemistry and physics, English history, modern languages and hygiene. With the exception of ordnance and gunnery the scope of the work in the other subjects is nearly as complete as at Annapolis.

Each of the three school years is divided into three terms, the sea term from May 6 to the end of the cruise in September, the first term from October 15 to January 31, and the second term from February 1 to May 1.

The cadet is initiated with nautical terms upon his entrance to the school. He must come provided with $150 with which to equip himself with uniforms and in fact complete regulation clothing and books. Immediately upon receiving these, he is ordered to "ship," which means that he casts aside civilian clothes and dons a uniform. Once or twice only during his three years of study will he again wear civilian clothes; only, in fact, when he is on leave of absence.

During these three years the pay of a cadet is [illegible] a year. While this is allowed him by the government under which he is studying, it is not given in the nature of a salary for service performed. The primary object is that the cadet may be able to provide himself with clothing and books and other expenses charged against him. To this end the superintendent of the academy is authorized to direct and control the expenditure of the compensation of cadets, allowing to each from time to time, for his own use, such sums as he may think proper. To check these expenses each cadet is also required to keep an account book.

Ten dollars a month is also withheld and deposited to the credit of the cadet by the paymaster, and at his graduation this accumulated sum, $360, is given him so that he may purchase his uniforms and outfit as a commissioned officer without contracting a debt.

In the training of marine cadets it is universally acknowledged by maritime countries that the work is seamanship cannot be made complete without a thorough training on a full-rigged ship. To accomplish this end, the practice vessel Chase was added to the school. This served its purpose well enough and it carried the cadets abroad in perfect training. But there were two great drawbacks to its use, engineering and time. Those cadets who had elected to become engineers had no instruments on board with which to practice their profession, and the time required in passage was so uncertain that no satisfactory itinerary could be mapped out. Hence, with the reorganization of the school came the cutter Itasca. Therefore, with steam providing the necessary training for the engineer cadets and defying wind and wave, and with square-rigged sails with which to drill the young men of the deck force, the Itasca forms one of the greatest parts of the education.

In the relative weights of studies for each year seamanship and navigation count the greatest. But it is not hard work; it is fascinating. The ocean, though always the same, is ever new in mood. It is interesting to watch the sharp prow cut the heavy waves, it is interesting to forecast the shifting winds, it is interesting to catch the sun on its meridian altitude each noon, to read on the log the distance traveled, to apply the premise and to make one's own deductions. Through all this entertaining work they are learning, for the cadets note the effect of the heavy waves on the shp's course, they see the effect of the shifting winds and learn how and when to reset the sails, and they are taught to apply the results of their own observations to the chart, determine their position on the broad seas, and lay the course for the next twenty-four hours.

With the assembling of the three classes on board the Itasca for the summer cruise the studies in seamanship and navigation begin at once. The cadet begins in his first year by being an ordinary seaman, then performs the work of an able seaman, then the duties of an officer.

The acquiring of sea legs is the first work given the first-year men. This is one of the greatest essentials of seamanship. There is a wide difference between the life of a landsman and that of a sailor; so wide, in fact, that until the landsman learns to respond to the motion of a vessel's deck and to plant his feet with confidence he cannot hope to master the further details of the profession. It comes with a gradual evolution, almost unconsciously from day to day the first-year man learns to walk as sailors walk, to sleep as sailors sleep, to eat as sailors eat, and finally to work as sailors work. And during this time the class becomes acquainted with each line and halliard of the vessel's rigging, and every detail of the ship above and below decks.

The second year, therefore, finds them able seamen, not only competent, but ready and willing to spring into the railings and scramble aloft to the dizzy heights of the skysails at the command from the bridge. But there are also other duties, quite as important. There are the night watches during which the lookout aloft must keep an eagle eye on each of the 360 degrees of the horizon and "sing out" to the officer of the deck how the position of every light or sail that may be sighted. There is also the trick at the wheel where they see how only a few degrees variation from the course will, in a very few miles, place the ship far out of her proper track, and just how much a slight movement of the steam steering wheel will turn the ship's head. Back on the quarter deck one of the boys stands watchful during his tour of duty close beside the life buoy, always ready to unhook and hurl it to the unfortunate member of the ship's company who may fall overboard.

In the course of this practical sea training, the awe of the first-year cadet gives place to a sort of gay confidence in the second year, while in the third and senior year he develops a more serious interest in his work and feels the responsibility of actual navigation. For during a watch the first-class man acts as officer of the deck, navigator, or division officer, taking actual charge of the ship or his department under the supervision of a commissioned officer of the service.

It requires quite an expert knowledge of a distinct kind in order to go through the ceremonies of official visits when they occur on the arrival of a ship of a foreign country in port. First the ship must be dressed with the proper flags and ensigns. She must enter port trim and neat, cast anchor at the spot designated by the port naval officer, ship the gangway and prepare for callers. The official callers must be entertained in a manner befitting their rank; then the calls must be returned either to the ship of other nations in port or to the land officials, or both.

The cadets must go through all of this official routine, and they gain thereby a certain ease and self-confidence, which go to offset the stiff formalities by which such proceedings are always marked.

By far the most enjoyable portion of this section of the training are the receptions and balls and sightseeing parties often given in their honor at the different ports. The Azore Islands have come to be a regular stop each year for the cadets, whether they be taking the northern or southern route, and the residents stand ready with some form of amusements the moment the ship is sighted. They go from there to the fastnesses of Gibraltar, to the bull fights of Spain and Portugal, to the earthquake section of Italy, or if on the northern route to busy London, gay Paris, the hills of Scotland, and finally land among the gay towns of Norway and Sweden.

All these visits bring the young men many new ideas of the world and its people, all of which becomes doubly useful to the officer in his career in the revenue cutter service. He is liable to meet and deal with the people of all maritime countries in vessels along our coasts, and his acquaintance with their customs and their languages is almost indispensable.

ALFRED C. PICKELLS.

In the House of Commons.

PROCEEDINGS AS SEEN THERE BY AN IRREVERENT AMERICAN.

By Carl S. Hansen.

WHEN you go to London, it's worth while trying to hear a debate in the House of Commons. Some friend, if you are lucky enough to have one in England, will give you a letter to his member, who will give you a ticket for one day. The M. P.'s ticket is a certificate that you are respectable and serious-minded; in fact, it makes you out so unco guid you don't feel natural, and are ashamed of yourself. At the House, ten policemen look at your signature on the ticket and try, in that dull, heavy, bewildered way big policemen have when they seem to think, to recall if you ever led a Suffragette meeting or shouted as a Yiddish-speaking anarchist.

You sit on a long bench in silence with other people so genuinely respectable that you wonder it doesn't hurt them. Then in you go, in relays of ten, in charge of a bluecoat, to another inspector. Each of you see him privately and tell all about yourself and your member, and the date of the month, in a big book. You write with a thick, stubby pen and very black ink; never before have you so made your mark in the world. Why you do it you don't know, but all the time the left half of your brain keeps betting the right half a postage stamp that, if you didn't, this precious inkstand mightn't happen to need its particularly solemn sinecure, Keeper, at all. He gives you a free copy of the Order of the Day, the only programme in the Benighted Kingdom you don't have to pay tu'pence for; and grateful, whitewashed, respectable, almost with a halo, you enter a small gallery holding about seventy-five people.

The House is in session. Below you a chap with gray wig; black silk short pants and silver buckles on his slippers, is sitting on a sort of throne. In front of him are two clerks looking so exactly like him in dress you think the three might be triplets or gotten up for a turn at a music hall. On both sides sit the members on long leather benches, without desks, tables, or shelves. They seem keyed up to your own state of unnatural righteousness, and are listening earnestly to a dull old fellow, who reminds you of any one of half a dozen dear old fossils in the United States Senate. You marvel at the kind attention. While the dull member from England's Podunk is reading something about erecting an asphalt monument to the memory of the inconspicuous person who rendered insignificant services to one of the cousins of the Five Georges, the rest are listening as if the house were afire. They don't whisper or talk or yawn or go to sleep; they don't even leave their seats. You feel sorry for them, and your mind goes back to your own House of Representatives, that is run so much like the New York Stock Exchange. It isn't often you can hear even a Cannon roar. You miss the American way; the chap who snores so the sergeant-at-arms has to come; your own member from Somewhere, who would be munching sandwiches and digesting his local papers; and the illustrious member from Nowhere, who would be doing a novel, a banana, a talk on Jack Johnson, and keeping three pages spinning over the green carpet, all at once, despite the pounding of the Speaker. But the English members listen as if their lives depended on it or as if they were going to get a prize for it, and not a single one of them eat peanuts in his seat. And there are no pages. If a letter comes a magnificent-looking flunkey in a real dress suit, with a gilded badge pinned on his coat over his suspenders, brings it on a silver salver to another flunkey, even more gentlemanly attired, who hands it to the nearest member, who in turn passes it along.

Suddenly a throaty voice calls: "A communication from the House of Lords!"

The little gallery rouses, for the House of Lords and the House of Commons haven't been on speaking terms for a long time. In fact, the House of Commons has been suggesting to the decrepit House of Lords that it lay its old head on the chopping block and take the ax in the neck, nice and gentlemanly. And the House of Lords has been as indigant over it as a hectic turkey gobbler.

The very courteous members sit up to take notice, and such among them as have been careless enough to display silk hats, hastily remove them.

Enter the august representative of the House of Lords. You know he is a real lord; in fact, he is the only bona fide lord you have ever seen; and your opinion of a real lord doesn't go up very much when you see this bald chap with gray whiskers and a sword. Nevertheless, bald men may be dramatic, even in silk short pants and with silver buckles on their slippers. He bows tremendously as he enters, but you know he conceals a haughty spirit, else he wouldn't be a Lord, and be objecting to the castigation the patriotic Commons wants to administer to him so thoroughly; then he stops before the throne and says, clearly and distinctly: "The House of Lords has finished its second reading of the African Bill."

The Speaker rises from his throne. All the members rise. The dignitary from the House of Lords backs out, bobbing; all the members bob. But they don't mean it; you know they don't; and they know you know they don't mean anything by it, except the villain's aside off by the wings: "Ha! ha! A day will come!" Everybody in the gallery sighs; it was like the exhibition piece at the fireworks.

Then one of the bewigged clerks grabs up a big golden mace, a ponderous club as thick as a loaf of bread, swings it across his shoulder, and he and his fellow-scribe and the Speaker go after the lord who has disappeared. You wonder what's up. Are they really going to settle the hash of the haughty lord? The mystery is never solved. No account of bloodshed in the next day's paper.

A voice cries out: "The Speaker!" and all the members stand while the Speaker strides in as majestically as if he had done the deed, and sits on his throne again, one silver-buckled foot across his knee.

After a moment the Speaker rises. "The House of Lords has finished its second reading of the African Bill."

That didn't seem necessary. In fact, everybody knew it already. But of course a Speaker has to do something.

The Under Secretary for the Colonies rises to tell of the bill, now to have its third reading. He is tall, clean shaven, dressed in black, and his red hair is plastered over his head until it shines. He is broad-minded, for he belongs to the party in power. In a moment you catch it that this bill is of wide-discerning statesmanship. His restrained conversational oratory includes the whole world; in fact, you feel yourself an also-ran among the great things that are to happen when the bill passes. He is so winsomely courteous in stating the motives of the opposition, that you know the opposition, too, is patriotic and broad-minded, but not quite so broad-minded as the party in power. You learn that the only difference between the two parties that wage such deadly war at election time is, that the Party of Opposition has tremendous ability and perspicacity, but that the Party in Power has humbly and accidentally stumbled over two or three points which have escaped the opposition. That is what the Under Secretary says, though of course he doesn't believe a word of it. The Under Secretary is beating Senator Beveridge at his own pleasing game, when the Senator from Indiana is feeling particularly felicitous—and sure his bill is passing.

Suddenly you hear a low rumbling, a quick series of faint roars, and you glance about, startled. Where did that queer, dying noise come from, and why doesn't the sergeant-at-arms, if they have one, rush about, aghast? The government spokesman keeps right on, enthusing you with his broadmindedness and assisting the opposition by generously stating its objections so as to save its members the trouble. Again you hear that sound as of low thunder, and this time you make sure it came from right below you, near the Speaker himself. It would never do in America; our Speaker would get nervous and hot under the collar and red above it, and adjourn to find out the trouble. But the English Speaker seems indifferent, and from time to time you are alarmed with low-pitched yowls, as of a muffled lion.

Suddenly it breaks out again, this time louder and longer. It is indeed a lion roaring, the lion of England, in the person of the Party in Power. You hear their "Aye-yi-yi-yi!" like the trained barking of a college yell, their "Hear! Hear!" roared gently as suckling doves.

It has been a great speech, eloquent, masterful, and convincing to the Party in Power, for you hear its quick, muttered "Aye-yi-yi-yi!" like heavy rain falling on a skylight.

Then the Leader of the Opposition rises to tell how pleased he has been to hear so manly and just and splendid a speech. It was something to be proud of merely to have heard such masterly and skillfully-constructed reasoning. The only 900 objections that can possibly be offered lie in the deplorable fact that his honorable friend's breath ran out just as he was going to say the most important things. Though unworthy to succeed so excellent an orator, with his indulgence he will now, however, feebly and poorly, attempt to continue the discourse, saying those things which he was sure the distinguished Under Secretary would have said had time and voice been spared him.

And then, after you have listened to 300 of them, you yawn, and the gallery thins. You eat a pear you brought against the pangs of hunger, for as a visitor you forfeit your seat if you leave. You have been in the House seven hours and are just noticing that it seems smaller and higher than your House of Representatives, and that over the reporter's gallery, which is over the Speaker's head, there is a grill rising to the roof. For a long time you wonder what this grill is for, and after a while you discern behind it a big placard: "Silence!" You keep on staring, and presently you make out a feminine hat and hand. It is the ladies' gallery, famed for the Suffragettes, who chained themselves to this grill and shouted the characteristic British protest of a personal bill of rights. One can imagine now, with the soft-pedal House proceedings, what the first shriek: "Votes for Women!" must have meant to the members. The lion roar of "Aye-yi-yi-yi[" must have died down to a shiver, and one can see the Speaker, in woolen headgear, lifting his silver-buckled foot off one knee, and forgetting his dignity enough to look up, thunderstruck.

Only ladies of the members' family are now admitted, and it is said they must first solemnly promise to behave.

Defining Golf.

On the terrace of a country club, overlooking a green dotted with sheep, a group of non-golfers were taking tea.

A male non-golfer, who took his tea through a straw, said thoughtfully:

"Golf might be defined as billiards gone to grass."

"Spleen on the green, I'd call it," said a female non-golfer.

"Or the last flicker of the dying fire of athletics," sneered a young football player.

"The misuse of land and language," suggested a tennis champion.

"No, no; you're all wrong," said a famous angler. "Golf is simply a game where the ball lies badly and the player well."—[Louisville Times.

The Goddess of Liberty.

SHE COMES AS A STRANGER AND REMAINS AS A FRIEND.

By a Special Contributor.

"SH!" warned Flint mysteriously, "there's some one in the house!"

"There always is," I responded, a little bit impatiently. "Probably it is Alma West with some left-overs from the Cooking Club. My, I hope so!"

"It's a stranger."

"A stranger!" I echoed, and diving under his outstretched arm, I made a rush for the door, the other children tagging after.

"Yes, a stranger," laughed the Goddess of Liberty coming with outstretched hand to meet me. Flint named her in the kitchen, immediately after, but we all felt the resemblance at first sight of her. She was gracious, though, and lovely, and her height and amplitude made you feel here was some one to lean on and look up to for guidance and help. I liked her at once.

She seemed disappointed in me. "You are not like your mother," she said.

"I'm like father. These are mother's girls." And I put an arm about each little blond sister—Mary Ellen, so dear and grave, and Dorothy May, the sweetest joke that ever was perpetrated.

"Yes," she commented, patting Dorothy May's rosy cheek with one hand, while she smoothed Mary Ellen's soft flaxen hair with the other, "they have the hair and the eyes.

"And this?"

"Is Flint," I replied. "He's like no one else. But we like him that way."

"Flint's Flinty," explained Dorothy May, "but my big brother at college is like my father that's a doctor in heaven. Brother's going to be a doctor here. He's tooken care of me already, when I had the chicken pox. And he gives Mary Ellen medicine all the time. That's who we are." She paused for breath, then innocently asked: "Who are you?"

At this we all laughed, the Goddess of Liberty in particular seeming to enjoy it.

"I'm——" She paused, her gray eyes sparkling, her face alight. "Do you know, I've seen so much hospitality in this little house this morning I'm tempted not to tell you who I am. Would you entertain a stranger?"

"You are not one," I replied. "You are either some relative from the East or some old friend of mother's or father's——"

"You couldn't guess, I suppose," she suggested.

"Aunt Lizbeth!" shouted Dorothy May. Why, I couldn't tell, unless at some time in her brief life she had heard Brother and me recalling some of the droll tales our southern, easy-going little mother used to relate of her early experiences trying to entertain a very perfect, very critical, very wealthy, eastern sister-in-law.

The stranger laughed acquiescence. "Not a bad guess," she said.

I shuddered, remembering the cut-glass punch bowl she had sent us Christmas, and which our kind neighbor Mrs. Houghton had taken off our hands for $25; also, frantically, I wondered if we could borrow it back without Dorothy May's revealing the whole sordid proceeding. Fortunately, the other expensive useless things were put safely away, "until we marry a millionaire," Mary Ellen always said. All, that is, excepting "Dotter Fosser," the yellow brocade handkerchief the Shah or somebody had given her, and which, because of a certain very peculiar office it had come to fill early in Dorothy May's babyhood, was now a rag.

I pulled myself together. "You are very welcome, Aunt Elizabeth," I said, with a determined effort, throwing real cordiality into my voice. "And now, Mary Ellen will show you to your room, and Flint will help me get lunch."

In the kitchen Flint and I held a hasty consultation. "I'll telephone Miss Cook," Flint offered, "that you want her to substitute at the library, and I'll borrow back the punch bowl." He loped away like a coyote, returning, however, marching as one going to a wedding, and holding aloft our erstwhile property, which glittered like diamonds and rubies, tinkled like silver bells, and threw off a perfume like that wafted from some wild-strawberry bed.

"'Punch, brethren, punch with care,
Made in the presence of the passenjare!'"

he chanted.

"If Mrs. Houghton isn't a dear!" I said warmly. "I do hope she saved some for herself."

"Yep," he returned briefly, adding with animation, "Jiminy Christmas! that salad looks good to me! What is it?"

"Chicken," I replied, laughing at the half-truth I was telling. Scarcely a half-truth, indeed, for the mixture contained the dab of chicken and mayonnaise I had found awaiting me on the pantry shelf (a contribution from the Domestic Science class) and all the other things I had in the house, a couple of slices of tongue, a cold boiled egg, some olives, a radish and a head of lettuce. But at any rate it gave us the nucleus of a meal, and by the time I had made an omelette, and heated some rolls, and Flint had got down a jar of orange marmalade, we began to feel quite encouraged.

"Mother never said Aunt Elizabeth wasn't nice," I explained, "but she said she was very critical, and I believe if we are careful everything will be all right. I'll take her out to the University this afternoon, and that will help."

"How long is she going to stay?" Flint began, but I hushed him before he could say more, for I heard Mary Ellen bringing her downstairs.

It seemed pretty jolly to get down to a real luncheon served in the dining-room, for usually at noon we all lined up in a row before the pantry shelf for a hurried bread-and-milk lunch. And Aunt Elizabeth was lovely. So appreciative of everything, and so interested in our way of living!

"And when you are at the library, and Chadbourne at college, and the children at school, do you never lock up?" she asked.

"Oh, no," I explained. "If we did nobody could get in!"

She laughed at this. "I realize that in a very personal way," she replied, looking very much amused. "I'm sure I'm glad I wasn't locked out! It was such a rest and pleasure to sit quietly looking over your mother and father's books. And so many others were coming and going all the time. First a charming young girl who practiced for an hour—she told me all about the family that lived in the little house that kept itself, as she designated it; then about 10 o'clock a young man dashed hastily in, slammed down a book, grabbed up another, and with a hurried apology to me, rushed off; at 11, a motherly lady came in with a pan of rolls, which she said she wished to exchange for some lettuce from Flint's garden, and at 12 a dark-haired, plump girl in a white apron ran into the kitchen and put down a bowl of mayonnaise and a covered dish. The cat and the dog welcomed everybody that came, in the most cordial way! Truly I have had a beautiful morning in the little house that keeps itself, and I just love it!"

"I love you lots, too," remarked Dorothy May engagingly, giving our visitor a little love pat, adding abruptly: "See the punch bowl!" She caught my warning eye at this point, and faltered: "Why, Sister, if you were somebody else I'd think you were cross!"

Flint created a diversion by flicking a ladybug off the table.

"'What is so rare as a bug in June?
Then, if ever, come perfect bugs,'"

he quoted conversationally.

"When Flinty was a little boy," Dorothy May related in all seriousness, "he created a new world. It was in a box. He created land and water. The water was in acorn cups. And he had different kind of ladybugs, an' they were the people he created. An' he looked on it, and he saw it was good. An' he was God to them!"

"Dorothy May!" shouted Flint ineffectually, his freckles drowned in an overwhelming tide of scarlet.

"It is time you children were on your way to school," I suggested, partly through pity for Flint, partly through apprehension for myself, "and Dorothy May, you may go with Mary Ellen this afternoon."

As we rose from the table, Flint gave a sudden start and exclaimed apologetically: "There, Sister, I forgot to tell you! Miss Cook can't take your place at the library until 4 o'clock. She has an engagement."

"Flint!" I looked at him reproachfully, and excusing myself to Aunt Elizabeth followed the children as far as the gate.

Out of earshot of our guest, I issued orders rapidly.

"Mary Ellen, can you get up some kind of a dinner? Baked potatoes and chops and tomatoes, and strawberries, and if you have time, that nice cake of yours. I guess she'll eat all those things. And Flint, you make up the company bed. The sheets are in the third drawer of the press. The old linen ones with the monogram; you know she won't sleep between anything but linen. And do, do, if you possibly can, keep Dorothy May from talking about the punch bowl!"

"Right Oh!" yelled Flint speeding off on his wheel.

"Don't worry, Sister;" and Mary Ellen kissed me good-by.

"You darling old helper!" I gave her a squeeze and ran back into the house.

"I'm sorry," I explained, "but I have to go back to the library. But if you'll meet me there at 4—the car goes right past, so you can't miss it—I'll take you out to the University. I think you'll like to see it!"

"I know I shall," she responded heartily. But you mustn't give me time you can't spare, my dear."

"How nice she seems," I thought, reflecting on the contradictions of human nature, as I remembered my mother's saying, "And she won't eat——" Well, there is no need of going over the lengthy list. It had seemed to my poor mother than nothing but the difficult to get, or the difficult to prepare, were the things that agreed with Aunt Elizabeth. Her initials were E. O. T., and father had said they stood for Expense or Trouble.

"And she had to have linen sheets, and we only had two. I had to wash and iron them while she was off driving." Remembering mother's pathetic wail, I laughed outright, to the evident astonishment of the quiet readers about me.

"Something seems to amuse you," whispered Aunt Elizabeth, bending over my desk at 4 o'clock. But naturally I didn't tell her what.

We had a lovely time poking around the university, and at 6, pleasantly tired and very hungry, came home for dinner.

Mary Ellen, radiant in a becoming little pink frock, and with a huge pink bow in her hair, met us at the door.

"Everything is pink and green and white," she whispered, the minute she got me alone. "Salmon with white sauce, pink sweet peas on the table (I hunted everywhere for that elegant table cloth she gave us once, and couldn't find it anywhere,) lettuce salad, riced potatoes, olives, and for dessert, lemon jelly (pink!) I couldn't get strawberries, and the cake fell. But I have wafers."

"Dear child"—I paused, trying to break it to her gently, but feeling like a stricken deer myself—"you haven't a thing that she'll eat!"

"Jiminy Christmas!" This from Flint, stolen upon us Indian fashion, and breathed hard, a way he has when or some thing very bitterly.

"She can't help it, Flint," I explained body can't eat everything."

"She could if she had to!" he snorted

"And I thought her so nice!" mourned "She did the noon dishes, and seemed Oh, help, help!"

Help? A thought came to me, as Keats full-blown rose. "Flint," I screamed, "the

But when one sits down half later than usual to one's dinner, derly toward it, even if it is a little bit Elizabeth, too, I noticed, seemed appreci spoke of it afterward and said he believed cure such cases was to make the inter meals very long.

Of course, after such a late meal Dorothy tired and cross. Long before we got her began crying for her "Dotter Fosser."

"What does she mean by Dotter Fosser?" Aunt Elizabeth. I colored guiltily. "It's kerchief she always takes to bed with her,"

"And can't you find it?"

"It's—it's not around," I stammered, with barrassment.

"Dotter Fosser, Dotter Fosser!" sobbed unappeasably from my arms.

"Dolly," shouted Flint, bursting into "here's a dandy Dotter Fosser." He white silk handkerchief that had been the teacher he adored. It had been too mento for him to use himself.

Dorothy May dried her eyes on it and again.

"Dorothy May, look!" Mary Ellen best doll, Lily Ethel, put away six months one of us should marry and have children was to be brought out again.

Dorothy May, weeping faithfully, clasped vulsively to her heart. "Want my Dotter wap her in!"

"Dorothy May!" It was Aunt Elizabeth "When I came from my home I thought of you dear children, and brought each one present. Now, if you'll stop crying and go to sleep, I'll let you have yours tonight."

Dorothy May mopped her face with Flint's handkerchief, squeezed Lily Ethel within life, and hiccoughed: "Don't yant table yant punch bowl, don't yant——'

EDNA A. NEEDLES.

Forgery Betrayed by Heart Throbs.

In the midst of the discussions on the value of the evidence of expert witnesses in handwriting, a startling theory with regard to individuality in writing has just been elaborated by Dr. Lindsay Johnson, the well-known ophthalmic surgeon and author of many scientific works.

Briefly, it may be said to depend upon the fact that in a considerable number of diseases a person's pulse beats are individual, and that no one suffering from any such diseases can control, even for a brief space of time, the frequency or peculiar irregularities of his heart's action, as shown by a chart recording his pulsation. Such a chart is obtained for medical purposes by means of a sphygmograph, an instrument fixed to a patient's wrist and supplied with a needle which automatically records on a prepared sheet of paper the peculiar force and frequency of the pulsation.

Now, Dr. Lindsay Johnson maintains that the pen in the hand of a writer serves in a modified degree the same end as the sphygmograph, and that in a person's handwriting one can see by projecting the letters, greatly magnified, on a screen, the scarcely perceptible jerks and quivers made in the lines by the spontaneous action of that person's peculiar pulsation.

"To prove this," said the doctor, "an experiment was made by me at Charing Cross Hospital. At my request a number of patients suffering from heart and kidney diseases wrote out the Lord's Prayer in their ordinary handwriting. The different manuscripts were then taken and examined microscopically, and by throwing them, highly magnified, on a screen. When this was done the scarcely perceptible jerks or involuntary motions due to the patients' peculiar pulsations were distinctly visible."

The handwriting of persons in normal health does not always show their pulse beats. What one can say, however, is that when a document purporting to be written by a certain person contains the traces of pulse beats, and the normal handwriting of that person does not show them, then clearly the document is a forgery.

"I consider that when pulse beats are visible in a manuscript the theory is of the greatest possible value in detecting forgeries," continued the doctor; "for by means of it one can tell the speed at which any document was written. Now, since when a man copies another person's writing he is almost bound to write slowly, the finding of a large number of pulse beats in a signature is prima facie evidence that it is a forgery, the ordinary man always writing his name at speed."

Apart from his scientific researches necessary for writing his famous work on the "Mammalian Eye," Dr. Lindsay Johnson has found time to interest himself in criminology. It may be remembered that he did important work at the time of the Capt. Dreyfus trial and again in the case of Mr. Edalji. On the latter occasion he received a letter of congratulation from Sir A. Conan Doyle, who expressed the warmest admiration of his methods and admitted that but for the theories Dr. Lindsay Johnson had advanced Edalji might never have secured justice.—[London Daily Mail.

The Fish Hawk's Warning.

"The fish hawk tells us when the shad begin to run up the river," said a Gloucester fisherman. "We have learned that it isn't much use to cast nets, no matter how mild the weather may be, until Mr. Fish Hawk swoops down on us.

"When he comes sailing up the bay we know it's time to get to work. Lots of farmers down Jersey would never think to start planting until the fish hawks come. I don't believe they have ever been later than April 12, though. They work their way up the coast from Florida and the other southern waters early in March, when the fish begin to come north. They follow the big schools of herring, as a rule, because the herring swim close together, and the hawk has easy picking. The shad follow the herring, and when the fish hawk comes we know the shad are not far behind."—[Fishing Gazette.

The Wooing of Lolita.

Unexpected Ending to a Feud of Two Gentle Souls.

By a Special Contributor.

STRETCHED in his favorite chair of thatched rawhide thongs, Don Enrique Valabroso smoked his brown cigarro in the broad patio of his ranch house. Through the wide arched portal between the adobe pillars he gazed contentedly over his broad ranch acres sloping down from the Santa Rita foothills to the green-fringed river bed. Here and there on the gray background of rolling range dark forms drifted slowly, and on these Don Enrique's gaze dwelt with approving scrutiny. They were the V-A cattle—the Valabroso brand.

Don Enrique no longer rode the range with his vaqueros as in other days. Age brings its penalties with its rewards, and of late he found the thonged chair in the wide patio, with an occasional sip of mescal, more to his liking. Contentment, the heritage of his race, had blessed his lot. His stables boasted the best breeds in the valley, and—not less important in his eyes—three of his game cocks never had known defeat.

However, all these were secondary in Don Enrique's scheme of existence. The joy of his life centered in his hopes for the slip of a girl who had grown up in the old casa—his Lolita. Her future was the harbor to which all the fondly-freighted argosies of his dreams sailed. The instinct of domesticity in his Latin blood had at times roused vague fears in his loyal heart. Lolita had been away from him so long now—four years she had been in the Sisters' School at Santa Fé. Possibly she might have changed. Perhaps some unworthy lover had already claimed her heart—possibly an American. Don Enrique feared for these things. It seemed one read so much of unhappy marriages in these days. For a moment a shadow fell on his benign countenance, but only for a moment. Was not Lolita a girl of forethought? No Valabroso ever had contracted a misalliance.

Don Enrique lounged through the doorway and along the shady portico. The first haze of summer heat wavered over the ranges and the tang of new grass was in the air. His gaze traveled beyond the winding river to the somber hills beyond, and the ranch which crowned their summit—the spacious casa of his neighbor, Don Gaspar Aragon.

If the name of Valabroso had come to spell power in the north country, that of Aragon was equally potent south of the river. Don Gaspar's hombres ruled the ranges and his henchmen guided the votes of their fellows on election days in the southern districts even as Don Enrique's men in the north. Don Gaspar, too, had felt the weight of years and had left the cares of his estate to younger men. Soon his son would be returning from his eastern school to take up his duties as heir to the house of Aragon.

Throughout their long lives side by side the two men had been close friends. The distinction of name and the pride of caste had set them apart in the valley as scions of an aristocracy, real or fabled, traced from family lore handed down for generations.

As he strode down the long portico, Don Enrique's attention was attracted by a cloud of dust on the river trail. He shaded his eyes against the glare and studied the approaching vehicle. In a moment his face lighted with recognition. "Gaspar; bueno," he said.

Although scarce twenty-four hours had elapsed since their last meeting, Don Enrique received his guest with effusive formality. It was one of the conceits which both cherished that familiarity should never overstep the courtly deference which befits one of station. Don Gaspar's favorite chair was lifted to the most favored spot in the patio, Don Enrique bowing deferentially until his guest was seated. The host slid the clay tobacco olla across the table and tossed a packet of brown papers to his neighbor.

For some time the two smoked their hand-rolled cigarros in silence. Suddenly Don Enrique turned to the open door behind him "Ovez," he called softly. There was a patter of slippered feet in the entry and a head appeared abruptly in the doorway. Don Gaspar stared in unfeigned amazement, his host chuckling immoderately.

"A Chinaman—what does he here?"

"It is our new servant; Lolita is coming home."

For a moment Don Gaspar was silent. "Yes? Lolita is coming home? And you have hired a servant?" He regarded his friend approvingly. "That is right," he said, "that is as it should be. When does she come—tomorrow?" he continued presently. Don Enrique nodded.

"And my Pablo; he, too, comes tomorrow from New York."

For a moment the eyes of the two encountered across the table.

"They have not met for five years," said Don Enrique, "they will be greatly changed."

Again the gaze of the two challenged for a moment, each divining the thought in the other's mind. For the first time in their experience an embarrassed silence grew between them. The intimacy in which they had long taken pride had suddenly played them false. The words remained unspoken, but no less the thought had been uttered. Each read in the other's attitude the answer to the question which so clearly had insinuated itself between them. One does not propose or discuss family alliances as one deals in cattle. In a flitting second the issue had been defined and the incident closed.

Don Gaspar did not tarry long in the shady patio. The constrained silence which had grown between the two had robbed the hour of its usual congenial flow of spirit. Don Enrique set the mescal between them. Each filled his tiny glass and drank in silence, as was their wont. Then Don Gaspar drove away down the long hill.

"Enrique would be looking higher than my Pablo for his Lolita," he mused. "I will warn Pablo. He is an obedient son."

In the thonged chair in the patio Don Enrique sat long after his guest's departure. "So Gaspar has other plans for his Pablo. No doubt the choice has been made. Bueno; Lolita will not lack for suitors."

If Don Enrique had anticipated a revival of the life and gaiety of other days in the old casa with the coming of Lolita, he was not disappointed. Clad in the treasured family regimentals, he led the imposing march of the grand baile which marked Lolita's début in the social life of the countryside. Likewise his prediction that Lolita would suffer no lack of suitors received overwhelming vindication. From Naco to Nogales the most favored caballeros hastened to pay their respects to the new belle of the south country. Along the dusty roadside guitars were thrummed to soft Spanish love songs, and costly flowers and favors found their way across the long desert trails.

One suitor was absent—young Pablo Aragon never had crossed his neighbor's threshold save at the formal baile. Don Enrique noted his continued absence with a puzzled frown. He had hoped Don Gaspar would not display the breach until young Pablo had at least shown some justifiable interest. He had hinted broadly his own sentiments regarding Pablo to Lolita, and she had laughed at him and tweaked his ear, a familiarity he could neither bring himself to countenance nor condemn. Verily, one's childiren go out in the world to come back strangers.

As the days passed, Don Enrique ceased to engage the problem of Lolita's affairs of heart. The continued hilarity palled on his aging senses, and he was glad when the hot days of summer swept like a blast over the stricken ranges. Even the ardor of lovelorn youth could not withstand the blighting reaches of the desert trails.

If Lolita missed her courtiers her manner did not betray it. Each evening as the sun slipped over the desert rim and a cool breath of air surged down from the pine-clad hills, she saddled her pony and rode away down the road to the river or across the diagonal trails which marked her father's ranges.

During the torrid middays life resolved itself into a programme of siestas and languid hours in hammocks close to the refreshing drip of ollas. A haze of dust like a gray mist seemed to envelop the landscape. Summer had smitten the plains, and all life was quiescent.

Of evenings Don Gaspar came to exchange calls with his neighbor, as had been his wont for many summers. If they refrained from discussion of the one subject most vital to the happiness of both, it did not indicate any rift in their friendship. With true philosophy they had passed this by.

One evening they rode together at dusk along the river road inspecting the meager water holes. At a turn in the trail they came suddenly upon two riders outlined indistinctly in the twilight. Both peered ahead anxiously through the gathering gloom.

"It is Lolita," said Don Enrique presently.

"And my Pablo rides with her; what do you make of this?"

Don Gaspar halted the team as the riders approached. The surprise and confusion of the young people was evident even in the gathering darkness. For a moment Pablo hesitated, then spurred his horse forward alongside the buckboard.

"It would seem you have come to meet us half-way. That is a good omen," he said. His elders were silent, awaiting his explanation. "We were on our way to seek parental pardon. We need but your blessing to make our happiness complete."

For a long time neither parent spoke. Don Enrique straightened with an effort.

"An elopement!" he said huskily. "These things they have learned from Americans. Why did you do this?" he said sharply, turning to Pablo.

"My suit was discouraged. I had no other choice."

Again Don Enrique was silent in thought. Presently he turned to Don Gaspar.

"What say you?" he asked. Don Gaspar spread his hands in a comprehensive gesture.

"I would say the die is cast; bless you, my children!"

Don Enrique sighed audibly. "So be it," he said.

. . . .

Don Enrique set the mescal gently on the low table.

"Perhaps, Gaspar, after all, you are right. It must be our dotage is upon us. Like children, we would have let our foolish pride override our good sense."

Don Gaspar smiled as he raised his glass.

"Not so severe, amigo," he said. "We are living in new days, and our children have learned new ways. Young blood welcomes obstacles. Who knows but had we not forbid them they would have gone on with the gay lives they had learned and might never have joined our households. And that, Señor, would have been very bad," he finished.

Don Enrique had risen and extended his glass across to touch his neighbor's. Courtly deference was in his tone.

"That, Señor, would have been no less than a calamity," he agreed.

JACOB H. SCHIFF, at a dinner on the yacht Ramona, condemned a concern that had gone up.

"Straight business methods are the only ones," he said. "There is a moral in the receiver story.

"A man, you know, said one day to a little boy:

"'Well, Tommy, what are you going to be when you grow up?'

"'A receiver, sir,' Tommy answered promptly. 'Ever since pa's been a receiver we've had champagne for dinner and two automobiles.'"

Compliment to a Double.

MR. ROOSEVELT, on his famous visit to the Pennsylvania mines, met one of his many doubles. As he gave the double a hearty handshake, he laughed and said:

"I'm delighted to meet you. I think you look more like me than any of my other doubles. In fact, the resemblance is perfect, and I have no doubt that if you stood before me in a frame I could shave you.'"

Stinging.

MRS. PHILIP VAN VOLKENBERG, in a recent interview, said at Newport:

"Yes, it is true that the witty French press before my marriage called me 'as rich as Croesus, as beautiful as Venus, and as innocent as Dreyfus.'"

She smiled.

"But I paid no attention," she said. "The remark wasn't ill-meant. It hadn't the sting of a remark made the other day here.

"'Is it true,' said one lady to another at the Casino, 'that at your dance last night you were the only sober person present?'

"'No; of course not,' was the indignant reply.

"'Who was, then?' said the first lady blandly."

The Good Provider.

CLEMENT J. DRISCOLL, New York's efficient commissioner of weights and measures, advocates the sale of bread by weight, and discussing a baker's objection to this idea, he said with a smile:

"In Europe the government regulates the weight of bread and, in some cases, even the price. This baker, pretending that it is better for the people not to have such regulations, reminds me vividly of the good provider.

"A washerwoman—so the provider story goes—got married, and one of her clients said to her a month or so after the ceremony:

"'Do you get on well with your husband, Mary?'

"'Oh, yes, Ma'am,' was the reply.

"'Is he a good provider?'

"'Indeed he is a good provider, Ma'am. He got me four new places to wash at last week.'"

Rather Idiotic.

"H. D. VAN SANT, the American Consul at Dunfermline, warned me," said a Chicagoan, "against buying antiques. He declared that an old cabinet sold by a Dunfermline peasant for a few shillings, was bought a few months later by a Chicago millionaire for $4886.

"Mr. Van Sant said that the buying and selling of bogus antiques in Europe was so idiotic that it reminded him of a real conversation in a cheap East Side jeweler's.

"'Wot's the difference,' a young girl asked the jeweler, 'between yer 5-cent diamond rings and yer dime ones?'

"'You get a better diamond,' said the jeweler."

"THE most successful swindles," said James R. Keene, at a dinner at Saratoga during the races, "are those that have a basis of honesty. It's like the story of King Edward's pigs.

"At Sandringham, you know, King Edward raised prize swine, prize bullocks, and all manner of fancy live stock. Well there was a fashionable West End butcher who bought all the King's fat swine every year at a simply enormous price, and a reporter said to this butcher one day:

"'How can you afford to pay such prices for the royal swine?'

"'Well, you see,' said the butcher, with a wink of the eye, 'the King's pigs have such a lot of legs!'"

Bright Chicago.

DR. W. E. EVANS, Chicago's original and efficient health commissioner, was discussing his health circulars—striking papers that are studded with such phrases as "Filth, flies and fever are the three disgraces."

"I try, by means of these circulars," said Dr. Evans, "to get the public's attention. In the majority of cases I succeed, too. Chicago is a bright town, and there is not a single Chicagoan of whom you could appropriately say:

"'You may lead an ass to knowledge, but you can't make him think.'"

FLORA OF CALIFORNIA.

A MUCH-NEEDED WORK ABOUT TO BE ISSUED.

By Ernest Braunton.

AT last, after many weary years of waiting, we are to have a new, up-to-date and very complete work on the Flora of California, something that will be hailed with unusual delight by all students of California botany and welcomed by many who merely use the work for occasional reference. This flora is to be issued in parts, and two are already out of press, though they are neither the beginning nor ending of the work as a whole. The author is a botanist of note, who for many years has done some of the most thorough botanical work in this State, Willis Linn Jepson, Ph.D., assistant professor of dendrology in the University of California. The work will be illustrated with a great number of cuts and half-tone engravings—many of them full page—a most unusual feature in floras, for few indeed are illustrated, this phase of the work being common only in elementary text-books of botany. That the work is sorely needed is evident from the following from the pen of our veteran botanist, Mr. S. B. Parish of San Bernardino, himself a tireless worker in the field for the last quarter of a century.

"Thirty years has elapsed since the completion of the botanical volumes of the Geological Survey of California. The great botanists of that earlier time have passed away; new men, with new views, have succeeded them. The science itself has greatly advanced, and taxonomy has not been left behind. Our territory, then but half-explored, has now few recesses unvisited by the keen-eyed collector, whose labors have enriched our public and private herbaria. Our flora has been diligently studied in the field and in the closet, and these investigations have resulted in an extensive literature which is scattered in botanical journals and the proceedings of learned societies, in monographs and occasional papers, and in local and general floras. Of all this he who would study the flora of california must take account, for up to the present day the botany of the survey remains the only work covering the plants of the entire State. But adequate as was that great pioneer work, and useful as it still remains, not only has it long been out of print, and with difficulty procurable, but it has been left behind by the advance of time, a destiny from which all works of its kind can be saved only by frequent revisions. It is true that manuals have been provided for the vicinity of our two largest cities, but these, while reliable in their proper territory, contain pitfalls for the inexperienced when used beyond those bounds.

"The time is, therefore fully ripe for a new flora which shall gather up all this scattered knowledge, and arrange it in accordance with the present state of botanical science, that it may be readily available to the student. Such a work is now undertaken and we have before us the first two parts in which it is to be issued. We notice first the generous page, the satisfactory paper and typography, and the excellence of the numerous illustrations. And here we find something new in a book of this kind, for besides the usual figures there are a number of full-page half-tones showing the appearance, the habit and the haunts of the trees. This seems to us an admirable innovation, carrying the book from the study into the field and the forest. Noticeable among these is the fine plate showing the crown of the sugar pine, and the two plates illustrating the redwood, the first bringing out the close stand of the forest, and the second the method of logging. The descriptions are ample, but not unduly prolix, and the keys will be found to lead the student readily to the identification of his plant. Great care has evidently been given to the notes on the distribution of the species, which are full and unusually accurate, the author having the great advantage of a wide and close field knowledge of the California flora. In the notes on the Big Tree the location of all the groves is given, and the area of each and the number of its trees. Much information is also included regarding habit, economic uses, and other points of interest. When the entire book shall have been completed, on the scale indicated by these parts, California will possess a State flora far superior to any similar work. A State flora has long been impatiently desired, and more than once projected, but we may well be content to have waited so long, now that it is to be so worthily provided."

Learn to Know Trees.

OUR great Californian naturalist, John Muir, says: "And surely nobody can find anything hard in this; even the blind must enjoy these woods, drinking in their fragrance, listening to the music of the wind in their groves, and fingering their flowers and plumes and cones and richly-furrowed boles. The kind of study required is as easy and natural as breathing."

"To learn how they live and behave in pure wildness, to see them in their varying aspects through the seasons and weather, rejoicing in the great storms, putting forth their new leaves and flowers, when all the streams are in flood, and the birds singing, and sending away their seeds in the thoughtful Indian summer, when all the landscape is glowing in deep, calm enthusiasm—for this you must love them and live with them, as free from schemes and care and time as the trees themselves."

Rose-embowered Cottages.

NO other part of the world is so noted for its profusion of rose blossoms as is Southern California in midwinter. Other lands have as fine roses, sometimes much finer, than ours in individual blossoms, but in profusion of bloom none surpass us. Though somewhat common over fence, arbor and outbuildings, one-story cottages are by far the most common support for climbing roses. So luxuriantly do they grow, and with little care that they are not more common in the grounds of the wealthy than running riotously rampant over the cottages of the poor and the working classes.

Aquatic Glory.

JUST at present the most attractive feature of our ever-present floral display is to be found in the lily ponds. For at least a month the aquatic luxuriance of both the temperate and tropic zones have been unfolding, in every possible shade and color. Out at the large country estate of H. E. Huntington they have been nothing short of glorious, while within a smaller space, yet with a fuller range of color the display in the grounds of E. D. Sturtevant, the "water-lily man," at Hollywood, have well repaid the great number who visit there. In a country so naturally devoid of bodies of fresh water as is ours, aquatic gardens prove a most unusual charm.

Cleanliness in Gardens.

VERY few unkempt gardens present an inviting appearance no matter what the character of the plants within. A garden containing few plants in good condition and the whole area scrupulously clean is greatly to be preferred to one which is a mixture of weeks and untidy plants. Aside from the mere appearance many plants suffer from lack of attention not alone from lack of water and food, but also from need of judicious pruning, or staking, tying-up or support of some kind.

Biggest Trees in the World.

The Calaveras group, consisting of two groves, "Calaveras" and "South Park," contains more and larger trees than the other three groups combined, there being 1380 trees from sixty-five feet to circumference in the Calaveras group, and trees with a circumference of from seventy three feet in the other. All of these trees 300 to 365 feet in height. One prostrate the Calaveras grove—"the Father of the apparently 435 feet tall, with a girth of 110

Practically all of the larger trees have and labeled. The "New York" is 104 feet ference; the "Ohio' 103 feet. In the "Tree of sixteen head of cattle once sought shelter heavy storm. In the "Grand Hotel" forty stand without crowding.

Where Are the Trees of Yesterday?

IT may be that the total number of street trees in Los Angeles is on the increase, but it is quite certain that the number within the city boundaries of a decade ago are constantly growing beautifully less. Few street trees are planted, even in season, but the contractors for street grading are tearing them out every week in the year. The writer looks over the city pretty thoroughly at frequent but irregular intervals and last week saw more trees taken out of streets, yes, out of one street, than he has seen planted in three or four months. Not only is there a great disparagement in numbers, but those taken out were at least a score of years in place and entirely satisfactory in growth. Through an error of the planter they were not in the proper official place. It may be that their destruction was necessary, but the point to be emphasized is that the city takes out or allows to be taken out some noble street trees and makes not the slightest attempt to replant. The ultimate result needs no mathematics to demonstrate a treeless city. Every official in any way connected with the matter or who could in any way influence legislation on the subject has sufficient cause for feeling heartily ashamed of his neglect of our street trees on the part of the city. While we are a city of beautiful homes, we are not a beautiful city in any other sense, at least in daylight, and we who are deeply interested in the matter do not appear to be adequately represented in the official corps of Los Angeles.

Tropical Park Fountains.

A FEW years ago one of the finest features in all our park system was a tropical fountain effect in St. James Park; a pyramidal cone of cinders, etc., so built full of plant pockets that when in active growth it brought forth exclamations of admiration from all who saw it. Tropical foliage, especially in close proximity to water, always proves a strong attraction in any land and in ours is a peculiarly fitting method of garden ornamentation.

Beautifying Country Roadsides.

UNDER this subject, Mrs. Edith A. Cross made a strong plea, at a Monrovia farmers' institute in 1902, for the public planting of our wild flowers, and the following is an extract from her paper:

"There is a vast and unregarded public domain belonging inalienably to the people—theirs by right to do with as they will forever—of which the poorest settlement can make a perpetual park, a joy and rest, a delight to the present generation, a rich inheritance to generations to come. This estate of the people lies on either side of the many miles of public highway, belonging to every township.

"Now what, derisively inquires the substantial citizen, would the impractical, visionary woman have us do with the very narrow strip of ground bordering the roadway? Simply this—let us give our generous, bountiful mother Nature a little help in the brave, cheerful, determined effort she makes each season to plant these long waste strips to lovely native flowers, the rich and abundant flora which the careless husbandry of the ease-loving Spaniard permitted to remain, but which a hard and too practical people of Saxon lineage are simply civilizing off the face of the earth.

"The sides of the road seem a small and limited area, but it will hold a lot of weeds and an astonishing amount of brush, tin cans, baling wire, and other refuse, the removal of which would certainly be an agreeable change to ourselves and produce a very much pleasanter impression upon the tourist visitor whose good opinion we are generally anxious to merit. Probably every rancher will willingly concede that it would give an appearance of thrift and neatness to plow and harrow the roadsides. Many habitually so treat the roadside bordering their properties, and probably more than one tidy farmer has been led by this very regard for neatness to plow up some wild garden, which Nature has with loving efforts almost brought into bloom."

Plant Food.

All life, vegetable or animal, requires besides air, water, life and a favorable habitation, something to renew worn-out tissues and build up new ones. In animal life this is called food, in vegetable life the planter calls it manure or fertilizer—plant food.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

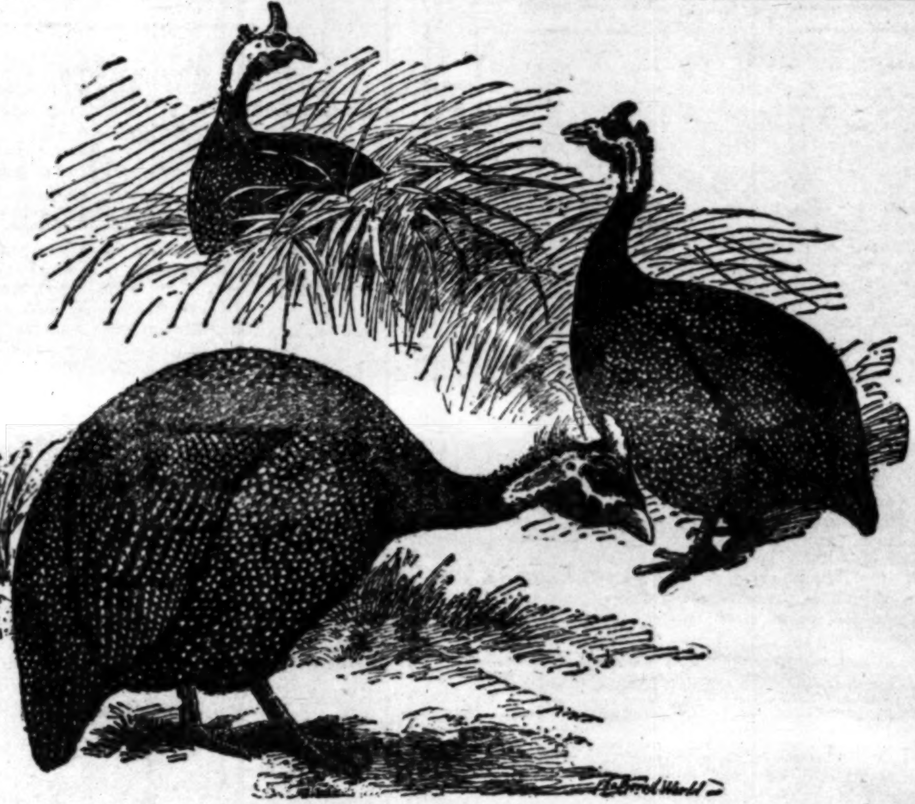
THE GUINEA.

A USEFUL, THOUGH SOMEWHAT NEGLECTED FOWL.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experiences with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

THE guinea fowl has been more or less in evidence in California for the past twenty-five years, though never in large numbers. In some respects this is due to the fact that they like free range, being good travelers, often rambling great distances in quest of food, hence not adapted to small quarters. Some people think them wild in their habits on this account. If given gentle treatment, however, they soon become docile and tame as pet bantams, freely feeding from the hand. In movement they are at times grotesque, and on this account have earned the reputation of being the clowns of the poultry yard.



A TRIO OF GUINEA FOWL.

Guineas are rated as tender birds east of the Great Divide; in this State they can be grown much like ordinary poultry. They prefer roosting in trees to the ordinary poultry-house, unless it be large and roomy. Usually the hens lay their eggs in out-of-the-way places, hence some breeders hatch with ordinary hens, the Games being preferred. In this way the young become accustomed to confined conditions and lose much of their shyness in a wild state. Sexes are much alike in appearance, the marked differences being that the males have a way of arching their backs and running on tiptoe, and are somewhat spiteful to common poultry; the cock's wattles are also larger than those of the hen. The hen utters a peculiar cry, which makes you think of the parrot with a "come-back" call.

The guineas are natives of Africa, and are grouped in five genera. In color of plumage there is more or less variation; their peculiar beauty, with a rich blue evident in every feather, has a fascination for the fancier. In growing them, care must be exercised with the young, as they are tender, and even slight neglect may carry off a whole brood.

Outside of their beauty of feather and grotesque appearance, the guinea also possesses economic values. Game breeders claim for them a use as watch dogs in the poultry yards when with other fowl. They are very alert, and on the slightest approach of danger, be it from hawks or quadruped enemies, they at once issue their shrill and piercing cry which can be heard at a considerable distance. The carcass also presents a palatable meat, being of a delicate wild flavor suggestive of pheasant. The eggs also are good eating. Birds for the table should be fattened before killing by placing several together in a pen for a couple of weeks, feeding liberally, when they will be ready for the block.

Not Getting Their Dues.

We sometimes think that the poultry breeders and fanciers do not make sufficient use of the information contained in the bulletins on poultry culture issued by a number of the several State agricultural experiment stations. To be sure, some of them possess a questionable value, but many of them give information that will greatly assist breeders in the proper management of poultry. Our own station at Berkeley has issued some really practical bulletins on feeding and feed values, on the diseases of poultry, and kindred topics. Bulletins of eggs and egg-laying management from the Utah and Oregon stations should be carefully studied by all commercial breeders. Late bulletins on breedin and mating from the Maine station throw new light on the operation of the Mendelian principal, those on moulting and feeding by Cornell University and the Virginia station at Morgantown, are all worthy of careful reading. For the most part, this literature is to be had for the asking, especially from your own State station, and in most cases from other States. We suggest that all breeders get in direct touch with these sources of information.

Forcing the Moult.

The writer cannot say that he is an advocate of forcing the moulting period in fowls, other than by giving them fattening rations and extra care. There are, however, breeders who advocate forcing, which usually consists in starving the birds for about three weeks, and then feeding liberally a rich nitrogenous ration. In this way, so it is claimed, the shedding of the old feathers is accelerated and the growth of the new crop hastened correspondingly. It is further argued in favor of the practice that the hens will commence laying sooner than if the moult is allowed to take its natural course. All of which is after all more or less a speculation. In the nature of the practice forced moulting because of starvation rations must at first depress the birds and "pull down" the system more or less; later, when fed liberally, there must be stimulation above the normal, either condition of which must be negative to egg production. Experiments tried off and on seem to verify this conclusion. Something, however, can be said in favor of the nitrogenous ration. We know of one trial where one pen of birds were fed plenty of animal fats, principally tallow products, and another pen was given linseed meal. The average egg production was in favor of the latter, due chiefly to the fact that the linseed meal was richer in nitrogen, thus helping along the structure and growth of new feathers.

Exercise, Exercise, Exercise.

Readers of Napoleonic literature will readily recall Napoleon's three essentials for war, namely, the first money; the second, also money, and the third more money. Likewise, it seems to the writer that in poultry culture, the first element to provide the laying hen is exercise, and again and again exercise. For no matter how carefully you feed, and the care you take in maintaining sanitary conditions and plenty of pure water, your birds will soon degenerate into a state of innocuous desuetude unless kept busy at work. Ways and means have often been referred to in this department, and depend somewhat on local conditions and environment. On the ranch where the birds are given free range, the problem solves itself—as to its value as a stimulant for egg production, we sometimes think that confined flocks when supplied with proper scratching quarters, will prove the most profitable. An enclosure of boards, say eight to ten inches high, filled with litter, preferably cut straw, makes an excellent workshop for Biddy. A handful of millet seed and whole barley, Kaffir corn, or wheat (it is a good coarser grain from day to day,) throw every day about noon will keep a condition, and the egg production on in mind that work is not only the but the making of a good laying hen.

following day the gay party broke up, Charlie his guests wending their way to Santa of the Pacific Coast, backed by the hills of gigantic redwood and fronted by the bay of Monterey, where two four-in-hand and whirled them, with tooting of coach the broad-streeted town, out onto the roads to Ben Lomond, where, sequestered giant trees, Charlie Babler had built a man- a king.

"How—how dare you say such a thing!" she spluttered, again in arms in defense of her hero. "His brother is a lord and he has lots of money. He—he would marry me tomorrow, just the same, if I didn't have anything. He—he said so—so there!" and she stamped her foot to emphasize the declaration.

"Of course he did," laughed Buxton ironically. "All fortune hunters say that, but if he is so well fixed as you say, why doesn't he—well, here he is to answer for himself," he broke off and stepped aside, as the English captain put his head in through the door, having evidently heard Ethel Wadsworth's voice, and wondering at her delay.

"Oh, I—er—beg pardon," he stammered, surprised at seeing her not alone. "Is—er—is anything the matter?"

"Yes, quite a good deal, sir," Buxton interposed quickly, ere Ethel could warn the Englishman. "I want to know why you are asking this young lady to elope?"

"Well, by Jove! I—er—don't see what b-business——"

"No, but I'm making it my business," interrupted Buxton, undaunted by the soldier's blustering manner. "This young lady is very wealthy in her own right, and you know it——"

"It isn't any of your business, Mr. Buxton," broke in Ethel hotly. "Capt. Semphill wasn't thinking of my money. Were you, Capt. Semphill?"

"The idea! Of course not," declared the dragoon, with simulated indignation. "Why—tr—why should I?"

"Because you have none of your own, sir," said John Buxton, sternly, extracting his pocket-book. "If you don't believe me, Ethel," he continued, turning to her and holding out the captain's note of hand, "how about this? Here's the gentleman's note to me, for $3000, payable next week, and here's his check for $2000 more, which he asked me to hold back, because he has no funds to meet it. No, you needn't interrupt," he went on, as Semphill made some expostulating noises in his throat. "This isn't a private affair between you and me any longer. Now if Miss Wadsworth chooses to elope with you, it isn't my affair, but, I am not going to let you pay me back with HER money. Give me that note, please," he said, extending his hand for the slip of paper, at which Ethel was gazing as one dazed.

"I—I don't understand," she faltered, somewhat frightened at the expression on the Englishman's face and his apparent inability to defend himself.

"Of course you don't," said Buxton. "Because you are not in the habit of meeting gentlemen like our friend here."

"I—I—I'm going to pay you that money," blustered the dragoon, finding his voice, and trying to assert himself. "I—I'll telegraph to—er——"

"No, you won't," said the broker, deliberately tearing the note in two, and then again across and then slowly into little pieces. "I don't want your wife's money, because that's what you are relying upon to pay your debts——"

"By J-Jove! you're g-going too far!" cried Semphill, now thoroughly enraged, his face livid and frenzied past endurance. "I've a great mind to knock you down, you—you——"

"Don't say it!" warned Buxton, ready to ward off the other's assault, and experiencing a delightful thrill as Ethel clutched his arm in evident alarm at her erstwhile lover's distorted countenance. "Don't say it!" he repeated. "Miss Wadsworth doesn't want to hear bad language. If she wants to go with you, well and good; but I very much doubt it."

"You let Miss Wadsworth answer for herself!" cried Semphill, exasperated at the girl's clinging attitude. "C-can't you trust me, Ethel?"

"I—I don't know," faltered the girl, pressing closer, however, to the broker's protecting arm, which mechanically slipped around her and drew her to his side.

"That's your answer, Captain," said Buxton, sternly. "So you had better do one of two things. Here's this check of yours for $2000. If you leave this house, at once, and alone, I will hold this check and keep it for a memento—er—a souvenir; but if you don't, I will pass it through my banker's tomorrow, for collection. Which is it to be?" Semphill chewed his mustache and his face went pale.

"Er—tomorrow?" he queried, dazed.

"Yes, tomorrow," repeated Buxton stolidly. "Tomorrow I shall put your check through the bank, and you know what the consequences will be. You had better bid him good-by, Ethel," he said to the girl nestling within his arm, as the soldier fumbled with the handle of the door. She raised her eyes and gave the captain a wistful smile, which he answered with a grave inclination of the head, while Buxton fluttered the fateful check.

"I will hold this until we meet again," he said cheerfily. "So the longer you keep out of my sight and the sooner you leave the house, the safer you'll be." The brother of the Earl of Blackport started to utter some angry retort, but the disconcerting gaze of four stern, calm eyes were too much for him, and their owners listened eagerly to his dying footsteps, then the clanging of the front gate, and as the sound of crunching wheels and hurried hoofbeats rose from the hard, well-oiled Ben Lomond road, John Buxton kissed her.

Welsh Cave Dwellers.

Cave dwellers still survive among us here and there, and there is living at Llandudno an aged woman known colloquially as 'Miriam's Ogo.' She is 93 years of age, and till quite lately lived in a cave on the side of the Great Orme. There she bore and brought up a family of thirteen children ,one of whom is the stalwart "bowman" of the Llandudno lifeboat.

Miriam's husband, also a cave man, made himself a pair of wings out of feathers for the purpose of getting up and down the face of the cliff, but his clever efforts in aviation led at last to a serious accident.—Cardiff Western Mail.

On Valdez Gladier.

the first mention of a sentinel, the woman made a little speech, saying: "The men are all needed to dig and, as I cannot help in any other way, let me be your sentinel." So it was arranged. And during all the day she walked up and down, close to the mountain, listening and giving the warnings to the men to run for their lives.

In the meantime, tents had been moved to safety, but all night sleep was troubled while at the least roaring sound, all started with a terrible fear.

On the tenth day, when the camp was preparing to send a party on snowshoes, by compass, back to the next camp for help, the snow suddenly ceased and the sun's bright face shone forth. Simultaneously all stood still and facing the glorious sun, waved caps high in air and shouted in one voice. The gloom was dispelled.

Those who were uninjured immediately started toward the summit of the glacier, instead of facing back toward Valdez.

Prudence Demanded Retreat.

The woman and her party also began to laboriously draw their recently recovered provisions up the icy steep, but after one trip it was decided to go back to Valdez and rest. For the husband's shoulder was dislocated, the brother had developed pneumonia and the men were all snow-blind. So, the next morning they sold, in the camp, all provisions and one tent and, dragging the sick brother on one sled, the remaining tent and clothing on another, the husband, wife and miners wended their way back over the almost trackless glacier, thirty miles, only resting to sleep three nights in the tents of friends.

When they had left the coast, there was but one tent, standing alone near the beach, used as a supply station and the Pacific Steam Whaling Company's building of rough boards. But now, as they neared the Valdez Bay, they beheld a white city, with streets, along which tents served as homes, restaurants, stores and even a tent church was there.

Close to the shore round government tents were placed, for during the past month forty soldiers, under the command of Capt. Abercrombie, had landed. They had been sent to explore and start a summer trail to Dawson.

And this new town, that had sprungup like a mushroom, was now known as Valdes and was astir with numerous enterprises.

Our acquaintances of this story and a few other disabled ones, who had followed them, were heartily welcomed by all, though most of the faces were new to them.

But in a strange land there are really no strangers. All seem old friends, for humanity's touch is very dear when old acquaintances and old scenes are thousands of miles away.

After selecting a site for their temporary home, these travelers hoisted their small tent, to which they afterward added two others, and settled down to rest and recuperate.

After the army surgeon had set the husband's shoulder and the brother was well enough to start back to the States in a steamer which had arrived, this young couple found so much to enjoy, so much novelty in their surroundings, such true friends and money so easily made, that for eight months they made Valdez their home and with reluctance left on the last steamer out, at the beginning of winter.

On that summer hangs another tale.

ELEANOR L. OWENS.

"Sundown Doctors."

"Sundown doctors" are an institution peculiar to the national capital. They are physicians who practice their profession only after sundown.

From 9 in the morning until half-past 4 o'clock in the afternoon they are holding down desks in various departments of the Federal government. When their daily task for Uncle Sam is done they take up that pertaining to their profession.

There are many sundown doctors in the employ of the government at Washington. In many cases medical students with little means secure clerkships in the departments in order that they may provide themselves with a living while they are finishing their medical courses. Their diplomas thus laboriously acquired, they enter tentatively upon the practice of medicine, holding on, however, to their government jobs until they shall be firmly established professionally.

Nor are all sundown doctors mere clerks. Not a few of them hold chiefships of division, a circumstance which of course renders the act of resignation from the government service a still more unlikely event than in the case of a simple clerk. No matter how earnestly a sundown doctor may tell himself that some day he will quit the departmental service to engage exclusively in the practice of his profession he generally deceives himself.—[New York Sun.

New Yorkers on the Move.

In the year ended June 30, 1909, the steam railways of the United States carried not quite 900,000,000 passengers, an increase over the preceding year of almost a million and a half.

In New York City in the same period the number of 5-cent fare passengers carried—not including transfer passengers—was over 1,400,000,000, an increase over the preceding year of 44,000,000.

The New York traction lines therefore carried more than one and a half times as many paid passengers as all the railways of the country, and the number of traction passengers increased twenty times as rapidly as the number of railway passengers.—[Outlook.

FIELD NOTES.

Frost Commission.

THE CULTIVATOR and individuals are advocating the creation of a frost commission, whose duty shall be to study questions of frost conditions and methods of work; also to secure concerted action in the work against this menace to the highest-grade fruit.

When the advocates of this measure get it framed up for inspection I hope to give it all possible publicity, and where better than in this department? But the plan will have to be well considered, for it is a most difficult proposition. That it will have to be upon a coöperative basis is conceded. But how? I heard an agent for a patent orchard heater affirm that he had raised the temperature of an orchard nine degrees a few days before out in one of the foothill valleys. I had just been out there, and thought he meant 90 degrees, coming as I did from the cool regions of the Sacramento.

Nine degrees would be sufficient to save the fruit possibly of the most severe freezing experienced. But would the same amount of fuel have raised and held the temperature nine degrees above normal of a frosty night? And how could the heat be held to do the work for the grower who paid the bill? These are questions for a frost commission, involving a concerted and general effort in every citrus center. Can it be done? Far more difficult problems have been solved by coöperative effort, and it is worth trial. Even now many thousands of acres of citrus trees about Pomona are to be freed from insect pests by coöperative fumigation. I believe frost effects are as permanent and deteriorating as effects of insect pests. If fumigating and frost fighting could be handled by the same organization, it would be economical. That, too, is worth a trial.

A Valuable Officer.

STATE FORESTER G. M. HOMANS is making a useful office out of the State Department of Forestry. When this division of the executive department of the State was created in 1905 many of our most observant citizens feared that it would be but another burden to carry, without any compensating service. But the law provided that no one should be eligible for appointment as forester unless he held a certificate from the Secretary of Agriculture showing him to be technically trained to handle the work of the office. This provision, with the good judgment exercised by Gov. Gillett in the selection of the men, first G. B. Lull and now Mr. Homans, has placed the forestry division upon a basis worthy the confidence of the fruit growers and others whose interests are directly affected by the administration of this office.

The State Board of Forestry consists of the Governor, Secretary of State, Attorney-General and Forester. If I remember aright, the formation of the State forestry law was the work of a body of able men who had associated themselves to protect and promote the forestry interests of the State. The bill was then submitted to the Department of Agriculture, and with a few changes, approved. The law was particularly well drawn, and its influence has been beneficial throughout all parts of the State. Aside from fire protection, I think the clause relating to coöperation between the forester and the citizen is the most effective, for it is being rightly interpreted to authorize the forester to advise all inquirers as to the merits of the reforesting schemes, eucalyptus enterprises and similar matters.

It is in this line that the work of Forester Homans has specially attracted my attention. Companies are springing up which are engaging in reforesting the logged-off redwood lands, purporting to replant the land to redwood and sell it at a bargain. Other companies are offering replanted pineries and still others are selling eucalyptus plantations. Forester Homans does not disturb any company that is engaged legitimately in these enterprises, but he is "pizen" to the schemers who are so engaged. The forester is gifted with plain English, and the desire to use it in connection with every fraudulent or inefficient company that does not live up to its advertisements. He is giving his personal attention to these fakers, and therein I say he is of inestimable value to the State. Conservative, active and able, he is still not afraid to tell the truth about all questionable timber-planting concerns.

Strange Food of Insects.

SOME years ago an entomologist of Los Angeles found a peculiar maggot subsisting and thriving upon the crude oil that had escaped from a well in the suburbs of the city. It did not exist in sufficient numbers to unload the contents of the sump holes that then disgraced the city. But it might have multiplied. At any rate, the insect was sent to Washington embedded in its peculiar food, and there classified.

During his hunting trip, Col. Roosevelt sent to the Smithsonian the head of two water antelopes with horns over two feet long. The horns contained large bunches of dark-brown, finger-like tubes some of which were over two inches in length clustered upon the outside of the horns and connected with holes or galleries in the bone where the insects had developed. The insect is a microlepidopteron. The long silken tubes are the home of the insect just before it emerges into its adult stage. It seems from the Smithsonian photographs and data that the African antelopes are often afflicted with these horn borers, and the research adds another to the strange and often fatal insect pests that affect the wild animals of the "Dark Continent."

When the scientists of the Smithsonian Institution get through examining and classifying the results of the famous hunting expedition, we may expect many new facts to be added to our knowledge of animal life—and we may expect some of the specimens to be given names too long to be managed in a country of 90,000,000 people.

New Station Proposed.

THE people of Brawley are making an endeavor to secure a viticultural station for Imperial county, and are now in correspondence with a Federal vine expert in an effort to get assistance in solving varietal, soil and climatic influences that would affect grape growing in the delta. G. C. Hussman, of the Bureau of Plant Industry has already advised the establishment of the station, and it will probably be secured.

Imperial county has made fewer horticultural mistakes than any other in the State at the beginning of fruit development. But there are many problems that could be worked out without the painful experience of first demonstration in large areas. Indiscriminate planting has been the bane of horticultural progress all over California, and it could not be otherwise in the pioneer or later days when the State and Federal departments could not offer help. Imperial is fortunate in coming into the field after these institutions had become an essential element in the development of our fruit industry. But the call for help is universal, and the State and national departments of agriculture are obliged in large measure to devote their resources to communities which are willing to help carry on the work. The fruit growers of Brawley will be wise in realizing that the authorities are obliged to expend their money only where the people will help to execute the plans and appreciate and apply the results of the work. Imperial county has the elements of a splendid grape-growing center. But there will be great mistakes made in planting at random, and that is just what the promoters of the viticultural station are trying to avoid.

Vine Paralysis.

FOR want of a better name they are calling the new disease in the San Joaquin Valley "vine paralysis." The malady appears on practically all aged vines and is no respecter of varieties. It starts with a spot in the leaf near the center and soon spreads all over the leaf, killing it completely. In due time new growth starts out in place of the foliage destroyed, and there is where it differs from the other well-known vine diseases. The most virulent attacks occur in spots, showing that it must be a combination of physical depletion in the vine and climatic causes, as the first manifestations followed an extremely hot spell of weather.

The disease prevails both in irrigated and non-irrigated vineyards, and the muscats have suffered the most severely. One grower estimates that he lost three tons of this grape in one spot, the fruit going from fine condition to ruin in that time. The grape men are alarmed over the present state of affairs, even when assured that the trouble was probably not vital, holding that the destruction of foliage so early in the season would devitalize the plants and render them poor bearers next season. One section was explored for ten miles in every direction and the malady found in every vineyard. One authority believes the disease was caused by the lowering of the water table, followed by three exceedingly hot days and nights. There is always something new to bother the fruit grower. But raisins are livening up in price and demand. The entire raisin output of 1909 at Fresno has been disposed of.

Light Prune Crop.

I AM informed upon the best of authority that the world's supply of prunes this season will be very short. This information comes from both growers and dealers, and there seems to be no doubt that to every civilized country of the globe, California prunes will find their way during the next year. Consequently, a rare opportunity is afforded to demonstrate the superiority of our product.

Motives of self-interest, as well as State pride in enhancing the values of a product for which there is a world's demand, should prompt the grower—the man who makes the crop—to give every essential detail of production the greatest attention. Every step in the handling and curing should be taken with great care and intelligence in order that results may be satisfactory, and place California in position to compete for the trade at prevailing high prices. The maintenance of good prices should be the aim of growers, and the only certain way to realize these hopes is to keep up the standard of quality to the very highest degree, and this stand is deserving careful consideration.

Growers whose intelligence and progressive spirit can always be relied upon in real business emergencies need no urging in the way here suggested. But many prune growers do not come under this progressive category, and their policies this season if continued may do lasting harm to the trade. Should the reputation of the California prune this year receive a setback as the result of careless or indifferent methods of curing, it will undoubtedly have permanent injurious effect upon the industry.

To accomplish the best results, growers are urged to exercise the utmost care in handling their prunes, seeing that the fruit is carefully lye-di before being put upon the trays. The thoroughly and properly cured before and all slabby and defective fruit sho In most cases the growers use too mu sults in making the prunes red in less puffy. The quantity of lye shoul that the fruit will show no checking the very hardest prunes. Most grow prunes off too green. The best prun drops of its own weight from the tre quality is much improved by rinsing af

These reminders, together with the ence derived from local conditions, way toward standardizing our prune their popularity wherever they are off

Tomato Growing.

IN experiments conducted by the New Jersey station, it was found that with tomatoes the heaviest yields were obtained when 200 pounds of nitrate of soda was used per acre in three equal dressings, that is, the first when the crop was planted, the others when the character of the season and the growth of the crops indicated. The increase in the yield in this instance was [illegible] pounds. When the same amount of nitrate of soda was used in two equal dressings the gain was but 3220 pounds. When 300 pounds of nitrate was used in two equal dressings the increased yield was 4600 pounds. When the same amount was applied in three equal dressings the increased yield was but 3540 pounds. The third application in this case caused a larger growth of vine and later maturing fruit, thus considerably reducing the yields. In tests with various crops it appears that a good profit can be derived from using liberal amounts of nitrate of soda for market-garden crops, even when they are planted on land already rich and liberally fertilized with complete fertilizer. It was also shown that the nitrates should not be applied all at once, but in two or three applications throughout the growing season, depending on the nature of the crop, the character of the season, and the growth of the crop. —[American Cultivator.

This Month.

BULB-PLANTING time for winter blossoms is here, or nearly so, and preparation for the event should be thorough. If the ground devoted to bulb culture has been thoroughly mulched it may now be spaded up and put in the best of tilth. Easter lilies and many others are not yet in the market, but the earlier varieties may now be had. Early-blooming gladiolus should have been taken from the ground and properly ripened before this time so they may be planted at once. Plant two or three inches deep, and after covering with soil a covering of pulverized manure is valuable. Freesias and some other lilies, if planted now, may possibly give a Christmas growth. Amaryllis belladonna may be divided as soon as the bulbs have had time to rest after blooming. Belladonna Minor finished blooming some time ago, and the Major is just now in full bloom in many gardens, but during the month and before the green leaves start, they should be divided.

Golden glow and goldenrod are now in their glory, and need plenty of water and a bit of fertilizer to give the largest bloom.

Roses which were deprived of water during August may now be cut back heavily and a fairly strong application of blood meal made, and they should be irrigated thoroughly. If this is done, Thanksgiving and Christmas bloom will be assured.

Violets may still be started, though it is a little late. Eucalyptus, cypress, acacia and pine seed should now be planted. The blue gum might better be planted later in the month, for owing to its strong growing proclivities it might be too large before the spring setting unless transplanted to pots or cans before put into the field.

For fall and winter blooming sow the following annuals: Pansies, stocks, cosmos, coreopsis, centaureas, [illegible], and sweet peas. Other annuals which were sown last month may be potted or put into open ground now.—[California Cultivator.

Poppies Early Annuals.

AMONG the earliest and most satisfactory of our annuals are the poppies, in all their wonderful variations. They are perfectly hardy and germinate freely. Sow them thinly where they are to grow. They should not be closer than three to four inches each way. They last for three weeks or more, and can be followed by other plants, working the beds over and applying a little fertilizer when transplanting the asters, and a little more just before their season of bloom. There are many grand new strains of asters that rival the chrysanthemums, and they are one of our most satisfactory annuals. Seeds should be sown indoors in March, but it is better, where possible, to obtain the plants in season, from the seedsman or florist.

Among the hardy annuals that can be readily grown from seeds are asters, ageratum, alyssum, coreopsis, calendula, candytuft, cosmos, lobelia, mignonette, marigold, nicotiana, pansies, nasturtiums, phlox drummondii, petunias, pinks, salvia, stocks, salpiglossis, sunflowers. Plants of all these can be purchased in season, and give more satisfactory results, coming on quickly.

It is best to patronize your local seedsman, who has studied the conditions and requirements of your own section, and whose success depends on his painstaking care in testing stocks that are known to be adapted to the soils and climate of his section. For let it be understood that everything will not grow to perfection even in our ideal climate, and we should confine our efforts to those varieties that offer the greatest assurance of success.—[Portland Oregonian.

The Garden and the Weed.

CONTRARY to the generally-accepted idea, weeds in this community must be considered as the friend rather than the enemy of the average gardener, even as the modern physician is inclined to regard a cold in the light of a danger signal and safety valve. The general outcry against weeds is an indication of a wrong attitude toward the garden. It stands for a garden with the least possible labor, not the best garden with all the labor necessary to make it so. It shows a failure to realize that in the labor of the garden lies the greatest return to the gardener.

Upon cultivated soil grows the greater crop of weeds the following year if left fallow—a marked testimony to the value of cultivation. Where weeds don't grow, we know the soil must be treated before anything else will. Passing through the country, we note a big growth of mustard and we say the land is rich; we come to a hard polished almost barren stretch and exclaim, hardpan and a pretty hard proposition indeed; we note a low-lying spot, covered with a green rushy carpet, and immediately have visions of an alfalfa field. Our friends, the weeds, have ordered it so that he who runs may read.

But it is more with the presence of the weeds in our gardens that we are endeavoring to deal. It may be generally stated as an axiom that no weeds will ever attain any size in a garden that is sufficiently cultivated, and that if it were not for the weeds, few gardens would receive enough attention in this particular. The weed may, even without a great stretch of the imagination, be regarded as a savior in the vegetable kingdom, which offers itself as a sacrifice for the good of the flower. One of the commonest and most persistent of our weeds is the burr clover, a terror in a lawn it is admitted; yet we now plant it very extensively to turn in as a green manure, and year by year its value is more recognized.

Many garden flowers in one locality are weeds in another.

It is not to be denied, nor is there any desire to do so, that we have obnoxious weeds that have no apparent excuse for living. This may be because we have not discovered their use, but it is stoutly affirmed that in the present mental condition of the average gardener it would be most unsafe to dispense with the weed in floricultural economy.—[California Gardening.

Rose Tree Wonder.

HORTICULTURAL COMMISSIONER S. A. PEASE has a magnificent specimen of Jacnada, or Brazilian rose tree. The tree was a potted plant adorning the commissioner's office three years ago. He planted it in the courtyard near his window, and it is now between fifteen and sixteen feet in height, and one of the most graceful trees in the whole city, its fern-like leaves of delicate texture giving it a most charming appearance. It is doubtful if there is another such tree in the valley. Florists have tried to raise them in lath houses, but winter frosts have cut them down. This tree is protected by the Courthouse, and is flourishing remarkably.—[San Bernardino Sun.

Garden Drainage in California.

IT may be remarked, as a generalization based upon a wide view of our two-season year, that the secret of success in California vegetable growing consists in getting plants "out of the wet" at one time and into it at another. It would, perhaps, be more exact to say that success lies in securing generous but not excessive moisture at all times, and this is essential to the best growth of the plant in any climate. And yet so strikingly antithetical are our moisture extremes at the height of the two seasons, and so characteristic, both in times and methods, are the policies and practices by which we modify both to the best advantage that the world-wide principles to which they conform are out of sight of the casual observer. For it is not only that we have always to guard against extremes of saturation and aridity and keep the plant along the lines of sufficiency—that is the universal proposition. In addition to this, California, speaking generally, has to do special work against one extreme at another time; hence the opening remark.

Regulation of moisture in California either involves more considerations than are usually recognized in humid climates or involves them in higher degree and imputes to them increased significance. Choice of location and soil; time and method of planting and cultivation; the choice of the crop with reference to natural moisture supply and the atmospheric conditions; the employment of irrigation; and the desirability, or otherwise, of artificial drainage facilities—all these are factors which are perhaps more sharply concerned in results here than in humid climates, because our extremes, in all except low temperatures, are more exacting. Correct practice here gives grand results, but ill-timed or illy-adapted practice does not give merely less satisfactory results: it invites failure. Our drainage proposition must always be conditioned upon proper conservation of moisture, and, as will be seen as we proceed with the discussion, contemplated artificial drainage may have the power to make or ruin a crop if its action is not intelligently employed, or intelligently rejected, as the case may require.—[Wickson's California Gardening.

Pure Alfalfa Seed.

I HAVE a sample of alfalfa seed sent from Los Angeles with the request that it be examined for impurities. This brings to mind the large quantity of seed that is thrown upon the market without any guarantee from the seedsman as to its freedom from noxious weed seed. It is not much trouble to examine a small sample, as I have done with this one. But a small lot may be clean, as is this one, and yet the sack from which it is taken be badly contaminated. Consequently the examination should be more thorough, and be supplemented by a guarantee that there were no noxious weeds growing in the field from which the seed was harvested. Too much of an ideal in seed distribution, one would remark, but when the losses entailed by planting seed infested with dodder for example, is considered, no amount of care is too burdensome in the selection of alfalfa seed.

In some countries alfalfa is grown altogether from cuttings. In the first place, the land is carefully prepared. Then the pieces of roots are planted about eighteen inches apart each way in light furrows to facilitate irrigation. Instead of waiting to the second year for a crop, a heavy harvest of hay is cut the first season. I have never heard of alfalfa being "planted" in California, but I think it would be worth a trial. There is never a failure to get a good stand by this Peruvian method. It would appear a slow and primitive method to an American, yet the hundreds of cases of failure from seed, the dying of small plants from seed and the danger of contamination from foul seed would in some measure offset the disadvantage of this slow process of planting. It would also obviate the danger of too thick stands from overseeding the land.

Family Food Problem.

How much does it take to feed three boys and two girls when served from a lunch basket on a train? An Atchison woman figured and figured, and decided that thirty ham sandwiches, twenty bread-and-butter sandwiches, forty cookies, two glasses of jelly, two dozen deviled eggs, a four-layer cake and three pies would be enough. She started with the five children at 8 in the morning; by 2 that afternoon not a crumb was left; by 4 two of the boys looked gaunt and pale, and at 6, when she reached her destination, two of the children had starved to death.—[Atchison Globe.

Care of the Body—Suggestions for Preserving Health.

CONDUCTED BY HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N.D., OF THE TIMES STAFF.

PRACTICAL HYGIENE.

[The Times does not undertake to answer inquiries on hygienic subjects that are merely of personal interest, or to give advice in individual cases. Those desiring personal advice should write to the editor of the department for particulars. General inquiries on hygienic subjects of public interest will receive attention in these columns. No inquiries are answered by mail. It should be remembered that matter for the Magazine Section of The Times is in the hands of the printer ten days before the day of publication. Correspondents should send their full names and addresses, which will not be published, or given to others, without the consent of the writers. Causes of Epidemics.

EUROPE has been experiencing one of those cholera scares that are not so common as they were a generation ago, when few people had begun to learn the virtue of cleanliness—inner and outer cleanliness. Cholera, like smallpox or typhoid fever, is a filth disease "impure and simple." With clean blood and clean surroundings no one could get this, or any other disease. There is only one way to "stamp out" these epidemic diseases, and that is to enforce strict cleanliness—cleanliness of the inner as well as the outer man, and of his surroundings.

Grossly exaggerated and misleading statements are published in regard to the subject of "contagious" and "infectious" diseases. As recently mentioned editorially in The Times, during a cholera outbreak in Germany nearly twenty years ago the government of the empire went into a study of the question in its usual thorough manner. One of the main conclusions was that cholera is not infectious nor contagious. An American newspaper man at Hamburg lay for two days and nights in a bed between two cholera patients and came out of the test unaffected. You may, of course, contract cholera if you swallow the germs in your drink or food, and your blood, through wrong living, happens to be in a bad condition, and unable to resist the germs, which would be harmless to one whose blood has full resisting power.

The doctors are even telling us now that infantile paralysis is contagious. They injected blood from a sick child into a monkey and the monkey was stricken with the disease. Well, by such direct methods as this of course you may communicate a disease, but that does not make it "contagious" or "infectious." A dispatch from Washington says: "The surgeons can offer no suggestions as to preventing the spread of infantile paralysis other than clean sanitary habits. The only remedy they know is proper diet and massaging."

They are getting quite sensible, are they not? They must have been reading the Care of the Body.

Let us now look a little into the proximate and ultimate causes of epidemics of disease. The ultimate cause, as we have seen, is filth—just plain dirt—filth around the house, and filthy blood caused by the eating of filthy food and the breathing of filthy air. The proximate cause that brings on these epidemics is a certain condition of the atmosphere that favors an outbreak among those who have not rendered themselves immune by right living. Following interesting statement was recently made by Prof. Willis L. Moore, chief of the Weather Bureau:

"It is well known to meterologists that easterly winds either hug closely to the earth or have an upward component of motion. They, therefore, gather the humidity, dust, disease and other bacteria, and as a rule they are warm and humid. All of these conditions make them foul winds, under which animal life is enervated and rendered susceptible to the germs which the winds themselves carry and disseminate.

"The converse is true of the northwest winds. They come from above, with a downward component of motion that bears a definite relation to the velocity. They come from the region where the air is dry, pure and highly electrified and where ozone exists in comparatively large quantities. The cool, pure air of the northwest wind is therefore an invigorating air. It stimulates man and all other animal life. It brings physical energy and mental buoyancy in its mighty breath.

"I have not the data before me, but I am morally certain that if the mortality statistics of the various hospitals were studied it would be found that more people die under the influence of the east than of the west winds.

"As the greater number of the storms of the northern hemisphere originate on the American continent, we have a greater atmospheric activity and the northwest winds a greater force.

"This may have a marked effect as one of the important environments that have to do with the character of the race that is now coming to be known as 'American.' He has fertility of thought and energy of body. May it not be that the climate has much to do with the developing of the indomitable spirit that is now reaching out for the mastery of the earth?"

There is a prevailing impression among the peasantry of England—an impression that undoubtedly has a scientific explanation—that the east wind is injurious. An old English doggerel runs:

"When the wind is in the east,
"'Tis good for neither man nor beast."

There is no such thing as a "contagious" or "infectious" disease, as the words are usually understood. That is to say, a disease cannot be communicated from one person to another except by actual contact, as in syphilis, when a specific poison is passed from one person to another. Diseases are not contagious, but they may be, and often are epidemic, due, as stated, mainly to certain conditions of the atmosphere, when those whose vitality is lowered and whose blood is impure will be affected, while others will escape. In his book "As It Is," Dr. M. J. Rodermund of Wisconsin writes:

"Smallpox epidemics are almost as easy to predict as is a great storm. Smallpox usually starts in the east and travels westward? Whoever heard of smallpox starting in the west and traveling eastward? Before an epidemic comes on we find a season prevailing in eastern winds that are changeable, raw and damp, accompanied by cloudy weather, at times stagnant, with very little sunlight or thunder and lightning. I have myself in several instances predicted an epidemic of smallpox two and three months in advance. In one instance, I made the prediction in the beginning of September, that if the then prevailing conditions of the weather would continue during the fall, we would hear of smallpox spreading throughout the country before Christmas, and if the changeable and atmospheric conditions kept on through the winter, that the epidemic would increase in its severity. The records stand verified. Again, we know that if we have a steady cold winter, there is little, if any, smallpox. But when the weather is changeable and damp, with east winds and low pressure which prevents the effluvia and impurities from rising, and very little sunlight, we always have the disease with us."

We all know what a different feeling comes over us when we go out in the morning and find a crisp, bright air with the wind—if there is any—in the right direction. How different we feel when the air is heavy and sultry. This question of the effect of atmospheric conditions on disease is one that has been too much ignored. The medical fraternity as a rule understood little about the subject, because they have not been taught it in college. As stated, there are no such things as "contagious" for "infectious" diseases. There are epidemics of disease, when conditions for the spread of that disease are favorable, just as on board ship, when it becomes rough, we see a number of people simultaneously putting their heads over the side of the vessel and vomiting. Do we say that they catch this sickness from one another? Certainly not. Again, when it is raining we see people go out and get their clothes wet. Do we say that they caught this wetness from each other? Of course not.

When there is much decaying filth scattered around, there is likely to be an epidemic, especially if the weather is warm and humid. Thus we frequently see epidemics follow floods. In this case the spread of disease is encouraged by the mental and physical suffering of the people, through which their power of resistance is lowered, just as we read sometimes how shipwrecked mariners die of starvation in a week or ten days, whereas under normal conditions people have frequently fasted, with benefit, for six weeks or more.

Blocking the Pure Food Law.

IT is impossible to enforce a pure-food law—or indeed any other law—unless it has the active support of the people. Frank Oakley, one of the Southern California food inspectors, meets with some discouraging experiences on his rounds. For instance, recently he was prosecuting a man at Ventura who had been selling lemon extract that contained less than one-tenth of 1 per cent. of lemon oil, whereas the law declares that 5 per cent. is a minimum. Think of this, in the greatest lemon-growing region of the United States, where carloads of culls go to waste. The man had a jury trial and was acquitted, the jury standing ten to two, and then unanimous for acquittal.

If the people will not assist in enforcing the Pure Food Law, they have no reason to complain when they and those they love become sick or die of consuming poisonous food preparations.

Griffith Park.

A BOOKLET of eighty pages has been received entitled "Parks, Boulevards and Playgrounds," by Griffith J. Griffith of Los Angeles. Col. Griffith gave the city of Los Angeles Griffith Park, the largest municipal playground in the world, covering over 3000 acres of varied and picturesque land. He justly complains that while the city is spending $100,000 on Central Park, cutting down beautiful shade trees and building granite walls, it has neglected to furnish a few thousand dollars for the purpose of making Griffith Park accessible to the public. It will never be a formal flower garden, with signs reading "keep off the grass." We have plenty of those already. It will, and should always remain, a wild natural breathing spot, where city people can go for a day and get back to nature. To enable them to do this, however, it should be made accessible, and this should be done at once.

The booklet also contains a list of the world's evergreen trees, all of which could be grown in Griffith Park, which is already well covered with brush and trees peculiar to California.

I have used the Oxygenator very fully for sore throat, tired nerves and body. Recently I taken ill with acute indigestion, two hours strong lieved this, and next day I was fully restored and able tend to my duties.

I have seen the Oxygenator cure a case of ten years standing, and have seen cases of severe long standing cured by one hour's strong treatment

I have seen a paralytic discard his canes and carry water up stairs, where before he could not hold his hand, another paralytic who could not dress able to write a good hand with a pen, and another distinctly whereas before he could scarcely be fore using the Oxygenator; the latter now sleeps he could not do before.

I have seen a woman who has had severe years, and had been twice operated upon to remove from her joints, who now moves quite freely, joints been stiff for years. She has been troubled with fever for a full year, but is now entirely free from this is due to nothing else but the God-given Oxygen by the OXYGENATOR.

Very respectfully yours,
MRS. L. S. WOODW

In Kentucky the cures of PELLAGRA have much excitement that the Medical Association have the matter up, and many doctors are now with our agents there.

In Texas, even the Boards of Health are now mending the use of the Oxygenator.

The Oxygenator is the greatest scientific advance century, the saving of Human Life, the lessening man suffering, far transcends all merely achievements.

The recent discovery that it is OXYGEN that the blood to keep in circulation, that the heart being a pump, as has been popularly understood, a regulator, intensifies the value that must be the OXYGENATOR.

EYE TALKS

Pertinent Reasons

Why you should deal with us when you have trouble with your eyes. We have the only exclusive optical parlors in Los Angeles. We have the best oculist and optician in America in constant attendance. We have a lease on our building and are here to stay. We are unique in being the only place in America where there is a high-class oculist (a specialist who treats all diseases of the eye) competing in prices with the opticians. We have studied the fundamental principles of refraction not only in the best medical schools in this country, but abroad. If you would pay $100 for glasses or treatment, you could not get any better service than we give you at a nominal price. We make no charge for oculist examination, thereby saving you $5.00 to $10.00 and the expensive mistakes of ordinary opticians who do so much guessing. Mr. M. R. Sprinkle, locomotive inspector for the Santa Fe railroad, and who lives at 924 West First street, says: "I suffered with headache and eye strain from my work, consulted Dr. Logan, who fitted me with a pair of superb rest lens ground to fit each eye, and I have had no more trouble with my eyes."

We have the names of hundreds of people in Los Angeles who have been successfully fitted by us who we will refer you to on demand. The people of this city are beginning to show by their patronage that they recognize true merit. Our prices are the least possible to enable us to do good work. We do not advertise to give you the best for $1.00, and when you come in tell you that your eyes are very bad and that you will have to have something else at four or five times the price. If your eyes are perfect you could wear a cheap glass. If imperfect, the cheap glasses will only help them temporarily and will ruin them in the long run.

animal combustion. When the supply of air is shut out of a habitation its occupants suffer. If the habitations of a country are of that character its inhabitants must degenerate physically, and dwindle in size. Such is sure to be the case in crowded populations, as witness the Hindu, the Chinese, the Jap. Exceptions only prove this rule. The stalwart of the world have plenty of oxygen."

Justly Punished.

IN the Care of the Body of August 21 mention was made of a case of precocious motherhood in San Bernardino county when an Indian girl 12 years of age gave birth to a child, having been seduced by a Mexican. Lyman Evans, District Attorney of Riverside, writes to the Care of the Body as follows in regard to the disposition of this case:

"In the case of Miguel Morales, referred to in your department of last Sunday's Times, I am pleased to inform you that he pleaded guilty on the 15th inst. to the crime committed against the Indian girl, Francisco Yanes of Pala Reservation, and is now serving a five-years term in San Quentin. Morales is aged 42 years, and this may be a lesson to men of his class."

Personal Hygiene Advice.

A LOS ANGELES correspondent writes as follows:

"In the note under Practical Hygiene you say: 'The Times does not answer inquiries that are merely of personal interest, or give advice on individual cases.' Then, again, you say: 'Those desiring personal advice write to the editor.' Lastly you say: 'No inquiries are answered by mail.' To my mind statement number two is contrary to statements number one and three."

In reply to this readers are referred to the standing notice at the head of this department in which is the following statement: "The Times does not undertake to answer inquiries on hygienic subjects that are merely of personal interest or to give advice in individual cases. Those desiring personal advice should write to the editor of the department for particulars."

To this it may be added that those writing for particulars should always inclose a stamped directed envelope.

A Ribald Age.

SOME one has pertinently remarked: "Let me write the songs of a nation and I care not who makes its laws."

If we are to judge of our nation by the songs now popular among the mass of the people we should certainly be forced to an unfavorable conclusion. It may be asked what has this to do with the care of the body? Well, mind and body are so closely associated that it is difficult to tell just where one begins and the other ends, in the skein of human life. Therefore, whatever affects the minds of the people injuriously must inevitably in course of time have an ill-effect on their bodies also.

Following interview appeared recently in a Los Angeles morning paper: In it Mr. Thornton tells some striking truths:

""Why do we have no more popular, sentimental songs?"

The query was put to James Thornton, who has probably written more love ditties than any living man, in his dressing-room at the Orpheum yesterday. Mr. Thornton replied by a similar query:

"Why do we have no more sentiment?"

And then he went on:

"We have no sentimental songs because we have taken a ribald view of life of late. We used to sing, 'When You Were Sweet Sixteen.' Now we warble, 'My Wife's Gone to the Country, Hurrah.' We used to delight in 'She May Have Seen Better Days.' Now we whistle, 'My Wife's Away, Hurrah for the Summertime.' That's the answer.

"The American has almost eliminated sentiment from his nature. He has become a money grubber, a fierce fighter in the arena of business; he has no conscience, using a corporation instead; he has no love for his fellow-being; he delights in race conflicts and lynchings; he has no respect for his forebears; he prefers to substitute ribald remarks about his progenitors, and make—I was going to say—make monkeys of them, but that might be too truthful.

"In a word, he has taken a new view of existence, and instead of seeing the sweeter side of life, he sees only th nonsensical. That is proved by the fact that we have permitted the black man to set the standard of our music, and ragtime is now the national harmony. You can't combine real heart sentiment and a rag. It is preposterous. You can't combine love of woman with such balderdash as:

"'My Country, 'tis of thee,
I want my liberty.'

"We even profane the patriotic in our mad chase for the ridiculous. We have become a nation of satirists, and a country of contemptuous railers at all that is sacred, lovable and holy. Our homes are in flats that fold up, and our hearts are gilded with the dross of worldly possession.

"That, young man, is why we have no real songs of heart interest any more—we have no hearts. Time was when I could turn out sentimental songs as fast as I could write them, and find them in eager demand. Now I couldn't find a publisher for them if I paid him to put them out. All the public asks now is a chance to make

OXYGENATOR

It prevents disease of all kinds by charging the blood with Oxygen. It cures them by eliminating through oxidation the cause of disease—the waste products and poisons with which the body is clogged. These are the result of improper blood-aeration.

NO DRUGS ARE USED

The Oxygenator leaves Alcohol, Aconite, Acetanilid, Belladonna, Cocaine, Caffeine, Opium, Strychnine, and similar poisons for the "old" systems of treatment.

The Simple, Sensible Home Remedy For Whatever Ails You

It is by far the cheapest treatment ever introduced. It begins action the moment it is attached, effecting prompt relief from pain and securing an immediate, perfect and permanent result.

It Will Surely Help You

as it is entirely different from the now antiquated systems of drug-medication and because the cause, kind, severity or duration of disease are not even factors in determining its action.

DR. COOK'S NATURE CURE

If you want to pump oil, reason would prompt you to secure an instrument sufficiently strong for that purpose. The blood-distributing organs (Heart and Arteries) are intended to carry the nourishing fluids for the body. If for any reason this fluid becomes abnormally thickened is it any wonder the heart labors and throbs, becomes enlarged and often leaks? Again, all the functions of life are accomplished by muscular activity. muscles are made up of cells, muscular nutrition consists in the refilling of these cells, and as cells have no openings, but must absorb their nutrition through their walls, how necessary that the blood be of the proper consistency. At first this imperfectly elaborated food (catarrhal matter) seems quite harmless, but on the contrary is very dangerous; here are some of the bad things it does: First, produces congestion; second, is food for germs; third, prevents muscular nutrition; fourth, is an irritant to the carrying vessels; fifth, produces tubercles, tumors, etc. In face, is an enemy to all life, practical immunity is secured by its removal; no treatment can be permanently effective that does not include this systemic renovation, our chief aim. Daily 9 to 12 m.; 1 to 5 p.m.

TRUSSES

WE DO NOT GUARANTEE CURES for the reason that no one can do so honestly. We do guarantee to hold by correct, scientific methods, any case of reducible hernia (and to support properly those which are irreducible,) no matter how many have failed, with comfort to the patient and without painful or injurious pressure.

You who are asked to pay high fees in advance for rupture cures and take your own chances on the result—investigate both sides of the question. Let us give you the names and addresses of many who have been "through the mill," and the history of the fakirs who took their money, giving them nothing but abuse and injury in return. Ask them for a guarantee of cure or money back and note their plausible explanation for not giving it.

fun of his wife, his 'old' man; or, worst of all, his mother. And in place of a song to our sweetheart, we go and dance with her to ragtime, and then seek our affinities to wine and dine and joy-ride out the night. That's your answer."

"Will we ever have any more sentimental love songs, or is your occupation gone?" he was asked.

"The pendulum will swing back. It may not be in my day, for I am an old man. But a new generation will grow up, and it will have hearts and loves, and will long to express its loves in song. A new writer will arise to satisfy that craving—but it will not be me. We must break the chains of ragtime and get into a saner mood; regard life less frivolously and with more sentiment, and then our music will reflect it.

"Probably we will be making less money then, and making it slower, but we will be a saner people. Just now, I am writing nothing—what's the use? I shall wait till the present ribaldry is past—if I survive that long."

The Fresh Air Cure.

HERE is a striking experiment showing the value of fresh air, which is fortunately (so far) free for all, and need not be taken only under direction of a physician:

In McClure's Magazine for August, Burton J. Hendrick in his article, "Oxygenizing a City," tells of the fresh-air treatment that Dr. William A. Evans tried on the monkeys in the Lincoln Park zoo, Chicago:

"'Take your twenty healthy monkeys inside, as usual, this winter,' he told Cy De Vry, 'but keep the five sick ones outside. It will be interesting to see what will happen.'

"'But they can't stand it; the cold air will kill them,' protested the keeper.

"'If it does, you won't lose much—or the monkeys, either, for, at best, they can only live a few weeks.'

"As the winter came on, these five sick tropical animals were kept in a place where they were constantly exposed to its chilling drafts. They became perforce fresh-air cranks. A thatched shelter was provided, into which they could retreat when the weather became too icy, but no artificial heat was supplied. Strangely enough, except at night, when they slept under it, the invalids seemed to care little for this shelter.

"With the gradual approach of winter, the monkeys showed as natural an inclination for the cold open air as their healthy brothers did for the hot drafts inside the monkey-house. Presently there appeared upon their emaciated bodies a faint sprouting of hair, which grew thicker as the weather became more severe. Gradually the sluggish creatures started into life; instead of huddling in corners, they began to climb and jump about their cages. Before the winter was over, all of them had thick brown furry coats; their muscles had grown large and strong; they ate eagerly, and manifested an increased desire for the favorite simian pastime—fighting. They became the most popular curiosities of the Zoo. Nothing in years had delighted visitors so much as what had now become an everyday sight: One of these tropical animals in zero weather seated upon a snowbank, contentedly eating a banana. But the twenty monkeys that, early in the winter, had entered the steam-heated monkey-house in splendid physical condition, had not fared so well. By spring not a single one was alive—all had died of tuberculosis."

Yet some misguided people are afraid of a "draft." Get your blood in good condition by eating temperately of the right food, and you may safely live in a draft, day and night.

Silence Sufficient Reward for a Rescuer.

Of his early volunteering days, Lord Wemyss has told a very amusing story about a certain commanding officer, who, among other things, was highly unpopular with his men. One day, during some maneuvers, he slipped from the footpath into a stream. Not being able to swim, he soon found himself in difficulties.

Fortunately a volunteer happened to be at hand, and it was the work of a few seconds to drag the officer into a place of safety. He was profuse in his thanks, even hinting at a reward. His rescuer only smiled, and remarked that the best reward would be to say nothing about the event. "Why?" asked the officer, astonished. "Because," said the other, "if the fellows find out I pulled you out they might chuck me in."—[London Daily Sketch.

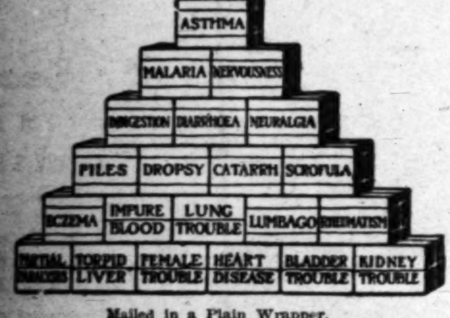
CHINESE DOCTOR

Offers You a Proof Treatment

FREE



Mailed in a Plain Wrapper.

Free Proof Treatment To one person in each locality — I will send a free proof eatment. Not a patent medicine—not one remedy but as any kinds of roots, barks and herbs as I find it advisable in ur case—remedies to strike straight at your disease—constitional remedies—remedies to tone up your general system—ure, effective and curative remedies that are the result of the ost modern medical skill and science, combined with years of ccessful experience in thousands of cases. I have cured hunreds of others. I want to prove that I can cure you.

iseases I Treat I don't claim to cure cancer, leprosy and other incurable diseases, but I do claim o cure, and actually, positively do cure, many diseases that thers consider incurable. I have cured hundreds of serious ases—many cases that others failed to cure. I want to prove hat my treatment will do for you. A free proof treatment is he best possible test, it is the one convincing proof. I will send without cost to you, I pay all charges. Will you be the one accept this generous offer?

000 Years Old These remedies have been used in China for over 4000 years, and the ormulas have been handed down from father to son, generation after generation, until the present day. They have cured ore men and women than any known modern treatment. The ction of Chinese herbs is entirely different from anything you ave ever taken before and entirely unfamiliar to most American people. They quietly and stealthily creep through the eches of your tissues, while you are working, and while you e sleeping. Like friendly spirits, they steal into the dark ks and corners of the human anatomy, to expel the hobgob of disease, and like good fairies they always leave happiness in their wake. Remember Dr. Wan is offering a proof treatment of these wonderful herbs ABSOLUTELY FREE. This is the opportunity you have been waiting for. Why hesitate about accepting it?

I Ask Nothing I will accept no pay, not one cent for the Proof Treatments I have decided to give away. I want to prove that my treatment will do in your case what it has done in hundreds of other cases. By proving my skill to you I hope to prove it to your friends and neighbors. If my treatment helps you—if it cures you, I want your good will—I want your gratitude—I want you to speak a kindly word for me to your sick friends when convenient to do so. This is all I ask. When I say Free I mean FREE. A cured patient is a doctor's best advertisement.

My Success Is Your Gain My professional and financial success has been wonderful. I have succeeded beyond my fondest ambition in doing good in the world—in benefiting humanity. I have acquired a liberal share of worldly goods. For all this I am grateful—I am thankful. To show my gratitude, I propose to do this kindness to humanity. I propose to help the sick and suffering of America free of charge. I don't care who you are, where you live, or whether you are rich or poor—if you need medical attention for any curable disease—if you are sick or afflicted, I want to help you free. I can afford to send this FREE PROOF TREATMENT postage paid. Sit down right now and mail the coupon below. Be one of the fortunate.
